A number of valuable and historically authentic relics are said to have been imported from Europe especially for use in "Scaramouche," Rex Ingram's picturization of Rafael Sabatini's famous novel. Nothing that has been received from abroad, however, holds more interest than a recently received copy of a French newspaper of the period of the story.

The paper in question, a small periodical, dated February 19th, 1791, called "Les Actes des Apôtres," is a publication intended to ridicule the revolutionists. The copy secured by John Daumery, one of Mr. Ingram's technical experts, is from a valuable collection of antiques in the possession of a French educator at Portiers.

"Scaramouche" is a Rex Ingram production for Metro, by arrangement with Charles L. Wagner. Willis Goldbeck made the screen adaptation. John F. Seitz is photographing the production.

"Fortune of Christina McNab" Due May 27

"The Fortune of Christina McNab," the picturization of Sarah Macnaughton's popular novel, which has been set for release May 27, has all the elements demanded of a popular summer attraction, according to a statement just issued by Playgoers Pictures. It is declared to be dramatic without being heavy, to be filled with novel ideas and interest-arousing situations, and to be bubbling over with romance and refreshing comedy.

The story relates the experiences of a girl who suddenly finds herself heiress to $150,000 a year, after having been brought up on a shoe-string by a stingy father.

The picture is said to be invested with costly settings, with a wealth of exteriors that are picturesque and eye-filling.

Hodkinson Sets Record for Sales

Thirty Metropolitan District Houses Show "Down to Sea in Ships" in Week

THE New York Exchange of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation lays claim to the most important salesmanship beat recorded in the motion picture business upon any one production. According to the report made by the Hodkinson Corporation, thirty of the best and most representative theatres in the Metropolitan district, covering New York, Brooklyn and immediate vicinity, showed "Down to the Sea in Ships" during one week simultaneously. This meant that beginning last Sunday, May 13, thirty theatres will run this Hodkinson special day and date for the entire week.

This stupendous group booking was accomplished through the untiring efforts of George M. Dillon, Branch Manager in New York for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, and his able staff. Mr. Dillon worked earnestly and diligently with the result that his group booking is considered by the Hodkinson officials as one of the most unusual film selling contracts ever made.

In order that nothing should be overlooked to give the thirty exhibitors adequate newspaper support, one of the largest advertising campaigns ever attempted in the motion picture field in a single week has been outlined by the advertising department of the Hodkinson Corporation. Seven newspapers in New York and Brooklyn will be used in carrying the exhibitor's message forcefully to the public attention. Beginning with quarter page and full page advertisements two days before the Sunday opening, the campaign jumps into full pages in the Sunday papers. Quarter page advertisements follow during the remainder of the week. The aggregate circulation reached through this campaign will be more than seven million readers.

According to W. F. Seymour, Eastern Division Sales Manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, the question of thirty first run accounts presenting "Down to the Sea in Ships" simultaneously, is one of the greatest expositions of film salesmanship that has ever been accomplished in the history of the motion picture business.

Firpo Picture Value Is Enhanced

Decisive Victory of Argentinian Makes Him Dangerous Rival For Title

OFFICIALS of the Selznick Distributing Corporation are elated over the decisive victory which Luis Angel Firpo scored over Jack McAuliffe 2nd, at the Yankee Stadium on May 12, as they feel that it greatly enhances the exhibition value of their Firpo picture which was released the last week in April.

It is rarely that sport writers are in complete accord over the results of fistic encounters but there was a general unanimity of opinion that Firpo will easily defeat Willard, which leaves the Argentinian as the only real logical contestant for Jack Dempsey's Heavyweight Crown.

In all probability Tex Rickard will match Firpo to meet Willard in June and the winner of that battle will indubitably be matched to meet Dempsey in the fall. As Willard's chances are deemed negligible it would seem certain that the South American will have his big opportunity within four months.

In a statement issued this week, David R. Blyth, Director of Sales, of the Selznick Distributing Corporation, says, "I think it is only fair to Senor Firpo and ourselves to say that our picture, 'Will He Conquer Dempsey?' is the only film which has Firpo's authorization. As a matter of fact our picture carries the following statement from Firpo over his signature. The production 'Will He Conquer Dempsey?' is my only official training picture, and contains the only scenes made by me since I commenced to train for a contest with Dempsey. That I worked my hardest on 'Will He Conquer Dempsey?' is shown by the fact that I lost ten pounds during its making. I believe that 'Will He Conquer Dempsey?' shows me to the public as I am."

Two Arrow Premieres at Boston Houses

Intense rivalry has developed in the theatrical situation of Boston, Massachusetts, where two of the leading first-run houses are staging premieres of two Arrow attractions, day and date.

Messrs. Patten, Heffron & McConville of Independent Films, Inc., have announced the opening of "Jacqueline, or Blazing Barriers," at the Boston theatre for the week of May 28, while at the same time they have arranged with the Park theatre, another of Boston's leading downtown theatres, for the opening of the Blazed Trail special, "Lost in a Big City," which will also open on the 28th.

Intensive and extensive advertising will be used by both houses, according to Mr. McConville, and the advertising and exploitation campaign will be aided by the Arrow Film Corporation, who will send a representative there to handle the publicity and exploitation on "Lost in a Big City."

McCutcheon Directing Many Successes

In making "The Message of Emile Coue" John L. McCutcheon, the director, has achieved a scientific financial success, it is said. The picture has brought the interest of the motion picture industry toward him as a man capable of overcoming the greatest obstacles in the production of motion pictures.

Mr. McCutcheon has made many successful features the most recent of which is "Man and Wife."

"Is Divorce A Failure?" Praised in Albany

Following the opening of the recent Albany run of, "Is Divorce a Failure," the Times-Union of that city, said: "'Is Divorce a Failure?' now showing at the Clinton Square theatre, is a most timely picture, as it touches on a subject that is being much discussed throughout the United States—the divorce question. However, the patrons of the Clinton Square must not take this to mean that it is a preachy picture, for it is not—it is a drama with four big punches."

"Leah Baird, one of the most popular women in filmdom, is seen in the leading female part. She has been seen in many pictures but never has she appeared better than in this screen offering. Arthur Beck, who produced the picture, deserves much credit for the production. It is one of the best pictures that will be in Albany this season."

The Albany Times said: "The dramatic critic who stamped 'Is Divorce A Failure?' a picture of punches knew what he was writing about. This picture, featuring charming Leah Baird, opened at the Clinton Square Monday before one of the biggest houses since Oscar J. Perrin took over the management."

This is the first of Miss Baird's 1923 specials for Associated Exhibitors

"Sid" Books "Human Wreckage"

Mrs. Wallace Reid's Anti-Narcotic Picture Due for Runs in Large Cities

SID GRAUMAN has broken his established booking rule for his million dollar Hollywood theatre by booking Mrs. Wallace Reid's production, "Human Wreckage," for an indefinite run starting June 1. Negotiations have also been closed with Ackerman-Harris for their theatre in San Francisco to open a short time later. In addition to this a deal has been closed for a loop house in Chicago and a Broadway theatre in New York, all on the strength of "popular opinion."

With the announcement of the proposed picture based on the degrading influence of narcotics, hundreds of civic leaders, United States Senators, Governors, social leaders and financiers offered moral and financial assistance.

Cabinet and government officials urged that she make the film. Secretary of Labor, James J. Davis, Secretary of the Navy, Edwin Denby, William J. Burns, U. S. Senators David Elkins, (West Virginia), Frank B. Willis, (Ohio), Jos. Irwin France, (Maryland), David I. Walsh, (Massachusetts), Arthur Capper, (Kansas), H. O. Bursom, (New Mexico), Reed Smoot, (Utah), Kenneth McKeller, (Tennessee), J. W. Harrell, Miles Poindexter, (Washington), Wesley L. Jones, (Washington), Porter J. McCumber, (North Dakota), Morris Shepard, (Texas), Fruiflod Simmons (North Carolina), sent telegrams commending the move.

Quick to appreciate the powerful influence and appeal connected with the showing of a picture backed by so many and swayed by the interest of the nation at large, Mr. Grauman paid a visit to the studio where the film was in the course of construction and after viewing some of the rushes he booked the production into his million dollar theatre, cancelling an important booking to pencil in "Human Wreckage."

To date Mrs. Reid and her associates have almost completed page 3 of the film and on such a scale to make it irresistible, it is said. In addition to Mrs. Reid, who was herself one of the leading lights of the screen before her marriage, the producers of the picture have gathered together such people as James Kirkwood, Bessie Love and Claire McDowell.

Kirkwood, in order to take part in the picture, gave up the leading role in Channing Pollock's "The Fool," in which he created the part. In the midst of "The Great White Way" idolatry, Kirkwood stepped down from his pedestal, turned his part over to his understudy and started for the coast.

Newspapers and magazines throughout the country have taken up the cry against narcotics and have given Mrs. Reid columns upon columns of publicity.

Universal Sets Astound Japanese Official

"Film production methods of America are astounding after seeing the same work in Germany, France, Italy and Austria," says S. Shimidzu, Secretary of the Department of Communication, Tokio, who visited Universal City on the last lap of a world tour that took him to practically every large city in Europe. "The American methods are more direct, and they impress an idea by pictures with far less effort—and far less film—than the European producer does. Mechanical methods, too, are far more perfect, although perhaps no more artistic than the German methods."

Shimidzu inspected the "Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Merry-Go-Round" sets in detail. The latter aroused keen interest. "I was in Vienna a short time ago, and visited the Prater," he said, "and it is perfectly duplicated at the setting at Universal City. I recognized it at once."

Regarding the "Hunchback" set, he said: "I have never seen anything so massive. The front of the cathedral is exactly as it is in Paris today, and the interior practically the same."

Four N. Y. Schools Close for "Robin Hood"

Inducing principals of four of the biggest public schools in New York City to call off classes for half a day that pupils might see "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," the United Artists' release, is some accomplishment, but it was put over by H. M. Chamberlain, manager of the Plaza theatre, a Leo Brecher house.

Mr. Chamberlain arranged for a special forenoon showing of this big feature at ten o'clock on four successive days. At each performance about 1,200 school children attended with their principal and teachers.

Tickets were distributed among the teachers to be sold to the pupils for fifteen cents each, the theatre donating five of the fifteen cents to the school fund in each instance. The youngsters also were asked to write short essays on "Douglas Fairbanks in 'Robin Hood,'" a cash prize of $5 being given to the best one from each school.

Exceptional Tie-ups For "Playing It Wild"

"Playing It Wild," starring William Duncan and Edith Johnson, is enjoying exceptional tie-ups, it is said. It is a story of a cowboy newspaper editor and newspapers are joining exhibitors in publicity and advertising.

An exhibitor in the Middle West was fortunate enough to find a double of William Duncan in his city. He engaged this man to impersonate the Vitagraph star as a cowboy and arranged to have "William Duncan" edit the paper for one day. A facsimile of the newspaper was prepared as a throwaway and distributed by the exhibitor. The stunt provided a splendid bit of publicity for the theatre and the newspaper obtained actual benefit in the mutual exploitation scheme.

N. Y. Verdict on "Girl I Loved"

Production and Work of Charles Ray Are Highly Approved by Reviewers

ALMOST without dissent critics for the New York newspapers had enthusiastic praise for Charles Ray and his work in "The Girl I Loved," a United Artists release which had its first showing on Broadway May 13 at the Capitol theatre.

"The Girl I Loved" is, we think the greatest contribution to the screen since "Broken Blossoms," said Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune's review. "Take our advice and do not miss this classic, and if you have tears prepare to shed them."

"Charles Ray has made a really touching and illuminating motion picture," said the reviewer for the Daily News. "It did things to us that no photoplay ever has done before. It is really a tremendous picture in what it sets out to do and what it accomplishes through the true medium of cinematographic art."

"If you want to see a unique and charming picture, do not fail to go see Charles Ray's screen version of James Whitcomb Riley's poem, 'The Girl I Loved,'" said Dorothy Day in the Morning Telegraph.

"Charles Ray comes back into the atmosphere which suits him best in 'The Girl I Loved,'" said Robert E. Sherwood in the New York Herald. "Mr. Ray has always been a cerity and a pantomime ability which has lifted him far above the usual average of movie stars; but we doubt that he has ever done anything as good as his performance of the simple country boy of James Whitcomb Riley's poem."

"In his love-making scenes in 'The Girl I Loved' Charles Ray is extremely fine," said Quinn Martin in the World, "and it is likely that the strong romantic theme combined with the star's well-wishing following and Patsy Ruth Miller's thoroughly good performance as the leading woman, will go a long way toward re-establishing Mr. Ray as one of the contending young picture players."

"Charles Ray's 'The Girl I Loved' is a work of art, and Mr. Ray has never done anything better than his portrayal of John Middleton," said the critic for the Evening Journal.

"A new Charles Ray—humorous and whimsical as ever but fired with a new force of dramatic power, in 'The Girl I Loved' said the reviewer for the Evening Telegram.

"The atmosphere of the production is excellent, the photography above the average, and the supporting cast, particularly Patsy Ruth Miller, unusually good," wrote the reviewer for the Globe.

Barker Company Back From Canada

Reginald Barker's company filming "The Master of Woman" under Metro-Louis B. Mayer auspices has returned to Hollywood after six weeks' work on location.

The company of fifty, including Rance Adoree, Earle Williams, Pat O'Malley, Ruth Mitchell, George Kuwa, and Pat Harmon, and a corps of electricians, carpenters, construction men, photographers and property men, brought back with them the precious reels as trophies of their success.

An ice jam in Bow River, a real roaring blizzard near Banff; a dog team race in the shadows of Mt. Robson; a fierce attack of wolves and a wild canoe-ride through the dangerous ice-choked rapids of Seymour Creek are a few of the high lights which the picture called for and which were filmed in the face of numerous obstacles.

The company was extended every courtesy by both the Canadian government officials and the population. Through special permission the director was allowed to use the immense buffalo herd in Jasper National Park in a spectacular stampede episode.

"The Master of Woman," originally published as a G. B. Lancaster novel under the title, "The Law-Bringers," is the second of the series of Reginald Barker productions presented by Louis B. Mayer and distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation. Monte M. Katterjohn made the screen adaptation. Percy Hilburn is chief cameraman.

Newspapers Profit by "Safety Last"

Newspaper publishers have every reason to think well of Harold Lloyd and "Safety Last." No other motion picture production of any type has so inspired exhibitors, in big cities and little ones, to consume newspaper advertising space it is claimed. Pathe submits evidence in scores of full pages and half pages. Thus far the prize goes to the Liberty theatre, Marysville, Kansas,—a town of 3,500 inhabitants.

The Liberty's "Safety Last" advertisement in the Marshall County (Kansas) News of Friday, May 4, filled a double page. A full half of this space was occupied by its own announcement, illustrated with a climbing stunt and Lloyd's portrait. The rest of the space represented tie-ups with local shops—and each of these displayed "Safety Last" material.

"The Fog" Premiere Due in N. Y. Soon

Max Graf, director of Graf Productions, Inc., and Paul Powell, director, have returned to Hollywood from the Pacific Studios at San Mateo, California, with the negative of "The Fog," which they will assemble at the Metro studios.

"The Fog," which is a picturization of William Dudley Pelley's novel, will be released by Metro. In the cast are Mi'dred Harris, Cullen Landis, David Butler, Louise Fazenda, Ann May, Ralph Lewis, Ethel Wales, Edward Phillips, Marjorie Prevost and Frank Currier.

Johnson Plans F.B.O. Feature

Mail Carrier will Be Hero of Fourth Special of Melodramatic Series

EMORY JOHNSON has laid his plans for his fourth all-star feature thriller for the Film Booking Offices. This time the hero will be a member of Uncle Sam's great army of postoffice employees.

Emory Johnson, with the knack of the old school of theatricals, has to date produced nothing but melodramas of the old days. In each instance he has taken his hero characters from the walks of public life such as policeman, fireman, engineer and now the mail man. His pictures have always leaned towards the school of melodrama and his principals have always been middle aged ones. For "In the Name of the Law," his first production for the F. B. O., he took the family of a policeman, rendered it with a crime wave, implicated the policeman's son in a melodramatic fashion, then cleared the whole affair with a sweep. The picture immediately on its release was adopted by the police departments over the country as the best piece of propaganda they had ever had.

The case of "The Third Alarm" was even greater. Over five thousand contracts on this picture are said to have been signed to date with many of the smaller towns yet uncovered. The co-operation obtained on this production was little short of marvelous. Without a single exception the fire departments responded to a man. Old apparatus were dragged out for ballyhooing and in some instances the firemen themselves took over the picture and ran the house on a benefit basis.

The latest Johnson release is still in its infancy. Introduced at a special showing last month at the Astor Hotel, every railway official in New York City saw "The Westbound Limited." The story, told in a dramatic fashion, "is the greatest boost the railroads have ever received and we will give it our heartiest co-operation," said these officials.

With the assured success of "Westbound," Emory Johnson immediately laid his plans for the production of his newest exploitation film. Ralph Lewis, who took the lead in the three first pictures, is cast for the lead as the "mail carrier," while Mrs. Emily Johnson, who wrote Johnson's other production, is writing the new continuity from an original story which she wrote some time ago. Other members of the cast will be announced later.

Hoffman Launches Truart Franchise Campaign

M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of the Truart, officially fired the first gun in the campaign to put the Truart Franchise on the map, at luncheon last Monday. Only members of the Truart staff were present and Mr. Hoffman outlined the plans and policies which will govern the activities of his organization.

"The biggest problem," said Mr. Hoffman, "which the independent exchangemen face is to obtain productions which will measure up as superior to the general run of national distributors' productions."

"The one thing the independent field requires is co-operation, a co-ordination of exhibitor, exchangeman and producer, by means of which the producer may be assured of the deserved return on big-caliber production."

"The Truart idea is the result of a year's study and preparation. In quality and drawing power of its productions, in its country-wide exploitation and in its service department it will be second to none and in many respects it will set a new standard."

"Passionate Friends" Is Sold For Kentucky

George H. Davis picturization of the H. G. Wells novel "The Passionate Friends" was sold this week for the Kentucky territory. The sale was made by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, which is distributing this feature, to Big Feature Rights Corporation of Louisville.

Reviewers Praise "Girl Who Came Back"

Additional reports from the motion picture critics of the trade publications and daily newspapers on the latest Preferred Picture released by the Al Lichtman Corporation, "The Girl Who Came Back," confirm the first favorable reviews.

Sydney Smith of the Morning Telegraph says, "Action, excitement and thrills are found in abundance and the picture is the kind that most people will find good entertainment. The action of the picture is rapid and it is an effective story."

George Blaisdell's review in the Exhibitors' Trade Review says in part: "Good in all departments. . . . The scenes attending the return of Norries and Sheila are marked by suspense. Miriam Cooper is appealing. . . . Gaston Glass finely portrays the weakling."

P. W. Gallico in the New York Daily News writes: "This film contains some real acting by Miriam Cooper, Gaston Glass and Za Su Pitts and a fine imaginative bit of technical achievement by the director."

Young America Blooms in "Penrod and Sam"

Young America gets its full credit on the screen in "Penrod and Sam." Booth Tarkington's novel of boyhood life, which William Beaudine is now directing for First National release. In all, a hundred youngsters will appear in the cast of this picture, headed, of course, by Ben Alexander, who plays the role of "Penrod."

Some of these children, coraled by Mr. Beaudine himself from the neighborhood, are making their first screen appearance as "extras" and others are prominent child-players of the films. But all of them, newcomers or old favorites, are typical American boys and girls, who interpret without artificial efforts the wholesome humor and child psychology which Mr. Tarkington wrote into "Penrod and Sam."

Tourneur Has Completed "Brass Bottle"

Maurice Tourneur has completed the production of "The Brass Bottle," which will be his next release through First National, to follow "The Isle of Lost Ships." The final shot was taken with the filming of a spectacular prologue for the picture in which two hundred harem girls participated. Featured in these scenes is Barbara LaMarr, popular screen star, who portrays the part of an Egyptian queen.

Will Rogers to Start Pathe Series Soon

WILL ROGERS has notified Pathe that he will leave New York for the Pacific Coast on June 3, and will start work on the first of his two-reel comedies on June 11.

Rogers' engagement under the Pathe-Hal Roach contract, made several months ago, stars him in a series of thirteen comedies, to be delivered at intervals of 28 days, work on the first to be begun within ten days after he leaves New York for the Coast.

Mack Sennett Rushes "Extra Girl"

Mack Sennett's forthcoming comedy drama, "The Extra Girl," with Mabel Normand as the star, is progressing rapidly. Miss Normand and others of the company are working daily from early till late. The filming of interior scenes has been completed, and the company is about ready to go out on location for exteriors.

In these scenes the mid-Western little town of River Bend will be reproduced, according to previously announced plans, in the upper region of the Sacramento river where Sennett location experts have prepared the way for the players with Miss Normand.

Maud Hill Is Signed for "Six Cylinder Love"

Maud Hill, one of the most versatile and popular players on the screen has completed her work as the witch in "The Scarecrow," a Film Guild Production, starring Glenn Hunter. It will be distributed by Hodkinson.

The completion of the picture does not mean that Miss Hill will enjoy a vacation. Practically before the last scene has been "shot" the Fox Film Corporation had engaged her for a leading role in "Six Cylinder Love." Ernest Truex will be the featured member of the cast selected by Elmer Clifton, director of "Down to the Sea in Ships," who will also direct the screen version of the Broadway play.

"Isle of Lost Ships" Is Praised

Maurice Tourneur's Drama of the Sea is Well Received by N. Y. Reviewers

MAURICE Tourneur's drama of the sea, "The Isle of Lost Ships," has won a high place among the list of big pictures of the season as far as the New York newspaper critics are concerned. The production had its Metropolitan career on Sunday, May 13th, at the Broadway Strand.

"We recommend it heartily to all lovers of excitement, romance and of the unusual," writes P. W. Gallico, in the Daily News. "Against a background that fires the imagination, Director Tourneur has told a fast-moving story that captures and holds one completely."

"The production holds one from the opening scene to the last few feet of the film," wrote the New York Times critic. "It is a good story and in the hands of Maurice Tourneur it is given every possibility on the film. Tourneur's spark is obvious throughout the photoplay, and some of the scenes of the storm at sea are as good as any if not better than have been put into other pictures."

Under the heading of "Great Sea Tale at the Strand," the Evening Telegram writes: "Here at the Strand Theatre is something novel and stirring in motion pictures. Real romance that has an air of actuality even in its wildest moments holds the onlooker spellbound. 'The Isle of Lost Ships' is just the sort of hair raising story that an old salt tells as he sits ashore, between voyages, puffing on his old pipe and drawing on fact and fiction."

The Evening Sun reviewer starts his criticism by announcing that "The Isle of Lost Ships" at the Strand, is a real thriller. This sea story, directed by Maurice Tourneur, is a fascinating picture fraught with beauty and full of excitement. There are views of ships silhouetted against tropical skies, of beautiful wind swept seas and fights galore, and there is a rousing scene of a submarine struggling upward thru a sea of weeds to the water's surface with seemingly half of the Kelp of the Sargasso Sea strewn over her topsides."

"Maurice Tourneur," writes Harriet Underhill in the New York Tribune, "has managed to produce the most realistic storm at sea and subsequent wreck we ever saw. The island itself is so well produced that one has the weirdest feeling of tramping about over crumbling boats and dead men's bones."

"Going Up" is Nearing Completion

The cutting, editing and titling of "Going Up," Douglas MacLean's screen adaptation of the Cohan and Harris musical comedy success and his first independent production for Associated Exhibitors, are practically completed, according to news from the west coast, and it is expected the finishing touches will be placed on the comedy within the next two or three weeks.

The release length of the picture will be approximately 6000 feet. George J. Crone, who edited a number of previous Douglas MacLean pictures, is in charge of the editing of this starring feature, while the sub-titles, aside from those which were taken from the musical comedy itself, are being written by Raymond Griffith, who adapted the story for use on the screen.

The photoplay was directed by Lloyd Ingraham, with photography by Ross Fisher. Mr. MacLean's supporting cast includes, among others, Marjorie Daw, Edna Murphy, Hallam Cooley, Hughie Mack, and Francis MacDonald.

The scenario of "The Gold Diggers," written by Grant Carpenter, has been approved by Mr. Belasco. From present indications the picture will be started shortly after the arrival of Mr. Belasco and Lenore Ulric on the coast early in June. By this time, Sam and Jack Warner, production manager, expect to have lined up the entire cast which will be subjected to the approval of the theatrical producer. "The Gold Diggers" will be directed by Harry Beaumont.

Valuable Information Presented at Engineers' Convention

Work of Society Proving Great Help to Every Phase of Industry

IT was only proven more conclusively during the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, held at Atlantic City, N. J., May 7th to 10th, inclusive, that that body is making impressive progress in setting forth recommendations and requirements along with valuable information for every technical phase of the theatre and this industry in general.

The exhibitors problems, such as improved lighting for the auditorium and orchestra pit, efficient and reliable apparatus permitting good prejection and the many other technical subjects are submitted to intensive study with the result that the Society puts forth for the exhibitors consideration reliable data and suggestions that would, in all probability, be impossible to secure otherwise.

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers is doing excellent work for this industry and is deserving of thorough support.

There are practices now in common vogue in the average theatre that prove extremely detrimental to the popularity of motion pictures. Reference is made in particular to house lighting, orchestra pit lighting and the screening of the picture. Where a small amount of effort and expense would greatly improve these conditions and add materially to the comfort and enjoyment of the audience, the exhibitor usually ignores these important details of his theatre as of little consequence.

During the S. M. P. E. Convention, much stress was given these particular faults of the average theatre, and while it proved a comparatively simple problem to make recommendations for their correction, the real difficulty lies in securing actual recognition of these faults by the exhibitors themselves and to enlist their cooperation for their elimination.

The S. M. P. E. functions as an engineering body solely to advance the science of motion pictures. The long and diligent study given

An Important Factor in Showmanship

WHILE exhibitors are striving to find a sound basis to maintain stability in this industry, especially in connection with the purchase of film, pause and give heed to another important phase in motion picture showmanship, i. e., proper theatre equipment and projection.

The physical characteristics and atmosphere of a theatre gives the mark of individuality. The degree of comfort afforded the clientele through physical appointments has much to do with the success of the theatre. A thoughtful study given any theatre, excepting perhaps some of the most modern and elaborate, will bring forth features which can be improved upon, thus adding materially to the attraction of the house.

Projection of the picture is of the utmost importance to every type of motion picture theatre. No picture, presented under the most favorable of conditions, can prove a maximum of enjoyment to the audience unless its screening is perfect.

The effectiveness and charm of more pictures is lost to the audience through defective projection than through any other fault of theatre operation. Eye strain, caused as an effect of insufficient or uneven screen illumination, flicker, unsteady picture, misframes, etc., have as a result, lessened the popularity of the theatre. People can only be induced to stand this abuse through the attraction of some feature picture of unusual quality.

problems confronting the theatre man by this body of engineers should receive due recognition and appreciation. The value of the data and recommendations given are worthy of serious consideration by every exhibitor. An improvement in the theatre will result.

Many interesting papers and reports on investigations carried on by special committees were presented at the S. M. P. E. convention. Exceptionally enlightening discussion followed these papers with the result that the papers and reports supplemented by this criticism and additional information added by the discussions will prove highly valuable when published in the Transactions of the Society.

J. H. McNabb, of Bell & Howell, gave in his paper a description of the limits and uses of high speed photography without the use of an especially designed camera. It now appears that great speed can be obtained by the proper use of good standard photographic equipment.

A most interesting discussion followed a paper, "Cine Light." This paper, by Douglas E. Brown, advanced a new theory for the art of lighting studio sets. In the remarks following this paper, Dr. Mees, head of the Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories, and other well known scientists put forth the reasons that the present lighting systems as adopted by the studios secure relatively effective results with the negative film now in general use.

Ray Mott and W. C. Kunzmann, of the National Carbon Company prepared a paper on "Efficiency in Carbon Arc Projection," which should prove very valuable to this industry.

Treatments of subjects pertaining to laboratories were presented by W. R. Rothacker, President of the Rothacker Film Laboratories, E. F. Renwick, of the DuPont Company and J. I. Crabtree, of the Eastman Kodak Co.

The many other interesting papers and discussions presented gave a wide variation to the program thus permitting every one in attendance an opportunity to expand on the subject of most interest to him.

Chicago Theatres Contend for Leadership

Physical, Musical and Presentation Features Show Great Advancement in Art

IN 1905 passers-by on State Street noted that a novel amusement place had opened its doors. It was Chicago's first motion picture theatre. Its walls were flat, its decorations zero and its pictures crude. Today three hundred and eleven moving picture theatres are offering high-class amusement to Chicago's 2,800,000 residents, and many of these theatres are noted throughout the world for their architectural magnificence, beauty of decorations and furnishings and quality of entertainment they provide.

A few years ago there were approximately four hundred and fifty moving picture houses within the city limits and the reduction in number is significant of the passing of the small house and the ascendancy of the great cinema palaces. It is also worthy of note that while the number of houses has decreased greatly, the total seating capacity has increased so that today there are about 280,000 seats in Chicago moving picture theatres, or one for every ten inhabitants of the city.

The development of motion picture theatres and the presentation of pictures, amidst surroundings which appeal to the most fastidious class of theatre-goers, as well as rank and file of the citizenry, has more than kept pace with the city's growth and the advance in picture production, so that now real amusement palaces are within convenient distance of every residential neighborhood in the city, and in the famous loop district there are theatres unsurpassed anywhere for beauty, size and the elaborateness and excellence of their presentations.

Music an Attendance Builder

In attracting and building up attendance, both in the downtown and neighborhood theatres, music has been a most important factor. Indeed, the fine orchestras and organs played by real artists have closely vied with the pictures presented in the interest of the public, with the result that an army of fifteen hundred musicians are employed in the theatres and some of the largest houses have orchestras which vie with such organizations as the Chicago Symphony in perfection of technique and beauty of tone.

Balaban & Katz's presentations have become nationally famous and their Chicago Theatre has the largest orchestra of any motion picture theatre in Chicago. It numbers fifty musicians and Nat Finston is musical director. Mr. Finston views all feature pictures and prepares a musical setting for them which is thoroughly rehearsed with the result that every element of dramatic appeal or heart interest in the picture is doubly emphasized by the musical accompaniment. A grand opera selection or other classical number is a feature of every performance at the Chicago, and a series of Sunday concerts, thirty-five in all, has just closed, and more than 125,000 people paid admission to hear them. During the first year 100,000 persons attended and the second year's results show the growing popularity of this feature of Balaban & Katz's entertainment.

In the greater number of these cases these programs were put together in a way to make them of general interest, but some have been specialized—an all-American program, a Dvorak-Smetana group, a Wagnerian concert and the Wagner-Tschaikowsky program, the last with a chorus of fifty voices, were among those given. The soloists, who were largely American, included grand opera singers, the last to be heard this season being Tito Schipa.

Organ solos, with Jesse Crawford at the console, draw hearty applause at every performance, and Mr. Crawford is now starting a series of one-hour Sunday concerts, which will be carried through until the orchestral Sunday concerts are resumed in the fall. The stage presentations at the Chicago have been notable for the use of fine lighting effects and the beauty of scenery. A typical Chicago program follows: Overture, "Martha." Novelty—Topics of the Day. Feature—The Bright Shawl. Comedy—Extra! Extra! Music—Organ Solo, "You Know You Belong to Somebody Else." Specialty—"Wolverine Blues," Tivoli Syncopators. Specialty—"Little Old New York."

Jones, Linick & Schaefer's McVickers, which runs Paramount pictures exclusively, has also specialized on music and its orchestra of thirty-eight pieces, under the direction of H. Leopold Spitalny, has become recognized as one of the finest musical organizations in the central west. An important feature of every McVickers' program is the overture, for which Mr. Spitalny has generally selected some high-class opera overture followed by a "Spitalny classical jazz" selection, which has met with great favor. Ballet, jazz and specialty dancing numbers in beautiful scenic settings, and with the most modern lighting effects, have helped build up the popularity of McVickers. Stars of the stage and screen have also made their appearance at McVickers this winter. The special jazz week program at McVickers, which was presented starting May 14th, and which follows, is of interest. (1.) W. Remington Welch at the McVickers' Organ. (2.) McVickers' Symphony Orchestra in Spitalny's conception, playing, "When Tootsie Meets Carolina at Three O'Clock in the Morning." (3.) "A Bit of Greenwich Village," with Miss 'Nubs' Allen, 12 beauties, and Al Copeland's Band. (4.) Babe Payne with peppy songs. (5.) An Assortment of Saxophones. (6.) Fay and Florence Courtney and their ultra-string quartette. (7.) Capman & Capman, premiere steppers. (8.) "Cafe Clantant" with forty people. (9.) Feature, "The Rustle of Silk."

The Roosevelt theatre, while not so large as either the Chicago or McVickers, is one of the most beautiful houses in the country, and is located in the busiest portion of the retail district. Balaban & Katz have put in many of the largest and finest features of the year at this house for extended runs, which is unlike the policy pursued by them at the Chicago and by Jones, Linick & Schaefer at McVickers, which is a change every week. At the Roosevelt there are no stage presentations, but an excellent small orchestra plays the pictures and gives an overture. From two to six weeks has been the run of important features shown at this house.

Other loop moving picture theatres, such as the Randolph and Orpheum, while offering fine entertainment in the shape of the newest and best features with organ accompaniment, have no special architectural presentation or orchestral features which are of interest to the visiting picture theatre owners.

Chicago's outlying and neighborhood picture theatres are numerous and have many points to interest the showmen in search of business building or presentation ideas, but space limitation prevents more than the briefest mention of these. Lubliner & Trinz's Senate is a magnificent house, with a seating capacity of 3,400, and is one of the amusement centers of Chicago's great west side. Here, in addition to first-run features, high-class comedies and short subjects, Art Kahn's orchestra is a strong attraction and specializes largely on jazz numbers and light music. Special attention is given to the musical setting for pictures and projection as in the other Lubliner & Trinz houses. Owing to stage limitations, presentations have not been a feature of the Senate, but this difficulty is being overcome by the enlargement of the stage and presentations will soon have a place on the program.

Outlying Houses Incorporate Interesting Ideas

Another of the great west side show houses is the Central Park, one of Balaban & Katz's theatres, where presentations and fine music are featured.

Another recently reopened house, which is putting on fine programs, is Brunhild & Young's one thousand-seat Douglas on the far west side.

Among the south side theatres, the Tivoli, another Balaban & Katz's house, is the most beautiful. In fact many persons feel that from an architectural and decorative standpoint, it is the most beautiful house in Chicago. Here the orchestra is under the direction of Albert E. Short and Milton Charles is the organist. Programs are along the lines of those described at the Chicago.

Andrew Karzas' Woodlawn Theatre, with its two thousand seats, has built up a splendid neighborhood patronage and has a notable orchestra and a very fine organ. Special attention to the selection of features and other parts of the program, as well as an unusually homelike atmosphere, has put the seal of distinction on this house.

The 2,500-seat Stratford is another south side theatre worthy of special mention. Music has been given place of honor on this theatre's programs, and the twenty-two-piece orchestra, presided over by Bruno Steindel, the famous cellist, is rated as one of the best in the city, and Edmund Fitch, another well-known musician, is organist. Prologues and presentations are part of this theatre's program.

The West Englewood, of Ascher Brothers' large chain of houses, has 2,200 seats and is under the personal management of Harry Ascher, who is said to know the majority of his patrons by their first names and is always on hand to greet them. In addition to feature pictures, good music and vaudeville specialties are part of the regular program.

On the north side, theatres of importance are Lubliner & Trinz's Pantheon and Covent Garden, Ascher's Chateau, the Capitol, owned by Fichtenberg Brothers, Balaban & Katz's Riviera and others.

Cleveland, Ohio

The Keith Theatre is another of our installations consisting of over twenty-five hundred chairs. Its beauty can only be realized by those who have actually viewed its interior.

Comfort and Beauty Both Essential

WHEN theatre patrons enter your theatre, the first impression they get is its beauty. Their eyes wander from one point of interest to another and all unconsciously make comparison with other theatres. But, however beautiful your theatre may be, if the seating is of poor quality the lack of comfort creates a feeling of restlessness so that performance and attractions cannot be fully enjoyed.

Great care is taken by our Theatre Engineering Department to plan chairs that not only harmonize perfectly with the theatre interior but offer the greatest possible comfort as well. Ease in operation, elimination of squeaks, well proportioned backs and seats and correctly placed arm rests are only a few of the points considered for proper comfort.

A broadside is being prepared showing recent theatre chair installations made by us and also chair suggestions for the refurbishing of old or the entire equipping of new theatres.

Everybody likes good music and most people know what constitutes good music. You can not fool them by near-music. Of course, good music costs money—unless you use the Barton Orchestral Organ. The Barton Organ is built to give the greatest variety of fine music and supplies it at a lower cost than any other instrument. Equally effective with or without an orchestra and built in varying models to fit all sizes of theatres.

Once a theatre owner installs a Barton he never installs any other kind, no matter how many theatres he acquires. For Barton owners are Barton boosters—it's that kind of an organ.

Old American Theatre Transformed Into New Colonial Type House

How an old theatre may be remodeled and transformed into an entirely new house was recently demonstrated at Bellingham, Wash., by the Bellingham Theatres Company, when they spent several weeks and several thousand dollars in making the American theatre one of the most up-to-date show houses in the territory.

The theatre was stripped down practically to an empty room, with nothing left in it but the seats, which were carefully gone over, repaired and refinished. The decorations and furnishings were taken down, and a new color scheme of old rose and blue was put into the house when the new drapes and curtains were put up. The house was entirely finished in colonial style, with woodwork and fixtures finished in ivory and gold.

At each side of the stage art glass windows were installed, and various color and lighting schemes were placed behind the windows. The lighting of these windows, the stage and all house lighting is done from a central board in the projection room. The room was entirely refinished and new apparatus installed. Two Simplex projection machines with Type "G" motor generators are used in the booth.

One of the features of the house is the large lounge-foyer, which is entirely carpeted in rose and blue, with rose drapes and ivory and gold woodwork. The ceiling is elaborately decorated in a light blue tint. In the middle of the foyer is a settee, upholstered in blue, with a lamp and old rose shade above it. Girl ushers of the house are attired in colonial costume, with blue velvet coats and white silk breeches.

The stage, which is large enough for the presentation of average motion picture theatre acts, is equipped with foot and side lights, and an old rose curtain, all controlled from the projection booth. Loge seats are situated at the rear of the lower floor, and are equipped with especially upholstered chairs. The ladies' rest rooms are at the head of the stairs on the balcony floor, and are furnished and decorated in colonial style, carrying out the ivory and gold color scheme.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,200, evenly divided between the main floor and balcony. The entrance to the balcony is at each extreme side of the house, with the main balcony aisle running across the middle of the floor. The theatre is under the direction of Fred Walton. A Robert Morton orchestral organ furnishes the music for the house, with a large pit suitable for occupancy by an ordinary size orchestra.

The drapes, carpets and automatic ticket machine used in the cashier's booth were furnished by the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle.—Prager.

Law Passed Permitting Use of Standard Film in Portable Machines

AN act, it has been learned, has been passed by the New York State Assembly, modifying the restrictions on the use of special film in portable motion picture machines.

It is now permissible to adapt portable motion picture machines to the use of standard width film. To avoid the danger of fire in the use of standard width film, the law allows only non-inflammable stock to be used. No booth, or licensed projectionist is required, basing the safety of this use of standard width film on the proviso for non-inflammable stock.

There seems to be one other saving grace to this law, i. e., that the light source for projection shall not consume more than three hundred and fifty watts.

How supposedly sane legislators could be convinced by those interested in the passage of such a bill that machines equipped to use standard width film would be confined to the use of non-inflammable stock only, is beyond imagination.

The situation in many respects is analogous to a law permitting the carrying of fire arms providing only blank cartridges are used.

The law just passed by the Assembly may well place the lives of the public in most hazardous position. An interesting picture might be imagined of showing a few reels to a church audience. For economy's sake an old film is secured that is not the non-inflammable stock. Several full reels, lying around, uncovered, not even in a general enclosure, with the church audience all relying on the inexperienced amateur to prevent a fire disaster—as it most certainly would be a disaster of the worst sort if a fire once started.

There is less than one percent of non-inflammable stock in circulation. The likelihood of only this stock being used is not only remote but absolutely nil.

It is hoped that legislation of this character dealing with film which has such tremendous potential danger if proper precautions are not used, will not find popularity in other states.

"Phono-Film" Described at Convention

In the absence of Dr. Lee De Forest, who is in Europe, his story of the Phonofilm was told this week at the Society of Motion Picture Engineers by W. E. Waddell. The meeting was in Atlantic City.

Dr. De Forest had prepared a paper telling the history of the experiments which finally led to success; with the intention of reading it himself. Business interests, however, made imperative his trip abroad. So Mr. Waddell, general manager of production, stepped into the breach and took De Forest's place.

The Phonofilm combines on the same film the photoplay and the musical or voice accompaniment. Synchronization is perfect. It will be ready for release to theatres in the Autumn.

The old American theatre, Bellingham, Wash., transformed into an entirely new house. These two views show the house after thorough remodelling. Keeping houses up to date is now an essential for success

SIMPLIFIED ELECTRICITY for PROJECTIONISTS

Power; Its Measurements and Relations

LESSON V.—PART II.

Power Measurements

THE average projectionist will have little reason to make power measurements in connection with the equipment in the projection room. Still there may be times when he will be called upon to compare the efficiency of two competitive machines, or to explain excessive power bills and it would be well for him to back up his opinions and statements with definite figures.

A knowledge of the subject will at least prevent him from "swallowing" another person's figures without checking them over himself.

The measurement of power in electric circuits is quite simple in many cases but some circuits, such as those known as polyphase, require exact knowledge of the measurements obtained are to mean anything.

Single Phase Circuits

We know, or at least should know, by this time, that the power in any simple two-wire

Since the voltage and current alone are no indication of the amount of power in a circuit, it is necessary to either know the power factor or use an instrument called a wattmeter to measure the power. Fig. 45 shows a simple electric circuit with such a meter connected in it to measure the power. It will be noticed that one of the circuit wires is broken and the ends connected to each side of the meter. This is known as the ammeter coil and is connected in series fashion. The ends of still another coil, are connected across the circuit wires thus connecting this coil in parallel fashion. This is known as the voltmeter coil. When so connected, the number of watts can be read directly on a scale placed on the face of the wattmeter. A detailed explanation of how this instrument and others such as voltmeters and ammeters, work, will be given in a later article. The two circles in the figure represent the collector rings of the single phase generator supplying current to the circuit.

If, in addition to the wattmeter reading just circuit is obtained by multiplying the current by the voltage. In the case of a direct-current circuit, the figure so obtained (called the product) represents the power. In the case of an alternating current circuit, however, it was shown that this figure must be multiplied by another called the power factor. The power factor which depends upon the amount of reactance in the circuit, is usually expressed as a decimal such as 0.6 (6/10), 0.7, 0.85, etc. In the case of a circuit containing all resistance and no reactance the power factor is 1.0 (one). It can never be greater than 1.0. If the circuit contained all reactance and no resistance, the power factor would be zero and this would also make the power zero even though voltage were applied and current were flowing.

obtained, an ammeter, A, and voltmeter, V, connected in circuit as shown to the right of Fig. 45, and their readings also obtained, the power factor could be figured from these three readings by using the following formula:

Power Factor =

wattmeter reading

voltmeter reading $\times$ ammeter reading

P. F. = $\frac{W}{E \times I}$

Polyphase Circuits

So far, we have been dealing only with simple two-wire, or single-phase circuits, as they are commonly called. The diagram of the generator winding supplying such a single-phase circuit with current is shown in Fig. 46A. It will be noticed the wires of opposite polarity are separated by 180 electrical degrees.

Suppose now, that we put another separate winding on the armature shown by placing another wire in the spaces between the poles as indicated in Fig. 46B. We would have another phase. If the four ends of both these wires be brought out and connected to four collector rings on the end of the generator, similar to the commutator of a D. C. machine, a two-phase generator would be the result.

These two phases could either be connected to any two-phase electrical machine such as a motor or each phase could be used separately and loaded by connecting lamps, single-phase motors, etc., across either phase. This action, however, would probably cause one phase to be more heavily loaded than the other resulting in what is called an unbalanced load. The two-phase motor would be called a balanced load.

Whether the load is balanced or unbalanced has much to do with how the measurement of power is made. If the load is balanced, then only one wattmeter reading need be taken as shown in Fig. 45. This reading, multiplied by two, will give the total power in the circuit. The formula is as follows:

E_t = terminal voltage

Milwaukee Now Boasts of the Latest in Exchange Buildings

Milwaukee's newest film exchange, a building covering 12,000 square feet, representing an investment of about $150,000, has just been completed. The Film Exchange, as the building will be called, is located at 713-719 Wells St., Milwaukee's second busiest thoroughfare, and its location, just outside the parking zone loop, was selected with a view to parking zone conditions, one of Milwaukee's greatest downtown problems.

It is a one-story structure, absolutely fire and explosion proof, sky-lighted throughout, and equipped with a sprinkler system. It has a Kawneer copper front composed entirely of tile, brick and plate glass.

Housed in the building will be the following exchanges and film supply companies: Universal, Celebrated Players, Metro, Tunstall Film Co., (handling Warner Features), Fox, K. B., and the Exhibitors' Supply Company.

The exchange building boasts every modern facility for the individual exchanges, from steel poster racks, a waiting room lined with benches for exhibitors, shared by all, and greater vault space per exchange than any film building in the United States. An office with 1,000 feet of working space has two vaults of 780 cubic feet, or a capacity of 2,700 reels. Each vault is equipped with baby radiators to keep the chill from the sprinkler system. Working conditions are similar to the most modern factories, the side and back walls being composed almost entirely of windows. There is a ventilating system from the roof.

The building is finished throughout in the interior in mahogany.

The Exhibitors' Supply Company has installed a modern projection room with latest equipment, a booth, two moving picture projection machines, in a miniature theatre which will hold 50 persons.—Pollak

Portland's Newest Theatre Opens

Under the personal direction of William Cutts, manager of coast theatres for Universal Film company, the Columbia theatre, one of Portland's finest first run theatres, reopened. Carl Laemmle purchased the building from Foster & Kleiser more than a year ago for $225,000 and to him was surrendered a month before its expiration the lease held by Jensen & Von Herberg. Cutts has supervised the complete redecoration of the house and the installation of a new emergency exit demanded by fire laws. Cost of improvements total $50,000, it is said.

A new Wurlitzer has been ordered to replace the one removed.

Libman-Spanger Sales Mgr. Attends Convention

Mr. Edward Side, sales manager of the Libman-Spanger Corp., designers and builders of Lobby Display Frames, will attend the convention in Chicago during the entire week of May 21.

For many years considered one of the foremost experts in the layout of practical and efficient lobby, Mr. Side has won recognition from many of the leading exhibitors throughout the country for his ability to interpret the problems of the showman.

Mr. Side will be very pleased to cooperate with any exhibitor, at any time.

Representatives of Wurlitzer Co. Attend Convention

Mr. Clancy, General Manager of the Wurlitzer Company and Mr. Ryan, manager of the New York office of the same company, are planning to be in attendance at the Chicago Convention where they have a suite for the exhibition of their organ.

The Wurlitzer Company reports that the organ business has been prospering during the past six months.

If the load is unbalanced, two readings will be required since the power is then different in each phase. The method of connecting the wattmeters in this case is shown in Fig. 47. The total power will be equal to the sum of these two wattmeter readings. Thus,

$$\text{Power} = W_1 + W_2 = (E_1 I_1 \times P.F_1) + (E_2 I_2 \times P.F_2)$$

In this figure four collector rings are shown, two for each phase. The circuit shown is called a four-wire, two-phase circuit.

Two-phase systems are sometimes connected so as to use only three wires as shown in Fig. 48. Such a connection gives two voltages, that between either outside wire and the common being the same while the voltage between the two outside wires is 1.41 times the others. Thus if the voltage between one outside wire and the common is 110, the voltage between the two outside wires would be $110 \times 1.41 = 155.1$ volts. What was said regarding the wattmeter readings in the case of the four-wire system also applies to the three-wire circuit.

Three Phase Circuits

It will be recalled that the two-phase circuit had two individual windings separated from each other by 90 electrical degrees. If, now, still another winding is placed on the armature and all three are separated from each other by 120 electrical degrees a three-phase generator will be formed and the circuit which results from this condition is called a three-phase system. Such a generator winding is shown in Fig. 49.

Three-phase circuits may be either three-wire or four-wire. The three-wire system is perhaps most commonly used because of the smaller amount of copper required for power distribution. Each phase of such a system could be loaded separately as by connecting incandescent lamps on each phase, or all three phases could have a balanced load as by connected a three-phase motor to all three wires. The voltage between any two wires of such a system is equal to that between any two other wires.

The total power in any three-wire, three-phase circuit can be obtained by using two wattmeters as shown by Section A, Fig. 50. This assumes that the system is balanced which is usually the case with such circuits. When using the two wattmeter method shown in Section A, Fig. 50, the reading of wattmeter, W_1 , is zero at 0.5 power factor and below 0.5 power factor it is minus. When this happens the readings should be subtracted instead of being added. The projectionist, however, will rarely, if ever, handle any equipment having a power factor of 0.5 or less.

Where the load is balanced, it is also possible to obtain the total power by using only one wattmeter as shown in section B, Fig. 50. One wire is first connected to the center wire for the first reading and is then connected to the bottom wire, as shown by the dotted line, for the second reading. The sum of these two readings gives the total power.

It will be noted at the extreme left of this figure that six collector rings are shown, two for each phase. The second collector rings of each phase are all connected together. Actually only three rings are provided on the generator and the three ends are connected together elsewhere on the armature.

A four-wire, three-phase system is shown in Fig. 51. The fourth wire (called the neutral) is obtained by connecting the junction point of the three single phases to a collector ring thus making four rings in all to which the circuit wires are connected. Such a system gives two voltages. Thus the voltage between any single phase wire and the neutral is the same as between any other phase wire and the neutral but the voltage between any two-phase wires is 1.73 times that between the phase wire and neutral. If the voltage between any phase wire and neutral were 120 volts then the voltage between any two-phase wires would be 208 volts. This system is commonly used for supplying power to both motors and lamps since the motors can be operated at a high voltage and the lamps at a low voltage. This means saving of feed wires in the first case and saving in lamp operation in the second.

Three wattmeters are required for such systems when they are unbalanced but for balanced systems the two wattmeter method will give the total power.

Model 49 Photoplayer Pit Pipe Organ

This instrument is a complete orchestral two manual and pedal unit organ including traps and percussions and may be played either manually from a standard organ type console or by the double roll player device using the ordinary 88 note roll.

A particular advantage claimed for this instrument is the convenient manner of installation. This is accomplished either in the pit or the organ may be divided, the swell boxes placed either behind the screen or in chambers already constructed. The feature of this easy installation may be appreciated.

The instrument is unified in the most up-to-date and modern way, allowing the operator to play any stop or combination from any position on the manuals and pedals.

The manufacturer takes particular pride in the performance of the action. By this is meant the mechanical action that admits wind to the pipes, as this action is of advanced construction and is capable of great speed.

Another advance in the construction of this model 49 is the manner in which the swell chambers are constructed. Every joint is made with infinite care. These joints are made perfectly, being not only sound proof but practically air tight as well. This has the advantage of entirely closing in the tone so that unlimited expression can be obtained.

The Venetian shutter action is constructed in the same careful manner as the case, and in addition is equipped with a very powerful and improved vacuum pneumatic power mechanism that allows the operator, by a slight touch of the foot through electrical connections, to bring the mechanism into action.

While this mechanism must operate the shutters at lightning speed, it must be done without the slightest sound. When the shutters are open the full force of the tone is allowed to flow from the sound chambers in unrestricted volume. With every stop in the organ turned on these shutters control the sound from a murmur to a thunderous volume.

The construction above referred to has allowed an entirely new departure in the method of building and voicing the different instruments.

Amusement Supply Completes Big Installation

The Amusement Supply Company, of Chicago, have recently completed one of the biggest projector installations ever undertaken in that city, the last of forty-three machines, contracted for by Lubliner & Trinz, having been installed in one of their seventeen houses last week, so that now the entire circuit is equipped with Motiograph De Luxe Projectors, completely equipped and having are feeds and one hundred and twenty-five ampere lamps.

The installation was made under the supervision of Max Pearl, of the Amusement Supply Company, who closed the contract with Lubliner & Trinz for the sale of the forty-three Motiographs, after a three months' try-out of a battery of Motiographs at the Senate, one of the largest theatres in Chicago, and an important unit in the Lubliner & Trinz circuit.

The various entertainments provided by the Arrangement Committee proved exceedingly popular with everyone at the convention. Several of the members were accompanied by their wives. The general opinion of all those in attendance at this convention was that the meeting compared well with the most successful in the history of the Society.

It was decided by the Society that the next Convention to be held this coming fall, would convene at Ottawa, Canada. Some deep thinking members claim to have discovered an underlying motive for the selection of this particular locality.

The report on this past convention would hardly be complete without the mention of a supplementary convention held by some of the members. These special sessions were held evenings, usually adjourning in the gray hours of the morning and enjoyed great popularity.

H. T. Edwards Tenders Resignation

At a meeting of the Directors of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation, recently held at the Executive Offices, Mr. H. T. Edwards tendered his resignation as president of the Corporation.

This action was due to Mr. Edwards' continued ill health and a feeling on his part that someone in better physical condition should assume the burden of the conduct of the business.

His associates reluctantly accepted his resignation and elected the following officers:

President, George Kleine; vice-president, treasurer and general manager, Joseph Coufal; assistant treasurer, J. R. Riker; secretary, Conrad Eckhardt.

The following directors were also elected: George Kleine, Joseph F. Coufal, J. H. Hallberg, Conrad Eckhardt, C. A. Cahuff, Frederick L. Kerr and J. Robert Rubin.

CHARACTERS Twelve year old Simplex
Newly installed Simplex

Old Simplex: "By golly! You don't know how glad I am to have you here with me. It certainly feels good to know that you're gonna be my constant pal, for believe me, I've been carrying quite a burden here for twelve years running all of the shows alone except for the times when the boss would have a new machine tried out just to satisfy his curiosity."

New Simplex: "Well, you must have had some great experiences with these new machines. Why not let us record one of these incidents each week. They ought to make interesting and instructive reading."

Old Simplex: "Aw! I don't like to talk about myself, and the chances are that the folks on the outside will laugh and say to themselves—'Will ya listen to this old bird who babbles of old times while he's stroking his whiskers.'"

New Simplex: "No they wont. You just tell 'em to me. The chances are that if they interest me, they'll interest others."

Old Simplex: "Well, alright. But before I forget it, I'd like to tell you about old Bill Showman, our manager. You know, Bill is a good guy, and a regular exhibitor, but he's got one weakness—he listens to every machine salesman who comes along. And oh boy! how he does fall for the chatter that these birds toss over to him. He's had many an argument over this with Jack, the operator, who's told him time and time again that he's got the best machine in the world here and why not let it go at that. But Bill always says—'I'm open to anything that comes along that's better than what I've already got and the only way to find out how good it is is to try it out.'"

"Well, do you know that by having these salesmen singing their sweet songs into Bill's receptive ears, we have had a half dozen machines set up and tried out while I've been here.

"Gosh! It was funny to see these over-rated babies come in here with their heads up in the air and in a sort of up-stage way indicate to me that they were the Candy Kids and that I was just about due for the Old Ladies' Home.

"But when it came time for them to PROVE how good they were, you ought to have seen and heard them. It got so I could almost call the turn on their regular order of business. One by one the high falutin' sugar coated arguments on how they were 'better than the Simplex' would be discounted by their miserable showings.

"Why, I've known several instances when Bill had to give his audience back their money because some new 'champ' machine just laid down and died on them in spite of the frenzied first aid treatment on the part of the salesman and factory mechanic. And then Bill would come up to the booth and with fire in his eyes he'd motion 'three strikes' over his shoulder to the salesman and they'd carry the new 'champ' out on a shutter.

"So I guess by this time Bill is pretty well convinced that there's nothing like the Simplex after all."

New Simplex: "You said it, Old Kid, and as the guy at the factory told me—'TRIFLES MAKE PERFECTION BUT PERFECTION IS NO TRIFLE.' Now, don't forget, you're going to tell me about another experience next week."

Harmony

HE conductor of an orchestra, telling a story in music, never plays always loud, nor always soft, nor always in major or in minor. His baton guides his players through the varied effects that produce the enchanting harmony of a finished symphony. It is this variety, this ability to express moods in music, that is the conductor's mark of greatness.

THIS same versatility, the genius for expressing moods in film and using photographic effects to build up the theme of the photoplay, that brings success to makers of motion pictures. But just as an orchestra must follow the conductor's baton, so must a film laboratory follow the leadership of director and cinematographer in the presentation of their shadow symphony.

IN ANNOUNCING to exhibitors fifty photoplays for the season 1923-24, Paramount wishes to call your attention to the following:

For many months the great artists listed above, together with all the units of the Paramount organization, have been working incessantly to perfect the ideas, the plans, the details and the pictures that will enable Paramount in 1923-24 to absolutely top anything that it has ever offered before.

The day of the bigger and better picture is no longer a hope of the dim future. It is here. "The Covered Wagon" is proving it. The new season Paramount Pictures, each with the production standard of "The Covered Wagon" before it, will continue to prove it. Never has it been truer that what the public wants is great stars, superbly directed in great screen stories. A simple formula, but one whose fulfillment is only possible after tremendous efforts, prophetic insight into public taste and a producing personnel of stars and artists who have proved their real value to the public.

Such effort Paramount has made. Such a personnel Paramount has. And the results will be offered to exhibitors in a product of fifty pictures that, by themselves, can and will make the season of 1923-24 without question the most profitable in exhibitor history.

The specials already perfected for 1923-24, headed by Cecil B. De Mille's gigantic entertainment now in work, will consist of the greatest audience-appeal photoplays ever made, with magnificent casts, personally selected from the great artists listed above.

The popularity of Pola Negri is one of the marvels of filmdom. Miss Negri will appear in stories absolutely sure to make her the greatest drawing card in pictures.

Thomas Meighan, whose "Back Home and Broke" proved one of the greatest hits of the past season, has stories for the new season personally and especially written for him by some of America's most famous and most popular authors.

Gloria Swanson whose "Prodigal Daughters" inspired Douglas Fairbanks to label it "the most faithful portrayal of contemporary social and family life ever screened," has been provided with material new, startling and of tremendous box-office appeal.

Agnes Ayres, Jack Holt, Walter Hiers, Bebe Daniels, Leatrice Joy, Nita Naldi, Antonio Moreno, Mary Astor, Bobby Agnew, Jacqueline Logan, Richard Dix, Lila Lee, Lois Wilson, Vera Reynolds, Sigrid Holmquist, and other leading artists working in independent co-ordinated units, "superbly directed in great screen stories," will be capitalized in special pictures based on great stories that in themselves will have a tremendous public appeal.

Such sterling actors as Ernest Torrence, whose portrayal in "The Covered Wagon" has been acclaimed, Theodore Roberts, whose "Grumpy" will not soon be forgotten, Theodore Kosloff, George Fawcett, Noah Berry, Lewis Stone, Charles de Roche, Ricardo Cortez, Charles Ogle, and others will be seen in parts that give them greater opportunities than they ever had before.

The acquisition of Glenn Hunter, famous "Merton of the Movies," who will be starred in pictures featuring the new youth, is of particular interest. Here is a case of insight into public taste, the sort of insight that determines on the production of a "Covered Wagon" even while the industry is still tuned up to the "Sheik" type of entertainment.

No effort has been spared, nothing left undone to make Paramount's new product and the Paramount exhibitors' new season unqualifiedly the most prosperous of them all.

This booklet sets forth fourteen of the new season Paramount Pictures. For the benefit of the exhibitor who books Paramount's new product for 1923-24 it has been deemed advisable not to reveal plans and details on a greater number at this time.

This, we feel, provides protection to the great productions to be released later in the season, gives necessary protection to the exhibitor who books the Paramount product, allows him to cash in on the full value of titles, stories and new production ideas and enables him to establish himself, without fear of interference, as the leader in the field.

Nineteen twenty-three and twenty-four Paramount Pictures will be backed up by an augmented advertising campaign. Paramount National Advertising, with its consistent and effective policy during the last seven years, represents today an accumulated value that is a tremendous asset to the exhibitor, an asset that is now fully appreciated by the public and trade alike.

AN entirely new kind of comedy-drama about a girl who tried to get into the movies. A real presentation of the life of Hollywood today not only in the studios but in the homes of famous stars. "Hollywood" was planned a year ago and has been six months in the making. Unqualifiedly the biggest box-office bet ever put into pictures by anybody.

20 real stars and 40 screen celebrities appear in actual scenes as a real part of the story of this picture

GEORGE MELFORD

PRODUCTION

WITH

JACQUELINE LOGAN

GEORGE FAWCETT and MAURICE FLYNN

JACQUELINE LOGAN is absolutely fascinating in this fast-moving story of adventure and romance. Filmed among the great Redwoods of the Santa Cruz Mountains. It transfers to the screen the spirit of Bret Harte. Its people actually live and have being. An out-door love story sumptuously produced, with a great cast and director. The success of "The Covered Wagon" proves that the public wants big, wholesome love-dramas of the open spaces. "Salomy Jane" is just such a picture, with the sweeping action centering around one of the best-loved characters in all fiction, and the romantic West of '49 as a background.

You can count on "Salomy Jane" for a big clean-up week!

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS
AN ALLAN DWAN PRODUCTION

"Lawful Larceny"

WITH

HOPE HAMPTON, NITA NALDI
LEW CODY AND CONRAD NAGEL

A PLAY that had a record run on Broadway, produced by the director of "Robin Hood," with a cast packed with big names—what more could you ask to make money with?

The story of a wife who lost her husband to a beautiful "vamp," and won him back in a startling manner.

The last word in gorgeous sets and gowns.

Nita Naldi's Cleopatra costume alone is worth many times the price of admission.

A Paramount Picture

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

Gloria Swanson

IN A SAM WOOD PRODUCTION

"Bluebeard's 8th Wife"

THE most gorgeous Swanson production ever seen is this snappy French love-drama, which has been a stage hit on Broadway and all over the country.

The most beautiful women in Hollywood, the latest gowns from Paris, the last word in sumptuous settings, six months in the making and what a title! Without a doubt the biggest Swanson money-maker of them all.

Huntley Gordon heads the brilliant supporting cast.

Screen version by SADA COWAN from CHARLTON ANDREWS' adaptation of ALFRED SAVOIR's play

A Paramount Picture

THIS production simply abounds in big, eye-dazzling scenes. The "King Tut" episode, in which Gloria as a beautiful mummy comes to life; the glamorous garden fete; the Bluebeard vision scene, a dream of beautiful women—these are just hints of the picture's splendors.

Adolph Zukor presents

The Silent Partner with

LEATRICE JOY
OWEN MOORE and ROBERT EDESON

A CHARLES MAIGNE PRODUCTION

Adapted by Sada Cowan from Maximilian Foster's famous Saturday Evening Post serial

A MODERN big city story of poor people made rich laid against a background of wealthy New York, fine sets, beautiful gowns, luxurious motors. A human theme in which every wife will recognize some part of her own life. A few of the big scenes include the Louis XIV fete; the Cafe of the Forest of Gold; the scene where the husband discovers his wife's supposed duplicity; the escape from the ship as it leaves the dock; the broker's office where the hero faces ruin. A great big story picture played by big names.

Has a wife the right to a say in her husband's business? What is the effect of sudden wealth upon married love? These are a couple of the big questions asked and answered by this intensely human drama that will appeal to everybody, married or single, in your town.

For your box office's sake, don't overlook this one. It's one of the biggest bets of the new season.

A Zane Grey
Production

Directed by Victor Fleming

With
Richard Dix, Lois Wilson

NOAH BEERY, ROBERT EDESON and FRANK CAMPEAU

Adapted by DORIS SCHROEDER

"This tale is based on the 'Pleasant Valley War' which ravaged the Tonto Basin of Arizona in the late '80s. In it, two families and their sympathizers fought literally 'to the last man.'"

(Signed) ZANE GREY

The first of the Zane Grey specials, played by a perfect cast and personally supervised by Mr. Grey himself.

There's no need of telling you of the tremendous popularity Zane Grey stories have among all classes of people. "To the Last Man" is being filmed in epic "Covered Wagon" style in the wild Tonto Basin country, the actual scene of the plot.

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRESENTS

Pola Negri

IN A

George Fitzmaurice

PRODUCTION

WITH

JACK HOLT

Supported by CHARLES DE ROCHE

THE finest story ever written for the screen. And in it Pola Negri is greater than in "Bella Donna." Jack Holt is featured with a splendid cast in support, personally selected by Jesse L. Lasky, and it is by all odds George Fitzmaurice's greatest picture. Here is a million dollar special that has every element for enormous box office success!

Beautiful women, sumptuous settings—an ideal picture for Pola Negri. The world's greatest love-actress as a modern society beauty who plays with fire and then refuses to pay the price of her folly.

Besides the star and featured players, the superfine cast includes Dorothy Cumming, Robert Schable, Charles Stevenson, and Helen Dunbar. Here's one picture that's absolutely sure to smash records everywhere!

production

Harry Leon Wilson's most famous novel. A comedy drama that is a veritable gold mine for screen presentation. A great big special directed by the man who made "The Covered Wagon" and "Hollywood", with a hand-picked cast of great names.

Presented by Jesse L. Lasky
Adapted by Tom Geraghty

James Cruze will put into this classic of American humor the same delicious Western comedy and amazing sweep of action that distinguish "The Covered Wagon." In every respect a box-office bonanza!

RUGGLES OF RED GAP

Now as he had the hundred pounds, I couldn't fancy what the deuce and all he meant by such prattle. I was half afraid he might be having me on, as I have known him do now and again when he fancied he could get me. I fearfully wanted to ask questions. Again I saw the dark, absorbed face of the gipsy as he studied my future. "Rotten shift, life is," now murmured the Honourable George quite as if he had forgotten me. "If I'd have but put through that Monte Carlo affair I daresay I'd have chuckled the whole business—gone to South Africa, perhaps, and set up a mine or a plantation. Shouldn't have come back. Just cut off, and good-bye to this mess. But no capital. Can't do things without capital. Where these American Johnnies have the pull of us. Do anything. Nearly do what they jolly well like to. No sense to money. Stuff that runs blind. Look at the silly heggars that have it—" On he went quite alarmingly with his tirade. Almost as violent he was as an ugly-headed chap I once heard ranting when I went with my brother-in-law to a meeting of the North Brixton Radical Club. Quite like an anarchist he was. Presently he quieted. After a long pull at his pipe he regarded me with an entire change of manner. Well I knew something was coming; coming swift as a rocketing woodcock. Word for word I put down our incredible speeches:

"You are going out to America, Ruggles."

"Yes, sir; North or South, sir."

"North, I fancy; somewhere on the West coast—Ohio Omaha, one of those Indian places."

"Perhaps Indiana or the Yellowstone Valley, sir."

"The chap's a sort of millionaire."

"The chap, sir?"

"Eyebrow chap. Money no end—mines, lumber, domestic animals, that sort of thing."

"Beg pardon, sir! I'm to go—"

"Chap's wife taken a great fancy to you. Would have you to do for the funny, sad beggar. So he's won you. Won you in a game of drawing poker. Another man would have done as well, but the creature was keen for you. Great strength of character. Determined sort. Hope you won't think I didn't play soundly, but it's not a forthright game. Think they're bluffing when they aren't. When they are you mayn't think it. So far as hiding one's intentions, it's a most rottenly immoral game. Low, animal cunning—that sort of thing."

"Do I understand I was the stake, sir?"

"I controlled myself to say. The heavens seemed bursting about my head. 'Ultimately lost you were by the very trifling margin of superiority that a hand known as a club flush bears over another hand consisting of three of the eights—not quite all of them, you understand, only three, and two other quite meaningless cards.'"

"I could but stammer pitcously, I fear. I heard myself make a wretched failure of words that crowded to my lips. show it you in a moment if you've cards in your box."

"Thank you, sir, I'll not trouble you. I'm certain it was simple. But would you mind telling me what exactly the game was played for?"

"Knew you'd not understand at once. My word, it was not too bally simple. If I won I'd a hundred pounds if I lost I'd to give you up to them but still to receive a

THEY all love stories of poor and pretty girls who become rich and famous. Here's one that will capture their hearts right from the first flicker.

The romance of a poorhouse waif who became one of Broadway's most celebrated stars.

The sharply contrasted backgrounds of a country farm and the gay Broadway cabarets; the real human heart-story; the great cast—there's enough box-office merit in "The Purple Highway" for five pictures!

The play ran over a year in New York and is still a big road success.

O, Boy, Lead Me To It!

That's a real exploitation angle. It has the curiosity-arousing power which reaches out and pulls them in.

The picture is romantic, dramatic and sure-fire. It bubbles over with humor and finishes with a punch. As a summer feature it can't be surpassed.

In brief, the story follows the career of a girl who, brought up in seclusion, suddenly finds herself left with a tremendous fortune. She goes in for society. She is as proud as a peacock and when the dowagers and debutantes give her the cold shoulder, she starts a regular revolution. It's a circus. She beats society at its own game. She plunges into an orgy of buying; gowns, motors, lavish parties and all the rest. She soon has her up-stage friends calling for help.

Then, with the social world at her feet, she longs for new worlds to conquer. She has become a dazzling beauty and the reigning favorite. But all the luxuries money can buy will not satisfy her longing for real love. She finally selects the home-town sweetheart of her girlhood.

The cast is hand-picked. The direction is snappy. The sets are eye-filling.

"Best Work of Her Career!"

EXHIBITORS HERALD

KATHERINE Mac DONALD IN THE LONELY ROAD
(FIRST NATIONAL)

One of those pleasing little domestic dramas that Miss MacDonald specializes in. It is a picture in which women play important parts and therefore it will make its greatest appeal to the ladies. Charles Logue wrote it. Victor Schertzinger directed it and handled it well. Length, 5,102 feet.

This is an original story from the pen of Charles Logue and tells of the marital misunderstandings of a beautiful young wife and her struggling but penurious young husband, who failed to give her the companionship she sought.

Miss MacDonald does some of the best work of her career in the role of Betty Aust'n, a clerk in a grocery store who finally asserts herself and makes her small town husband realize that she has a mind of her own. Others in the cast who render her excellent support are Orville Caldwell, as Warren Wade, the husband; Kathleen Kirkham as Leila Mead; Eugenie Besserer as Martha True, the village milliner; William Conklin as Dr. Devereaux; James Neill as Uncle Billy Austin, Charles French as Hiram Wade and little Stanley G. Goethals, as the Wades' five-year-old son.

It is a B. P. Schulberg production and the producer has put into it those elements which make for a successful screen play—good story, good acting and fine settings, together with first-rate direction.

Washington Post says

"Even more hilarious than the feature is 'The Balloonatic' in which Buster Keaton, assisted by Phyllis Haver, scores another one of his triumphs. Laughter is incessant during the unreeling of this portion of the program."

PICTURE STRONG IN MELODRAMA

"Thomas H. Ince introduces an unusual theme in this one. A story involving a romance and a hatred. A pretty romance also."—Moving Picture World.

Douglas MacLean-Hero of "The HOTTENTOT"

Directed by JAMES W. HORNE

WOW! HERE'S A HOT WEATHER WINNER!

You, Mr. Exhibitor, are looking now for the kind of pictures that drag the people away from the amusement parks and the ball fields. You want something to combat the coming hot spell.

You are looking for snappy features that are packed with a thrill, or a laugh every minute, that get under the skin right at the start and keep 'em on their toes right to the very end.

Here you are! Another Ince winner! Five reels that snap and sparkle with humor and bubble with the spirit of youth.

And it comes right on top of those other two big Ince successes, "The Hottentot" and "Bell Boy 13."

Best of all, Douglas MacLean, the same star who convulsed your patrons in those two pictures, is starred in this new one.

MacLean is now a tremendous drawing card. His name has advertising value. So announce him. Play him up big. And don't forget to tell your patrons it is another one of the inimitable Ince comedy romances with the Ince punch.

You sure will pack them in.

A TASTE OF THE PLOT

He came back to his home town after the war, expecting to be a hero. But the folks threw him in jail; foisted off someone's baby on him; refused him his own insurance money; told him his girl was engaged to be married; tried to steal his inheritance of $50,000; stole his clothes and money; accused him of kidnaping; sicked the sheriff on him; called him an imposter; pointed out to him that he was dead; handcuffed him; called him a liar and a thief and a few other little things like that. Do you wonder he moaned "why didn't they shoot me in the Argonne?"

Do you wonder that it will convulse your patrons?

Thos. H. Ince's "The SUNSHINE TRAIL"

MORE than 4,000 girls were reported missing to the New York police in the last year, according to official records of the chief of the Missing Persons Bureau, Capt. John S. Ayer.

Many of these girls later turned up. But what were they doing in the meantime, and why did they leave home?

And many of these girls were never heard of again. They have, so far as any one knows, vanished from the face of the earth. What became of them?

Every day girls are reported missing. Are they ensnared by the lure of the bright lights of this Jazz age?

Million Dollar Pictures

NOW available to exhibitors or in various stages of production are no less than a dozen pictures that crowd the million mark in the matter of cost. As many more of equal magnitude are being planned.

"That's the kind of stuff we can sell," says the producer. "Big pictures get the money." And this is confirmed by the exhibitors or at least that class of exhibitors we meet most frequently.

So everybody ought to be pleased. For years we have been advocating fewer and better pictures. At last we are getting them. Certainly a happy state of affairs denoting a healthy condition of the industry.

But—there seems to be some danger—how imminent we admit we are unable to predict—that the matter of expensive pictures may be overdone.

Obviously there is a point where big pictures—speaking from the standpoint of cost—would become a drug on the market and just as obviously there is a maximum rental that any theatre can pay no matter how excellent the production.

There are only so many fish in the pond—any pond—every pond. The smaller the pond the less fish it contains.

Take a theatre in a town of 5,000 inhabitants. The minimum on a million dollar picture is considerable—it has to be if the producer gets his money back to say nothing of a reasonable profit.

Now we mustn't get the rental price of a picture so high that the five thousand man is forced to pass it or play it at a loss. There are too many five thousand towns and residing in them too many of our loyal friends. In the aggregate they represent a nice slice of our volume of business. In the past we have been satisfied to get most of our profits from them.

So the proposition of making big pictures, as the term is commonly used, is a matter for careful analysis. Big pictures in moderation perhaps will sum it up.

If we have too many big pictures in a season every production will suffer. If we invest so much money in big pictures that rentals become prohibitive we get the same result.

There is one other angle of the big picture that points a warning—admission prices. In the average family, especially the kind of family with which the motion picture finds the greatest favor, there is about so much money available for amusements. We can take it all in one night or we can spread it out over a number of shows.

Those of us who spent our boyhood days in a small town can remember when the opera house played two or three shows a week.

The Barretts and the Booths came to town once in the while too. Today, outside the "dog towns" no city under a hundred thousand gets a half dozen shows a year.

Why? Pictures. Yes, but only to a certain extent. The drama in the hinterland was on its last legs years before the motion picture was out of the experimental stage and the reason for it was too high prices.

People began going once in the while instead of regularly and by and by a generation grew up, that never went at all. They had no desire for something they had never experienced.

History sounds a note of warning. Don't kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

W. G. JONES, the pastor of the First Baptist Church, Pocatello, Idaho, writes that he fought the censorship bills before the Idaho legislature and that it failed to be passed. Since that time (it was brought up March 2nd) the friends of the bill have not left undone anything that they could do to remove him from the pastorate. They have sent letters to members of Dr. Jones' church with the idea of poisoning their minds against him.

The climax arrived the night of May 3rd, when a group of people came to a church meeting and tried to oust the pastor. They succeeded by a majority of two, but illegally. The pastor intends to organize an independent church—The People's Church—a church for the people, of the people and by the people. Now the purpose of the minister's letter is to interest moving picture folk in his new enterprise. He frankly states that unless picture interests come to his aid he will be unable to carry on his work.

The Reverend Mr. Jones certainly deserves a vote of thanks for his independent spirit and his courage in the face of strong opposition. He deserves the hearty co-operation of everyone who is opposed to the smug and narrow-minded complacency of the reformers. Such disciples of free thought are needed to preach the gospel of common sense and broad-mindedness. But somehow their cries are too faint to drown out the noise of the reformers. Well organized noise can always be put over. And because of the concentrated effort behind it, the listeners among the legislators and laymen are forced to accept it.

THE key to the city has been awarded to Theodore Roberts wherever he stopped during his flyer in vaudeville. The character actor has returned to Los Angeles after a tour of three months over the Orpheum circuit in "The Man Higher Up," a sketch by William DeMille. Cities of the middle West and Southwest have sent their Kiwanis, Rotary, Lions, Business Men's clubs and Legion posts to welcome him.

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT, who made his screen debut in Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm," has been made a member of the Goldwyn family and will appear in the Hall Caine story, "Master of Man."

SHADES of '49! Here is Famous coming out with another train—not covered wagons, but auto trucks. This convoy of forty-five-ton gas wagons is now plying the 200 miles between Hollywood and the 300 miles of sand dunes where Cecil B. DeMille is building the sets for "The Ten Commandments." No hardy pioneers are being carried, for the space is taken up by several huge sphinxes—which when set up will form an avenue leading to the reproduction of the city built for Rameses II by the oppressed children of Israel. Besides the sphinxes the truck caravan is carrying a few tons of lumber and plaster, hundreds of tents, and costumes for the three thousand who will take part in the biblical scenes.

INCIDENTALLY, one only has to appreciate how the screen has advanced in detail of production in considering the painstaking research made to reproduce authentic backgrounds and properties. Time was when the Edison company back in the embryonic days of the photoplay used smoke pots to suggest atmosphere for a fire scene. Any director who had initiative enough to indicate realism with realistic effects was considered flighty or foolish or both. Today research workers and travelers are sent into far distant lands to collect authentic backgrounds. No expense is spared to hunt through the archives of history, the museums of far-off cities in order that a picture may be authentically correct.

Here is Mrs. Florence Meehan who has returned from Palestine to Los Angeles after completing one of the longest journeys ever made in the interests of a picture production. She was sent by Cecil B. DeMille to bring back jewels, silks, tapestries and other genuine properties for "The Ten Commandments." Her trip covered 20,000 miles and it occupied five months. It included Egypt, Palestine, Syria, India, Malay States, Siam, Burma, China, Kashmir, Straits Settlements, Persia and Japan. And now there is said to be a huge room filled with the properties which Mrs. Meehan collected.

Anyone acquainted with production activities on a large scale can read any day of a producer dispatching a director to the far-off places to collect real atmosphere. Some day the story will keep pace with the production. Then it will have reached the peak of its art.

ELMER PEARSON, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, left New York last Thursday for the Coast in connection with production activities bearing on new lines of subjects for his company's release. Mr. Pearson expects to be away for three weeks, but within that period he will look over the Hal Roach lots and witness the start of production work on the series of two reel comedies in which Will Rogers will be the star. The first episode of the "new departure" ten part serial, "Her Dangerous Path," which Roach is producing will come under his inspection. The Sennett studios and the George B. Seitz company are others of Mr. Pearson's objectives. He will also talk shop with Hal Roach, "Snub" Pollard, Stan Laurel, Paul Parrott and Harold Lloyd.

THE Hattons—Frederick and Fanny—have signed on the dotted line for Fox. They will supply the West Coast studios with original stories.

ANOTHER old landmark of New York has taken the road to oblivion. We are speaking of Delmonico's. This restaurant, famous throughout the world—whose portals have been passed—whose entrees have been eaten by celebrities from every quarter of the globe—closed its doors the other night. What could be more fitting and proper than that occasion should be celebrated by Marion Davies and her "Little Old New York" company—since Delmonico himself, figures in the play?

The famous restaurant keeper started his eating emporium when New York was bounded on the North by Fourteenth Street—when the Bowery was the fashionable thoroughfare. Among his patrons were John Jacob Astor and the original Cornelius Vanderbilt. Charles Judels impersonates Delmonico in the picture.

Those who attended the farewell dinner with Miss Davies and Mr. Judels were Courtenay Foote (Robert Fulton); Mahlon Hamilton (Washington Irving); Sam Hardy (Cornelius Vanderbilt); George Barraud (Henry Brevoort); Montague Love (John Jacob Astor); Norval Keedwell, Harrison Ford, Joseph Urban, William Le Baron and Luther Reed.

MARION DAVIES has left for England to be present at the premier of "Little Old New York," when it opens in London on June 3rd. Subsequently she will visit France and Italy.

THE stork and the doctor have paid their respects to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Caldwell of Hollywood. "He's a dashing juvenile," remarked the doctor to the anxious father waiting outside the room at four-thirty A. M. April 3rd, at the maternity home of Mrs. Roe, on Westmoreland Avenue. Fred Caldwell is the author and director of "Night Life in Hollywood." The infant weighed nine and a half pounds when he bounded forth on location.

AMONG the passengers on the White Star Liner, Olympic, which sailed last Saturday, was F. J. Godsol, president of Goldwyn. The purpose of prexy's trip to England and the continent is to arrange for the filming of the particular scenes of "Ben Hur" which will be taken in authentic European locations. June Mathis, who wrote the scenario for the Lew Wallace novel, will subsequently join Mr. Godsol in England. And while we are on the subject of "Ben Hur" the theatrical profession and screen patrons are manifesting keen interest in the identity of the actor to be selected for the title role. HIS NAME, folks, will be announced when the actual photography has been started.

FACTS and rumors are flying around that Robert Warwick will soon return to the screen—that Arthur Housman has received an offer to appear in an English production—that Senor Alessandro, the Apollo of the Argentine, will support Tom Moore in "Marriage and Morals"—that R. William Neill has returned from Italy where he made two pictures—that Mary Carr is considering a proposition to star in a series of four specials in which it is planned to use her youngest son—that Jack O'Brien received several lacerations of the arm which necessitated his confinement in a hospital while fencing with John Charles Thomas in a scene from "Under the Red Robe"—that William N. Bailey has received a tempting offer from a German film company—that Richard Bennett has been engaged by Sam Goldwyn to create the role of Bruno in his forthcoming production, "The Eternal City"—that Betty Blythe has sailed for England to appear in the screen version of "Chu Chin Chow."

THE Rivoli and Rialto orchestras (New York) will go visiting next week, the Rivoli band being the "guest" at the Rialto and the Rialto band being the visiting organization at the Rivoli. The transposition of the two groups promises one of the liveliest weeks in music on Broadway. The idea should be adopted with an inter-city exchange. Hugo Riesenfeld should exchange orchestras with Frank Newman, Jules Mastbaum, Sid Grauman, George Eastman, John H. Kunsy, Balaban & Katz, Ascher Brothers, J. A. Partington and some others among the big impresarios.

AN exhibition of decorative screens, panels, paintings and stage designs by John Wenger is being conducted at the Anderson Galleries, New York. The New York theatre-going public and devotees of art have long been familiar with Mr. Wenger's artistic talent. His largest audiences grew out of his activity in designing stage settings for the Metropolitan Opera House, the Boston Opera Company, Greenwich Village theatre, Capitol theatre, Rivoli theatre, Rialto theatre, Strand theatre, New York; Capitol theatre, Vancouver; Capitol theatre, Winnipeg; Capitol theatre, Calgary; Capitol theatre, Montreal; Strand theatre, Brooklyn; Pantages theatre, Toronto; Indiana theatre, Terre Haute; and Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles. He has designed the stage backgrounds for innumerable productions.

IT was many years ago that "The Spoilers" made screen history. Those who saw it are still talking about the greatest fight ever reproduced in celluloid. Now the National Board of Review thinks the modern version, made by Goldwyn with Milton Sills and Anna Q. Nilsson in the east, good enough to win the weekly asterisk as an exceptional picture.

WHILE the opening of "The White Rose" at the Apollo theatre on Tuesday night of this week brought fresh laurels to its director, D. W. Griffith, in a greater sense it was a personal triumph for Mae Marsh, who resumes her former position as one of the really great actresses of the screen. No follower of the screen has ever forgotten her scene with Henry Walthall in "The Birth of a Nation," when the Little Colonel returned home and his sister decked herself out in "Southern Ermine" to greet him—no one has ever forgotten those moments of grim pathos in "Intolerance" when the little mother pleaded for her baby. Not pretty in the conventional sense, Mae Marsh has that deeper beauty which comes from within, and the camera, somehow, marvelously records it. When she left Griffith, she seemed unable to find herself—perhaps it was the wrong director, or poor vehicles, but she dropped out of sight for a time. "The White Rose," we predict, will at one sweep again place her among those to whom we in this business pay the greatest compliment we know: "She is an actress." "The White Rose" is Mae Marsh's picture—not that the others are inadequate, but that she rises above them to heights of dramatic intensity of which few are capable. We are glad to welcome her back.

Nomination of Steffes Is Withdrawn

(By Wire)

Chicago, May 24.

SYDNEY S. COHEN is president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for the fourth time, he being the only candidate to remain in the field when the vote was cast on the fourth day of the National Convention at the Chicago Coliseum. R. F. Woodhull, of New Jersey, and F. J. McWilliams, of Wisconsin, having withdrawn their names immediately preceding the election. The nomination of Al Steffes, of Minnesota was withdrawn on the preceding day and the name of J. C. Ritter, of Michigan, was never presented. Two hundred and thirty-four votes were cast for Mr. Cohen and delegates representing forty-nine votes refused to cast their ballots.

Those included in the latter category were District of Columbia, one vote; twenty-two of Illinois, twenty-seven delegates; Michigan with thirteen; North Dakota, with one; South Dakota with three and nine of Wisconsin's eleven delegates, two from the latter State voting for Mr. Cohen.

The election came as a climax to three days and nights of political discussions and maneuvering on the part of the delegations during which much bitterness had developed and walkouts by various State delegations had been freely predicted, but the latter, fortunately for the stability of the organization, were prevented.

It is probable, however, that Michigan and Minnesota will not take an active part in the national organization although they will retain their membership.

Late into the morning before the election session leaders had been working to secure harmony through the retirement of Mr. Cohen and at one time it looked as though they would be able to get together and that Mr. Cohen would throw his influence to Ritter of Michigan, but his friends and the Michigan men who are understood to have the backing of the Minnesota delegation were unable finally to agree.

When Mr. Cohen took the chair for Wednesday's session he declared when he arrived in Chicago he had definitely decided to decline the nomination and to remain in the ranks as a worker, but after three days in this city leaders from all parts of the country had insisted he remain—and a statement requesting that he allow his name to be put up again carrying the signatures of leaders in exhibitors' ranks had been presented to him Tuesday night, although he had pleaded that he be allowed to retire they insisted and so he consented. He declared he still entertained the hope that they and others would agree on another candidate and said he would withdraw in favor of Mr. Ritter, continuing to work with the organization at his own expense.

The conditions laid down by Mr. Ritter, continued Mr. Cohen, involved the withdrawing of tried State leaders from organization work and would have been destructive and Cohen's friends after being satisfied of the futility of agreeing to Ritter's terms called on Cohen again with the demand that he run and he consented to stand.

Mr. Cohen then read the petition for him to run signed by nineteen leaders. Mr. Ritter's conditions under which he would accept the Presidency were that the Convention raise one hundred thousand dollars to be spent at the discretion of the President and Board of Directors and that an additional thirty thousand dollars be raised to cover the present deficit; also that headquarters be removed from New York although conference headquarters would be maintained there and the President continue as heretofore Chairman of the Board of Directors to which Cohen, Steffes and one man from Michigan be elected.

Cohen, it is understood, declined these conditions and, according to Michigan men, would only throw his support to Ritter in the event that Cohen was made Chairman of the Board of Directors and allowed to name a majority of the members.

Up to time of going to press politics had occupied the attention of the delegates exclusively but some considerable constructive matter is on the program for the latter sessions of the Convention.

W. W. Whitson of California withdrew his name for third vice-president or from any other office previous to the vote on vice-presidents and his vacancy will be filled later. The remaining vice-presidents and directors nominated at previous session were elected to hold office for the ensuing year.

Exhibitors at the Convention contributed $29,000 to the treasury of the organization toward wiping out the deficit now existing.

It is expected that $100,000 will be raised before the Convention adjourns.

In an atmosphere electric with excitement over the possibilities of clashes on the floor and predictions that at least three state delegations would bolt the convention, the delegates gathered Wednesday to make nominations for officers of the National organization.

Sydney S. Cohen of New York was nominated to succeed himself for the fourth time as president. W. A. Steffes of Minnesota was nominated but withdrew, and when the name of Michigan was called, this state refused to put James C. Ritter, one of the strong men of their state in nomination. R. F. Woodhull of New Jersey was nominated by Sid Samuelson, and when Wisconsin was reached in the roll call of states, Joseph G. Roode placed the name of that state's favorite son, F. J. McWilliams of Madison, before the convention. Joe Mogler of Missouri also was nominated but withdrew.

The nomination of Mr. Cohen was hotly resented by many delegates, particularly those from Minnesota and Michigan, and bitter charges and countercharges flew on the floor of the convention, but the expected bolt of these two states did not occur.

Mr. Ritter and Mr. Steffes later were nominated for directors of the organization but positively declined to allow themselves to be named for any office.

The meeting had been called for 11 o'clock, but it was 1.20 o'clock when President Cohen mounted the rostrum. The delegates had been milling around singing "Hail, Hail," Michigan songs, playing horns and swinging rattles to pass away the time. Mr. Cohen was given an ovation and promptly named G. G. Schmidt, of Indianapolis, to take the chair.

Mr. Schmidt reported the following number of votes for each State: Arkansas, 7; Connecticut, 5; District of Columbia, 3; Illinois, 27; Indiana, 13; Iowa, 11; Kansas, 8; Kentucky, 11; Indiana, 6; Maryland, 6; Massachusetts, 16; Michigan, 13; Minnesota, 10; Eastern Missouri, 8; Western Missouri, 8; Montana, 2; Nebraska, 6; New Hampshire, 2; New Jersey, 12; New York, 43; Ohio, 22; North Carolina, 10; Oklahoma, 8; Eastern Pennsylvania, 21; Western Pennsylvania, 15; Washington, 5; Southern California, 6; including one from Arizona, West Virginia, 6; Wisconsin, 22.

The following States were not represented: Texas, North Dakota, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Cleveland Exhibitors Talk of Arbitration Board

THE CLEVELAND MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION held its monthly meeting last Tuesday at the Olmstead Hotel. Luncheon was served to representatives of about 75 per cent. of the local theatres. Following the luncheon the meeting was given over to a discussion of current business.

President O. E. Bellas took up most of the time explaining to the members at large, the duties and functionings of the new Joint Arbitration Board, which, in future, is to settle definitely all disputes between exchanges and exhibitors. The exhibitors are all pleased with the establishing of a Joint Arbitration Board. On the whole, they feel that it's a fair and equitable way to handle the disputes that arise.

The rank and file of the membership of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association expressed themselves as thinking that this is the first step in the right direction toward making the film business stable in all its branches.

Officers Elected by M.P.T.O.A. at Chicago

Board of Directors: W. D. Burford, Illinois; C. E. Whitehurst, Maryland; C. C. Griffin, California; Charles T. Sears, Missouri; Frederick Seeger, Wisconsin; Harry Davis, Pennsylvania; M. E. Comerford, Pennsylvania; G. G. Schmidt, Indiana; A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; R. F. Woodhull, New Jersey; C. A. Lick, Arkansas; W. A. True, Connecticut; Joseph Schwalm, Ohio; A. R. Pramer, Nebraska; L. J. Dittmar, Kentucky; Glenn Harper, California, and H. B. Varner, North Carolina.

W. W. Whitson, of California, nominated for third vice-president and R. G. Liggett, of Kansas, nominated for a place on the board of fifteen directors, declined to allow their names to be presented and the two offices will be filled later.

Mr. Schmidt made a plea for harmony and declared it the custom in politics no matter how many candidates were defeated, that all should leave in harmony and work for the man selected. He regretted the Washington walkout last year and stated he had wired to Charles L. O'Reilly of New York, asking him to attend this convention but had received a two hundred word wire from him declaring factional feeling prevented his attendance.

Mr. Schmidt declared: "We will not fight producers because we need them in our business. We will not fight trade publications but it is hard to check myself in regard to some." He told of the Exhibitors Herald reporting on crowds attending pictures which he later found untrue and hit at what he termed inspired reports in Exhibitors Trade Review.

Theodore L. Hayes, on behalf of Minnesota, placed Al. Steffes in nomination recalling his years of achievement and success in organization work. Michigan had previously passed when its name was called.

Vincent Brennan, speaking for Pennsylvania, took the floor, and as his eloquent speech proceed the delegates realized that he was about to nominate Mr. Cohen and a hush fell over the crowd, but when Cohen's name was mentioned the biggest outburst of applause of the convention followed.

Mr. Hayes was recognized to make a statement on behalf of Mr. Steffes and his first words roused the assembly to tumult.

"We were wrong when we assumed that this is a democratic organization," he declared, "the leader was chosen early this morning in a room at the Sherman Hotel."

The uproar here drowned his voice and Chairman Schmidt pounded furiously for order, declaring that he would be chairman till thrown out. Cohen leaped to his feet and asked every courtesy for the speaker and that he be allowed to prove his words.

"Michigan and Minnesota have worked hard for six weeks to bring their candidates before the exhibitors on the pledge of Sydney Cohen that he would not be candidate" Mr. Hayes resumed. "There would be no candidates against him if he said he would run. Is it right?"

"Dishonest" cried a delegate above the noise. "Minnesota's complaint is that it has spent its time and money, wasted them against stacked cards," shouted Mr. Hayes. He charged that Mr. Cohen was unmanly and unfair in that he invited every state to put forth its favorite sons, resulting in divided field that made Cohen selection possible and certain. He declared that the motto on the stationery of the organization should be changed from a hand clasp to a double cross. "Cohen will be leader for another year," continued Mr. Hayes, "and I wish him success, although the organization would be better and more successful under Ritter or Steffes. I withdraw the name of Steffes from nomination."

Chairman Schmidt declared the charges of stacked cards was a cowardly fling at him and the delegates. "I say let the best man win," he added. Claude Cady, of Michigan, followed Mr. Hayes and declared his state puts its candidate in the field because of repeated promises of Mr. Cohen not to run, made at Washington and since. "We have no regrets. We have given our best to the organization but evidently this association does not want such a man," he declared.

Mr. O'Toole came to the defense of Mr. Cohen and answering Messrs. Hayes and Cady declared Mr. Cohen was not a candidate at Washington, but was forced into candidacy by interests hostile to theatre men. He declared that Mr. Cohen was not now a candidate, that he desired to retire, but that men in this convention wanted him for president, a statement which was greeted with mingled cheers and laughter.

President McLaren, of Michigan, took the rostrum and declared his state came to the convention relying on Mr. Cohen's word that he would not be a candidate. He charged that Cohen urged favorite sons to run, and thus divided the country, leaving the field clear for himself.

"Ritter has succeeded where Cohen failed" he said. "We love Cohen and supported him for three years. He had the support from an organization with more money in the treasury than the National Organization has given Cohen. There is no chance against Cohen's organization, but if he is elected we will support the National Association and at the next convention time will have more money in the Michigan treasury than the National Organization will have."

Seconds to the nominating speeches for national president were dispensed with and nominations for other officers and the board of directors proceeded with. Mr. Cohen seconded the nomination of J. C. Ritter for director, praising the work of the Michigan man and declaring that his brains were needed on the board. He declared it was unfortunate

Washington Arbitration Committee Named

The Film Board announced through R. C. Robin the Arbitration Committee which is headed by Chairman Harry M. Crandall, representing the District of Columbia exhibitors; Frank Durkee, representing the Maryland showmen; and Harry Bernstein of Richmond and Norfolk, Va., in charge of the interests of Virginia exhibitors.

Liaison with the exchange group is through R. B. Smeltzer of First National, Harry Hunter of Paramount and Sam Flax of Liberty. Relations between exchange and exhibitor in Washington were never better. Local delegates to Chicago from the territory are supported by exchanges and exhibitors alike.

that Theodore Hayes had lost his head and scored Mr. Hayes' remarks as the most vitriolic un-American and unfair that he had ever heard on a convention floor. He stated that up to a few minutes before he took the platform he had refused to allow his name to be entered and promised startling statements at Thursday's sessions in answer to the slurs cast upon him on Wednesday.

Mr. Ritter refused to consider accepting the nomination and on being pressed by other delegates to reconsider both he and Mr. Steffes stood firm in their refusal to allow their names to go before the convention. Mr. Steffes, rising to a point of order, resented charges that Minnesota was a poor sport and charged that Mr. Cohen bolted at St. Louis. He also charged that Mr. Cohen had told him dozens of times he would not be a candidate and added that he would not have run without that assurance as he knew too much about the inner workings of the organization to run against Cohen and allow himself to go down to defeat.

Mr. Ritter, despite severe throat trouble, which almost prevented him from speaking, rose and refuted the charges that Michigan had bolted, declaring his state loyal to the National Organization and made a strong plea for more "doughboys in the ranks," saying that in the past the organization had been all colonels and generals.

He urged the delegates to get down to business or they never would get anywhere. He again declared Michigan would not bolt but he would not serve under the present conditions. Mr. Cady followed Mr. Ritter and resented the attacks on Michigan, declaring it was his delegation's desire to go away with clean hands and called on the delegates to leave them alone so that they could go home in peace, even although Michigan had been subjected to ridicule and insult.

The nominations for offices outside of president were: first vice-president, Joe Mogler, Missouri; second vice-president, Martin G. Smith, Ohio; third vice-president, W. W. Whitson, California; fifth vice-president, E. W. Collins, Arkansas; Recording Secretary, George P. Aarons, Philadelphia; Treasurer, William Bender, Jr., of Indiana.

The following were nominated to the board of directors, which will, hereafter, consist of fifteen members, according to an amendment to the constitution, which was adopted: W. D. Burford, Illinois; C. E. Whitehurst, Maryland; C. C. Griffin, California; Charles T. Sears, Missouri; Fredk. Seegert, Wisconsin; Harry Davis, Pennsylvania; M. E. Comerford, Pennsylvania; G. G. Schmidt, Indiana;

A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; R. F. Woodhull, New Jersey; C. A. Lick, Arkansas; W. A. True, Connecticut; Joseph Schwalm, Ohio; A. R. Pramer, Nebraska; L. J. Dittmar, Kentucky; Glenn Harper, California, and H. B. Varner, North Carolina. R. G. Liggett, Kansas, also was nominated but withdrew.

The Monday session of the convention was postponed until afternoon, owing to the late arrival of many delegates and about three hundred were on the floor when the gavel rapped for order, although more than double that number of exhibitors attended the second day's meeting.

Glenn Harper, of Los Angeles, first vice-president, called the convention to order and W. W. Watts, national committeeman from Sydney S. Cohen, elected president of the M. P. T. O. A. for his fourth term, at the Chicago convention.

Illinois, introduced President Glenn Reynolds, of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, who welcomed the delegates on behalf of the state organization, and introduced Joseph R. W. Cooper, assistant corporation counsel of Chicago, who represented Mayor Dever, in presenting the motion picture men with the keys of the city. E. W. Collins, Jr., of Arkansas, responded on behalf of the exhibitors.

Temporary Chairman Harper, on motion from the floor, appointed a committee of six, Martin G. Smith, of Ohio; Al Steffes, of Minnesota; Joe Mogler, of Missouri; Jim Ritter, of Michigan; M. E. Comerford of Pennsylvania; and F. J. McWilliams, of Wisconsin, to escort President Cohen to the platform. The entrance of Mr. Cohen and his escort was the signal for a prolonged outburst of applause and cheers and Mr. Cohen was forced to stand for several minutes bowing his acknowledgments before the applause ceased. It was a moment of triumph for the man who has been president of the national organization for the past three years.

Mr. Cohen immediately read his annual report, a lengthy document, which was listened to with close attention by his auditors. At the end of his formal report he launched into a brief speech, which roused the exhibitors to enthusiasm and his conclusion was marked by another prolonged outburst of applause.

The president declared it was his belief that a better understanding was being reached among the different branches of the industry, and that the greatest trouble with the motion picture business is that it has grown too fast in too short a time during which, "We have faced big and serious problems."

A roar of laughter swept the audience when he said:

"This is not an infant business, the only infants you will find in the business are in the production and distribution branches."

He urged a co-operative arrangement with the trade press, whereby this medium of publicity would be of greater benefit to the exhibitor in aiding him to solve his business problems.

In discussing the work for the coming year, he said:

"Your next administration has a gigantic task. You are coming to the time when a new president must be elected and your new national officers must be able to meet the demand."

He made it clear to the exhibitors that they would have to evolve some plan for the adequate financing of the organization if they expect it to live and stated that he had prepared a budget plan which had been submitted to the national board of directors and would be offered to the convention with other recommendations at a later session.

In outlining the accomplishments of the organization during his administration, Mr. Cohen called attention to the repeal of the five per cent. film tax, which, he stated, has saved $6,700,000 a year to theatre owners; the making of many adjustments for theatre owners with distributing companies; the determined effort to prevent centralized control within the industry and opening up avenues of distribution for independent producers, the enlightening of the public through the use of Movie Chats and moulding opinion so that eventually it will be impossible to pass laws against the motion picture theatres at the request of some well organized minority; the publication of an Exhibitors' Bulletin and other printed matter, which has been mailed to every theatre owner; the establishment of a music department, which enabled exhibitors to secure an excellent variety of tax free music; the Public Service association with the National Government exemplified in the direct connections established with the Post Office, Commerce, Labor, Agriculture, and Interior Departments, as the same are presented in the Motion Picture Palace of Progress; close co-operation with educational and other institutions; bringing about better relations between the producer-distributor elements and securing for theatre owners concessions along

Story of Film Making Told at the Coliseum

AT the Motion Picture Palace of Progress in the Coliseum, Chicago, the Eastman Kodak Company showed the process of film making. They couldn't bring the eighty-acre plant from Rochester so they brought photographs and products to illustrate the various steps in the process. Between the two the story of film is graphically told from cotton grower to motion picture studio.

The output of motion picture film in 1895, the first year of its production for commercial purposes, was 21,663 feet. The yearly output at Kodak Park, it is stated, now exceeds 800,000,000 feet, roughly, 150,000 miles. This tells the story of growth in popularity of motion pictures and incidentally of the industry that pioneered and has kept pace with that development.

Harry Crandall Real Aid to War Veterans

HARRY M. CRANDALL is the hero and friend of Washington service men of all wars. When the committee of local G. A. R. men and other veterans sought his aid, following the presidential ban on their half-century practice of solicitation in government buildings, for the Memorial Day graves decoration funds, he said, "Gentlemen, I have an important engagement for 9:30. I am going to delay long enough to assure you that I am with you. You'll get your ten thousand dollars for the seventy thousand graves. From now till early June, every film theatre in the city of Washington will show trailers telling of your work and the need."

these lines, which would have been impossible to achieve in any other way, keeping down the amount of antagonistic legislation during the past winter; aiding the anti-daylight savings campaign by Movie Chat prints, which was so successful in Milwaukee.

Highlights from the recommendations made by Mr. Cohen follow:

Elimination of all war taxes against the theatres; a fair and equitable contract between the producing-distributing and exhibiting division of our industry; reduction of accessory costs; which will result in a greater amount of exploitation and advertising being done by the theatre owner, thus helping producer and exhibitor; a concerted drive by the combined screen, men and brain power of this industry to bring into theatres millions of people, who do not now attend; elimination of unfair non-theatrical competition; the establishment of a central service station and branches to effectively look after the needs of theatre owners in all parts of the country along every line to advance their business and welfare; paid organizers to assist in the work of maintaining close association of theatre owners with the state and regional bodies and maintaining in a very definite way complete unity with the national organization; an adjustment bureau at the national headquarters, supplementing state and regional organizations for the purpose of giving special attention to the differences that exist between producers and distributors and exhibitors; formation of a department of information, developing and strengthening our national music department; taking up with the Interstate Commerce Commission the matter of reducing express rates for the transportation of film. We are now establishing our own insurance department, which actuaries state will save members from twenty-five to thirty-five per cent. annually on premiums; formation of a publicity bureau to secure in all parts of the country, favorable publicity in newspapers and magazines; a reviewing committee from which theatre owners will receive honest information about new pictures; elimination of the abuse of the application system now so prevalent in the matter of securing films from exchanges; encouragement of individual producers and directors to make worth while pictures; shorter feature pictures and a more diversified program to meet the desire of motion picture theatre patrons; issuance of an official bulletin regularly at intervals of at least every two weeks.

Fred W. Perkins of the United States Department of Agriculture, next addressed the delegates, telling them that his department was the biggest user of motion pictures in their educational work, and stating that he was more than anxious to co-operate with the exhibitors of the country in every way possible to the end of educating the populace of the farming districts of the country.

The following committees were named to handle the work of the convention:

Mr. O'Toole presided at Tuesday's session, which was devoted principally to addresses, among the speakers being George Eastman, of Rochester, New York, founder of the Eastman School of Music; Doctor Rush Rhees, of the University of Rochester; Bruce Dodson, of Kansas City, who talked on co-operative theatre insurance, and Homer P. Snyder, of Utica, New York, chairman of the committee on Indian Affairs, United States Congress, who made an address on protecting the public against fraudulent stock promotions; National Director W. D. Burford, of Illinois, made his report on the uniform contract and condemned the document as unequitable and unfair to the exhibitors. The delegates passed a resolution condemning the "so-called recently negotiated uniform contract."

The report of the Burford Committee cited these objections to the contract:

The arbitration provisions.

The playdate clause.

The sections dealing with cash deposits and advance payments.

The provision which forbids exhibitors to make eliminations from prints except with the telegraphic or written consent of the distributor.

Fixing of the time limit for the acceptance or rejection of film contracts.

The following resolution was passed by the convention, Tuesday:

"Whereas: It is a source of much gratification and pride for the independent theatre owners of the country, members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to have associated with them in a fraternal and business way George Eastman of Rochester, N. Y., because of the advanced position he has attained in the world of affairs and his announced determination to make the motion picture reach the very highest position as a medium of expression and render it of maximum service to the American people, and

"Whereas: The high patriotic purposes and civic motives of George Eastman place him in the front rank as a philanthropist and a patron of all the higher and better things associated with the motion picture, associated musical expression and the better phases of life generally as served through the film, and

"Whereas: In the pursuit of this magnificent idea of public service George Eastman created the great Eastman School of Music in connection with the beautiful Eastman Theatre in Rochester and dedicated this School to public uses through a perpetual arrangement with the University of Rochester which will hold it forever in the service of the people and under conditions which will make its services available for genius in every division of American life.

"Resolved: By the delegates to the fourth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, assembled in the Coliseum in Chicago, Tuesday, May 22, 1923, that we heartily commend George Eastman for this great display of high typed Americanism and proclaim him to be one of the greatest exponents of musical development and Motion Picture art in the world. We are convinced that Mr. Eastman's efforts in this relation will add unmeasurably to the effort, now approved everywhere, of holding the Motion Picture Theatre Screen free from centralized control and always as a great medium of expression helpful to the people in the achievement of National ideals and the conservation of their liberties.

Resolved: That the establishment of the Eastman School of Music at a time when music and art in the old world lies prone under the scourge of war, and comprehending the world's needs in a musical way, seems Providential and will always stand as a tribute to the genius, foresight and wisdom of this giant in the economic and industrial world. We add our testimonial as Theatre Owners to efforts of this great man and express the hope that years may be spared him that he may see the fuller fruition of the mammoth moves he has made in this relation and that the elements of service he has inaugurated will go down through the ages gathering force and utility for the public every day.

"Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Mr. Eastman, and spread upon the minutes of this convention."

Golfers Preparing For Tourney

Clubs Being Warmed Up For Annual Spring Event at Belleclaire Course

SOMEWHERE in the industry in New York and vicinity there is a party or there are parties about to acquire fame equalled only by the foremost stars of the screen. Just who this party or these parties might be will not be revealed until the evening of June 5, but meantime there are many with ambitions who are sneaking out for daily rehearsals or as often as they can spare or steal the time from the office or studio.

On June 5th the annual Spring golf tournament will be held on the course of the Belleclaire Country Club at Bayside, Long Island, and the embryo Gene Sarazens, Jock Hutchisons and Jim Barneses are enthusing in great shape. Niblicks, drivers and putters are being warmed up and practice cards reveal figures equalling the weekly gross of the Capitol theatre.

Up to the present there are 86 entrants on the list and the committee in charge looks for this to be doubled or trebled by the time the first pair tee off. As a lure to those who are not so good, as well as to those who think themselves pretty fair, the committee is trusting even to the honesty of a golfer, which is rather a precarious trust. In their announcements they ask the submission of the average round of the entrant. Pride will keep many of the better players from telling the truth and the lust for fame as the winner of a net score prize will tempt others to add about ten strokes to their average daily round.

But there are prizes to be won and the committee promises the poorest player an even break with the champion of the industry. It makes no difference whether you dub every drive or have a penchant for finding every trap every one in the industry who ever swung a club is wanted in the competition.

The committee urges those who do not play golf to come out to the club and hear the tournament replayed in the evening. There is to be a big beefsteak party at night and about the festive board will be heard stories rivalling those submitted by the press agents weekly.

The committee in charge of the event is composed of E. K. Gillette, The Motion Picture News; Felix Feist, Joseph Schenck Productions, State Theatre Building; G. B. Robbins Interests Acquire Avon in Watertown

The biggest deal in motion picture circles in central New York, in many a day, was consummated the past week, when the Robbins interests, of Utica, N. Y., purchased the Avon in Watertown, N. Y., at a price said to be close to 250,000. This gives the Robbins' interests ten theatres in central New York. The new owners will assume possession on June 3.

Charles Sesonske, who has managed the Avon, will probably become associated with theatres in Ohio. The purchase of the Avon marks the end of one of the stiffest fights for patronage ever witnessed in central New York.

With Sesonske handling the Avon and the Robbins interests handling three other theatres, there has been a fight which has been going on for upwards of two years and which has attracted all sorts of attention throughout the entire state. It is understood negotiations have been pending for the purchase of the Avon since last January. Combined, the ten theatres now owned by the Robbins interests, have a seating capacity of about 15,000.

Six New Seattle Censors Are Appointed

SIX new members of the Seattle Board of Theatre Censors were appointed here recently by Mayor Edwin J. Brown, to replace members whose terms have just expired. The appointees are T. H. Wagner, a well known band and orchestra leader; William J. Steinert, lawyer; Ralph Gemmill, merchant; Mrs. M. Steinhauer, Mrs. Edith Gattis and Bettie Flohr.

In addition to the supervision of motion picture houses, the board will hereafter help censor vaudeville and legitimate theatres and public dances. Leroy Johnson, manager of the Liberty theatre, is the only theatre man among the twelve members of the board.

Allen Winnipeg House Goes to Famous Players

The Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, operating a chain of theatres across Canada has taken over the Allen theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, one of the big houses of the Canadian West, on a rental basis. This is the first important instance of the acquisition of a property directed by Jule and J. J. Allen by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation and announcement of the fact came about through a court action in Winnipeg which resulted in Famous Players being awarded possession of the theatre.

An injunction had been entered by Dominion Films, Limited, against Allen Winnipeg Theatres, Limited, to restrain the latter from handing over the Allen theatre to Famous Players on the ground that Dominion Films had priority claim through an alleged lease. The case was heard before Chief Justice Mathers in the Court of King's Bench, Winnipeg, three days being consumed in the hearing of evidence by a whole array of brilliant legal talent which had been engaged.

In delivering judgment on May 18, Chief Justice Mathers ruled that he did not believe that Dominion Films, Limited, ever actually had possession of Allen theatre under the terms of an alleged contract. He also assessed all costs against Dominion Films, Limited, and Famous Players came into possession of the house.

Incidentally, announcement was made that Famous Players had made arrangements with the directors and shareholders of Allen Winnipeg Theatres, Limited, to take over the Allen theatre on April 26 last, but this move had been blocked by Dominion Films, Limited, of which Emanuel Levy is the local representative. Famous Players, however, had posted special constables around the theatre building to prevent Mr. Levy from re-entering the premises.

Godsol Purchases Roosevelt Theatre in Chicago

F. J. Godsol, president of Goldwyn, has purchased the site upon which the Roosevelt theatre stands in Chicago and also the structure. The purchase was made from the Ascher-Roosevelt Theatre Company at a price said to be $1,800,000. It is said the purchase is a personal one by Godsol, though his company owns a 50 per cent. interest in the theatres operated by Ascher Brothers.

The Roosevelt, it is said, will continue to be run by Balaban and Katz who leased it from Ascher Brothers some time ago.

Washington Leader Has Small Fire Loss

SIDNEY LUST had a small fire in his projection booth at the Leader theatre, Washington, D. C. A reel of film caught fire, but no serious damage resulted. He plans to engage the Shubert-Garrick for a few weeks, following its close.

Exhibitors Testify in Famous Players Case

Charles L. O'Reilly and Other New York Theatre Owners Witnesses at Federal Hearing

EXHIBITOR testimony featured this week's hearings on the Federal Trade Commission charges against the Famous Players-Lasky group.

Among those who took the stand were Charles L. O'Reilly, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, and Samuel I. Berman, secretary of that organization. In addition, a large number of New York City exhibitors were questioned.

A sharp tilt between counsel featured the Monday morning session, when W. H. Fuller, Government chief counsel, demanded that the respondents produce S. R. Kent, F. P. L. General Manager of Distribution, who was attending the Paramount sales convention in Los Angeles.

Mr. Kent, who occupied the stand for a short time three weeks ago, had not been excused, according to Mr. Fuller's contention. Robert T. Swaine, chief counsel for the respondents, argued that Paramount's whole business organization could not be disrupted "just because this attack on the company is going on." Mr. Kent could not return before June 4, Mr. Swaine added.

Mr. Fuller reiterated his demand that Mr. Kent be produced "now."

Elek J. Ludvigh, Famous Players general counsel, then made a vigorous appeal to Examiner E. C. Alvord for "justice."

"It would be outrageous to have Mr. Kent come back now," he declared angrily. "We have done everything to facilitate these gentlemen in getting the documents from our files for which they have asked. We have had six or seven statisticians working to prepare the data the Government wants. Does Mr. Fuller feel that it is fair to demand that Mr. Kent cut short his trip? If he thinks this is justice let him say so. I want it in the record."

Mr. Ludvigh's argument was backed up with a declaration by Mr. Swaine that "on two consecutive days we have listened to less than two hours of testimony. We have seen witnesses called by the Government come in here, and then go away without testifying, presumably because they couldn't give the testimony the Government wanted."

This sally brought a heated retort from Mr. Fuller. "The witnesses were not sent away for that reason," he declared. "We wanted to examine Mr. Kent before these witnesses appeared. All this inconvenience could have been avoided if counsel had told us that Mr. Kent was going away."

"I resent that statement," rejoined Mr. Swaine. "You knew these sales conventions were going to be held and that Mr. Kent would attend them."

At this point Examiner Alvord intervened and it was agreed that Mr. Ludvigh would send a telegram at once to Mr. Kent, learn his itinerary and report when it would be possible for him to appear.

At the afternoon session, Mr. Ludvigh produced the record of the hearing on May 3, when Mr. Kent testified. At the conclusion of the Kent testimony the record read: "Witness excused." Mr. Fuller maintained, however, that Mr. Kent could not have been excused permanently, inasmuch as the record showed he had promised to produce certain documents. The controversy finally ended amicably, with the promise from Famous Players' counsel that Mr. Kent would appear as soon as possible.

Kansas City Trade Board Outlines Rulings

THE following rulings have been outlined by the Kansas City Film Board of Trade:

"The exhibitor who buys regularly released short subjects, sold on a weekly basis, is expected to play in accordance with contract terms, and if set out, must be paid for.

"Contracts for serials are not subject to cancellation, nor are contracts for specific features, unless they contain a cancellation clause."

All misunderstandings will be referred to a joint board of arbitration, consisting of three members of the Film Board of Trade and three exhibitors.

Benjamin Knobel, who said he was interested in seven houses in the Bronx, New York City, with Charles Goldreyer and C. Grob, took the stand. In order to book Paramount at all, he claimed the houses had to book all the F. P. L. pictures, and that when he had made efforts to have pictures "canceled out" because of their "unsuitability" he had been unable to do so. Knobel also said that certain Cosmopolitan pictures, including "Enemies of Women" and "Little Old New York," for which he and his partners had contracted, had not been delivered. He "supposed" this was because of the fact that Goldwyn had taken over the distribution of the Cosmopolitan product recently.

On cross-examination, Prather S. McDonald, conducting the case for the respondents, asked the witness if he had ever heard of "bicycling."

"No, I never did," answered Knobel. "I have heard of 'switching.'"

"Well, they are the same," continued Mr. McDonald, who then asked the witness if he had ever switched any pictures.

Mr. Knobel admitted that he had "switched" one picture from the Manhattan theatre to the Bushman; when a picture for the latter house failed to show up on the booking date. He made a settlement with Famous Players for extra date, he added.

"Are you sure you didn't 'switch' six pictures, and then pay for them later?" Mr. McDonald pursued.

"Absolutely not," the witness answered.

Mr. Knobel complained that the Famous Players New York exchange had "clocked" one of his theatres in order to find out how many people attended it as a basis for fixing film rental prices. He asserted that the "clocking" plan was unfair because about 200 passes were issued daily to the house.

When Goldreyer took the stand he declared that he "had fooled them when they 'clocked' the house on 'Blood and Sand,'" and also maintained that this method of obtaining a basis for determining what rentals an exhibitor should pay was unjust.

"I am willing to show my books but clocking is not fair," he added. "Why do they pick on fellows in Fordham when they have Broadway to worry about?"

Referring to the transfer of Cosmopolitan distribution to Goldwyn, Mr. Goldreyer asserted that "they won't get away with not giving us" three of the Cosmopolitan pictures. He also testified that "The Toll Gate," a

Paramount 1920 picture, had not been delivered to him according to contract, but on cross-examination the respondents showed that the distributor was not responsible "in the case of non-release."

Asked about rental prices, Mr. Goldreyer said he paid $2,000 for "Peter Ibbetson" and lost money on it. "It was a 'fliv'," said he. Admitting that Famous Players had voluntarily made a $500 adjustment on the picture, he declared that if he had been given a $2,000 adjustment he would still have been "out money."

Further exhibitor testimony was heard from Abraham Goodside, who has theatres in Portland, Maine and Springfield, Mass.

The first witness on Tuesday was William A. Landau, owner of the Heights theatre, New York City, and former President of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce. He stated that he was also a partner with Samuel G. Bock in five other houses.

"I tried to buy '39' from F. P.-L. but they asked a prohibitive price," he said on direct examination. "I offered a fair price but they refused, and told me I would have to buy the entire output, which I didn't want because some of the pictures were not suited to my clientele."

The witness asserted that he then negotiated with Metro and was again asked "prohibitive prices." The New York Metro exchange inquired of him whether he had negotiated with Famous Players, Landau added, and suggested that he buy F. P.-L. pictures "first." He declared he met "the same obstacle at First National" and summed up by saying "they all seemed to know every move we made."

One of the Loew theatres, located at 158th Street and Broadway, gets the F. P.-L. product, he went on, and "despite the distance from my house we can't get the pictures until Loew is through with them."

Protection given Loew was a standing rule in all exchanges, he declared. Cross-examined by Mr. Swaine, the witness admitted he had "no trouble in getting a supply of pictures" even though he didn't book Paramount.

"I would have preferred to get Famous Players pictures," he said, "not because they are the best but because they are the most consistent program on the market."

In order to stop what he called "the dog eat dog" policy of the exchanges and to eliminate ruinous competition, the witness said six houses in his neighborhood got together and formed a buying pool, with one person doing all the buying. "The combination refused to book Famous Players," he continued, "because after we had offered to split the product between our houses and the Haring and Blumenthal chain I found out that the latter were being favored in price."

He admitted that S. R. Kent had made an adjustment with him, and directed that Landau should be given a split on the next group of pictures. His partner, Mr. Bock, had offered $15,000 for the group, he said, but the combination was unable to come to terms with Harry H. Buxbaum, F. P.-L. district manager, and the deal was called off. He denied that he had any grudge against Paramount.

When he said that Paramount prices were "higher this year than last," Mr. Swaine asked: "Don't you know that prices are lower this year than last?" To which Mr. Landau answered, "I do not."

"Are you willing to have the accuracy of all your testimony measured by that statement?" Swaine demanded.

"I am," Landau returned.

When Mr. Boek was questioned about "the pool," he said its purpose was "to eliminate being sandbagged by the exchanges." He admitted that he and his partners were "trying to form a monopoly" in his neighborhood and that all the six theatres were in one corporation.

Samuel I. Berman, owner of two theatres in Brooklyn and executive secretary of the M. P. T. O. of New York State, declared he had recently been used as "a buffer for Paramount" in his section. At first, he had been given every consideration in booking, until a larger competitive house—the Benson—went up in his neighborhood, he went on. When that happened, he asked the Paramount exchange whether he was "going to be used for a good thing."

One season, he declared, Paramount said he could have some of their pictures, and he bought some, but they "were unprofitable."

"This season I had to have some first runs, and I told Paramount that, as an old customer, I felt I ought to be given consideration," Mr. Berman explained. "I got ten or eleven from Harry Buxbaum at big prices, but I told him I would take the dose like a man. I never did much bartering or haggling over prices."

Mr. Berman made it clear that he had no grudge against Famous Players and that he had always got along with them in an amicable fashion.

On the subject of "star series," the witness declared that the producer would often take out the good pictures, "sprinkle them, bless them, call them super-specials, and raise the price."

Asked if he had any general remarks to make, Mr. Berman, with emphasis but the utmost good nature, declared that "this is the only business in the world in which goodwill is not an asset. And it is the only industry in which seconds are sold for as much as firsts. Why don't they wait until the picture is produced and then, if it is good, make the exhibitor pay what the picture is worth? One of the main reasons for the ill-will in the business is that the exhibitor can't see the picture before he books it. The producer is oversold by his publicity man to such an extent that producer actually gets to believe what the publicity man says about him. Then along comes the exploitation man and he makes the exhibitor believe the picture is going to push the side-walls and back-walls out of his theatre. The salesman, the publicity man, and the exhibitor all get oversold on enthusiasm, and when the picture finally arrives what is it? Too often it's a flivver." "The great curse of this business is selling something before it is made."

Mr. Berman then pointed out that the new uniform contract contained a provision which would enable the exhibitor to cancel under certain conditions, and he praised this innovation.

The Famous Players methods were no worse than those of any other company, he declared. "It's all a game of dog eat dog."

Hyman Gainsboro, owner of theatres in Flushing and Port Washington, L. I., claimed that certain Paramount specials for which he had contracted were not delivered, but admitted on cross-examination that the contract provided for withdrawal of pictures when reasons arose over which the distributor had no control.

Al Harstn, another New York exhibitor, told of his troubles as a competitor of Loew. He claimed nine Paramount specials for which he contracted had not been delivered. One of them, he said, was "Humoresque."

"I had that picture booked and paid $150 for it," he explained. "It went into the Criterion and happened to make a hit. So they pulled it off the program and sold it at a higher price to Loew. I offered $1,000 or $1,500 but Loew got it. Buxbaum advised me to see Loew, because Loew and I were supposed to be friends, but I got about as much satisfaction out of him as I would from the German Kaiser. Finally he allowed me to play day and date with him for $750."

Mr. Harstn added that Mr. Buxbaum had reduced prices on a group of pictures later and they "got along all right together."

J. Alton Bradbury explained that his Olympia theatre, New York, was first-run in his neighborhood until Loew's Eighty-Third Street theatre opened, where the Olympia became second-run. In the matter of protection, he said, Loew got the same from all the exchanges.

"Are your dealings with Famous Players any harder than with the other exchanges?" asked Mr. Swaine.

"A little bit harder," replied Mr. Bradbury.

"But, are not Paramount Pictures a little bit better?" Swaine persisted.

"Yes, they are a little bit better," the witness said, smiling.

As the operator of six theatres, Leo Brecher said he was not using Paramount service this year, although he had used it in other years.

"I don't agree with some exhibitors that Paramount is the life-blood of the business," he declared. "I can get as good pictures from other companies."

Declaring that "independent exhibitors can't get first runs as against Loew, Fox, or Keith," J. Arthur Hirsch, another New York exhibitor, told of the formation of the A. B. C., a booking association formed of one hundred independents. They were never permitted to deal with the big producers, he asserted.

On cross-examination, the defense scored a point when the witness said that "the exhibitor has more faith in Famous Players than in any other company."

As president of the A. B. C., Lee A. Ochs testified that he had appealed to Adolph Zukor to give the independent combination some Paramount first-runs, and that Mr. Zukor said he would talk the matter over with Mr. Kent, with whom he was just about to sail for Europe.

"He told me to get in touch with him on his return," added Mr. Ochs. "But I haven't had time to do so."

At the opening of the Wednesday morning session, Marvin Farrington, for the Government, offered in evidence a lease made March 25, 1922, by Barney Resnick, owner of the building which housed the theatre operated by J. C. Boss in McAlester, Okla., to Texas & Oklahoma Enterprises (E. H. Hulsey); and a contract between Mr. Hulsey's company and Resnick, assigning the lease to the latter, on condition that the building would not be used for any theatrical purpose for the period of two years.

This was the deal to which Boss referred in his testimony, claiming it was the final step in Paramount's driving him out of business in McAlester.

A. J. Wolf, of the Adelphi and Symphony theatres, New York, testified that he had bought all he could from Famous Players since 1914, but owing to the opening of competitive Loew and U. B. O. houses in his neighborhood in recent years, he had had no Paramount first runs within that period.

"The Loew circuit has the greater number of days and naturally the greater drawing power," he continued.

He had tried to get first runs from F. P.-L., he explained, but was turned down, although he used as an argument the fact that he had been a Paramount customer for seven or eight years. He then bought second runs, he said, until F. P.-L. wanted him to split, which he declined to do, as he had "built up the reputation of his houses on Paramount."

On one occasion, when he produced a statement showing that the Adelphi was losing money, the witness declared Famous Players reduced his rental prices. On "Humoresque," for which he said he had contracted to pay $500 plus the tax, he said he was forced to pay an additional $100 in order to get the picture.

Cross-examined, the witness admitted he had played a few Paramounts and got an extra day on "Bella Donna" as an adjustment. Like many other witnesses, Mr. Wolf stated that he considered Famous Players pictures had the most consistently high average quality in the last five years.

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the M. P. T. O. of New York State, was the last witness on Wednesday morning, when recess was taken until Friday at 1.30 to permit the return from the Chicago convention of certain witnesses subpoenaed by the Government.

"I played no Paramount Pictures during the controversy the national organization had with F. P.-L. beginning in June, 1920," Mr. O'Reilly said.

In negotiating for the "41" group, Mr. O'Reilly said he wanted to split with his competitor—the 72d Street Playhouse—but he found he would not be allowed to pick the pictures he wanted. So he took all the group and so did his competitor.

Four out of the six Cosmopolitans on the "39" contract were delivered, he pointed out. "Cosmopolitan will have to deliver the others," he said, "because of the provision in the new uniform contract which we negotiated with Mr. Hays. That provides that where pictures are specifically named in the contract, they must be given to the exhibitor. And by agreement of both sides, the uniform contract provision was made retroactive to June 22, 1922."

Asked whether he booked the "39," the witness said he had not, because the "41" did not "do well," and the protection given him was "not satisfactory."

Mr. O'Reilly condemned block-booking which he said "forces upon the public pictures not suitable to their taste in many instances. For example: an exhibitor in Summit, N. J., which I would call a strait-laced town, did not want to show 'Bella Donna' because he didn't think the people of the town would stand for it. But Paramount told him he must take all the pictures of that group. Finally, F. P.-L. itself showed the picture in a church. I suppose they figured they could get it by in Summit in that way."

Mr. Swaine then asked the witness if all the distributors did not follow the block-booking plan. "Yes, the others follow the master," Mr. O'Reilly said.

When Mr. Swaine pointed out to the witness that the Cosmopolitan pictures had been booked on a separate contract from those produced by Paramount itself, Mr. O'Reilly declared: "We don't care whether Cosmopolitan delivers the pictures through Western Union or Postal. But they must be delivered. I feel that Famous Players should be with the exhibitors in this matter and should not have played the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitans in their theatre unless all exhibitors got them."

Asked what F. P.-L. theatre he referred to, Mr. O'Reilly named the Rivoli, New York. He had no knowledge that they had been run elsewhere in the country.

When Mr. Swaine asked the witness if he got a supply of good pictures despite the fact that he did not book Paramount, he said, "Oh, yes, some of the independents are more super than the supers."

From present indications, the New York hearings will last another week or ten days. Philadelphia is the next town to be visited.

Witnesses late last week were Col. Alvin M. Owsley, National Commander of the American Legion; Charles Rosenweig, manager of the F. B. O. New York Exchange; Edward J. Bowes, Goldwyn vice-president, and Robert Lieber, president of Associated First National.

Col. Owsley told of the use of Legion films in educational work among former service men. Booking difficulties had been encountered in a large number of theatres, he testified. He characterized the motion picture as the greatest of all agencies for moulding public opinion.

Mr. Rosenweig testified that while he was with Universal he had offered three pictures for showing in the Broadway F. P.-L. houses, and was informed there was no open time in each case. He said he had had a similar experience with F. B. O. productions.

Goldwyn's ownership of a half interest in the Capitol, New York, was acquired to insure Broadway runs for Goldwyn pictures, Mr. Bowes explained. Replying to questions by Government counsel, the witness said Goldwyn's acquisition of theatres, or interests in theatres, in different parts of the country was necessary in order to make certain of first run showings. The company now has an interest in some 25 houses, he said, four of which are first runs. Negotiations are in progress for a theatre in Kansas City, he continued, and the house would be used for exploitation purposes in that territory.

Mr. Lieber, who was on the stand for a short time on May 18, testified that he joined First National as an original franchise holder in order to insure a steady supply of pictures for the Circle theatre, Indianapolis.

He described a meeting held at Adolph Zukor's country home in 1921, with himself, Mr. Zukor, H. D. H. Connick, S. R. Kent, Arthur Loew, Sam Katz and A. H. Blank in attendance. Only the general depressed condition of the industry was discussed, he said.

He denied that the purpose of the meeting was to take up the situation resulting from certain Famous Players theatres having become First National sub-franchise holders.

Under cross-examination, Mr. Lieber said First National expected to release 52 pictures in the new season, only sixteen of which it would produce. He stated also that of the pictures shown at the Circle about 60% were First National, and maintained that good pictures, regardless of who produced them, could always get bookings in Indianapolis.

Irish Customs Ruling Aids U. S. Film Exporters

Consul John A. Gamon writing from Queenstown (Cobb), Ireland, Irish Free State, reports the possible benefit to American film exporters from a new Irish customs ruling effective April 1. This ruling will in effect handicap the British film producer but give a corresponding advantage to the American product.

From the understanding in the All-British Imperial preference clause in the tariff section of the Irish Government Act and the Treaty setting up the Free State, Ireland was placed in the same category as Canada, in December, 1921. The basic British schedules are subject to modifications to suit the revenue raising needs and requirements of the Irish Free State Customs and Finance Services.

Cinematograph films are prominent in the articles listed as likely to be affected by any changes. At the present rate film now pays a duty of (1 d.) one penny-two cents per linear foot, with a similar reduction of one-third for The Imperial preference rate. To avoid double-payment of duties, extra freights, and other causes for delay, film shipments to Ireland should be from New York to Cobb direct. Likewise British shipments to avoid transshipment should be consigned to British ports, from New York.

Senator Launches Move For Industry's Good

A vast amount of practical work in bringing about a better understanding of the motion picture industry among the members of the Pennsylvania Legislature and the legislative correspondents representing all the leading newspapers of the state at the capital at Harrisburg, has been accomplished during the last few weeks by the Hon. John P. Harris, of Pittsburgh, himself a member of the State Senate.

The final act of Senator Harris in educating the press and the law-makers of the state as to the inner working of the picture industry was when he gave a dinner to the newspaper men and others at Folger's Inn, at Dauphin, on the evening of May 24. One of the features of this banquet was the display of film views of the newspapermen themselves, taken a few days before, through an arrangement Senator Harris made with the Famous Players-Lasky corporation.

These pictures were taken about the capitol and depicted the scribes at work in the legislative halls and in their quarters in the press room of the capitol.

Ince Screen Writers Work With Novelists

A special autumn release of three adaptations from books will be a feature of Thomas H. Ince's fall releasing program—and two of the novels are being especially written in collaboration with a screen expert to insure screen material.

Vaughan Kester's "The Just and the Unjust" will be the first adaptation which will go into production as a First National attraction. Bradley King of the Ince writing staff is now at work on the adaptation of the story and camera work will begin shortly.

Bobbs Merrill Publishing Company, which has put out all the Kester books, will put a special motion picture edition of the tale on the market when the feature is released.

Talbot Mundy, British novelist, is completing a new story "The Devil's Own," which will be published this summer. Bradley King not only will make the adaptation of this novel but also is collaborating with the author in working out the story. A second Mundy novel already in synoptic form has been purchased by Ince and will be written in collaboration with Miss King.

N. Y. Court Authorized to Try Vaudeville Suit

The Supreme Court on "Decision Monday," declared that it held "The charges of Max Hart, that the Keith and allied interests were of such a nature as to be legitimately tried in the lower Federal courts," specifically ordering the district Federal court in New York City to try the Hart vs Keith case and all similar cases brought at any time, in vaudeville, movies, theatres, and other specialized businesses.

Keith interests, including, The B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange, Orpheum Circuit, Inc.; and the Excelsior Collection Agency and others, were named in the proceedings as being charged with a conspiracy among themselves as booking agencies, theatre proprietors, producers "not to book, nor permit the booking of any vaudeville act not controlled by the alleged booking combination." This presents a question, rightly within the purview of the local court at New York. The court there, it will be remembered held that it "lacked jurisdiction as the alleged conspiracy did not constitute a restraint of commerce. In his appeal Hart declared the Keith group had restrained interstate commerce by driving his lucrative booking agency business to the wall through the above agreement, in effect "black-list" of independents.

U. S. Picture to Be Seen First in Europe

An American made motion picture will be shown in Europe before it is seen in America. Arrangements have been completed to open Marion Davies in "Little Old New York" immediately at the new Scala theatre, London.

Marion Davies, the star, sailed during the week on the Olympic to make a personal appearance with the opening of the picture, scheduled for June 3.

"Little Old New York" will be the opening attraction at the new Cosmopolitan theatre, Columbus Circle, New York, sometime in July.

After her London appearance, Miss Davies will visit England, France, and Italy where she expects to get color and atmosphere for "Yolanda"—her next picture.

Eastman and Brulatour Enter Denials

Answers Disclaim Conspiracy As Charged by Federal Trade Commission

THE Eastman Kodak Company and Jules Brulatour have entered denials of all charges of conspiracy, intimidation and coercion made against them by the Federal Trade Commission in an answer filed during the week.

In the complaint of the commission it was charged that Eastman Brulatour and the Allied Laboratories Association entered into a conspiracy which brought about a virtual monopoly in the manufacture and sale of raw film and that competition in the sale and manufacture of prints was hindered and eliminated and prices of positive prints fixed and standardized.

In his answer Eastman denies all knowledge as to the amount of film made by his competitors and that therefore he has no knowledge of a monopoly of manufacture. Among the admissions made was that Brulatour handled approximately 81 per cent. of the Eastman film between January 1 and March 1, 1920 and 70 per cent. between March 1, 1920 and September 1, 1921.

Admitting that Brulatour was the principal stockholder in Paragon, Inc., it was denied that Eastman controlled or had any interest in the company. It was also admitted that the G. M. Laboratories, Inc., the San Jacq Laboratory and Paragon Laboratory were purchased, but denial was made that such purchases, as charged in the complaint, were for the purpose of coercing or intimidating competing manufacturing laboratories or to induce them to refrain from making further purchases of raw stock not manufactured by the Eastman Kodak Company.

Brulatour, in his answer, admits his connection with Eastman, but denies that any conspiracy exists in the conduct of the business.

Three Universal Features For June Release

UNIVERSAL will release three feature productions during the month of June. They will be Universal attractions made by three of that company's stars, Jack Hoxie, Herbert Rawlinson and Gladys Walton.

In the order of their release, they are "Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande," starring Hoxie; "Railroaded," starring Rawlinson, and "Sawdust," starring Miss Walton. They are five-reel features.

"Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande," is Hoxie's first Universal picture. It was adapted from the magazine story of that name by Stephens Chalmers. George E. Marshall directed it. Among the players were Emmett King, Elinor Field, Fred C. Jones, William A. Steele and Bob McKenzie.

The Universal release on June 11 will be "Railroaded," a Herbert Rawlinson picture adapted from "Richard," a magazine story by Margaret Bryant.

Edmund Mortimer directed it. In the supporting cast were David Torrence, Alfred Fisher, Esther Ralston, Lionel Belmore and Mike Donlin.

On June 25 Gladys Walton's latest picture will reach the screen. It is "Sawdust," a circus picture from the pen of Courtney Ryley Cooper.

Jack Conway had charge of the production. The supporting cast includes Herbert Standing, Niles Welch, Edith Yorke, Mathew Betz, Frank Brownlee, William Robert Daly and Mattie Peters.

of the laboratories purchased. He also denies furnishing producers with positive prints at prices below those at which competitors could supply them. He denies delay in deliveries to competitive laboratories and the shutting off of their source of supply.

The Allied Laboratories and members were given an extension of time to June 11, in which to file their answers to the complaint.

Manager Held For Death in Auto Mishap

Jack Roth, manager of the Isis theatre, one of Kansas City's largest suburban houses, was arraigned in a justice court this week on a charge of manslaughter in connection with a fatal motor car accident which resulted in the death of R. T. Jester, a drug salesman of Wichita, Kas., Saturday.

Mr. Roth pleaded not guilty and was released on $2,500 bond, his preliminary hearing being set for June 2. Jester was injured fatally when a Chevrolet sedan driven by him collided with a Cadillac roadster driven by Roth at Nineteenth and Main Streets. The complaint was signed by a patrolman, C. J. Frederick.

Mr. Roth pointed out to the prosecutor that the car he was driving was crushed on the right side even with the door, the print of the other car's headlight being left in the door. There is no scratch on the front of Roth's car and he says that he will prove at his preliminary hearing that he could not have been driving rapidly and struck another car driving slowly.

Detroit Will Hold Motion Picture Exposition

With the opening of the Detroit Coliseum at the fair grounds as an all year round exposition building plans are being perfected to hold the first annual Motion Picture exposition ever staged in the Michigan metropolis in the new structure February 3rd to 10th, 1924.

The exposition will be for the entire industry, and will have the attention of the trade throughout the country. Invitations are being sent to Ohio and Indiana organizations to join in the movement and favorable responses have been had from several of the big bodies, with a view of developing a Tri-State organization at the show.

N. Y. Commission Chief Is Injured by Auto

GEORGE H. COBB, of Watertown, N. Y., chairman of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, is at a hospital in his home city recovering from serious injuries received last Friday night when he was struck by an automobile on one of the streets of that city. He had just reached home from New York.

Mr. Cobb was suffering from a bad scalp wound, and when he was first picked up, following the accident, he was unconscious. He also has one deep cut over the left eye. Thomas H. Miller, who was driving the car which struck Mr. Cobb, was immediately placed under arrest and charged with operating a motor vehicle while in an intoxicated condition.

Jail Sentence Looms For "Stench Bombers"

A jail sentence of thirty days and a fine of $100 are provided for in an ordinance prohibiting the possession or disposal of "Stink bombs," introduced in the Seattle, Wash., city council recently by Mrs. Henry Landes, chairman of the public safety committee. Introduction of the ordinance by Mrs. Landes grew out of several cases recently where the bombs have been broken in Seattle theatres by union and non-union sympathizers during differences between the theatres and the musicians' and operators' unions.

Possession is to be prima facie evidence that the bomb is to be used for an unlawful purpose, according to the terms of the bill, and the same penalties are to be applied. Upon a state of Washington law becoming effective in June granting wider power to police courts, such offenses may be classified as misdemeanors and may draw heavier penalties, it has been pointed out by city officials.

The new bill, if passed, will do away with the necessity of actual evidence of the bombs being broken.

Washington Hippodrome Receivers Asked

The District Supreme Court was asked last week to appoint receivers for the Hippodrome theatre, 806 K Street, Washington, D. C. The request was made by Mrs. Mary E. Stenz, who conducts a theatre business there with her son, Norman Stenz. Alvin L. Neumyer, sequestrator of the son's property, is named in the proceedings.

The appointment of Neumyer was secured by the attorneys for Mrs. Margaret Stenz, who secured a decree of limited divorce from Norman Stenz. Mrs. Stenz, Sr., was represented by attorney Oscar Nauk, while Jeffords & Dutton filed the consent of Norman Stenz to his mother's application. The three-cornered management was declared unprofitable, in her petition.

Receivers to Operate State Theatre, Schenectady

The State theatre, Schenectady, N. Y., one of the latest of the Strand group, passed into the hands of a receiver last week. At the time Max Spiegel became involved in serious financial difficulties, the theatre was also affected.

It will continue to be operated, however, by the receivers, with Edwin O. Weinberg, as manager. The house cost $500,000.

Fifty From Paramount for 1923-24 Season

Details of the First Thirteen Photoplays For New Theatrical Year Announced

FIFTY photoplays will be released by Paramount for the season 1923-1924. Announcement of titles and casts of the first thirteen of the new season pictures was made this week. "It has been deemed advisable not to reveal plans and details on a greater number at this time," said the announcement.

The list of specials will be headed by Cecil B. DeMille's production "The Ten Commandments," now in work.

With fifty features and specials for the new season, the Paramount output will be considerably under the 1922-1923 volume, when eighty pictures were scheduled.

Metro Buys Three Stories for Immediate Filming

Metro announced this week the purchase of three new stories, which will be placed in immediate production at the Metro west coast studios, in addition to the purchase of several other stories which will be announced shortly by Milton E. Hoffman, Metro production manager.

The stories announced this week are "Held to Answer," by Peter Clarke McFarlane; "To Whom It May Concern," by Rita Weiman; and "The Spirit of the Road," by Kate Jordan.

"Held to Answer" is a modern drama, and will be the second of the Metro all-star specials of the coming season. The first special, "The Eagle's Feather," is now in the course of production under the direction of Edward Sloan. It is from a story of the same name by Katherine Newlin Burt.

"To Whom It May Concern" will be Viola Dana's second starring picture for the coming season. It is a mystery drama. Miss Dana is now at work on "Rouged Lips," also a Rita Weiman story. It is being directed by Harold Shaw. "The Spirit of the Road" will also be for Miss Dana.

mestic drama of New York life. It was directed by Charles Maigne from Sada Cowan's scenario based upon a serial in the Saturday Evening Post, written by Maximilian Foster. In the supporting cast are Robert Schable, Forrest Robinson, Maude Wayne, Patterson Dial and Lura Anson.

"The Cheat," written by Hector Turnbull, was first produced by Paramount eight years ago. In the new version, produced by George Fitzmaurice, Pola Negri is the star, with Jack Holt in the leading role and Charles de Roche as the heavy.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" will be a starring vehicle for Glória Swanson. It is a Sam Wood production, with scenario by Sada Cowan from the New York stage success. The story calls for the ultimate in daring gowns on the part of the star. Huntley Gordon is leading man and Robert Agnew, Irene Dalton, Frank Butler, Paul Weigel, Charles Green and Lianne Salvor are prominent.

Bret Harte's classic, "Salomy Jane," has been screened under the direction of George Melford, with Jacqueline Logan in the title role and Maurice Flynn opposite her. With these two George Fawcett is featured, while William Davidson, Charles Ogle, James Neill and Clarence Burton are also in the cast. Melford took the company to Boulder Creek, Col., and reproduced the old mining camp of the Harte story right on the spot.

"Ruggles of Red Gap," a picture of ranch life, directed by James Cruze from Harry Leon Wilson's story is also listed. An all-star cast will appear in it. The scenario is by Tom J. Geraghty.

"Mortal Love," based upon Edward Knoblock's play, "The Faun," a stage success of William Faversham's, is being produced by William De Mille. A cast of all-star personnel will be provided.

"Zaza," which brought wealth to David

Belasco and fame to Mrs. Leslie Carter on the stage, will be a starring vehicle for Gloria Swanson. Albert Shelby LeVino wrote the scenario and Allan Dwan is the producer.

"All Must Marry," by George Ade, who also provided "Our Leading Citizen" and "Back Home and Broke" for Thomas Meighan, will be a vehicle for the same star. As in the cases of the two previous Ade pictures, Meighan will be directed by Alfred E. Green from a scenario by Tom J. Geraghty. The story concerns the four children of a very rich father who provides in his will that his estate shall not be divided until all four are married.

In connection with the new season's output, Paramount announces that it will continue national advertising on a big scale. Special advertising will be done during Paramount Week in two thousand newspapers, it is announced. Leather bound calendars, announcement booklets in tabloid form for distribution by theatres, special rotogravure sections and heralds will be supplied at cost to exhibitors by the Advertising Accessories Department under the direction of Mel Shauer.

The Paramount Publicity Department, under the direction of Charles E. McCarthy, supplies a vast amount of publicity each week to newspapers and magazines. The Exploitation Department, directed by Claud Saunders, has the largest staff in its history.

The Paramount exchange system, under the direction of S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution, has been expanded. Through the division conventions recently held at New York, Chicago, New Orleans and Los Angeles, approximately 1,000 Paramount field workers were brought into direct contact with home-office executives.

New exchanges have been opened in the last year in Milwaukee, Columbus, Portland, Me., Wilkes-Barre, Peoria, and Sioux Falls, and a separate exchange for Northern New Jersey. A shipping station was opened at Butte, Mont. New exchanges will be opened in Memphis and Jacksonville, Fla., about July 1.

The Foreign Department, under the direction of E. E. Shauer, is considering plans for additions to the thirty-five Paramount foreign offices and exchanges. These will be opened as rapidly as conditions permit. The new exchanges in France, Mexico, Japan, Scandinavia, and the Far East have had a successful first year, it is stated.

Chadwick Pictures Acquires New Project

The Chadwick Pictures Corporation, of which I. E. Chadwick is president, has arranged with Jimmy Aubrey, comedian, to market his product for the next five years.

Another achievement of the Chadwick Pictures Corporation is the securing of the series of forty subjects which were completed recently after eighteen months of effort in foreign lands, by the Post Pictures Corporation. They will be known as Post Impressions—a series of pictorial visits abroad.

In addition to these short subjects plans have been completed whereby the Edmund Lawrence feature productions, the first of which will be "The Parasites of Broadway," will be marketed by the Chadwick organization.

Selznick Acquires Am. Releasing Co

Unification of Sales Forces Means Strong, Economical Distribution Channel

THE operating activities of the American Releasing Corporation have been transferred to the recently reorganized Selznick Distributing Corporation, according to announcement made by the latter organization. The transfer became effective May 22 and was accomplished through the efforts of Utica and Los Angeles banking groups.

Complete and immediate elimination of a nation-wide system of twenty-four American Releasing branch offices and the partial unification of sales forces of the two organizations means the immediate creation of a greatly strengthened national physical distributor in the Selznick company and a saving in operation of more than $500,000 a year in previously maintained expense, according to the announcement.

W. C. J. Doolittle, president of Selznick and representing the Utica Investment Company holdings; Motley H. Flint, vice-president of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles; W. E. Greene, president, and F. B. Warren, vice-president of American Releasing, closed this unexpected negotiation as a step in line with bankers' well-grounded opinion that there are too many separate distributing physical plants in the motion picture industry.

There will be no interruption of service and all contracts now in force will be executed by the Selznick organization in exact accordance with the terms under which they were issued by American, it is said. This applies equally to the product now in the branches and that which is scheduled for future release. As a matter of fact in several territories such as Indianapolis, New Orleans and Salt Lake City, much better and more economical services can be rendered to exhibitors because Selznick already has well established exchanges at these points which heretofore had to be handled by American from more distant cities. In addition the Albany exchange of American will probably be continued.

Schildkraut Engaged For "Master of Man"

Joseph Schildkraut, the young Viennese actor whose rise to stardom on the American stage has been so rapid, will play the leading role in Victor Seastrom's first production for Goldwyn Pictures, a film version of Sir Hall Caine's latest novel, "The Master of Man."

Schildkraut is a famous son of a famous father. Rudolph Schildkraut is known as one of the most capable character actors of Europe, and has acted in New York in various productions. The younger Schildkraut closed last week a very successful engagement in the Theatre Guild's production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" in which he played the title role—the part acted by Richard Mansfield just before his death.

Mae Busch will play the role of Bessie Collier. De Witt C. Jennings has been engaged for a prominent part. Seastrom started photography this week.

Sam Wood Prepares for New Production

Sam Wood has arrived in New York from the West Coast to begin preparations for his forthcoming production of "His Children's Children," Arthur Train's story which Monte M. Katterjohn is adapting for the screen. The picture will be started at the company's Eastern studio early in June. Charles Kent, Aged Stage and Screen Actor, Dead

CHARLES KENT, veteran actor of stage and screen, died on Monday night of this week in a Brooklyn hospital, following a prolonged illness, at the age of 70. His death marks the passing of one of the first great legitimate actors to enter pictures, and he ranked as one of the sterling actors of the screen.

Kent was born in England in 1852 and came to America in 1875. He was on the speaking stage for half a century, appearing with such prominent stars as Edwin Booth, Sol Smith Russell, Viola Allen and Amelia Bingham. In 1905, while playing King Saul in "The Shepherd King" with Dwight Lorimer, he lost his voice.

He then turned to pictures, and in 1906 joined the Vitagraph stock company—an engagement which continued nearly until his death. His first appearance was in "The Jailbird," a one-reel picture written and directed by J. Stuart Blackton. He appeared in "The Enemy," "Whom the Gods Destroy," "Soldiers of Chance," "The Gamblers," "Kennedy Square," "The Rainbow" and "The Prodigal Judge" for Vitagraph; "Body and Soul" for Metro; and "The Leopardess" for Famous Players.

Goldwyn Salesmen Win Promotions Rewards For Valuable Services Are Announced at Atlantic City Session

AT the Goldwyn Convention which opened on May 20 in Atlantic City, officials of that organization announced the promotion of several of its best salesmen to be resident managers of various of its branch exchanges and the transfer of other managers to new territory. These appointments and changes are in the nature of rewards of merit for excellent work done during the past two or three years by the individuals concerned.

J. D. Solomon, a Goldwyn salesman in the Salt Lake City territory for a number of years, has been promoted to be resident manager in that city, succeeding Charles Knickerbocker who is transferred to Minneapolis where he will be manager of that branch exchange. Mr. Knickerbocker, originally a salesman in the Chicago territory, has been given a larger office to manage because of the excellence of his work in Salt Lake City.

Seth Perkins who has been with the Goldwyn organization for a long time, recently resident manager in Los Angeles and then detailed to special work in the northwest, is now branch manager at Seattle, replacing W. E. Banford, who was promoted to district manager over the Salt Lake City, Denver and the newly created Butte exchanges, with headquarters in Denver.

Ralph Pielow has been named resident manager of the new exchange in Portland, Ore., having won the promotion by his work as a salesman in that territory.

C. F. Lynch, a salesman in the Omaha office, has been promoted to the resident management of the new Des Moines branch exchange.

A. S. Schayer, formerly branch manager in Denver and recently doing special sales work in the northwest, has been made resident manager of the new Butte office.

Charles E. Gregory, salesman in the Kansas City territory, has been appointed resident manager of the Kansas City office, replacing J. H. Hill, who will take charge of the new office in Oklahoma City.

William J. Clark, who is a salesman in the Minneapolis territory and was formerly in the Carolinas, will be placed in charge of the branch in Charlotte, N. C., when it is opened.

L. B. Remy, who has been with Goldwyn ever since its inception, has been promoted from the resident management of the Dallas office to be district manager with supervision over the Dallas and Oklahoma City territory.

Last week Goldwyn announced the acquisition of two new district managers from outside the organization—Sam Dembow, Jr., who has been placed in supervision of the San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle exchanges with headquarters in San Francisco; and George F. Dembow in charge of the Boston and New Haven territories, with headquarters in Boston.

During the month of June Goldwyn's four new branch exchanges—Butte, Des Moines, Portland, Ore., and Charlotte, N. C.—will begin operations, giving the company thirty-one exchanges. The enlargement of its own producing program, the distribution merger with Cosmopolitan Productions, which will add fifteen pictures to its next season's supply and the arrangement for the distribution of the output of Distinctive Pictures Corporation made it necessary for Goldwyn to enlarge its facilities for the physical distribution of films in order to keep abreast of its growing supply of pictures.

Picture Cements Mexican Good Will

Government Officials Sit With Producers and Offer Full Co-Operation

THE cementing of good will between the Mexican Government, the American motion picture producing industry and American-Mexican trade in general, was marked at Los Angeles last Monday when representatives of the various factors concerned met to enlist the motion picture in the promotion of mutual interests.

The meeting was brought about by Marshall Neilan and prompted by recent Government co-operation accorded him by Mexico in the production of "The Eternal Three," his next Goldwyn film. This marked the first time that an American producer was accorded such official co-operation.

The conference was opened with the presentation by Marshall Neilan, of scenes taken in Mexico, to Mexican Consul Garza Leal, representing President Obregon. These pictures will become part of the Mexican President's official library and offer scenes never before photographed for an American photoplay, including the President's palace, the pyramids, the Cathedral in Mexico City and other historic landmarks.

Presiding at the meeting was Hon. Harry Chandler, owner of the Los Angeles Times and leading American advocate of recognition of Mexico. "The motion picture, if rightly used, is more potent as a means of promoting amicable international relations than any other spoken or written influence," said Mr. Chandler.

The Mexican Consul, after accepting the Neilan film in behalf of President Obregon, read a dispatch from the Chief Executive of the Southern Republic, in which the latter offered the full co-operation of the Mexican Government to American motion picture producers contemplating pictures that have to do with Mexico and Mexican life.

A specific offer was made to Marshall Neilan involving the production of a gigantic Mexican play which was accepted by the producer with thanks. The story is said to compare with any of the big productions recently made by American film producers and is under consideration for early production by Neilan.

Among the others present who expressed the desire to co-operate were Thomas G. Patten, representing Will Hays, Dr. Jose A. Samaniego, leading Mexican citizen in Southern California and uncle of Ramon Navarro, and A. Lehr, vice-president and general manager of the Goldwyn studio.

Tentative plans for closer co-operation between Mexico and American film producers with the viewpoint of bringing the two peoples together in better understanding via proper treatment on the screen, of Mexico, were laid out for further action.

Business Above Pre-war Days, Says Ferrandini

Business twenty per cent. better than before the war is the encouraging report of the outlook in the South brought to New York by Frank Ferrandini, president of the First National Amusement Co., of Richmond, Va., and First National Franchise holder in that territory. Mr. Ferrandini is now in New York as a member of the First National Rotating Committee.

According to Mr. Ferrandini, the prosperous condition of the South at the present time was exceeded only in the bonanza days of the war when money was over plentiful. This spasmodic period passed and the period of business depression set in. And now, states Mr. Ferrandini, a healthy period of prosperity has returned which exceeded the normal level of ante-war days by fully twenty per cent. This level, believes Mr. Ferrandini, represents the legitimate growth of the public interest in motion pictures in the South.

As a proof of his faith in the wide interest in motion pictures in Virginia, the First National Franchise holder announces that a new theatre, to be known as The National, is now under construction in Richmond. The National, which will be completed in time for an early Fall opening, will exhibit First National pictures for first runs in that city. Plans call for a seating capacity of 1,600 and every effort will be made to make the new house the most modern in the South.

Doane continues as general manager, while Walker and Crizer become production managers. Each is under a long term partnership contract for active management.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE SHORT-LENGTH PRODUCTION

Short Subjects and Serials

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR THE DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM

The Special Short-Subject Dept. Makes Its Bow

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, responsive to the demands of its readers, herewith introduces a new department. This innovation is the outcome of the News's stand for the diversified program as against the too lengthy feature—a stand prompted by the insistent demand of exhibitors everywhere for shorter features and the chance to present more varied programs. Hence, Motion Picture News dedicates itself in a more special sense to the worth while short subject:

Because we believe, in the light of cold, hard figures, that over 90 per cent of admissions each year are spent for entertainment of a diversified character and consequently maintain that the welfare of the box-office is dependent upon variety entertainment;

Because we believe in the inherent value of the short subject and hold that most of the progress made in the feature is due, in the final analysis, to the tests and experimenting first done with the short-length production because of the lesser costs involved;

Because we believe that the way to a nearer perfect technique and more artistic screen product is being pointed out not so much by the feature picture as its smaller sister—the short subject;

Because, finally, the touchstone of this industry—"something different"—is being more effectively embodied in the comedy, in the short-length drama, in the news reel, in the cartoon novelty than in any other unit of our programs today.—E. F. S.

Al Christie and Production Mgr. Edwards Go Abroad

Al Christie, director of Christie Comedies, sailed from New York May 19 on the Olympic on his second annual vacation trip to Europe. He was accompanied by his production manager, H. D. Edwards.

In an interview in New York just before he sailed, Mr. Christie gave an indication of the plans for the Christie Comedies for the season 1923-1924, under the new contract just signed with the Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

"We will continue on a larger scale," said Mr. Christie, "the policy established during the past year—that of going out of the beaten path for our material. The pictures we made in Honolulu, Truckee and at Westwood carried us thousands of miles in search of backgrounds which I think are exceptional for two-reel comedies. The blackface comedy, 'Roll Along,' I believe will be hailed as an innovation and a surprise when it is shown.

"Next year's program calls for this style of production on even a more elaborate scale. When I left the studio at Los Angeles, Dorothy Devore and a large company had been on board the battleships California and Tennessee for two weeks making a picture which carries the working title 'Navy Blues'."

Vaudeville Teaches Valued Lesson Variety Show Points Way to Those Responsible for Picture Programs

By E. W. Hammons

President of Educational Film Exchanges

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS has chosen an especially opportune time to inaugurate its special Short Subjects Section, because at this period of the year the exhibitor ought to be turning his thoughts more than ever toward the pictures of one and two reels—the films that enable him always to make up a diversified program of interest to all.

Recent protests from exhibitors all over the country, as recorded in the columns of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, show that the nation's showmen are being awakened to the peril that confronts their business in the over-long feature picture that crowds off the program all the fine comedy and novelty films that would make the same appeal to film patrons that vaudeville makes to other theatre goers.

The tremendous appeal of vaudeville has never been equalled by any other form of theatrical entertainment except motion pictures. And the first great successful bid for public favor by motion pictures was made when every picture program was a sort of screen vaudeville—when every picture was a Short Subject and every program was diversified entertainment.

The lesson provided for motion picture exhibitors by the success of vaudeville is one which every showman should keep in mind especially during the warm weather. Vaudeville has been the only form of stage amusement that has been able to keep open consistently through the warm season. While opera, drama, comic opera, farce comedy, etc., close up with the approach of summer, vaudeville is able to go on because its light and varying entertainment appeals to all and sends everybody away pleased with part, if not all, of the program.

The Show—the 100 per cent Show—is the thing that will win and keep the patronage that every exhibitor wants. No better proof of this could be asked than the figures cited so recently by Mr. William A. Johnston, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in his splendid editorial on the need of shorter feature films. Out of the four hundred million dollars box-office gross paid by picture patrons in the last year, only about three per cent was paid for the dozen or so truly great specials—the few fine super-productions which were big enough to constitute an entire show. The remaining ninety-seven per cent was paid for "The Show"—programs made up of diversified entertainment, including comedy, novelty, news reel, music, etc., as well as the feature.

Not long ago Mr. James W. Dean, writing for the four hundred newspapers using the daily motion picture service of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, said:

"The short subject films point the way to the feature photoplays. The two-reel comic has always been in advance of the multiple-reel photoplay in the development of a distinctive form of expression."

However, it is not enough merely to arrange such a program. The exhibitor must tell his patrons about it. He does not expect to book the finest feature picture and pack his house without a bit of advertising. When he shows a popular feature he takes extra space in his newspaper to talk about it. When he books Short Subjects of great box-office appeal he still, in far too many cases, neglects entirely to let his patrons know about it.

If Short Subjects are to bring their fullest possible returns at the box-office, they must have a fair break in the exhibitor's advertising.

Screen Magazine Presents Problem

Editor and Exhibitor Faced by Same Task in Their Selection of Subjects

THE screen magazine has become so important a factor among the short-subject contributions to the program of the progressive motion picture theatre that we determined to learn some of the inner workings of the system that assembles these novelty subjects. For the purpose we called on Pathé Review this week and came away convinced that all the hard work in the industry was not confined to the exhibitor and the trade paper editor.

In the first place it will be interesting to the exhibitor to know that usually about eight weeks are spent in preparing the various subjects of a screen magazine number before it actually reaches his theatre for a first-run showing. The initial problem is one of selection. The screen magazine editor, when he selects the subjects or "stories" for his celluloid publication, must be careful to choose only such as will prove interesting to a motion picture audience and offer a wide diversity of appeal. His job, in a sense, resembles that of the exhibitor who must select the ingredients of a program that will please the greatest number possible among his clientele. The difference is this: the theatre-owner is shooting at his own local audience while the magazine editor must keep in mind a nation of screen fans. Some job, when you come to think of it!

To keep up-to-the-minute, the editor of the screen magazine must be in constant touch with his different departments and his divers choice of subjects. And how many of them there are! Among the selections you will find subjects that are confined to "trick" photography; sport subjects; subjects made by slow-motion camera; developments of popular science; hand-colored scenic views; photographic gems, showing the camera art at its best; camera interviews with famous men, such as artists or sculptors; camera novelty stories, in which different effects are brought into play; industrial subjects; subjects that are purely educational; demonstrations of new dances and the dances of the nations; botanical subjects; and subjects dealing with bird and animal life. These are a few items the screen magazine editor must have at his finger tips.

Now, you will ask, where do all these subjects come from?

There are many sources. Firstly, there is the cameraman on the outside who is gifted with novel ideas. He approaches the editor and whispers astonishing information concerning what he has done or what he is about to do. "Bring it in and let's see it," smiles the editor. If the subject is a good one, the editor buys it and it is incorporated in the screen magazine. Then there is the wandering cameraman—the man who travels to unexplored places and registers on celluloid what he has seen. In the same class comes the foreign correspondent—the cameraman stationed in the larger cities of the world.

Coming down to headquarters, we find a group of men similar to a news staff on a newspaper or magazine. They are the editor's staff of assistants—cameramen who bring in their ideas for "stories." Each week a conference is held and the ideas are discussed and acted on or discarded.

The editor usually must keep his issue down to the limited footage of one thousand feet. His titles must not grab too much space. Let the picture tell the story, he says, and make the titles incidental.

Next comes the problem of physical distribution which lands the screen magazine in your projection room ready for showing to your audience.

Envelope Teaser Used to Exploit Lane Comedy

Howard Liechtenstein, manager of the State theatre, Dayton, used an envelope teaser in exploitation of the recent showing of "A Friendly Husband," the Fox comedy starring Lupino Lane.

On one side of a card the size of those used for calling purposes was printed: "I am looking for a 'Friendly Husband,'" and on the other side this: "P. S. I understand Lupino Lane in 'A Friendly Husband' will be at the State theatre all week starting next Sunday. What say—you take me?"

This was encased in a small envelope on which was printed the words, "I dare you to give this to your best fellows."

Pathe Renews Contract on "Our Gang" Comedies

PATHE has renewed its contract with Hal Roach for additional "Our Gang" comedies, which will continue to be released at the rate of one every four weeks. The renewal of the contract assures Pathe of a supply of these two-reel kid and animal comedies for this season and next. Pathe officials declare the releases of this series up to date have met with widespread approval from theatres of all classes.

The composition of the "Gang" appearing in these comedies, Pathe says, will continue the same in productions made under the renewed contract. Hal Roach's 3-year contract with Mickey "Freckles" Daniels was announced two weeks ago. "Sunshine" Sammy, Little Farina, the talented picaninny, Jackie Condon, Jackie Davis, lady-like Mary Kornman, and the same animal cast can be relied on for an indefinite period, says the statement from the Pathe office.

"Our Gang" Comedy Heads Pathe's June 3rd List

A NEW "Our Gang" comedy titled "Back Stage" heads the Pathe schedule of short subject releases to be made available the week of June 3rd. The list of attractions contains eight releases in all.

In "Back Stage" the youngsters are shown operating a double-deck bus of their own making and later acting as the back-stage assistants to a vaudeville-show manager. A review of the subject is presented in the reviewing columns of the present issue.

Another comedy on the June 3d schedule of releases is titled "Under Two Jags," a screen travesty based on Ouida's well-known novel "Under Two Flags." Stan Laurel plays the leading male role in this Hal Roach one-reeler. This subject is also included in the review page this week.

The fifth episode of the Ruth Roland serial, "Haunted Valley," shows the conspiracy against the heroine and her big industrial enterprise crystalized into desperate hand-to-hand battles, with the hero left to drown in a reservoir and the heroine making a spectacular plunge to his rescue.

"Spooks," one of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables," presents Paul Terry's animated cartoon characters in a ludicrous take-off on Conan Doyle's theory concerning the spirit world.

Among the highlights of Pathe Review No. 22, also set for June 3rd, are: "Ceiling O' The World," "Pies Is Pies," and views of the Yosemite Valley.

There are also the weekly issues of the Pathe News, Nos. 46 and 47, and a "Topics of the Day" number.

Universal's Short Subject Plans

Short Releases to Bear Jewel Brand;
1- and 2-Reel Schedule Rearranged

New Bruce Subject "Mixed Trails" a June Release

What is described as a comedy-drama without subtitles, "Mixed Trails," is an offering on the Educational program for June release. "Mixed Trails" is one of the Robert C. Bruce "Wilderness Tales." It was photographed in desert country near the old basin of the Des Schutes River in Oregon. It tells, without subtitles, the tale of two refugees who combine to outwit the sheriff and his deputy. Educational declares that this subject illustrates strikingly Bruce's knack of making backgrounds a part of the scenic beauty of the picture and of injecting the spirit of drama or romance into the production by a careful choice of locations.

One of the beautiful pastels used as a background in Warren A. Newcombe's production for Educational release, titled "Sea of Dreams."

UNIVERSAL Pictures Corporation has launched a movement having for its object the strengthening of all short-length productions made under its auspices. Under the policy announced this week from the Universal home-office by President Carl Laemmle a good part of the short-subject releases by that company will be classified as of the Universal-Jewel brand, it is stated. The assignment of part of its short-length product to this classification, reserved for productions of special calibre, is indicative of the sweeping nature of Universal's plans to bring its short-length productions to the forefront.

In anticipation of these plans a complete rearrangement of the one- and two-reel production schedule has already been effected at the Universal studios, and announcement is made of the acquisition of new stars, directors, and story material for the forthcoming short-subject expansion.

Specifically, Universal's new, short-subject releases will fall into five general classes—serials, Westerns, two-reeler series, two-reel comedies, and one-reel comedies. In addition to these releases, there will be two issues each week of the International News Reel, as heretofore.

The serial schedule contemplates eight subjects. The stars will include William Duncan, Edith Johnson, Jack Moore, Eileen Sedgwick, Fred Thomson and Ann Little. The old blood-and-thunder type of serial will be taboo on the Universal lot, according to the announcement, and instead business, railroad, historical and adventure serials will be undertaken.

The Universal output of two-reel Westerns will be made by Jack Dougherty and Pete Morrison, with William Craft, Frank Grandon and Jay Marchant directing. The two-reel comedies, to be made by the Century Comedy Corporation, star such players as Buddy Messinger, Jack Earle, Billy Engle, Jack Cooper, and the Gorham Follies Beauties. The one-reel comedies will be made by Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, each with a company of his own.

In its release of two-reel series, Universal will strive to establish new precedents. The success of "The Leather Pushers" series, and of "The 2nd Leather Pushers" series, has prompted the undertaking of a "Third Leather Pushers" series, starring Reginald Denny and made by Harry Pollard, from H. C. Witwer stories, just the same as all previous "Leather Pushers" releases. The first series had its New York run in the Central theatre; the second in the Rialto; and the third has just opened in the Rivoli.

Two new two-reeler series under way at Universal City are "The Gumps," being adapted to the screen from Sidney Smith's newspaper cartoons, with Joe Murphy and Fay Tincher as "Andy" and "Min"; and "The Information Kid" series, comedy dramas of the turf, adapted from Gerald Beaumont's popular short stories. Other Jewel short reel series are contemplated.

It is the announced policy of Mr. Laemmle that Universal's short subjects shall be "of such high quality that every one of them will be suitable for showing in any first-run house."

Buddy Messinger Appears in Person at Grauman's

Buddy Messinger appeared personally during the entire week of May 14, at the Grauman Million Dollar theatre. Messinger appeared in conjunction with the Universal feature, "Trifling With Honor," in which he plays a prominent role.

A specially written monologue for this occasion was executed by Buddy.

Only three members of the "Fighting Blood" cast will be retained for the new set and they are George O'Hara, Albert Cooke, who played the role of Nate Shapiro, O'Hara's manager and Kit Guard (Knockout Kelly, his trainer).

In addition to these Louise Lorraine and Mary Beth Milford, formerly of the New York Music Box Revue, have been added to the cast of the new short subjects.

Madeleine Hurlock plays the "vamp" role.

The Pathe-Sennett contract calls for thirteen two-reelers and not less than six nor more than eight others featuring Ben Turpin.

Adam Shirk to Supervise Sam Grand Productions

Adam Hull Shirk, for nearly six years associated with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in the capacity of West Coast director of publicity, has severed his connection with that organization, and on May 21 assumed charge of the publicity and supervision of productions of the Grand studio, of which Samuel V. Grand is treasurer and general manager.

Three comedy units are now engaged on production at the Gower street studio in Hollywood. They are: Monty Banks Productions, Inc.; Sid Smith Productions, Inc.; and Joe Rock Productions, Inc. Over these Mr. Shirk will exercise supervision. Several new units in the shape of feature productions with well known screen stars will be added in the near future, it is announced.

Pathe's "Perfect Twenty-Two" Set for June 2nd

Pathe Review No. 22, described as "The Perfect Twenty-Two," is announced by Pathe for release on June 3rd. The number includes views secured during a camera expedition into the Northwest forests and presents the deer and the moose in their native haunts. In some instances close-ups were secured from the slowly moving canoe as the animals, prompted by their insatiable curiosity, held their position until timidity sent them scampering with their white tails flashing into the dense underbrush. Another highlight is the subject "Pies Is Pies," which contrasts home-baking methods with factory processes of making pies. "The Map Makers" gives an interesting camera account of the actual photographing of a section of country from an aeroplane and the conversion of the photographic record into an up-to-the-minute map of mathematical exactness. An appreciation of "The Perfect Twenty-Two" appears in the reviewing column this week.

Sennett Starts Work on New Comedy for Pathe

Adam Hull Shirk, who will supervise the short-length product at the Grand Studio, Hollywood.

Territories Selling Fast on Keystone Re-issues

Word from the Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc., headquarters in New York advises that eighty per cent of the territories of the United States and Canada have been disposed of on the New Edition Keystone Comedies. These subjects, as was formerly announced, are being distributed in a series of twelve through state-rights exchanges on a co-operative basis.

President Oscar A. Price, of the Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc., reports the New Edition Keystone Comedies are experiencing a strong demand among the first-run houses. This demand Mr. Price lays to the careful re-editing of these subjects and the fact that a new line of posters and accessories are being issued with them. In several instances theatre managements have expressed their pleasure at the reception accorded the re-issues, he states, one of them being Asher's Merrill theatre in Milwaukee, where "Dough and Dynamite" and Charles Chaplin in "Caught in a Cabaret" have been presented.

Two Century Comedies Are Awaiting Release Dates

"Miles of Smiles," in which Baby Peggy is the star, and "One Exciting Day," with Billy Engle in the featured role, both Century comedies, have reached the New York office and are awaiting release dates by Universal Pictures Corporation. Baby Peggy plays a dual role, portraying the parts of two sisters who become separated as babies and are brought together again after a lapse of years after a series of amusing incidents. "One Exciting Day" was made by Al Herman under the working title of "Dynamite."

Jazz and "Aesop's Film Fables" Good Mixers

Jazz music goes well with "Aesop's Film Fables." That's the conclusion reached after a number of tests, and consequently hereafter Pathe, the distributor of these subjects, will furnish musical effect sheets to each exhibitor booking one of these cartoons, declares a statement from the Pathe home-office. At the New York Capitol this week "Spooks" was presented with a musical jazz accompaniment, and at the Strand "The Mouse Catcher" was similarly presented.

Short-Subject Brevities

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD "Spec" O'Donnell, nicknamed "Spec" after the countless freckles which adorn his face, has been loaned to Century Comedies by Warner Brothers. He will be used to play a prominent juvenile part in Al Herman's latest Century, "Golfmania."

Helen Kesler, leading woman in many Vitagraph comedies featuring Jimmy Aubrey, will portray the feminine lead in the entire series of Logan-Baynham comedies featuring Milburn Morante, which will be distributed by the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., via state rights. This is the word sent out by Morris R. Schlank, head of Anchor. Mr. Schlank is personally supervising the production of these comedies, which will be released under the brand name of Crescent comedies.

Charlie Murray is having a bit of a vacation between the filming of the All-Star Comedies. Like ball players who when they get a day off go to see a ball game, Charlie is spending most of his spare time in seeing pictures.

George B. Seitz is at present in Arizona inspecting locations for use in his forthcoming chapter-picture version of Emerson Hough's novel, "The Way of a Man." This serial will be for Pathe release. Seitz writes back that down in the country he is at present sojourning in he finds that typical pioneer characters still cling to historical points along the "Overland Trail" of the early gold hunters. Just the setting for Seitz's forthcoming serial thriller, no doubt.

With a couple of more months to go on his present contract before it expires, Billy Bevan, comedy player for the past four years with Mack Sennett, is making preparatory arrangements for a much needed rest and vacation with his family. Word from Bevan, however, assures us that he is quitting the screen only temporarily and that he will be back in harness again after his rest tour.

In conjunction with Billy Bevan's vacation plans comes word that Bevan has turned a deaf ear to a number of offers to feature his daughter Edith in a series of child roles on the screen. Edith, who is the oldest of Bevan's two girls, bears a strikingly close resemblance to Baby Peggy, the Century child star.

Louise Fazenda has now completed and sent East to a fan magazine an installment of "Screen Impressions" in which she has characterized ten notables of filmdom. About a year ago Miss Fazenda had space monthly in this magazine with her impressions which made such a hit that she has been assigned to a second series. The comedienne plans to have more installments ready before she commences work as "Mabel" in "The Gold Diggers."

George O'Hara, star of the Witwer "Fighting Blood" series, is now supervising the cutting and titling of "Judy's Punch," twelfth and last of the first group. "When Gale Meets Hurricane" will be shortly be previewed and shipped East.

Archie Mayo Finishes Second of Follies Series

Archie Mayo, who was chosen sometime ago to direct the Gorham Follies series for Century Comedies, has completed his second one for that company. It has been edited and titled and will be known as "Round Figures."

WHAT SHOWMEN THINK OF CURRENT RELEASES

Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Glimpses of the Moon—

A mediocre picture. Business only fair. (West.)

Adam's Rib—

An entertaining picture. Business good, so picture was held over for a second week. (West.)

Rustle of Silk—

This picture did very good, although it was the beginning of the first pleasant weather to be out doors. Everyone seemed to like it and the funny part was the women liked Miss Compson better than Conway Tearle. (Middle West.)

Bella Donna—

Wonderful settings, excellent acting in this feature. Played to very good business for week. (Middle West.)

Did fair business on third and last week of run. (East.)

A first rate picture, but business was not what we expected. (West.)

The Ne'er-Do-Well—

Played to good crowds for a week's run. (Middle West.)

The Go-Getter—

This one went over well, the attendance being more than usual for the week. (Middle West.)

Went across very well. Good story well put on. (Middle West.)

The Nth Commandment—

The returns were good for a week's run with this one. (Middle West.)

Fairly good picture, appealed moderately well—pretty good business for the week. (Middle West.)

The Leopardess—

All right for a program picture. Business was fairly good in spite of the start of the plant year garden season. (Middle West.)

Drums of Hate—

Not so good. The weather which was a mixture of rain too bad to allow folks to get away from home and of sunshiny weather when they wanted to be outdoors, had something to do with it. Not expecting much more from the box office. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Within the Law—

This is a wonderful picture and was liked very much by those who saw it. Norma Talmadge is a good drawing card. (Middle West.)

Excellent picture, splendid drawing power—Fine business for two weeks. (Middle West.)

This did nice business. It is not merely a picture with Norma in it. It is one that would draw whether they liked Norma beforehand or not. However, she is a great drawing card here always. (Middle West.)

The Bright Shawl—

Good picture; drew well as stars are popular here; held for second week. (Middle West.)

Bellboy Thirteen—

Average picture that went over better than the comedy on the same program. Business good due to a triple headline bill. (West.)

Mighty Lak' a Rose—

A fair picture. Business just fair. (East.)

The Isle of Lost Ships—

Unusual production that appealed to everybody—splendid week's business. (Middle West.)

FOX

Three Jumps Ahead—

A good Mix picture with a different twist. (East.)

Pawn Ticket 210—

Bad picture, fell flat. Business bad. (East.)

Stepping Fast—

One of Mix's best. Tony usual

favorite. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

Face on the Barrom Floor—

A freak melodrama, aided by fame of title. Went over well. (East.)

F. B. O.

Can a Woman Love Twice?—

Was well liked. Business good. (East.)

A fairly entertaining picture which attracted only fair business. (East.)

The Westbound Limited—

Held up exceptionally well. A picture that must be exploited. (East.)

GOLDWYN

Souls for Sale—

Drew well during two weeks' run, owing to the appeal of "inside" revelations of Hollywood. (Middle West.)

Filled with the stuff of which box office records are made. Capacity. (East.)

Good picture, but did not do as much business with it as we expected. (West.)

A good box office attraction. Did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Brothers Under the Skin—

Pretty good picture. Can be exploited in many ways. Held up well. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROTHERS

The Little Church Around the Corner—

A sensation that met with a big crowd. (East.)

Brass—

Very good picture. Business pretty good. (West.)

METRO

The Famous Mrs. Fair—

An excellent picture that pleased our patrons. (West.)

Love in the Dark—

Bad picture. Bad business. (East.)

Success—

Where the Pavement Ends—

This picture went over very nicely with us. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Baru—

Good and unusual picture, fine business. (Middle West.)

Abysmal Brute—

Pretty fair picture. Business good for ten day run. (West.)

Fools and Riches—

Well received. Should fit into any program. Average receipts. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood—

This did only fairly well on return engagement. (West.)

PATHE

Safety Last—

A good comedy, Harold Lloyd popular here. Tremendous business. (East.)

Great—better business every day of the run—Couldn't be better. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Second Fiddle—

A nice little picture. Did well with it. (Middle West.)

Fair picture. Business pretty good. (West.)

The Man From Glengarry—

Average picture which did average business. (West.)

Down to the Sea in Ships—

Picture splendid, but business a little off. (West.)

AL LICHTMAN

The Girl Who Came Back—

Not as popular as might be expected. (East.)

Are You a Failure—

ALLIED P. & D.

Suzanna—

Good picture in every way. Patrons liked it very much. Did good all week. (Middle West.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

Modern Marriage—

The personal appearance of the stars did the business, not the picture. (East.)

STATE RIGHTS

Fighting Hearts—

Good thriller. Average business. (Middle West.)

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of recent date concerning Pearl White serial "Plunder", beg to advise that my Patrons are loud in their praise that it is the best Serial ever shown in or Theatre. The box office receipts have doubled since the advent of this Serial, and I sincerely trust you may be able to produce another Serial of this type, that will please the patrons as well as "Plunder", and you may rest assured that the excitement attached to the box office receipts will be eliminated.

Gentlemen: -

I was advised not to contract for PLUNDER by competing salesmen, who very obligingly told me that PEARL WHITE was through as a drawing card and that PLUNDER was falling down as a box office attraction.

However, you know that after screening three episodes for me, you not only convinced me that I should book PLUNDER, but sold same to me at an increased price.

To date, I have used four episodes and each one has shown an increase over the previous one. In fact, PLUNDER has doubled my receipts for me, on Serial night.

Exhibitors who want a real theatre and satisfy them, should immediately arrange for PLUNDER as this Serial with PEARL WHITE, is a big drawing card.

Thanking you for convincing wishes, I remain

Dear Sir:-

In view of the fact that this theatre does not ordinarily run serials and I took what I thought was a chance when I booked "Plunder" because I enter to a high class patronage whom I thought would show any episode affair. I feel disappointed in my business on the part of Pearl White. Besides increasing my business on the two days I run it, "Plunder" seems to be satisfying everyone. I hope she continues the good work.

Am more pleased with "PLUNDER" than any serial we have ever shown at the Plaza and we have been showing at least one serial a week for the past seven years.

Pearl White and the producers of "PLUNDER" are to be congratulated on this excellent production. They deserve the encouragement of all thinking exhibitors.

You have not asked me for this letter, but I feel that I should let you, and all the world know exactly what I think of "PLUNDER".

I never judge a picture by what I think the jump, from cashier to ushers, and then if some were next performance, I'm afraid I have got a hard task ahead of us to heat the record that "Plunder" has hung up for us. And even now as we near the final chapter my patrons are asking when we will have Pearl White again. I have run any serials but take it from me "PLUNDER" makes all previous box office records look like plunder.

Dear Mr. Heller:-

Having played practically every serial ever released by Pathe and now being of the sixth chapter of "Plunder" I feel it my duty to compliment you upon this serial.

Pathe has always lead the world in serial production and now they have gone themselves one better in producing one with such a popular star, yet giving to the screen a wonderful production with a real background, so different from that usually found in serial productions. The serial is based and shoulders above anything Pathe has yet produced and I trust is an indication that in the future all chapters of pictures are going to be produced with the same degree of excellence, which will enable the exhibitor to ask a better class patronage to attend his serials.

Sincerely feel that "Plunder" has been a great boost to my first day and I thank you and Pathe.

Gentlemen:-

It gives me real pleasure to tell you of the extraordinary success being registered in my theatre by PLUNDER in "PLUNDER".

The situation is quite complex in my district. Ordinarily I can use only a first run serial or one that is day and date with my most remote competitor. In the instance of "PLUNDER" this serial was placed first and second run with my opposition. At first it was impossible to convince me that the serial could be run by me at all, especially in view of the fact that these two runs mentioned above were my closest competitors. Finally PATHE prevailed upon me to place this serial in the Star on a third run basis. The story thereafter is simple.

I am running on other serial attraction on a first run basis and PEARL WHITE in "PLUNDER" third run after the direct competitor is outwarring at the box office my first run serial. Now could one prove more conclusively the extraordinary box office success of PEARL WHITE!

Hollywood News Printed Up as "Souls for Sale" Stunt

Winnipeg, Man.—A special exploitation feature for the showing of "Souls for Sale" at the Allen theatre was the printing of an edition of 5,000 copies of the Hollywood News, with the word "Extra" in the ears. In place of the volume number was printed "The Allen Theatre," and in place of the date was the wording "One Week Only, commencing Monday, April 23, 1923." A ribbon scare-head clear across the page read: "Terrible Circus Catastrophe" followed by a drop-head which also ran clear across the page: "Big show purchased from Barnum & Bailey destroyed by lightning and fire."

A 2,000 word story followed, telling about the purchase of the big top from Barnum & Bailey by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, and the burning of the circus which forms the thrilling climax to this photoplay of motion picture life in Hollywood. Special emphasis in this copy was laid upon thrills in the picture, the great cast, etc.

A special story carried on this one-page red extra called "Do you want to be a movie star?" and was addressed to the girls of Winnipeg with an ambition to be seen upon the screen. The lower third of the sheet was an ad for "Souls for Sale" with the theatre, date of showing, etc. This red extra was distributed all over town and attracted more attention than a circus herald.

"Deuce of Spades" Tied Up with Kitchen Cabinet

LIMA, OHIO—Manager George Ritzler, of the Sigma theatre, was able to obtain a valuable tie-up on "The Deuce of Spades" through the fact that Charles Ray plays the part of a cook in the picture.

The Hoover-Bond Co. was offering a kitchen cabinet, and, in connection with the picture it sent out a street ballyhoo truck connecting their business with "The Deuce of Spades."

A standard model of the kitchen cabinet was enclosed in the poster signs on the truck.

"Vanity Fair" Obtains Aid of Public Schools

WORCESTER, Mass.—The public schools of Worcester were induced to aid in publicizing "Vanity Fair" by Goldwynner Buddy Stuart when it was shown at the Plaza theatre.

A special showing was given for a number of teachers and superintendents of the schools, whose opinions were used in advertising the film in the newspapers and in a special herald. Many of the teachers announced the showing of the screen version of this novel.

One hundred special banners were used on the fenders of street cars, ten 24-sheets were posted, 400 window cards, 5,000 heralds were used. The publicity work with the schools was especially productive of results.

Attractive Lobby Display for "Under Two Flags"

FORT WORTH, TEXAS—Manager Harry Gould, of the Hippodrome theatre, exploited "Under Two Flags" mainly with an attractive lobby display at the theatre. The accessory twenty-four sheet, six-sheet and three-sheet mounted and characters cut-out, were placed in the center of the lobby. To one side was a tent and on the other side of this central display was a life size cut-out of Priscilla Dean.

Sand covered the floor of the lobby and a few palm trees placed about the lobby helped to create the atmosphere of a desert. The lighting effects were amber and red.

Moving Sign at Ball Park for Run of "The Christian"

Indianapolis, Ind.—A unique form of baseball park advertising was put over for "The Christian," at the Apollo theatre by Goldwynner Eddie Carrier. Indianapolis is a great baseball town and thousands of fans were attracted to the park for a double header on Sunday, the opening day of the picture. As the management of the park would not co-operate in allowing Mr. Carrier to publicize "The Christian" inside the grounds, he arranged for a forty foot banner, mounted on four sticks and carried by four men, to be pushed just above the fence in the outfield so that it could be plainly seen by every person in the park. These men then proceeded slowly around the park giving the effect of a moving sign, continually attracting the eye of every fan in the grounds.

Another idea which was used by Mr. Carrier was with a collection of old keys. He obtained 150 of these and attached a small tag to each with the printing on the tag as follows: "If found kindly return and receive reward." On the other side was printed: "Richard Dix, 421 North Illinois." This was the theatre address. These keys were dropped about the city, and of the 150 that were distributed, 130 were returned to the box-office. The reward was a pass to "The Christian."

Tabloid Comic Opera Is Staged with "Scars of Jealousy"

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The most ambitious presentation of Managing Director Edward L. Hyman at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre was made by him recently in connection with the showing of "Scars of Jealousy."

Hyman engaged six widely known vocalists, six dancing girls and an ensemble and staged a forty-minute version of the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera, "The Mikado," using twelve selections and retaining the sequence of the action of the play.

This light opera was used not as a prologue or connecting in any way with the motion picture, but to lend contrast to the program as the film was dramatic.

As a setting Hyman used a Japanese Garden back drop, a set pagoda with wisteria decorations and a wisteria leg drop. The vocalists, Geisha Girls and ensemble were in appropriate and rich costumes. The characters from the opera were Mikado, Katisha, Yum-Yum, Pitti-Sing, Nanki-Poo, Pooh-Bah and Pish-Tush. There were six Geisha Girls. Hyman worked out a new color harmony of lights for the set, which eliminated any lighting from the booth.

The selections from "The Mikado" used were "Our Great Mikado," trio; "A Wand'ring Minstrel," tenor; "Young Man De-

Flappers, Old and New, in "Adam's Rib" Ballyhoo

WORCESTER, Mass.—A ballyhoo which contrasted the old and the new flapper was used for "Adam's Rib" by Manager M. A. Silver of the Strand theatre and John McConville, Paramount exploiter.

It showed a pre-historic flapper in her "drawing room" which was a forest, and a modern flapper all dressed up, holding court in her own drawing room.

Since the picture has just the theme running through it, it was most appropriate and every effective.

Navy and Business Tie-ups on "The Go-Getter" Showing

San Francisco, Cal.—A navy tie-up and a special showing for business executives were included in the campaign for "The Go-Getter" waged by Manager Partington, of the Granada theatre, and Wayland H. Taylor, Paramount exploiter.

Block window cards were gotten out and stickers for automobile wind shields appropriately worded, and given to the motorists on the highway.

A newspaper contest was held, giving prizes of $50 and 50 tickets to the Granada to the reader sending in the best idea of description of "What is a Go-Getter?" This was given much good newspaper publicity.

They used 100 Navy one-sheet A-Boards downtown. Special block one-sheets illustrating a Go-Getter hiking to the Navy Recruiting Station with copy reading "Be a Go-Getter."

Invitations to 500 business executives were sent out to attend a special preview two days before opening, selling the idea to these business houses to suggest the "Go-Getter" to all employees, as an aid in their own sales developments.

Screen Tests Are Given Girls on "Souls for Sale"

Seattle, Wash.—Making of photographic tests of aspiring screen stars among the girls of Seattle was part of the exploitation arranged by Frank Steffy, manager of the Coliseum theatre, and L. W. Barclay, Goldwynner, when "Souls For Sale" played at the local showhouse.

In conjunction with the Seattle Times the Coliseum announced that simultaneously with the opening of the picture daily tests would be made by the management of the theatre and Mr. Barclay of thirty young women who would be selected from all those that wished to apply. From all the girls interviewed, the thirty were selected who were believed to be best adapted to screen work, and for five days pictures were taken in various localities of the city, including the lobby of the theatre, the downtown streets and the city parks.

The women who showed up well in the tests will have their tests sent to the Goldwyn studio in California, according to the terms of the contest. There they were to be viewed by the casting, scenario, production and directional departments. Reports giving their findings were to be forwarded to the girls.

A print of the pictures taken during the making of the tests was scheduled to be shown at the Coliseum the week following the "Souls for Sale" engagement. Aided by the co-operation of the newspapers, this exploitation stunt brought excellent results.

All Around Campaign Put Over for "Safety Last" Showing

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager Howard Price Kingsmore, of the Howard theatre, put over a strenuous campaign for "Safety Last," which can only be briefly outlined, but the highlights in which were as follows:

Fifteen thousand of the special circular novelty card heralds were distributed by an airplane at the opening day game of the Southern League baseball season. This was on Thursday before the opening at the Howard on Monday. "Harold Lloyd in Safety Last" was printed on the bottom of the plane. The plane circled so low that the printing could be read by all.

Eight hundred dashboard cards, featuring by the exchange, were given to the boys and girls attending the "Boys' and Girls'" matinee Saturday morning.

Five hundred dashboard cards, featuring the red disc, the same as featured in all the "Safety Last" advertising, were printed and used on the street cars.

Manager Bob Green, Royal theatre, Little Rock, Ark., believes in using his "No Parking" signs as shown on "Can a Woman Love Twice?"

Casting Questionnaire Is "Souls for Sale" Stunt

ALLENTOWN, PA.—Two pictures, "Souls for Sale" and "Broken Chains," were exploited simultaneously on the front of the Strand theatre, the bookings coming consecutively.

Hand-painted panels above the doorways, in different color combinations, advertised the coming of "Souls for Sale." Cut-outs from the six-sheet posters of both attractions were mounted in front of the theatre, with three special "Broken Chains" posters.

Goldwynner Bill Robson and Dr. Stuckert, manager of the Strand, effected a "Souls for Sale" tie-up with the "Chronicle and News" by which that newspaper printed daily a questionnaire addressed to the young women of Allentown who had ambitions to act upon the screen. The questionnaire and the stories about it netted many columns of publicity, to be followed later in the showing by pictures of several of the more prominent young women of the city who had filled out the questionnaire and whose replies had been sent on to the Goldwyn casting department in Culver City, Cal.

Lloyd climbing the side of a building were placed on six of the largest buildings in the downtown section. These were placed a few days before opening without any sign to tell what it was all about.

A dummy figure was fixed up and hung over the edge of the Winecoff roof. A pole was extended straight out over the street and this dummy was hung on the end of the pole. This figure was put out two days before any banner telling what it was.

A twelve-foot kite was flown directly in front of the theatre on which was a large banner.

Laughter insurance was taken out and a policy exhibited in the lobby. Special stories ran in the papers about this.

One hundred and fifty newsboys from the Y. M. C. A. formed in line and marched through the central part of town to see the picture, carrying banners.

Cut-outs and art work were featured in the lobby. Behind a beaver board affair built to look like a vietrola on the front of which was a 3-sheet cut-out of Lloyd laughing, was a vietrola with an Okeh laughing record on it. A repeating attachment kept it going steadily.

Citywide Campaign Is Put Over on "Hunting Big Game"

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Hunting Big Game in Africa" at the Forrest theatre was backed by a heavy exploitation campaign, engineered by Marc Lachmann, home office exploiteer for Universal.

The stunts, street ballyhoos, bill posting that was different, newspaper advertising and publicity and window displays were the ideas carried out in a most successful campaign.

For the billposting block paper was used. A novel stunt put over by Lachmann was the wearing of animal heads by the bill posters. This stunt not only created talk but acted as a combined stunt, street ballyhoo and posting, for wherever the men went crowds followed.

An automobile with men wearing animal heads and a banner on the car announcing that they were going to see "Hunting Big Game in Africa" was the stunt employed for a street ballyhoo.

The Boy Scouts of Philadelphia met Mr. Snow and turned out with their two-hundred and fifty piece band, parading to the Forrest theatre. This was a rather novel stunt inasmuch as the Scouts have never appeared in such a solid body for any other affair in Philadelphia.

A very large elephant cut-out placed over the marquee was another big attention getter. The ticket agent sold tickets and gave laughs and surprises, being made up with an animal head.

Strikingly unusual lobby display, based on the museum scene, used by Manager Wallace of the Capitol theatre, Oklahoma City, for "Adam's Rib"

Melodramatic Prologue Staged for "Hearts Aflame"

Baltimore, Md.—A highly melodramatic prologue with a running engine and a forest fire effect was presented at the Century theatre in connection with "Hearts Aflame," arranged and directed by Thomas D. Soriero, general manager of the Combined Whitehurst Interests, and put on under his direction by Forrest H. Cummings.

The act was presented on a full stage. A back drop and wings, representing a forest scene, were used. To the left was a front cut-out drop representing a small dispatcher's office, and just back of this, with the body and cab showing, was an old wood-burning engine; a direct reproduction of the engine used in the picture.

The whole act was played in semi-darkness.

Four characters were discovered at rise of curtain, engineer, fireman, dispatcher and their friend. The friend sang "Seven or Eleven," in an amber spot, and as he sang

Miniature Ships Displayed to Exploit "Fury"

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Manager A. B. Morrison featured an attractive lobby display during the run of "Fury" at the Strand theatre. In the center of the lobby a fully rigged miniature ship was constructed with shadow box setting and lighthouse effects. The entire week previous to opening, this display was used in the foyer, and moved to the lobby during run of picture.

A similar display on a miniature ship was secured in the windows of a prominent hardware store of Memphis, with cards announcing the picture.

Street ballyhoo of Ford truck equipped with a fully rigged ship was used all week during run, being driven all about town.

the engineer's daughter entered from the right, first entrance, and pantomimed the information to the engineer that a fire is to be seen down the track.

As soon as the friend finished the song, he was told the information and set off to investigate, exiting to the right.

Then a dialogue ensued between the engineer, the fireman and the dispatcher as to the location of the fire, what was burning and finally, as the flames began to grow stronger, a ticker in the dispatcher's box office ticked out the message that a town with three thousand souls is endangered.

The dialogue continued to explain that the engine must be taken through the blazing forest to get the people out of the burning district. They reached a decision to go to the rescue and the girl, the engineer and the fireman board the engine as the curtain drops for a few seconds.

As the curtain rose again, forest fire lighting effects were playing over the back drop, the wheels of the engine were running, the bell was clanging, the siren was screeching and the orchestra was playing thrilling music. Steam was coming out of the pistons and the whistle, the steam being made in boiler off stage and piped to the engine.

After a few seconds of this thrilling spectacle, the curtain drops as the engineer shouts, "There are thousands of Hearts Aflame," and the picture immediately fades in.

Minister Gives Sermonette on "Mighty Lak' a Rose" Theme

Sandusky, Ohio.—When George Schade of the Sandusky playhouse bearing his name played "Mighty Lak' a Rose," he hit upon an idea that proved excellent exploitation and built up future good will as well.

The idea is nothing more or less than to get the clergy behind pictures and benefit both by such advertising possibilities and the value of the church's moral support.

The Rev. Hy Moore, of Grace Episcopal Church, has been featuring a series of strong sermonettes. Mr. Schade's plan, which has been put into execution, was to have Rev. Moore deliver one of these sermonettes on "Mighty Lak' a Rose" based upon a private pre-view of the picture.

So interested was E. Mandelbaum, First National franchise holder for the Cleveland territory, in this scheme that he personally provided every facility for the private showing in Cleveland and for the making of the trailer showing Rev. Moore delivering his sermonette on the picture.

"Kingdom Within" is Given Strong Cooperation

Santa Barbara, Cal.—An excellent tie-up was made with the newspapers on the title of "The Kingdom Within" by Manager Churchill of the California theatre.

He took the angle that every city or community has its own Kingdom Within, and, using this as a basis, he interested the tradespeople in a double truck ad that appeared in the Santa Barbara Daily News. It turned out to be a regular "buy at home week" or "patronize home industries." The tradespeople of the town responded to this idea, with the result that quarter and half page ads appeared carrying the name Kingdom Within.

At the top center of the page appeared a story on the development of the town under the heading "Busy City of Santa Barbara Has Its Own 'Kingdom Within,' Making the District Prosperous." Right alongside there also appears an article regarding the production, which was staged and made in Santa Barbara.

Department stores, opticians, creameries, candy stores, haberdashers, bakeries and restaurants all joined in taking big space, with each carrying the line "The Kingdom Within."

"Mr. Billings Spends Dime" Exploited with Dimes

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Norman G. Johnston of the Logan Auditorium put over an exploitation scheme on "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime" that cost practically nothing.

A week in advance of the run he stocked up each day with $150 worth of brand new dimes. He got them from the Federal Reserve Bank.

Every patron needing change received at least a dollar's worth in dimes. Every dollar that had to be broken was changed in dimes. Before the patron had a chance to wonder or expostulate, the cashier shoved along with the new silver pieces a neat hand-bill reading:

Save Your Dimes for "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime."

Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiter, co-operated on the stunt.

Want Ad Campaign Exploits "The Ninety and Nine"

MONTREAL, CANADA—A strong tie-up on "The Ninety and Nine" has been made here, the management of the Imperial theatre having induced the showing of "The Ninety and Nine" with "catch ads."

A sample of the teasers reads:

Moving? The Ninety and Nine. There are a hundred and one things which must be obtained in order to make the new quarters comfortable. If you buy a couple of Want Ads in the Star now you will find that at the end of the week there are only ninety-nine.

Search for Negri's Brother "Bella Donna" Stunt

ROCKFORD, Ill.—A simple but effective publicity stunt was put over here recently on "Bella Donna."

Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiter, wired Manager Charles Lamb of the Palm theatre, that Pola Negri was looking for her brother Ian Chalupez, who left Poland in 1909.

The last she heard of him he was working as a translator in a Chicago export house, and it is understood that he later came to Rockford in a similar capacity.

It was said that Chalupez was 34 years old and greatly resembled his beautiful sister. The telegram went on to say that Pola would appear in "Bella Donna" at the Palm theatre next week. Mr. Lamb took this telegram to the newspaper and had no trouble getting on the front page.

Teaser Billboard Campaign for Run of "Within the Law"

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Within the Law" was put over at the Des Moines theatre in a billboard campaign that excited nominal, healthy curiosity through the absence of a theatre name and without even the name of a star that would give an inkling.

For the week before the picture's run every available big billboard was reserved by the theatre.

The first painting done on these boards consisted of the words: "A good Citizen is the Man or Woman who stays Within the Law."

Later this was followed up by: "Violators beware! Some one pays the penalty every day."

The sign stared every passerby in the face. It was impossible to escape it. From across the river it looked like a lighted caption, equaling in attention-catching, the enormous Firestone sign above it.

When "Within the Law" was announced, the way had already been paved to bring people right to the theatre. The connection was too obvious to miss.

Window Tie-ups Made Basis of "Souls for Sale" Campaign

New Haven, Conn.—Window display tie-ups were the main reliance of the "Souls for Sale" campaign put across by Goldwynner Charles Cohen for the run at the Globe theatre.

The biggest single tie-up was with the Hudson Cloak & Suit Co. This concern was having a big sale at the time and Jack Feinstein, one of the owners, allowed Mr. Cohen to place an oil painting showing Eleanor Boardman jumping off the rear car of a train in its biggest window. Large cards, calling attention to this sale of gowns and wraps such as are worn by the stars in "Souls for Sale" at the Globe theatre, were placed on each side of the painting. Stills from the production were placed on the floor in front of the painting. A large banner was stretched clear across the top of the window by the management of the store advertising its big sale.

A trolley car was rented and decorated with "Souls for Sale" banners. On the rear platform was a man dressed as a devil; he was

Stage Marriage Boosts Run of "The Go-Getter"

CENTRALIA, Ill.—Manager E. H. Brient of the Illinois theatre and William Harwell proved themselves "go-getters" in a stunt they put over for "The Go-Getter."

The newspaper lent its co-operation and outlined the plot of the picture, dwelling on the "go-getting" abilities of the hero in the picture. At the end of the article, the editor challenged any couple to come to the theatre and be married on the stage, promising to set them up in housekeeping through various tieups with the different merchants of the town.

It worked, and the couple had their pictures taken with their backs to the camera a day before the ceremony, which made everybody wonder who they were, and brought the crowds to the theatre. The merchants were generosity personified, and even the Justice of the Peace performed the ceremony gratis.

Marriage Contract Odd Herald on "Glimpses of the Moon"

Allentown, Pa.—Manager Jim Newkirk, of the Colonial theatre, and Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiteer, took advantage of a novel situation in "The Glimpses of the Moon" to get out an unusual herald.

A neat, inexpensive herald modeled after a marriage contract was drawn up announcing that Susan Branch and Nick Lansing consent to a trial marriage for a year and agree to part if it is unsatisfactory. There was a little footnote explaining that it could be better understood by seeing "The Glimpses of the Moon" at the Colonial theatre.

These were distributed from house to house and also inserted in every copy of the newspapers on the public stands.

equipped with a motion picture camera and was apparently taking shots of the crowds. To call attention to the car, a borrowed wind machine was placed in it with a boy to turn the crank and keep it howling. The car was run for five hours a day. At lunch and closing time it was sent out to the Winchester and other factories; at other times through the business section of the city.

The city authorities refused a permit for temporary marquee so Mr. Cohen had the front of the theatre painted a gaudy orange and red. A 20-foot banner was swung across the entrance; a smaller banner, 6 feet long and 18 inches wide, was placed over the inner entrance doors. Over the box office was placed a cut-out of the devil with a pointed index finger looking over a placard reading: "Is your soul for sale?" Flanking this display, on each side of the box office, was the cut-out of a hand turning the crank of a motion picture camera which was pointed at a cut-out of the girl in the window card. One-and three-sheet posters and auction cards in frames were posted all over lobby.

"Tess of the Storm Country" Aided by Book Department

Cleveland, Ohio.—When "Tess of the Storm Country" was booked by the Miles theatre, an unusual situation presented itself, in that it marked a change of policy from vaudeville to pictures.

This meant that the public had to be educated not only to the merit of the picture, but that an entirely new patronage had to be attracted. An intensive campaign was put on in order to direct the picture-goers to the Miles theatre. This campaign concentrated in a ten day period before the opening. The first outstanding stunt before the opening date, April 29th, was the inauguration of a "movie book week" at the establishment of the May Co., rated as probably the most popular department store of Cleveland. In the book department of this house popular editions of largely

Four Faced Chaplin Placed in "Pilgrim" Lobby

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—A four faced Chaplin looked down at prospective patrons of the Strand theatre during the run of "The Pilgrim."

A large wood bound box, with papier mache covering on the sides and bottom (with the top open) was hung under the marquee. Charlie's face was painted on each of the four sides. His ministerial garb hung loosely around his neck and his sardonic smile gave some indication of the comedy that was awaiting patrons inside.

The same idea can be amplified by the use of electric lights inside the box to produce an effective shadow box display.

circulated novels all of which have been put into screen form—which included besides "Tess of the Storm Country," such subjects as "Orphans of the Storm" and "The Three Musketeers" among United Artists releases—were placed on special sale with large stocks of the books in a specially decorated section of the store and with a big window display. Trailers from various book-photoplays were run morning and afternoon with a small projection machine.

"Tess of the Storm Country" was featured with a local dramatic student, Miss Catherine McGrath, garbed as the heroine. She acted as a sort of hostess for the book exhibit and distributed rotogravure literature strongly publicizing "Tess of the Storm Country." This exhibit ran the full week before the picture opened at the Miles, and received not only several days of advertising prominence in May Co. display copy, but also a good deal of newspaper publicity besides.

Kissing Contest Put Across in Campaign on "Mad Love"

Springfield, Mo.—A unique "Kissing Contest" was one of the features of the exploitation campaign on "Mad Love" at Landers' Orpheum theatre put over by Kenton Franklin, exploitation director for the Barbour Enterprises.

The "Kissing Contest" was put across with the Matthews-McConnell Drug Co. In the window of the store was a card stating that Pola Negri claimed the distinction of giving the most perfect kisses. A card showing the impression of her lips was displayed. The "contest" idea was that local girls should imprint impressions of their lips on similar cards; the girls whose lip impressions were nearest like those of Pola Negri were given tickets to the picture. The theatre newspaper advertising called attention to the contest.

A large carton of candy kisses was placed on the cigar case of the city's leading cafe, with a card which read: "Steal a kiss from Pola Negri and see her in 'Mad Love' on the same program with Charlie Chaplin at the Landers Orpheum." A Chaplin comedy was run with the Negri film.

Street Ballyhoo Exploits Run of "Trifling Women"

Baltimore, Md.—The management of the New theatre, aided by Leon Victor, of the Metro exploitation forces, put over a far-reaching publicity and advertising campaign for "Trifling Women" at that house.

Traffic on Lexington avenue, a main thoroughfare of the city, was held up when there appeared in an automobile a veiled woman dressed as Zareba, the vampire in the photoplay. In the palm of her hand she held a crystal ball. With her was a young man who represented Ivan, the character played by Ramon Novarro in the film. The throngs which surrounded the automobile for a glimpse of the mysterious pair congested traffic, and the two caused a great deal of comment when they visited leading department stores, hotels and the Masonic circus.

Baltimore was billed like a circus. Thirty-five 24-sheets, a hundred 6-sheets, over one hundred and fifty 3-sheets, four hundred 1-sheets were used, as well as five hundred half-sheet cards, twenty thousand heralds, and a special 1-sheet reading, "Beware of Trifling Women." Small cards, announcing the extension of the engagement were handed out by the young man in the automobile stunt.

Ramon Novarro came in for a good share of publicity. The newspapers, in their many stories about the picture, played up the similarity between Novarro and Valentino. Two thousand photographs of Novarro were distributed gratis to each woman attending one day's performances.

Harold Lloyd Goggles Win "Safety Last" Space

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Every small boy in Memphis thought he was a second Harold Lloyd during the showing at Loew's Palace of "Safety Last" as the result of a newspaper tie-up arranged by G. E. Brown, director of publicity for the Consolidated Enterprise, Inc., and Harold Horne, manager of the Palace.

Brown offered the newspaper as many of the Harold Lloyd paper goggles as it could use. In exchange he received front page publicity until the demand got so heavy that a halt had to be called.

The boys wore the goggles, looked, acted and felt like Harold Lloyd and sold the Star.

Month's Advance Campaign Behind "Robin Hood"

Houston, Texas.—Manager E. E. Collins of the Capitol theatre began announcing the coming of Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" one month ahead of the play date, with slides on theatre's screen and with advance articles and cuts in the newspapers. Two weeks before the picture opened the regular newspaper campaign was begun, and consisted of cuts of Douglas Fairbanks and small announcement ads carried at the bottom of the current attraction announcement.

The most comprehensive newspaper and billboard campaign that has ever been held in Houston was used to advertise this picture both in advance of play date and during the run of the engagement. The town was completely "submerged" with Douglas Fairbanks' name.

A special arrangement was made by City Manager Chas. McFarland with the Houston Chronicle, which published a four-page rotogravure section devoted exclusively to cuts of Douglas Fairbanks and scenes from the picture. This special section was given a circulation of 65,000 and cost the theatre a very nominal amount.

The lobby of the Capitol was turned into a veritable forest made out of beaver board cut and painted to represent trees and vines. On each side of the lobby were hand-painted displays showing scenes from the picture. Across the front of the lobby was a large banner announcing the title of the picture and the name of the star.

Chamber of Commerce Aids "Bella Donna" Ad Stunt

Schenectady, N. Y.—The co-operative double-truck with a contest angle is not necessarily new, but it was put over on "Bella Donna" in unusually thorough fashion by Manager Edwin Weinberg, of the State theatre, and Cliff Lewis, Paramount exploiteer.

Schenectady is full of merchants who stick to dignity so the two men had to pull something extraordinary to get the double-truck they wanted. They had in mind the slogan contest where a page of co-operative ads appeared with the firms' names all jumbled up and the readers asked to identify the merchants from their trade catch-lines.

Mr. Weinberg and Lewis first went to the president of the local Chamber of Commerce and told him of the plan, which was new to the town.

They also gave him a talk on the bigness of the picture and necessity of merchant co-operation to put on such an attraction successfully, thereby establishing the city as an amusement center.

He gave them his unqualified approval and sold the newspaper so the advertising manager got behind the proposition a one hundred per cent. There were 34 eligible merchants and ten of the best were landed.

The newspaper played up the stunt with publicity stories and Lewis saw to it that the merchants themselves were the jury to judge the solutions. Their names were mentioned in the stories and the extra advertising pleased them.

Sets of Cards Win Support of Kids on "Oliver Twist"

Long Beach, Cal.—Manager Frank L. Browne of the Liberty theatre, put over a strong campaign for "Oliver Twist," with two distinct angles.

The first was, that with all the potato and old clothes matinees of the past year, he is the first theatre manager in the country, according to available information, to hold his Second Annual Potato Matinee.

That's something new in itself. Browne's second claim to fame was more ingenious. He circulated the schools by means of sets of cards. The complete set consisted of 11 cards, each one of which had, as its outstanding printing, one capital letter of the eleven letters in "Oliver Twist."

There were 300 sets printed, distributed among six different schools and handed out, one card at a time, by one of Mr. Browne's men as the children filed out for recess. For a few seconds the man's life was dull as he handed out, to uncomprehending children, a card, the only significant token of which indicated another study of the alphabet.

But as soon as they got down to reading the fine type and the fact that a complete set was good for a pass to the Liberty, Mr. Browne's man had a busy day of it. The youngsters actually mobbed him until all the cards had been given out. Manager Browne reports that 241 complete sets were turned in at the theatre to claim the pass.

Bank Ties Up with Theatre on Stunt for "Gimme"

MADISON, WIS.—A tie-up of mutual value was made by the First National Bank—Central Wisconsin Trust Company and the Parkway theatre on a stunt to exploit "Gimme."

The theatre manager advertised, on the final day of the showing, that to the first 1,000 persons to see "Gimme" on that day he would give a coin good for fifty cents on a new savings account at the First National Bank—Central Wisconsin Trust Company.

The ad was headed "$500 free!" and it attracted great attention to the photoplay on its last day. The bank started hundreds of new accounts as a result.

Poster Cut-out Is Used as Basis of Lobby Display

FOND DU LAC, WIS.—The 24-sheet poster, in the form of a cut-out, was used as the basis of the lobby display on "The Christian," at the Orpheum theatre. A huge frame was mounted in the lobby and the cut-out from the 24-sheet placed on this frame. A flasher was obtained and used for lighting the cut-out. This made an unusually effective lobby display and caused a great deal of talk.

Manager William Ainsworth, of the Orpheum, co-operated with Goldwynner Nealand in every way. He increased his newspaper display advertising and induced the two biggest book stores in Fond du Lac, Huber Bros. and the Fond du Lac Book Store, opposite the Orpheum theatre, to give big window displays. These displays were composite ones for "The Christian" and "Souls for Sale," which are booked for early June screening at the Orpheum.

Jewelry Display on "Trail of the Lonesome Pine"

GREENVILLE, S. C.—Manager H. B. Clarke, of the Casino theatre, put a special exploitation stunt behind "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which was most successful.

A special window display was secured three days in advance from a prominent jeweler. A number of the "lucky stones" obtained from the exchange were displayed in the window along with photographs and cards carrying a few catch lines.

These created quite a bit of excitement, the jeweler selling several of the lucky stones. He expressed himself as very much pleased with the co-operative display.

Railroads Lending Support to "The Westbound Limited"

New York, N. Y.—National tie-ups which exhibitors will be able to utilize locally in exploiting "Westbound Limited" have been made by the publicity department of Film Booking Offices with some of the big railroad companies. The exploitation is to be handled by the railroads.

The Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio railroads will distribute special time-tables to those attending the Shrine convention next month at Washington, D. C., on the back of which special attention is called to the railroad picture, while in addition to this the Pennsylvania has printed up one million and a quarter postcards picturing their flyer, over which are the words, "See 'Westbound Limited'." They have also had printed twenty thousand news pictorials, on which the name of the railroad feature is prominently mentioned.

The postcards will be distributed by their agents all along their trans-continental trains for one entire trip.

Several roads in the west have given free billboard space at their stations.

The attitude of the railway officials is that this picture is the first photoplay that has ever put the roads up to the public in the right light.

Firemen Stage Novel Prologue for "The Third Alarm"

Fort William, Ont.—One of the most complete fire department tie-ups that has been reported on "The Third Alarm" was executed by Clarence Trembloy, district manager of the Famous Canadian corporation, for the run at the Orpheum theatre, and is described by him as follows:

"The regular top price at Orpheum is 40 cents. Firemen sold tickets for "The Third Alarm" at 50 cents general admission to all parts of the house with exception of box or mezzanine floor. They received 10 cents per ticket on general admission tickets, making 20 per cent on all tickets they sold. The house received their regular price of 40 cents top and also gained on balcony and gallery prices, which are usually 35 cents and 30 cents. House also gained on matinees, as firemen's tickets were for one price matinee and evening.

"A special children's matinee Saturday afternoon at 15 cents. The regular price being 10 cents, the firemen received the extra 5 cents. This matinee was a great success.

"Fire department made a run to theatre each evening and Saturday afternoon, which attracted a large number of people each time.

"Daddy" Put Over Through Special Child Showing

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Manager H. C. Farley, of the Empire theatre obtained unusual publicity for "Daddy" through a special matinee which was given for the children of the Masonic Home. This was worked through the co-operation of the Montgomery Advertiser, and was known as the "Advertiser's party." As a result of the tie-up with the paper, several front page write-ups were given, inviting the children of the home. On each occasion the news story was boxed, giving it more prominence.

A number of special cards with stills inserted were also placed in various store windows. Cards were displayed in elevators of principal office buildings.

"Two large electric bells were installed in front of theatre with switch in box office, which were used at five-minute intervals, ringing three alarms at each interval.

"Large gong on top of theatre alternating with others, and sprinkler system alarm gong used at side of theatre, which faces a main street.

"A stage set representing a fire station with beds upstairs in view of audience. Fire alarm box on one side and station indicator with gong on other.

"Preceding each presentation of "The Third Alarm," afternoon and evening, a well-known young lady elocutionist in firemen's costume, recited a poem entitled "The Third Alarm," especially written by Mr. J. R. Lumby, Editor-in-Chief of the Daily Times-Journal. At the conclusion of recitation, which ends with the words "At the call of the Third Alarm," Chief Cameron of the local fire department pulled the box. Firemen who were lying undressed in beds in set station, gave a demonstration of firemen turning out, dressing, sliding down brass pole and off stage. At one performance the firemen made the remarkable time of four and a half seconds in dressing and sliding down pole.

The indicator gong repeated the call six times, which carried it into box ringing scene in opening of picture.

Firemen in uniform were on duty throughout the house acting as ushers, etc.

Live Ballyhoo Exploits Run of "Safety Last" at Theatre

New York, N. Y.—When "Safety Last" played at Pactor's theatre on Broadway, Manager William Quade, ably seconded by his assistant, Bert F. Hardy, put over an exploitation campaign that gave the street crowd a foretaste of thrills to come on the screen inside.

Treatment of the marquee with large Lloyd cut-outs was supplemented by a live ballyhoo figure pretending to do Lloyd-esque "human fly" stunts. On the sidewalk in front were stanchions supporting circular flaming red cards bearing the comedian's face with the warnings: "Laughter first—Safety last."

The lobby was gay with Lloyd red balloons and attractive posters. One side, reaching nearly to the ceiling, was occupied by a huge "Safety Last" perspective cut-out cleverly reflecting the spirit of the picture. And the ushers wore Lloyd goggles.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Plumb Crazy"

(Educational—Two Reels)

HERE is a rattling fine comedy with plenty of funny incidents and amusing situations. Bobby Vernon is presented in the role of a Swedish immigrant who by stress of circumstances is burdened with the additional role of a plumber—a trade he knows nothing about. However, as his marriage to his employer's pretty daughter depends on the successful demonstration of his ability to handle water pipes, gas meters, soldering irons, blow-torches, etc., the young Swedish immigrant plunges ardently into the work of repairing a leaky water pipe in the basement of a swell residence where a family re-union is in progress much to the disgust of Mr. Husband who has no use for his wife's relatives. When Bobby gets the water and gas pipes mixed and connects the chimney pipe with the ventilation system complications ensue that are sure to get howls of delight from any audience. The family gathering is broken up, and "hubby" pays Bobby handsomely for his assistance in getting rid of the objectionable relatives. The boss plumber impressed by Bobby's display of wealth sets the stage for an immediate marriage between his daughter and the apprentice. Olie Margerine, whom Bobby has been impersonating all the time, arrives in time to stop the marriage and declare Bobby an impostor. The resultant scrimmage involves the whole wedding party, including the principals and the minister. Vernon handles his role in thoroughly amusing fashion, and the support is adequate. Duane Thompson appears opposite Vernon. A first-class comedy which should go well anywhere.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Pop Tuttle's Russian Rumor"

(Gerson-F. B. O.—Two Reels)

THE unfailing desire of human beings to get "something for nothing" is the basis of "Pop Tuttle's Russian Rumor." We see Pop's hotel business sadly languishing—so much so that the arrival of a guest is cause for great excitement. A Russian count has died in the hotel the previous week, so Pop starts a rumor that the count left an immense amount of money hidden. Immediately, the people of the town abandon their regular occupations and take rooms at the hotel. One man brings a pick and tears up the floor. Two women tear the bed apart until rats appear.

Meanwhile, Tillie, (she of the avoirdupois), her faith in man shaken by a traveling man, picks up a bottle marked "Poison," intending to end it all. It so happens that this is Pop's bottle of hooch, so marked as a matter of protection, and instead of being poisoned Tillie becomes intoxicated. In staggering about the lobby, Tillie seizes a supporting column, the ceiling falls, and down comes traveling man, bed and all. The mattress bursts open, and behold! we see the treasure left by the count. As Pop gathers in the armful of paper money, he has dreams of sudden wealth, only to have them shattered when the traveling man points out that they are roubles.

These are some excellent gags here and there in this offering, and the subtitles hold a number of laughs, as usual.—L. C. Moer.

"Back Stage"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS number of the "Our Gang" series presents the "Gang" in two distinct episodes. In the first part, they are shown as the operators and passengers of a sight-seeing bus—not one of the regulation type, you understand, but fashioned out of a framework of boards, set atop a rickety "flivver" and propelled by a donkey which is harnessed in some mysterious manner to the interior of the vehicle. The contraption would get a laugh anywhere by itself; but put a bunch of clever kids, bent on fun, aboard such a contrivance and the opportunities for provoking laughter multiply immediately. The workings of the bus are revealed in detail, and the ingenious methods resorted to by the youngsters to operate the vehicle will delight any audience. In the second part, the youngsters are engaged as back-stage assistants by the manager of a vaudeville show who is impressed by their ingenuity. The "gang" get the instructions mixed at the crucial moments of the show and the effects produced are ludicrous in the extreme. At one point, Little Farina, the colored baby player, walks off with the strong man's 1,000 pound weights while the curtain is still up. The show both front and back-stage ends in a riot when the mischievous spirit of the kids is given full sway. A thoroughly amusing comedy from start to finish.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Their Love Grew Cold"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS Earl Hurd comedy with Hurd's animated cartoon character, "Bobby Bumps," in the leading role is an entertaining little piece having to do with studio life. The Kiddo Film Company runs up against a snag when the cast member playing "Cupid" quits. The resourceful director calls in "Bobby Bumps" to enact the part of "Cupid," and when "Bobby" starts shooting his love arrows indiscriminately around the studio the spirit of romance extends beyond the limits of the set even to the mechanical dolls parked nearby. The mixing of the cartoon character with the human actors especially in the duel scene against the forest background is excellently done. As all the human actors are children additional appeal is given the subject.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Under Two Jags"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is a very enjoyable travesty on Ouida's well-known novel "Under Two Flags." Stan Laurel appears in the hero's role with Katherine Grant as "Cheroot" the "daughter of the regiment." The original story is followed broadly with the desert background and French army cantonment atmosphere retained. The mock characterizations of the original roles are very amusing, and the comic touches and burlesque twists introduced in the unfolding of the well-known story add to the laugh-provoking qualities of the subject. The close showing the preparations for the hero's execution is particularly funny.—E. F. SUPPLE.

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS number offers a pleasing variety of subjects among the most interesting of which are a camera study of cloud formation under the title "Ceiling O' the World" and a comparison of the pie-baking methods employed in the home and the big bakery under the caption "Pies Is Pies." "Ceiling O' the World" offers some of the most striking views of sky and clouds that we have seen, and the artistic appeal of the subject is heightened by the beautiful country settings that accompany the sky shots. There is a touch of humor in "Pies Is Pies" as one notes the careful painstaking methods employed by "Mother" in preparing her pastry as contrasted with the routine factory processes used in the big bakery. There are also interesting shots of deer in the Northwestern woods and streams, and the number closes with some unusual pretty views of waterfalls and rapids of the Yosemite Valley in Pathecolor.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"The Mummy"

(Fox—Two Reels)

THIS is a thoroughly amusing comedy from start to finish. Clever gags, laughable situations, and fast action abound throughout. The incident at the opening centers about a "one lung" auto of the 1906 vintage. How it completely demoralizes traffic and eventually brings its proud owner into the acquaintance of a beautiful heiress is entertainingly told. The funniest gags, however, are introduced in a dream episode which follows the "one lung" collision with a telegraph pole and the resultant knock-out of the owner. The heiress' father is a collector of antiques and rare statuary. One of his prize possessions is an Egyptian mummy. When the hero overhears a plot to rob the mummy he sets about to defeat the burglars by swathing himself in mummy cloth and taking the mummy's place in the coffin. The complications that follow are bound to get a laugh out of the hardest-boiled audience. When the hero hops out of a window into a calcimine trough in the street and then returns so completely whitewashed that he can escape attention by assuming poses alongside of the various marble figures, to the repeated embarrassment of the burglars, we predict your audience will laugh themselves hoarse. The titles for the most part are adequate in sustaining the humor of the action.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Spooks"

(Pathe—Short Reel)

THIS number of Paul Terry's "Aesop's Film Fables" is a ludicrous interpretation of the spiritualistic theory in animated cartoon form. Henry Cat interests Farmer Al Falfa in the occult science and eventually sends him into the spirit realm where he participates in a vaudeville performance staged by the ghosts. The cartoonist's trick of depicting the nebulous character of the spirits by omitting the faces and hands and simply sketching in the wearing apparel of the ghosts is particularly amusing. This number is up to the standard of Mr. Terry's entertaining cartoons.—E. F. SUPPLE.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"Boston Blackie"

Fox—4522 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANOTHER of Jack Boyle's "Boston Blackie" stories has reached the screen in this adaptation of "The Water Cross." While it doesn't furnish any surprise or novelty in theme or characterization, and follows a familiar groove, it nevertheless, is fairly well constructed so that the action and a creditable amount of suspense are dominant. Therefore it should satisfy with those patrons who follow the screen nightly and who don't demand much in the way of entertainment except a desire to be taken into a different environment for an hour.

Boyle's stories are cut pretty much on the regulation pattern. The background is very much the same here so the interest lies upon Blackie's attempt to outwit the warden in applying the "water cure." The plot plunges right into its melodrama at the start. There is no planting of Blackie with explanations made of how he happened to be in prison. He is there—and that's all there is to it. And a scene presents him winning his freedom and vowing vengeance against the brutal warden for his cruelties.

The sponsors haven't been entirely logical in drawing the character. He is next introduced presiding as editor of a paper—with an editorial campaign offered toward prison reform. Inasmuch as he has the "goods" on the warden it is entirely inexplicable just why he should attempt to railroad himself back to prison to get further evidence. One novel twist is discernible. It shows Blackie framing himself with the district attorney to rob the latter's home. But the unexpected happens when the prosecutor is found murdered. So the redeemed crook goes back to the open. And the climax releases some suspense as he takes the "water cure" and escapes.

Hokum is employed here for it is illogical that the attendants would fail to notice the convict on the floor who is getting ready to dynamite the prison. The ending is exceedingly trite since it offers the time-honored arrival of the governor with a pardon. Yes, indeed, the real murderer confesses before he dies.

Several points need an explanation. We would like to know how Blackie's wife is able to maintain two or three homes.

The Story—Treats of young convict who plans to effect prison reform when he is released. Is particularly vengeful toward warden for the "water cure." Plots with prosecutor to be sent back to prison and is convicted upon circumstantial evidence. Makes a getaway with cell-mate. The latter is fatally wounded and confesses to the murder before he dies, exonerating the other.

Classification—Crook melodrama based upon one of Jack Boyle's "Boston Blackie" stories.

Production Highlights—The first rate suspense when Blackie escapes from prison. The water cure scene.

Exploitation Angles—Author has built up a real interest for his stories. Feature his name and tell that this one furnishes plenty of action and suspense. Bring out the "water cure" treatment for a teaser campaign. Use catchlines.

Drawing Power—Suitable for program houses.

"Youthful Cheaters"

Film Guild-Hodkinson—5700 Feet

THERE is nothing of consequence in this effort—which takes up much valuable footage in showing the gay and idle life of smart society on Long Island. The idea behind it is not worthy of being given so much play. Really it belongs in the circle of polite two-reel comedies—and extending it through to feature length shows it up as frail and conventional, frothy and artificial—and only fit to be offered on double feature day. Glenn Hunter tries bravely to appear like a regular actor, but the spineless incident through which he is guided is not of the stuff of which stars are made.

"Youthful Cheaters" is far—oh far inferior to "The Cradle Buster." There is nothing spontaneous in the high jinks which take up most of the feature, nor is there any sparkle of incident or gags. The author has attempted to show that jazz and romance cannot mix, but putting his characters on a country estate and permitting them to frolic around like a group of co-eds and collegiates on a campus is not making much of his slight idea. A youth comes home from the Orient. A girl visits the yacht and the quarantine sign prevents her from leaving. So the romance is introduced. They fall in love and the boy is invited to her Long Island home. And from this scene down through the finish all one sees is a display of young flappers and flippers indulging in petting parties.

For the purposes of injecting drama into the piece, the author introduces a gay bouncer who would win the girl for her money. Let us say that he is foiled in the end—and the youngsters sail back to the Orient on father's yacht. There is nothing revealed in the line of action or incident to hold this number together. It sags and drags and is an uninspired, artificial picture. The only highlights are some attractive exteriors. It's like dramatizing a ball at Sherry's or the Plaza.

The Cast

Ted MacDonald.....Glenn Hunter
Lois Brooke.....Martha Mansfield
Mrs. H. Clifton Brooke.....Marie Burke

By Townsend Martin. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Produced by Film Guild, Inc.

The Story—Society bud falls in love with son of ship owner. He visits the girl at her home where the insidious influence of jazz and gay parties soon spoil him. The girl is fascinated with young bouncer who would marry her for her money.

Classification—Light society romance

Production Highlights—The appropriate backgrounds and atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—This all depends whether Glenn Hunter is popular in your house.

Drawing Power—Should be run with strong bill of short subjects.

"Burning Words"

Universal—4944 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONE of the oldest formulas in captivity is exposed to the searching lens of the camera here. It is based upon the theme of self-sacrifice as this noble virtue concerns a man convicting himself of his brother's crime because of his mother's "burning words"—"Look after Ross, remember he is my baby." Upon this slight foundation rests this plot which never releases a single moment of suspense. The Northwest Mounted are with us again and in the uniform of the self sacrificing brother is Roy Stewart who does not grace the screen so often these days.

The romantic element is neglected. Indeed the action has been built upon the climax. What takes place previously is not of any consequence. There is a church scene at the start which plants the characters of the two brothers—and the good one remembering the minister's sermon founded upon "Greater love hath no man, etc."

There is no surprise and no action. The weakling joins the Mounted and is sent to get his man, but is frightened because of the bandit's fame as a killer. His brother substitutes himself and brings him in after a short scuffle—and the weak youth gets the credit. When the boy gets into an argument with a honky-tonk proprietor the latter is murdered. Which paves the way for the self-sacrifice of the stronger brother as he gladly assumes the other's responsibility. However, a dance-hall girl presents evidence which convicts the weakling.

The finish is rather surprising because a subtle establishes that Time heals all wounds—thus indicating that the young villain went to his death. We had looked for some character to save the boy by confessing to the crime. The hero's self-sacrifice may appeal to one's sympathy or sentiment, but it smacks of false heroics. There is no hard riding, nor straight shooting. In fact very little western incident is employed. A flash of the dance-hall, the capture of the killer, and the sacrifice scene carrying on all of the melodrama.

The Cast

David Darby.....Roy Stewart
Mary Malcolm.....Laura La Plante
Ross Darby.....Harold Goodwin
Mother Darby.....Edith Yorke
Father Darby.....Alfred Fisher
John Malcolm.....William Welsh
Bad Pierre.....Noble Johnson
Nan Bishop.....Eve Southern
"Slip" Martin.....Harry Carter
Sgt. Chase.....George McDaniels

By Harrison Warren Jacobs. Directed by Stuart Paton. Photographed by William Thornley.

The Story—Treats of a Northwest Mounted Policeman who offers to sacrifice his life for his brother, also a member of the force. The latter, much weaker in character, had engaged in a saloon brawl, and murdered a man. But the brother steps forward and incriminates himself. A dance-hall girl exposes the real criminal.

Classification—Northwest Mounted melodrama featuring self-sacrifice.

Production Highlights—The scene of self-sacrifice when Mounted Policeman incriminates himself. The first rate atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Might use the biblical phrase—"Greater love hath no man, etc.", for a teaser campaign. Feature it as melodrama of Canadian Northwest. Usual exploitation should be followed.

Drawing Power—Suitable for program houses featuring daily change of bill.

"A Man of Action"

First National—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Frank Shelton)

"A Man of Action," is a combination of mystery, drama, and comedy. While the story compels the observer gifted with a bit o' gray matter to stretch the imagination as it gets under way, we presume most folks won't complain of this. In fact they'll probably overlook it in the rush of action once the plot really starts to unwind.

Mr. MacLean has been given an excellent supporting cast. Marguerite de la Motte furnishes the beauty. She is not called upon for much acting. Raymond Hatton is also as funny as he was in "The Hottentot" as he pursues his quest for a "noiseless explosive." Wade Botler is a 100 per cent. "hard boiled egg" in the role of Spike McNab. William Courtright has a novel role as the "Deacon," who has a mania for secret passageways, traps and "escapes." He cuts holes all over the hero's home so that he can make a quick getaway. Katherine Lewis is convincing in the role of "Frisk-o" Rose and the remainder of the cast does well.

James W. Horne has directed the production in his usual admirable manner, while photographically the feature leaves nothing to be desired. "A Man of Action," is a big improvement over "Bell Boy 13."

The underworld scenes are exceptionally well staged. All of the interiors are quite elaborate. The story is a little out of the beaten path. The hero assumes the role of "The Chicago Kid" and becomes involved in a plot to rob his own home and his own fortune in diamonds. Your patrons will get a lot of laughs out of the picture. What more could you ask?

The Cast

Bruce MacAllister.....Douglas MacLean
Helen Sumner.....Marguerite de la Motte
Harry Hopwood.....Raymond Hatton
Spike McNab.....Wade Botler
Dr. Sumner.....Arthur Nilleet
Andy.....Kingsley Benedict
Eugene Preston.....Arthur Stewart Hull
The "Deacon".....William Courtright
"Frisk-o" Rose.....Katherine Lewis
By Bradley King. Directed by James W. Horne.
Photographed by Max Dupont.

The Story—Bruce MacAllister's girl chides him with being a pampered youth. He realizes the truth of the girl's statements and after meeting up with a real tough guy, decides to become a "man of action." The administrator of his estate is planning to steal a half million in diamonds. He suggests that Bruce go east for a meeting. Bruce has "the tough guy" take his place. Visiting the Barbary Coast he becomes involved in the plans for the robbery of his own diamonds. He is mistaken for a master crook and is given the job of "lifting" the gems. The arrival of the "gang" at MacAllister's home is the signal for much action as the diamonds fly thither and thither. Eventually the gang is caught, the crooks unmasked and Bruce and the girl united.

Classification—A comedy mystery filled with action and much merriment.

Production Highlights—Douglas MacLean's interpretation of the role of MacAllister. The fine supporting cast. The scenes attending the attempts to hide the diamonds. The "dive" scenes and the accidental "laying out" of a burly brute by the hero. The witty and well worded subtitles. The attempts of the "Deacon" to make "escapes" or secret doors all over the MacAllister mansion.

Exploitation Angles—The title. Tie up with jewelry store on the diamond theme of the plot. Some excellent stills are available at the exchange of the diamonds used. The Barbary Coast scenes suggest an underworld prologue with an Apache dance. Emphasize the fact that this is a silk-hat mystery comedy drama staged in elaborate backgrounds with interesting demi-monde shots thrown in for contrast. Tell them about the big cast.

Drawing Power—A safe bet for any house. It's filled with fun and that is what present day movie fans want.

"The Rip Tide"

Arrow—6270 Feet

ANYONE searching for novelty of characterization and situation will certainly appreciate this photoplay which records the adventures of an Indian prince who becomes a minister, but who subsequently reverts to type by renouncing his vows to carry out vengeance, only to be prevented by the love of a girl. The idea in itself isn't original, but the treatment of it in emphasizing the characterization and enriching the atmosphere with graphic detail, makes it appear genuinely novel.

Indeed, "The Rip Tide" is an absorbing picture which fascinates the spectator from inception to conclusion. The introductory scenes may be rather slow, but there is a reason for the director taking his time since he has a premise to establish. Instead of relying upon the subtitles to convey the symbolical touch, the director presents it by showing an uncanny character typifying the primitive age, who arises from what resembles a pool of muddy water and poses on an adjacent rock after the manner of Rodin's Thinker.

The story offers cumulative suspense through its mystery element—an element emphasized through the introduction of the character known as Count Voronsky. This figure, incidentally, is not superfluous. It isn't added to build up a mysterious line of action. The suspense continues in the conflict of the Indian minister with his father as the latter commands him to preserve the family honor by meting out vengeance because the girl he loves has married another, although such vengeance is contrary to his clerical vows. There is surprise for the spectator in many of the scenes. Certainly the novel exit of the villain will be appreciated by the patron. A flame from a candle reaches a revolver and discharges it directly in the path of the evil character.

The story is rather unusual and builds to a stirring climax. The director has provided a cast that meets the requirements of the plot and characterization. J. Frank Glendon, Stuart Holmes, Rosemary Theby and Russell Simpson furnish first rate performances. The technical side of the picture has been treated as admirably as the story.

The Cast

The First Man.....Dick Sutherland
The Philosopher.....George Rigas
Prince Tagor.....J. Frank Glendon
Count Boris Voronsky.....Stuart Holmes
The Maharajah.....Russell Simpson
Countess Dagmar.....Rosemary Theby
Princess Indora.....Diana Alden
By J. Grubb Alexander. Directed by Jack Pratt. Photographed by Harry Keepers. Produced by A. B. Maescher. Released by Arrow.

The Story—Treats of an Indian prince who becomes a minister. When the girl he loves marries another he is commanded by his father to mete out vengeance—which is contrary to his clerical vows. His love for the girl prevents him from avenging the family honor.

Classification—Mystery romance based upon renunciation and vengeance.

Production Highlights—The fine treatment of a unique story. The manner in which the climax is reached. The novel situations. The first rate detail. The good suspense. The capable performances provided by J. Frank Glendon, Russell Simpson, Diana Alden, Rosemary Theby and Stuart Holmes. The appropriate atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Feature the mystery element here. Bring out that it is an unusual story which fascinates with its novelty. Make use of the central theme. Talk about the Indian minister forced to break his vows to protect the family honor. Feature the cast. A vocalist singing East Indian songs would furnish an effective prologue.

Drawing Power—Picture needs advertising. It should prove a good number for any second class first run house.

Film Booking Offices—6500 Feet

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

HOLLYWOOD is being well exploited these days, via the screens of America. The well-known Motion Picture Industry is being turned inside out, for the benefit of the curious fan, and if moviegoers have any illusions left about what goes on behind the scenes it is not the fault of the producers.

There is no reason, we suppose, why Hollywood and the studios should not be just as legitimate a setting for a story as a logging camp or Fifth Avenue or the Montmartre, but we cannot feel that all of these X-ray pictures of the studios are going to be a good thing in the long run. The fans will flock to see them, of course, but won't those same fans be seeing the cameramen grinding, and the director shouting and the lights sputtering during another picture where they are not shown?

However, that is merely personal conjecture, and is more or less beside the point. Since we are to have this sort of picture (and there seems no escaping that fact) probably no one is better qualified than Louis Lewyn and Jack Cohn, who have been making Screen Snapshots for some time. The results are apparent in "Mary of the Movies." Close-ups of the stars at work and at play are interspersed throughout the entire picture. Bryant Washburn drives Mary from the station to a hotel lobby, in the lobby she sees J. Warren Kerrigan, outside she meets Louise Fazenda, David Butler, Alec Francis, at the studio she meets George O'Hara, Johnnie Walker, and Barbara La Marr with her newly-adopted baby, Creighton Hale takes her to another studio where she sees Tourneur at work, with Rosemary Theby and Estelle Taylor on the sidelines, Mary works as extra in a Rex Ingram picture, Douglas MacLean gets her past the doorman of the Ince studios, in the casting office she meets Craig Biddle, Jr., Herbert Rawlinson gives her some advice, Anita Stewart drives past in her car, Miss Dupont helps her out of a temporary embarrassment, in the little cafe she waits on Carmel Myers, ZaSu Pitts, Bessie Love, and Marjorie Daw.

These shots are not, as might be supposed, mere "matched in" flashes, but are bona fide scenes in which Mary herself appears. As a picture of Hollywood life, fans are likely to find this quite satisfactory. Of the story itself, we need say little. It is frankly hokum, for the most part, but shows some of the hardships of the extra, which may do some good. In the end, of course, Mary is on the road to stardom.

The Cast

The Girl.....Marion Mack
Her Mother.....Florence Lee
Her Sister.....Mary Kane
Her Brother.....Jack Perrin
The Postman.....Harry Cornelli
The Squire.....John Geough
His Son.....Raymond Cannon
The Old Man.....Ray Hanford
As Extra Girl.....Rosemary Cooper
The Boy.....Creighton Hale
A Salesman.....Francis MacDonald
Story by Louis Lewyn. Directed by John MacDermott.

The Story—Mary, to earn money needed by family, goes to Hollywood to become a movie star. Arriving there, she finds it less easy than she had anticipated. She meets many celebrities, however. An extra girl gives her a room. She meets the hero. After experience with masher, she leaves, and they are unable to locate her. Obtaining little work, she becomes a waitress. Finally, through her close resemblance to a star, who is taken ill, she is given the lead in a big picture.

Production Highlights—The scenes about the studios and the close-ups of stars.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the one big angle of the stars and the "inside" studio stuff.

Drawing Power—Will probably draw well anywhere on the strength of the star and studio angle.

"The Girl of the Golden West"

Carewe-First National—6800 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

PRODUCERS of westerns have not used the title of this play before but its plot and characters have been used in several guises because David Belasco's original carried all the necessary essentials which constituted crisp and stirring melodrama. The effective dialogue has been silenced, but Edwin Carewe has followed its scenes and incidents faithfully right down to the smallest detail. As a result "The Girl of the Golden West" is about as good a western as has marked the screen in some time.

The limitations of the stage cannot cope with the camera in visualizing a picturesque atmosphere. In this respect the screen version outshines the play. Its interpretation is colorful enough—and more than colorful when we mention Russell Simpson as Jack Rance, the gambling sheriff. Frank Keenan, who originated the role, could not have improved upon it. But Warren Kerrigan plays, with too much polish, the part of the road agent. His characterization is not magnetic enough and Sylvia Breamer as the girl is mostly ornamental. Her role does not impress us as being so important as it was when Blanche Bates played it upon the stage.

The picture being familiar after going through several guises, and being played in its original shape up and down the country, cannot be expected to furnish much surprise or suspense. Naturally we sit back and watch Carewe's direction—wondering if he will adhere to the original—wondering if he will introduce scenes and incident not written into the play—and watching the screen interpretation. The director has not missed a single trick which was incorporated in the spoken version. If it is not as tense to us as we had been led to expect it is because the story has grown unduly familiar.

The outstanding episode—as it was in the play—is the card game between the girl and the sheriff as they gamble for the road agent. Here is where the sting of the dialogue is sorely missed. On the screen it is not nearly as compelling. The blood from the road agent's wound drips on the hand and handkerchief of the sheriff. Thus he captures his enemy. You all know the conflict of the heart—the unrequited love of the officer who plays square with the girl.

The atmosphere is very good—and the subtitles are effective. We would have used the last lines of the play for a finish instead of the caption which is introduced. In the play the girl extending her arms toward the open vistas remarked: "Oh my West, oh my California!" Here the familiar ending closes the picture. A word for Rosemary Theby. In the role of the Spanish dancer she contributes a vital portrayal—one thoroughly in character.

A discarded sweetheart exposes him and he is captured by sheriff as he is hidden in girl's home. She gambles for his life and love and wins.

Classification—Adaptation of Belasco's stage success. Western melodrama of '49.

Production Highlights—The fine performance by Russell Simpson. The excellent detail.

Drawing Power—Should draw well.

"Cordelia the Magnificent"

Garson-Metro—6800 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE story from which this picture is adapted is now running serially in a popular fiction magazine, and while we haven't read it, there is no doubt but that it furnishes far better entertainment in print than translated into terms of cold celluloid. When the story reaches its conclusion we are unable to discern any interesting features which called for such a production.

The situations which comprise its plot do not call for the complications which develop from it. Probably the director thought it wise to give value to the suspense—hence his effort in over-emphasizing the note of intrigue and the varied complications. But it is like trying to make a mountain out of a mole hill. The mystery touch is unwarranted in view of what is revealed in the denouement. The characters are not sharply defined so that one constantly wonders just what their relations are to each other. We were on the alert expecting some surprising climax which contained real dramatic fibre, but the story sort of dies on its feet at the finish—with nothing substantial established from its over-burdened detail.

Leroy Scott has probably dovetailed his scenes in a clever manner and embroidered them with the proper choice of words. But as a screen drama it merely exposes a colorless society background which features a high spirited woman being made the tool of a crooked lawyer who involves her in a blackmailing scheme to extort money from a society dowager with a "past." The sequences are hap-hazardly arranged and the poor continuity is one factor toward making it a picture which carries little or no sustained interest. Wordy sub-titles—and many of them—are used to explain matters—which is fatal in bringing forth any suggestion of heightened action.

The story is too long, and trimming off extraneous detail would improve it considerably. The amount of footage employed is altogether unnecessary in view of its central idea. In all it is a vague attempt to make capital out of the "skeleton in the closet" pattern. Exits and entrances are made much of in introducing or dismissing the characters. And they appear like so many animated puppets. None of the players have an opportunity to appear colorful. Most of them are ill at ease in their society roles.

By Leroy Scott. Scenario by Frank Beresford. Directed by George Archambaud. Photographed by Charles Richardson. Produced by Harry Garson. Released by Metro.

The Story—Society woman becomes the tool of a shyster lawyer whose business is blackmail. She is involved in a complicated scheme to extract money from another society woman who has had a "past." The heroine realizes her mistakes and goes to work to clear herself. The man she loves aids her in punishing the guilty lawyer.

Classification—Domestic society drama.

Production Highlights—The appropriate atmosphere. The climax when crooked lawyer is exposed.

Exploitation Angles—An average picture this—so you should concentrate upon exploiting the popularity of the star. Also feature author whose story is now running serially in Hearst's Magazine.

Drawing power—Negative except in neighborhood houses with feminine clientele. Will draw star's following. Best suited for those audiences with a select following.

"Black Shadows"

Pathe—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A HIGHLY interesting journey to the picturesque islands of the South Seas—a journey fraught with danger, suspense and thrills a journey which carries us far from the outposts of civilization under the guidance of Edward G. Salisbury, the explorer. We leave Los Angeles on a fair sized yacht and cruise to these islands, and the farther we travel the nearer we approach the mystic isles of the Pacific. An animated chart is employed to acquaint us with the route, the name of each island and the country which possesses it. Frederick O'Brien is performing a real service in describing the natives and habits of these islanders. And Edward G. Salisbury has visualized them in a manner which compels the strictest attention.

There is romance and adventure in every mile of the journey. The Marquesa Islands—the first stop, incidentally, bring us into contact with the natives who have absorbed some of the manners and customs of civilization. There are compelling shots of the natives indulging in their five important interests, swimming, dancing, eating, resting and sleeping. The marine views are marvelously colorful. The exquisite tinting brings out the gorgeous foliage—the soft lapping of waters, the rushing of streams which terminate in waterfalls. The natives are but simple children—living primitively, but in a spirit of true romance. We linger briefly, drinking in the vistas of nature and agreeing with Stevenson that here is true paradise.

The cruising party steams into the Samoan Islands. Here the camera catches some more rich atmosphere and background. The map shows us that we are sailing nearer and nearer to the Heart of Darkness where civilization is unknown. Finally we reach the Fiji Islands and are introduced to the cannibals who are still carrying on the customs of their forefathers through the centuries. But it isn't until we reach the Solomon Islands and are given a close-up of cannibalistic practices that we catch the thrill of battle between two opposing tribes. Weird native dances which last for days—a true reflection of barbarism—punctuate the stirring scenes. The head hunters glide forth in their war canoes and return with their ghastly trophies.

In all "Black Shadows" is a genuine cross-section of primitive peoples. We are brought face to face with another world. We are introduced to natives who are primitive, superstitious and barbaric—a race of mentally undeveloped people—a race of human animals. The camera catches the marks of volcanic eruptions—mountains rising to the sky—rare specimens of flowers, strange customs and habits. It is all highly picturesque and possesses a real educational value. There isn't one dull moment once civilization is left behind.

The Cast

Natives of Marquesa Islands, Tahiti, Pago Pago, Samoa and other South Sea Islands.

No author. Scenes are actual happenings. Directed by Edward G. Salisbury.

The Story—Records the expedition from San Francisco through the South Sea Islands.

Classification—Travelogue of adventure through South Sea Islands.

Production Highlights—The interesting scenes. The occasionally beautiful backgrounds. The detail, the exceptional atmosphere. The thrill of the battle between the opposing tribes. The dances and head-dresses.

Exploitation Angles—Offers many opportunities to tie up with schools. The title is alluring and suggests the land of darkness. Play it up as rich entertainment—of life as it is lived in the South Seas—the Islands made famous by Stevenson. Make a play of its novelty. Feature the battle. And play up the dances, head-dresses, etc. Put on an atmospheric prologue.

Drawing Power—Entertaining enough to run in any class of house.

Washington Film Row and Theatre Brevities

AMONG the score of film folk in town the past week we might mention Mr. and Mrs. Valentino and promoter Jack Curley; Producer Willet or Willart of Los Angeles, who called on Jack Connelly; Will Hays, aide Pettijohn, Floyd Willis; Architect William Lee Woollett, Los Angeles, theatre consultant and designer to the Grauman theatres, West Coast-Sol Lesser interests and other exhibitors there. Other specialists in theatre art and architecture were present as delegates to the Art and Architecture conventions of the Allied Architectural organizations fifty-sixth convention here. Their theatrical scenic ability was demonstrated in a colorful pageant staged on the Reflecting Basin of the Lincoln Memorial in honor and tribute to Henry Bacon, architect of the Memorial. Their medal was presented to the recipient by President Harding. Chief Justice Taft also addressed them. Colored robes and futuristic banners designated the delegates, who towed the barge up the Basin, meeting the President at the Steps of the Memorial.

Fred Stevens, president of the Associated-First National Social Club, announced a "Surprise Kiddies" party at the Payette residence for May 27. Starting at the supper hour it "will stop any hour." "To enter, Kids Apparel must be worn," says the notice and wives, sweethearts and husbands invited. They held a social club meeting Friday. They made an excursion to Harper's Ferry by motor Sunday, May 20. W., west of 14th street, and later for some years was in charge of the Regent theatre on 18th street, above Florida avenue.

The West shows in Anacostia (east Washington) D. C. were cited along with the Virginia Pageant of Progress at the National Capital Horse Show grounds. Mrs. A. K. Wine, president, heads the committee to carry their protest to the District commissioners. However, the Shrine Committee, in restricting the vendors of specialties to certain side streets, went on record as opposed to the licensing of any traveling carnivals during the week, or at any other time. The two mentioned entertainments are part of the official Shrine convention activities and are supported by local movie men who are Shriners.

Buffalo Briefs and Western New York Notes

HERE he is. Sydney Samson, manager of the Bond Photoplay Corporation Buffalo exchange and newly elected president of the Film Board of Trade of the Queen City of the Lakes.

Mr. Samson came to Buffalo a few years ago as manager of the Grand & Warner office. This exchange was recently merged with the Nu-Art Pictures Corporation under the new name of Bond Photoplays Corporation. The Film Board of Trade has opened offices in Room 40, Root Building. Mr. Samson has just appointed Allan S. Moritz of Paramount and Harry Bernstein of Universal to sit with himself on the arbitration board. He has been advised that J. H. Michael of the Regent, George Hanny of the South Park Amusement Company and Joseph A. Schuchert of the Colonial and Columbia will be the exhibitors on the board.

J. Meyer Schine, controlling a chain of houses in western and central New York, accompanied by his business associate Sol Schaefer, visited Buffalo's Film Row last week-end, much to the joy of E. J. Hayes, First National manager, who signed some 76 pictures, including both first and second run for Mr. Schine's four houses in Oswego, N. Y. This fat contract includes all releases.

Daylight saving has been voted down in Jamestown, N. Y. The vote was 2105 to 535. Practically the only support for daylight time came from the promoters of the Jamestown Industrial Baseball league, who wanted to stage twilight games between the various shop teams in the city.

Scores of persons comprising the audience in the Laurel theatre, Binghamton, N. Y. got a real thrill one evening last week when a large scaffolding on the side of the building fell to the ground. Many thought the side of the theatre was collapsing and made for the doors in a small panic. Manager George W. King said that the scaffolding had been used for construction purposes on an adjoining building for three weeks and has been left standing. Howard Woodbury, an employe of the Laurel, was standing beneath the scaffolding when it fell, but he jumped to safety. Mr. King's auto was damaged by falling lumber.

Lacey F. Johnson of the Paramount bureau of real estate has been in Buffalo looking over the local exchange with a view to enlarging and remodeling it. Allan S. Moritz has arrived home safe and sound from the New York convention. He drove home in his Hup coupe and fears had been expressed for his safety.

Clayton P. Sheehan, district manager, recently returned from a trip to South America, and Charles N. Johnston, branch manager, will go from Buffalo to the annual Fox convention in New York city the week starting June 11.

In an address before the 27th annual convention of the Western New York Federation of Women's Clubs in Olean on May 17, Mayor Glenn W. Woodin of Dunkirk, who is also district attorney of Chautauqua county, absolved the screen of responsibility for increase in crime. Well, well, well!

Henry W. Kahn, manager of the Metro office, will motor to New York for the national convention of his company, commencing June 6. At least, he'll start.

The Howell Trucking Company has instituted a daily service to East Rochester, Fairport, Elmira, Newark, Lyons, Phelps, Clifton Springs, Shortsville and Manchester from the Buffalo exchanges. This means that a day is saved in shipment of films, delivery being made to all points made the same day. Mr. Howell will shortly expand this service up the lake road to Jamestown and eventually will start a route out of Avon to Mount Morris, Dansville and all towns along that line to Elmira.

The Genesee Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of Batavia, N. Y. has been incorporated with a capital of $5,000. Nikitas Dipson and J. R. Osborne are the principal incorporators.

Fire caused damage estimated at $1,000 to the Palace theatre in Watertown, N. Y. last week.

"Skin Deep" was shown at the Family theatre in Mount Morris, N. Y., Monday, May 21, for the benefit of the local post of the American Legion.

"The Einstein Theory of Relativity" and "Wonders of the Sea," shown in the Majestic theatre under the auspices of Canisius College, have been held for a second week's showing in Buffalo. In exploiting the Relativity picture Father Ahern put two camels on the street. The "ships of the desert" were brought to Buffalo for the forthcoming Passion Play. As they were parading through the streets, they carried this sign: "One of these camels is larger than the other, but Einstein says its only Relativity. Why? See the answer at the Majestic theatre all this week." The stunt created much comment.

Everybody has had a special week in his honor but Howard F. Brink, manager of the Buffalo Educational exchange, and now it comes. The members of the sales and office force have determined that the Colonel has not been overlooked. So it's to be "Daddy Brink Week." Sometime in June and some business will be piled up in honor of the man who blazed the film trail in this neck of the woods. Howard was on the job when they "shot" scenes of Noah's Ark after the flood for the Stone Age Weekly. Has prospered much since his advent into the celluloid world and now goes about in his own sedan-knight motored, if you please.

Howard F. Brink

September 1. No wonder Mr. Hayes is feeling good and even as we write is dangling his golf bag. Eddie will soon be out in the park tearing up the greens.

Henry Lally of the Regent, Dunkirk, has returned from California, where he had such a good time that he has actually forgotten how to book pictures. We have this from one of the leading exchange managers.

Frank Minor, shipping director general of the Pathe exchange, is seeking a free piece of glass for the side of his Henry-built coupe. He hasn't explained how the window was smashed, but he has been seen riding a "friend," on several occasions.

George Faulkner, formerly manager of the Buffalo Wid Gunning exchange, has succeeded "Gus" Garrick as manager of the local Hodgkinson exchange. Mr. Faulkner comes from the Washington Hodgkinson office. A new booking, bookkeeping and film receiving system is being installed in the office.

Miss Hermina Wiese, who has been bookkeeper for Pathe exchange for several years, has resigned for very good reasons. Yep, going to become a June bride.

It is reported in reliable circles that James and Charles Martina, operating the Family, Attica and the Bijou, Mount Morris, has purchased the famous Opera House in Gowanda from Judge John W. Schatt and will take possession October 1 next.

Hats off to Otto Seigel, Goldwyn salesman. Second highest man in these United States in recently closed sales contest. Grabs 500 iron men and a trip to the Atlantic City convention. It is reported that Otto is going to take his bathing suit to the shore with him. Must have been made by an awning company.

Well, boys, he back home again! Yep. Harry Bernstein, manager of the Universal office, having sympathy for Bill Allen, has arranged to bring him in from the wilds of Albany to cover the Buffalo territory and has sent Edgar Haines, who has been city salesman, to the Capitol. Bill Allen is one of the best known "Knights of the Leaping Tintypes" in the state. He formerly was manager of the Vitagraph office for many years, both in Buffalo and Toronto. He is so good natured that his face is all wrinkles from smiling—at exhibitors who just can't help but sign up for the works.

Bill Allen

George E. Williams, manager of the Linden theatre, Jefferson and High streets, Buffalo, and president of the Western New York unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Inc., has been appointed manager of the Olympic theatre on Lafayette Square, succeeding T. Cecil Leonard, resigned. The appointment comes as a sort of a surprise as it had been supposed that Mr. Williams was to join the Paramount theatre department following a call to New York for a talk with Harold B. Franklin. It was the chance to remain in Buffalo that appealed to George. The Olympic is operated by the Universal company. It is understood that Mr. Williams will continue to book for the Linden, a small neighborhood house.

News and Notes of Detroit's Photoplay Trade Circles

Herewith is presented the new Assistant Manager of First National Exchange, A. J. Richardson, who succeeds Dave Palfreyman. Mr. Richardson was formerly city salesman and earned his promotion by his excellent work.

The interior of the Joseph Mack Building, the local film row, is gradually being remodelled until it is taking on the appearance of a high class office building. The Selznick Distributing Corporation has moved into their attractive new offices just across the hall from their old location. The local F. I. L. M. Club has also moved from the third floor front to the fourth floor back.

So many have been the films shown during the past season, which have been made from well-known novels, that tie-ups with book stores have become common occurrences and excite no comment. However, the Booksellers Convention is meeting in the city the week of May 13th and Macauley's Book Store, the largest in the town, has arranged a most attractive table booth which is attractively covered with light green and decorated with stills from various films. On the table are arranged the photoplay copies of, seemingly, every book that has ever been filmed. The books are from Burt and Grosset and Dunlap. Upon inquiry the store manager reported that so far as could be observed the picturization of a novel increased book sales if the book were a popular one before it was screened. On the other hand if a book were almost unknown and the picture popular, the sales were apt to be increased from curiosity. Pictures which had but a moderate success did not augment any previous interest in the books from which they were made.

David Davidson is the leading prize winner in the territory. He is city salesman for the Fox Film Company. In a recent short intensive drive, he came out at the head of the list and walked off with first prize, which is a trip to New York, as a guest of the managers' convention, which is to be held the week of June 11th. Then, just so that he'd have a little extra change to make the trip interesting, he received a bonus check from the Fox Film Corporation, for leading the sales on last year's product. Pretty nifty!

D. S. Davidson

Norman Moray was scheduled to assume management of the Cleveland Pathe exchange last week. Illness delayed his leaving Indianapolis, his former post. He is expected to take charge here this week, relieving district manager R. S. Schroeder.

Someone said that there were some open dates down in the southern part of the state. Maybe that accounts for First National District manager H. A. Bandy's hurried trip down to Cincinnati and adjacent territory.

Moe Grassgreen, Fox traveling auditor, is in town. This is his first return trip since he climbed the ladder from cashier of the local office, to his present position.

Jacob Smith, editor of the Michigan Film Review of Detroit, was in town during the week, combining business with pleasure.

M. Schiessel, formerly with the Progress Pictures Company in Cincinnati, is now with the Security Pictures Company of Cleveland in the capacity of city salesman.

H. Hirsch and Sam Gorrell of the Progress Pictures Company started out to Willoughby, 25 miles from Cleveland, via automobile, to sell pictures to an exhibitor who doesn't like to travel. Aside from having two punctures, being pinched for parking in a safety zone, and being thrown into a ditch to prevent a head-on collision with another car, the trip was uneventful. And when they got to Willoughby the exhibitor was not there. It's a hard life these exchange men lead.

J. S. Jossey, president of the Progress Pictures Company, Cleveland, left Sunday night, to attend the convention in Chicago.

M. A. Kraus, of the Kraus Manufacturing Company, N. Y., was in town last week, spreading a little sunshine about the Film Building. Everybody's always glad to see Kraus come in, and just as sorry to see him leave. He's on a trip across the continent, with a stop-over ticket for Chicago so that he'll be among those present at the Convention.

Herbert I. Kraus was given a royal send-off by his local Paramount associates last Friday afternoon, as he climbed into his trusty four wheeler which is speeding him to St. Louis, where he will assume the management of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange. He was due to arrive in St. Louis on Sunday. He took with him Brandy. No cause for the prohibition agents to become alarmed, however, for Brandy is Kraus' prize Boston Bull, and, as his name indicates, he's a rare treasure.

R. J. McManus, former St. Louis branch manager for Famous Players-Lasky, has been transferred to Buffalo, to succeed Allen Moritz.

Eddie Fontaine, local Famous Players exchange manager, is just returned from a central western conference of exchange managers in Chicago. Fontaine said the convention was a great success, and lots of enthusiasm for the new F. P. L. product was disseminated.

Gilbert Penn, well known in these parts, through his connection with several prominent exchanges, is back in the film business after an absence of more than a year.

Rodolph Valentino comes to Cleveland, Monday night, May 21st. With Mrs. Valentino, he is appearing in a tango dance at the Public Auditorium. Following his dancing exhibition, there will be an amateur dancing contest with prizes. Valentino is contributing 20 per cent of the money taken in, to the fund being collected for Mrs. Dennis Griffin, widow of the slain policeman who was murdered by John Whitfield.

Cupid is loose in the local Universal exchange, and members of the organization are hereby warned to beware. One of the victims already enmeshed is Miss Nell Olson, private secretary to Exchange manager Tom Colby. Miss Olson has just announced her engagement to Nelson A. Cannon, also of Cleveland.

George Manos, of the Rex theatre, Toronto, was in the city this week, quite a bit worse for wear, due to an automobile accident that smashed his car completely, badly injured other occupants of the car, and decorated him with a mass of cuts and bruises some of which may last to be lifelong reminders of the occasion.

It is reported on good authority, though unconfirmed as yet, that the Ohio Amusement Company, of Cleveland, meaning Meyer Fine, David Schumann and A. Kramer, have taken over the Fairyland theatre, formerly operated by Dave Adler. Other theatres operated by the Ohio Amusement Company are the Dennison Square, Yale, Savoy, Knickerbocker, Five Points, Jewel, Capitol, and U-No.

Sam Schachtel, of the Y theatre, Cleveland, is said to have the finest radio equipment in the city at his house. He uses it professionally, too. When the organist is off duty, he tunes in his radio. He has a big horn in the theatre, and patrons are treated to concerts from all over the country. It's been a big business booster for the Y theatre, and it's been lots of fun for Schachtel. He put it up himself.

R. C. Steuve, of the Orpheum, Akron, had his passage all booked for a trip to Europe. And now business is so good that he can't leave. We don't know whether to offer condolences or congratulations.

Hal W. Smith, associated with M. Shea in the Shea Booking Exchange, Inc., of Cleveland, left Sunday to attend the convention in Chicago.

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland, was seen in earnest consultation with George H. Wiley, of the Hoffman Productions, and now it is announced that Charnas bought from Wiley the Elaine Hammerstein pictures, for release through the Standard Film Service Company.

Frank Gross, proprietor of the Grand and Market Square theatre, Cleveland, joined the crowd of local exhibitors attending the Chicago convention.

John Harris, Jr., of Pittsburgh, manager of the Strand theatre, Youngstown, was a guest of local Metro exchange manager C. E. Almy last Tuesday.

Portland, Ore., Exhibitor and Exchange News

ROBERT C. BRUCE, internationally noted maker of Bruce "Wilderness Tales," which the National Board of Review continues to class as "exceptional" scenes, has arrived back in Portland to start his summer campaign of picture making. Bruce is assembling his crew and casts and will start work soon after June 1. His first locations will be in the Oregon coast country near Newport and picturesque Heceta head where he will shoot the one-reel scenic, "Just Waiting." Bruce spent a month at Carmel, Cal., after leaving New York and before coming to Portland. There he turned out ten stories upon which he will base the summer's work and all the scenes will be made, as have those which have made the "Wilderness Tales" series so wonderfully successful, in the Oregon country. Bruce will work throughout the summer in Oregon, Washington and British Columbia and his casts, which will appear only before scenic outdoor backgrounds, will include a number of locally prominent players. For several seasons Bruce has worked out of Portland and knows local environments and weather conditions thoroughly. His studio work this year will be done in the Premium Productions studios at Beaverton, adjacent to Portland.

H. M. Newman, formerly connected with Grauman's Million Dollar theatre at Los Angeles, is now in charge of Carl Laemmle's Columbia theatre here, succeeding William Cutts who opened the house for Laemmle two months ago. Cutts has been transferred to Los Angeles. There is a hint here that Newman will take general charge of Northwestern theatres in the Universal chain and will later on name a local house manager. Richard Charles, until a fortnight ago auditor for Jensen & Von Herberg here, and a youth of wide experience in the picture business, is now assistant manager at the Columbia.

A. C. Raleigh, who recently retired as manager of John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre, has again joined the local staff of Jensen & Von Herberg and is something of a general representative for the firm. In addition to tasks thus indicated Raleigh is editing Screenland Weekly, the J. & Von H., house organ in which he is reviving the whimsical character of Zack Moschy, made famous by Screenland magazine and Screenland News, the news reel which Raleigh conducted when he was manager of the Columbia theatre under J. & Von H.

Francis Richter, blind pianist and organist, who works have made him a very popular musician locally, has been signed as principal organist at the Columbia theatre by Manager H. M. Newman. Richter has never played a first run theatre organ before, but he is making a great impression with his work. His music is augmented by John Britz and the Columbia Octette.

Some of the most strenuous exploitation in Portland exhibition history has been indulged in for the showing of "The Go-Getter" at the Rivoli theatre. Gus A. Metzger, owner of the theatre, and John C. Stille, manager, combined their efforts in promoting the feature through special showings for business men, newspaper contests seeking definitions of a go-getter and through arrangements for the attendance of the employees of the city's largest department store.

The Hippodrome has booked "Night Life in Hollywood" for early showing.

The Orpheum, big-time vaudeville house which has been making much use of Aesop's Fables, Pathe News and Topics of the Day this year, closed for the season last Tuesday and Manager Frank T. McGettigan already has departed for his summer home on the Oregon coast.

"The Bright Shawl" has been booked to the Rivoli theatre to start May 26.

Albany Notes and Eastern New York Briefs

THERE was a big time in Troy last Friday night for the exhibitors and their friends in that city. C. R. Halligan, manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, brought over the recent fight pictures and screened them at the American. Ben Apple, owner of the house, was on hand, and helped act the part of the host. All of the newspaper men were present, as well as one or two state senators. The pictures are scoring a hit in this section of the state and Mr. Halligan and his office force are working overtime in booking the same.

A matinee for the benefit of the Girl Scouts in Albany was given Saturday at the Mark Strand in that city through the courtesy of Uly S. Hill, manager of the house. The proceeds will send several Girl Scouts to the new camp at Lawson's Lake. The Scouts were helpful during the Junior Movie season, when they acted as ushers.

Bert Gibbons, local manager for Vitagraph, is spending the week in New York City. And, speaking of Bert Gibbons, he was the guest of Harry Lux, owner of the Alhambra of Utica, on Fourth Lake, last Sunday, and returned to Albany with a particularly attractive string of trout.

Some fifty or sixty employees of the Albany film exchanges were handsomely entertained last Thursday night at the LaSalle Orphanage with a program which included numbers by the institution band. At the conclusion there were short talks by C. R. Halligan, local manager for Universal, and Bert Gibbons, of Vitagraph.

Daylight saving isn't costing the theatres in this section as much as many of the owners predicted. The second show of the evening has braced up wonderfully of late and the receipts of the day are probably not over 5 per cent under what would have prevailed had not daylight saving existed.

Oscar Perrin, manager of the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, was personally responsible for turning a nice little trick last week, which resulted in former Governor Glynn, owner of one of the Albany papers, giving him a whole page in Saturday's issue in place of the magazine section and devoted to "Down to the Sea in Ships," which Mr. Perrin has booked for a week.

For the first time in a year, Mrs. Francis McGraw, owner of the Gem in Little Falls, was along Film Row last week. She explained things by saying that her house has been doing such a good business that it was impossible to get away.

Sam Goldstein, who runs a number of houses in Massachusetts and also has the Park in Utica, was in town this past week and is said to be dickering for the big State, in Schenectady.

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange in Albany, is wearing a bigger smile than ever. Only a short time ago he won first prize in a sales contest and now he is again in the lead in a contest opened to the managers of the New York, Buffalo and Albany exchanges and which runs to July 31.

Frank Asher, of the Star in Rhinebeck, was in town last week.

Louis Buettner will close his Cohoes house in June for improvements and a general renovation. It is rumored that the Star, in Rome, owned by Mike and Joe Kallet, will close for the summer.

The daughter of C. R. Halligan, manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, is ill at her home in Green Island with an attack of diphtheria.

"Hoppe," whose full name is F. S. Hopkins, salesman out of the Universal exchange in Albany, was one of the first men in the city to spring a new straw lid this season.

Somewhat cheery, and with good reason, George Roberts, Jr., who handles the Palace, in Troy, is now riding about town in a Buick roadster, and, incidentally, visiting every exchange and not forgetting for a single moment to call the manager's attention to the car out in front.

C. R. Halligan was in Buffalo over Sunday for an important conference in connection with the distribution of the fight pictures.

A huge silver loving cup stands on the desk in the F. B. O. exchange in Albany these days, greeting exhibitors and testifying to Vic Bendell's salesmanship. It was won in a recent contract drive. Mr. Bendell visited the home office in New York last Friday.

Walter T. Roberts, who has managed the Mark Strand in Albany, N. Y., since its opening, has just been transferred to the Troy, in Troy, N. Y., where he will act as business manager. Mr. Roberts came originally from Louisville, Ky., but before coming to Albany he served for some time in theatres in Buffalo, N. Y.

Trade Jottings from Central Pennsylvania

THE motion picture theatres of Harrisburg, Pa., took a conspicuous part in the observance of Music Week, May 13 to 19, which was made a big occasion by the city generally. The managers of practically all the theatres were members of the general committee for the city's observance, and special musical numbers were provided in the theatres to augment the regular film shows. One of the main features in the theatres was the production by local talent of the musical comedy, "Tut-Tut," all week, under the direction of Harrisburg Post, No. 27, of the American Legion, in the Colonial theatre, Third and Market streets, one of the Wilmer & Vincent chain of motion picture houses.

Poleo's nine-piece orchestra featured the performances at the New Regent, 408 and 410 Market street, of which picture house Peter Magaro is owner. The orchestra played a fine program of jazz as well as several semi-classical numbers, twice each evening during the week. There was community singing each night, conducted by song leaders provided by the Chamber of Commerce, at the Majestic Orpheum, Victoria and other theatres. Special musical numbers were played on the big pipe organ in the Victoria.

Rudolph Valentino appeared in person in the Chestnut Street Auditorium, Harrisburg, on the afternoon of May 19, and danced the tango with Miss Alice Maison, of the Palais Royale, before an audience that filled the big hall. Mrs. Valentino, the former Winifred Hudnut, was unable to be present, the management announcing that she was ill. Valentino's Argentine Orchestra played for the dancing. A tango contest in which eight local couples competed was won by Miss Laenchen Bucher and Francis Ritchie, of Harrisburg, who were awarded a silver cup. Second honors went to Mr. and Mrs. Simeon R. Greer, of Hershey. Mrs. Ruth Funkhouser, of Harrisburg, won the beauty contest, receiving a silver cup. She will be permitted to compete in a national beauty contest to be held in New York City among winners of contests in the various other cities. The winner of the New York contest, it was announced, will be chosen to play an important part in the next screen play filmed for Valentino. From Harrisburg, Valentino went to Reading for another exhibition.

An innovation in the form of a midnight exhibition of motion pictures for the entertainment of the night shift of workmen employed at the Masland Carpet Mills, Carlisle, was introduced on May 17. The show was given during the lunch hour of the men, sixty of whom attended. The event was arranged by C. W. Sayres, secretary of the Carlisle Y. M. C. A., who put on several first-class films.

Mae Murray's "double" has been discovered in Bethlehem, Pa. Miss Louise d'Anglas Eckert, daughter of A. S. Eckert, publisher of the Bethlehem Sun, surprised a big audience at the Colonial theatre, Allentown, which is but a few miles from Bethlehem, when she was introduced by Manager Johnny Newkirk, who, by the way, is a former Harrisburg boy, still in his teens, and is declared to be the youngest theatre manager in Pennsylvania. It was Newkirk who discovered the great resemblance between Miss Murray and Miss Eckert, of which the audience was quick to take note. Miss Eckert is a musical artist and a skilful violinist, having appeared in several recitals. She will shortly appear on the concert stage.

A testimonial dinner was recently given in honor of G. Harold Bonne, by the members of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors. Mr. Bonne was for several years chief clerk of the board but has resigned to become affiliated with Dave Starkman in the Standard Film Attractions. His associates presented Mr. Bonne with a leather brief case. John Freil, a field inspector of the board, made the presentation. The dinner committee consisted of Felix O'Hara and Ed Lynn.

Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, who is an ardent film fan, frequently attending picture theatres in Harrisburg for an hour or two by way of recreation at the close of his day's official duties, has requested a second showing in Harrisburg of the Metro film, "Trailing Wild Animals in Africa with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson."

George J. Higgins, who conducts the Majestic theatre in Shamokin, has purchased a property on a plot 50 by 150 feet, at Broad and Pine streets, in the heart of the city of Tamaqua, for $40,200, on which he proposes to erect a modern motion picture theatre. Building operations will start as soon as six families now occupying the premises can vacate to permit the present buildings to be razed. Higgins has been station agent for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway in Shamokin for thirty-three years.

The Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., have purchased the Danville Opera House Block, the largest business block in that city. It is intimated the opera house will be added to the company's chain of motion picture theatres.

Boston Flashes and New England Bulletins

Bob Bertschey

"Safety Last" has taken New England by storm, according to all evident signs. It played two weeks at Gordon's Capitol and Olympia theatres to capacity; is at the Scollay Square for two more weeks, starting May 20; had short runs at several neighborhood houses, and Stanley Waite, Pathe New England manager, reports that there is not a print in the exchange.

Charles Perry, Goldwyn Boston manager, left for the Goldwyn sales convention at Atlantic City on Saturday. Charlie has been working hard and ought to have a chance to rest up a bit on the junket. He says he hopes the water is warm enough for wading, anyway. He will be back on the job the first of the week.

A. W. Smith, a former well-known and liked New England exchange man, has been in Boston lately. He is now with Pathe and his trip was in conjunction with their interests and those of "Safety Last."

Leon J. Rubinstein, widely known along Boston's Film Row, has been put in charge of exploitation for Metro in this territory. His office is a cage, for the menagerie bars are still on the Metro windows in connection with the African film, "Trailing African Wild Animals," which, report has it, is still going strong all over the territory.

Harry Wasserman, one of the best known Boston exhibitors, now of the Eagle theatre, is recovering from a bad sinus operation at Commonwealth Hospital. Thirteen pieces of bone were removed. Harry tried to keep it quiet, but it leaked out that he went under ether for two hours just as the run of "Dr.

Jack" started at his house. As he came out from the anaesthetic he called for Dr. Jack and wanted him. The nurses finally pacified him by camouflaging an interne as that famous exponent of the "Laugh Cure."

Louis Gordon, nephew of Nathan Gordon, has recently been made manager of Gordon's new Capitol theatre in Allston, the house that backs to within a few feet of the Brookline town line and thereby nearly violates that town's virginity as far as motion picture houses go. Louis is all smiles, and although he likes the way business started off at his new charge, which was during the run of "Safety Last," he came forward with a novel complaint. He said that several women had complained to him that they should have been warned in advance of the film, that it was too thrilling and affected their hearts. Anyway, Louis also said that the theatre's huge parking space was not big enough.

The Lowell (Mass.) Ad Club ran an entertainment consisting of three educational motion picture films last week in Liberty Hall, the local papers reporting that the pictures were well worth the attention of a crowded house. The feature was "From Trees to Tribunes," a really ambitious production, presenting pictorially the romance of the Chicago Tribune. Another was "Community Betterment," and the third was "What Might Happen," a graphic portrayal of the accidents and fatalities of life and the necessity for insurance of all forms.

Mrs. Mary Carr made a plea to Bostonians for charity to the people of screenland at the observances of Mothers' Day. She asked her hearers when they read some of the things that had been written about screen actors and actresses, that they take it all with a little salt, for much of what is said is not true. "Screen people have mothers and family life," she said, "and love their homes. As long as we have love of home we are going to have a mighty nation."

A great deal of interest is being aroused in Boston over the filming of "The Affairs of Lady Boston," a two-reel travesty on "The Affairs of Lady Hamilton," now on long run at the Park theatre. The travesty is produced by Hodkinson in a tie-up with the Boston American, the Hearst paper. L. R. Brager is the director and author, Bill Spooner the camera man, and Phil Dunne the technical director. The cast is almost complete.

Recent visitors to Boston have been J. J. McCarthy, Henry McMahon and Theodore Mitchell, all of whom are actively interested in exploitation of "The Covered Wagon." The great American epic opens at the Shubert-Majestic theatre on May 21, playing to $1.50 top, and, according to announcements, the only run this season in New England.

The Overland touring car, offered by the management of the Boston theatre as first award for identification of fifty motion picture stars shown in films at that theatre, was won by Earle Cann, sixteen-year-old high school pupil of Weymouth, a suburb of Boston. More than 1,000 movie fans took part in the contest, about 200 were present in the theatre when the award was made and seven of them had perfect scores, but Earle's name was drawn first. Charles S. O'Connor, former member of the Boston School Committee, was chairman of the judges committee and announced the winner. The other members of the committee were Fire Chief John O. Taber and Treasurer John A. Bruen of the Franklin Savings Bank.

The Massachusetts State Senate has substituted for an adverse committee report a bill to permit the use in schools of motion picture apparatus which is adapted to standard width safety films, the action being on a motion of Senator Albert T. Rhodes, of Worcester. Senator Rhodes said that at the present time schools are allowed to use only a narrow gauge film. He pointed out the many advantages of teaching through the medium of motion pictures and declared that the State Department of Education was in favor of the measure.

High praise for two recent feature releases, "The Covered Wagon," and "Down to the Sea in Ships," was given editorially in a recent issue of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram. They see in these films the value that should be that of the screen in perpetuating an accurate visual presentation of great epochs in the history of the country.

Jottings from Kansas City and Vicinity

AT the national convention in Chicago, Kansas delegates, with their attorney, Samuel Handy, of Kansas City, will have one predominating slogan—"Fight any move to arbitrate with the music tax interests."

Few states in the Middle West have been effected more of late by the music tax than Kansas and the Sunflower State delegates have but one prime motive—"swat the music tax." C. E. Cook, business manager of the Kansas organization, left for Chicago several days in advance of the convention to complete all arrangements for the quartering of the delegates of his body.

"The public is the best movie censor," the Rev. Baxter Waters, of the Budd Park Christian Church, Kansas City, told his congregation Sunday.

But in the next breath Mr. Baxter said that if he were sent to the state legislature that he would introduce a law preventing "impolitic" reference to ministers or churches in dramatic events on the screen—a law similar to that passed in Oklahoma recently. Mr. Baxter said nothing of allowing public opinion to determine whether or not it is "sinful" to include the ministerial profession, the same as other walks of life, in wholesome comedies.

The Alamo theatre, one of Kansas City's larger suburban motion picture theatres, which has been closed nearly a year, reopened this week under the management of Dr. R. W. Vardman and William Bindley, who have leased the theatre for four years. The house is being cleaned, some remodeling being done, the interior being repainted. An orchestra will succeed the pipe organ, which was removed. Only the best films the market affords will be shown, the new management says.

Pictures indorsed each week by the Kansas City Parent-Teacher Association have been given liberal publicity in the daily newspapers. The following list of production, under a headline of large type, was published this week:

Here's one for the book. "The Storm" was being shown at Art Gaston's theatre in Mankato, Kan., when the light suddenly went off in the middle of the picture, leaving the house dark. The Mankato power plant frequently has trouble during a storm, but in this instance the sky was clear—on the outside; "The Storm" being on the inside. Realistic picture.

The date of formal opening of the new South Troost theatre, a Kansas City suburban house, has been set for next week. The auditorium of the new house is planned to seat 1,400. Only pictures of the better class will be shown.

Quite a number of changes in management of theatres in the Kansas City territory have been announced during the last week, as well as openings of new houses. They are:

Fred Hayter, former manager of the Highland theatre, Kansas City, has taken over the management of the Orpheum theatre, Parsons, Kan.; Herrington theatre, Herrington, Kan., has been remodeled by Mark Wilson and will be reopened soon; Airdome theatre, Fort Scott, Kan., opened by H. E. Ulrich; Y-Not theatre, Crook, Colo., purchased by John L. Yost.

A letter from Superintendent of Schools, I. I. Cammack, of Kansas City, the indorsement of the Kansas City Parent-Teacher Association and a landslide of free newspaper publicity, has made "Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera," as far as the Kansas City territory is concerned.

This is not a bad one—worked by Homer Gill in exploiting "Souls for Sale," for the Pastime theatre of Ottawa, Kan.: "List any ten movie stars you know. Hand the list in at the box office with your name and address. If at least one of the stars listed does not appear in the picture you will receive a free admission ticket to the picture appearing at the Pastime."

The above was published in a miniature newspaper, titled, "Hollywood Lights."

A boxing bout of high school boys, serving as a prologue to "The Abysmal Brute," proved a real money maker for W. L. Gabel, manager of the Grand theatre, Beloit, Kan. The showing of the picture followed some bouts that had been staged by the high school boys and interest was at a high pitch.

Exchange and Exhibitor Items from St. Louis

THE St. Louis Board of Aldermen on Friday, May 18, by unanimous vote decided to file Alderman Wimer's Daylight Saving Bill. Previously the committee on legislation had recommended that such action be taken. St. Louis is overwhelmingly against the freak of the clock, an outgrowth of the late war. The only ones in favor of the measure were the few who would profit by an extension of daylight.

The Quality Motion Picture Company of America, University City, Mo., will shortly issue the first number of a weekly motion picture newspaper to be known as Things You Ought to Know. B. J. Cornell, formerly with the National Film Publicity Company, is editor of the news weekly. It will be under personal supervision of Romaine Fielding, president and director general of the General Film Manufacturing Company, which controls the Quality company.

Wilbern Murphy has re-opened the theatre at Omaha, Ill., and was in St. Louis during the week arranging for his programs.

Charley Werner, manager for Metro, departs for New York on June 2 to attend the annual Metro convention. He will spend several days in the East.

Joseph Desberger, formerly manager for the American Releasing Corporation here, has joined Charley Werner's Metro sales organization. His territory has not been assigned as yet. Desberger is very well known throughout the St. Louis film district and should prove a valuable addition to the Metro staff.

Enterprise has secured the Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois rights to "The Challenge of Chance" in which Jess Willard is featured. It will be released immediately. Jack Underwood, Enterprise manager, has also secured some new one-reel novelty films.

William Goldman, owner of the Kings and Queens theatres has gone to Atlantic City to attend the Goldwyn convention as the guest of Jack Weil, manager of the St. Louis Goldwyn exchange. Goldman has plans prepared and ground purchased for a $1,000,000 movie palace at Grand boulevard and Morgan street to be known as Goldman's St. Louis theatre. It will be ready for exhibition next fall if present plans mature.

R. J. McManis, Paramount boss, back from the Chicago convention is filled with enthusiasm for the coming season. Sees nothing but big things ahead. Reports that optimism was paramount at Chicago. His entire gang are pepped up and raring to bust new records. Nothing like a convention to get the boys hitting on all six.

Visitors of the past week included Sam Halliwell, of Assumption, Ill.; Billy Mueller, of Jefferson City, Mo.; J. Schuckert, of Chester, Ill.; Tom Reed, of Duquoin, Ill., and Jim Reilly, of Alton.

Sam Werner, of United Film Service; Barney Rosenthal, of Universal, and Floyd Lewis, of Select Pictures, have gone to Chicago to adjust with the Chicago Film Board of Trade the Illinois territory to be served by the film board of the two cities. This move is part of Will Hays' plan of bringing about closer cooperation between the distributors and exhibitors. While in Chicago Werner will take advantage of the opportunity to present to the exhibitors national convention his views on the question of support of independent productions. Werner is the dean of the St. Louis exchange owners and managers and his experiences in film distribution are very interesting and have given an insight into the business that few men in the exchange field today possess. His remarks to the exhibitors are bound to be not only interesting but very valuable.

John Davis, manager for Associated Exhibitors, is back from Mattoon, Ill., where he put over an interesting campaign to exploit the showing of "Grandma's Boy" at the Strand theatre. Reports that the standing room only sign was in demand.

The American Federation of Musicians in national convention at Hotel Chase, St. Louis, Mo., May 17, defeated a resolution condemning traveling orchestras that enter towns and present unusual feats of music in competition with local players.

It was decided that the public is entitled to hear the travelers if they want to.

Much of the first two days of the convention was given over to a discussion of ways and means of increasing wages. Music as such was not touched upon. One resolution asked that the pay of traveling show musicians be increased from $65 to $75 on week stands; from $70 to $80 when playing broken weeks. Another resolution fixed the pay of carnival players at $40 a week and leaders at $65, and a third resolution stated that players in minstrel bands should get the same pay as carnival players.

The Legislative Committee of the St. Louis Board of Aldermen on May 16 by a vote of six to one decided to file Alderman Wimer's Daylight Saving ordinance. This means that the measure is dead. It provided that the clock should be advanced one hour on the first Sunday in June to the first Sunday in September this year and from the fourth Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September in succeeding years. A recent poll indicated that St. Louisians were more than two to one against the proposed ordinance, and it was certain that a referendum election would have knocked it out if passed by the Aldermen.

Miss Bertha Evelyn Gumpenberg, 3035 Rutger street, St. Louis, May 17, filed suit in the St. Louis Circuit Court against the Grand Rialto Theatre Company for $3,000 damages claiming she was hit in the right eye by a bullet fired by a performer at the Grand Opera House on November 18 last.

Around Seattle's Photoplay Trade Circles

W. E. BAMFORD, for the last several seasons manager of the Goldwyn exchange in this city, has left here and will be succeeded by Seth Perkins, who has already taken up his duties as branch manager. Mr. Bamford went direct to Atlantic City from Seattle to attend the Goldwyn convention being held there, and from Atlantic City he expects to go to New York and spend some time there. After that it is thought probable that he will be sent out into the intermountain country by the Goldwyn company, although it is not known in just what capacity he will serve. Mr. Perkins has been a member of the Goldwyn force in Los Angeles for the last five years and is already well known among some of the film and theatre men in this territory.

Ralph Pielow, formerly a member of the sales staff working out of the Seattle office of Goldwyn, has just become manager of the company's branch in Portland, Oregon. Before joining the Goldwyn staff here Mr. Pielow was manager of the Seattle Hodkinson exchange.

Mike Rosenberg, secretary of the Principal Pictures Corporation, arrived in the city this week and expected to stay here for four or five days before returning to Los Angeles. Mr. Rosenberg made the trip especially to visit the De Luxe Feature Film exchange, under the management of his brother, Al Rosenberg, in order to make plans for the handling and distribution of the Principal Pictures fall releases. "Environment," which is being shown all over the Pacific Coast under the original title of "Chicago Sal," was playing a week's engagement at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre here during Mr. Rosenberg's stay, and got away to a good start the first three days of the run. Indications were that it would round out a successful week at this house.

J. A. Gage, manager of the Educational exchange, left Seattle this week for New York, where he expected to remain for from three weeks to one month before returning to this city. During his absence the exchange is under the management of Wallace Rucker, salesman for the local office, who has just returned from a road trip into Oregon and Montana. The branch here has just been repainted and new signs have been put up, making it one of the most attractive offices on the Row.

"Where the Pavement Ends," "Soul of the Beast" and "Success" have just been sold to John Hamrick for exhibition at his Blue Mouse theatre here by Carl Stern, manager of the local Metro exchange. "Where the Pavement Ends" was scheduled to begin a week's engagement on May 20. "Soul of the Beast" was announced as a June 24 release and "Success" was booked to run at the theatre about the third week of July.

A. F. Gollofon, for the last two years head booker at Manager J. R. Beal's Hodkinson exchange, will leave that office the end of May to become booker at the First National exchange here. Mr. Gollofon's successor has not yet been announced by Mr. Beal. "Youthful Cheaters" is the latest Hodkinson release to be received here and is already being shown to local exhibitors.

T. Guinan, traveling auditor for the Vitagraph company, has just arrived in this city at Manager H. A. Black's exchange on a tour of the twenty-eight Vitagraph branch offices. Mr. Black has just returned to the city after a ten-day trip in Eastern Washington, and reports business conditions in that part of the territory as looking much better. Prospects for an excellent crop this season indicate greater prosperity in the state, and Spokane, where Mr. Black spent several days, already begins to show signs of the coming improvement in affairs.

A. M. McCrary has just joined the local First National sales staff and will cover the Eastern Washington territory for that company. "Slander the Woman," "Scars of Jealousy" and "The Bright Shawl" have been received by Manager Charles H. Feldman and have been booked into the Liberty and Coliseum theatres in this city for early showings.

L. K. Brin, manager of the L. K. Brin exchanges, has returned to the city from a two weeks' trip to Los Angeles, where he conferred with Harry Warner in regard to the handling of the Warner Brothers coming releases.

Two Seattle theatre men left this city for New York in May, one on a short business trip and one to remain in the East permanently. John G. Von Herberg, president of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit of theatres in the Pacific Northwest, has gone on to the Eastern coast on a business mission and will probably be away from this territory for several weeks. L. O. Lukan, formerly Western Division manager of the First National company and more recently general manager of the John Hamrick circuit of Blue Mouse theatres, will return to the employ of First National following receipt of a telegram asking him to report at the New York office at his earliest convenience. It is not known at present in just what capacity he will serve the organization.

"Strongheart," accompanied by Julie, his "leading lady," and a company of supporting artists and technical staff members were recent visitors in this city.

Butte Bulletins and Montana Trade Items

BUTTE is now in the midst of a Market Week and the Shriners are having a big circus affair and in consequence William J. Sullivan, manager of the Rialto and American theatres, two of the Jensen and Von Herberg string, is making exploitation history for the city in the campaign he is putting over for "Can A Woman Love Twice?" "Alice Adams" and "Poor Men's Wives."

Wm. J. Sullivan

The manager of the Associated First National's branch exchange, Harry Sigmund, has just returned from a two weeks' trip over the state. Mr. Sigmund made the highline trip, covering all the important towns but made a special effort to see exhibitors of the smaller and less frequented places along the First National circuit. While on the trip he was called by wire to meet Mr. Von Herberg, who was on his way to New York, so there was a strenuous and hurried trip to meet Mr. Von Herberg en route. After a conference of several hours, during which time they were together on the trip east, Mr. Sigmund returned to complete his circuit. Everywhere he was met with splendid cordiality and he is predicting 100 per cent business from this territory for First National in a short time.

There have been three premier showings of "Within The Law" in important cities of the state for the First National theatres with the result that there have been enthusiastic bookings by exhibitors.

At Great Falls the management of the Liberty theatre says that "Daddy" has given him the best "audience run" of any picture he has shown this season. Another First National attraction that is being received enthusiastically is "Slander The Woman."

Manager Jack Rue, of the Universal, is home again after a busy two weeks lining up bookings of the various exhibitors, with whom he placed "The Abysmal Brute," "Bavu," "The Shock" and "Trifling With Honor." Mr. Rue has been so much in demand with the numerous exhibitors that he is planning to see them oftener than usual or at least he will speed up on gas of a beautiful Haynes car and dash around in short order when his films are called for. It is a sporty model and will be a convenience when off on circuit tours, where it is almost impossible to spend so much time waiting for trains, when a car will do it in short order.

Gordon C. Craddock of Denver has arrived in Butte to enter the sales force of the First National. He is reported to be a valuable asset to any sales force and comes highly recommended as one of the alert, high-class salesmen.

Chris Dahl, of the First National, drifted over to Seattle not long ago to sign up for a booking job, but the management here put one over on the Seattle force by urging him to return to Butte to rejoin the First National. Mr. Dahl is not only efficient and popular in his official capacity, but he is a baseball fan and Black Specks could hardly do without him, so the glad hand of a decided welcome is out at all times for Chris. Let us keep him in Butte.

F. H. Smith, manager of the branch office of Paramount in Butte; J. A. English and J. L. McGinley, salesmen, left this week to attend a convention of Paramount salesmen, now gathering at Los Angeles. The sessions are to be held at Ambassador Hotel.

J. M. Dunn, of Salt Lake, is back in Montana again. He is special representative for Universal in the exploitation of "Hunting Big Game."

Exchange and Exhibitor News of Carolinas

THE Charlotte Paramount exchange seemed almost deserted during the past week while all the chiefs and near chiefs were gone to New Orleans on the big hame office sales conference. From the Charlotte exchange the following were in attendance: C. E. Peppiatt, branch manager; M. W. Davis, sales manager; E. H. Crowell, chief booker. It was announced that Mr. Davis has been permanently transferred to the New Orleans office and will not return to Charlotte; also that J. S. The Lumina open-air theatre at Wrightsville Beach, N. C., one of the most unique in the country, opens next Saturday, May 26. The pictures are given as an added free attraction to all visitors at the gorgeous "Lumina" dancing pavilion on Wrightsville Beach. The screen is situated a hundred feet out in the ocean, and the "customers" occupy a high cascade veranda built as a part of the large dancing pavilion, with accommodations for five or six hundred. The ocean breezes fan their brow, while the ever-changing landscape over the water serves in the place of the usual painted decorations of stage and screen. It is only a few steps from the mammoth dancing hall and is thronged every evening during the summer season.

H. H. Anderson, who formerly owned a long string of Carolina theatres, and who recently associated himself with Laurence Lester in the operation of the Strand theatre, Charlotte has severed his connection therewith, Mr. Lester buying his interest. Sam Richardson, one of the most unique figures in exhibitor circles of North Carolina, was a Charlotte visitor the past week. William K. Jenkins, president of Enterprise Distributing Corporation, was a visitor in his Charlotte exchange the past week.

Bryan Craver, star salesman of the Charlotte First National Exchange, is a strong contender in the current National sales drive.

The Al Lichtman exchange has closed in Charlotte, following the resignation of J. U. McCormick as manager.

Theatre and Exchange Briefs from Canada

AN important development in the personnel of moving picture theatres in Canada has been the appointment of John Hazza, formerly of Edmonton and Calgary, Alberta, as manager of theatres for Western Canada of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., Toronto. This office carries with it the title of "Western Division Manager" of the prominent theatre organization and his headquarters will be in Winnipeg, Manitoba, where the corporation operates the Capitol and Allen theatres.

Mr. Hazza, who is a native of Toronto, was the president and organizer of the Western Canada Exhibitors' Circuit some years ago which, later, became affiliated with Associated First National to represent theatres in all important centers of Alberta and Saskatchewan. When N. L. Nathanson organized the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Mr. Hazza sold a half interest in his Edmonton theatre to the company and moved to Calgary where he opened and managed the new Capitol theatre, becoming district manager for Alberta and Saskatchewan as well. He has now moved to Winnipeg from which point he will have direct supervision of all F. P. theatres in Northern Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Apart from theatre activities, in which he has been identified all his life, Mr. Hazza is a horseman and breeder, a feature being a large polo pony ranch near Calgary, from which 40 polo mounts were recently shipped to New York City where they were quickly sold.

In the annual report of the Provincial Treasurer for Alberta for the theatre amusement tax for 1922, just published, it is shown that the attendance at moving picture theatres in the Province during the year reached the 2,000,000 mark. For the first time in the history of the theatrical business in Alberta, incidentally, the attendance at theatres in Edmonton exceeded that for Calgary theatres.

A. Frankel, musical director of the Criterion theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., visited in Dallas, Texas, last week as the guest of Don Albert, musical director of the Palace theatre at Dallas.

The Criterion theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., recently purchased by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has added a twelve-piece orchestra to furnish the musical numbers to its other attractions. Nothing but first-run Paramount super pictures will be shown at the Criterion theatre in the future.

The W. W. Hodkinson exchange at Oklahoma City, Okla., has closed and Resident Manager J. C. DeWalt has been transferred to a new territory in the East.

Photoplay Personals and Events in Southeast

ONE of the constructive results of the Better Films Committee Conference of the Southeastern States held in Atlanta on May 7 is the appointment of an Executive Committee composed of one member from each of the states in this territory, and the duty of which will be to meet upon call of the committee chairman at any time desired when it is impracticable to get attendance of representatives from each of the individual Better Films Committee of the states in question. Its work will be in the nature of an auxiliary to the regularly organized Better Films Committees of the various communities where they have been organized, and it is believed will still further enlarge the scope of their work, which has received the attention of the entire industry of America.

Those named to serve on this committee for the first year are as follows: Mrs. Basil Manley Boykin, Georgia; Mrs. Conrad H. Ohme, Alabama; Mrs. J. Eugene Reilly, North Carolina; Mrs. Frazier T. James, South Carolina;

Miss Ruth Rich, Florida; Mrs. E. G. Willingham, Tennessee.

Five Southeastern salesmen of First National are listed among the first fifteen in the national $10,000 sales dive now on, and in which one hundred and fifteen salesmen are competing for big prize money, the seven Southeastern states at present having a third of the prize contenders entered for possibility of prizes: Virgil Bridges, of the New Orleans office heads the entire list so far and coming a close second is Atlanta's own "Nick" Carter. Bryan Craver of the Charlotte office, has tenth place; Samuel Stockard, of New Orleans, twelfth, and Frank Sands, of the Atlanta exchange, fifteenth place.

E. E. Shinn, formerly of the Charlotte Paramount office, but recently in the Washington office, has been sent down to the booking department in New Orleans. L. L. Troy and Gordon Trewitt, two graduates of the recent Paramount sales school in Atlanta, have been assigned as zone managers out of the Atlanta office and A. F. McMahon, another graduate of the school, goes into Carolina territory, succeeding J. S. Cascallon, transferred to New Orleans. M. W. Davis, sales manager in the Charlotte office, has also been sent to New Orleans in a similar capacity.

The Atlanta Film Board of Trade has secured new and larger quarters in the Haas-Howell Building, Broad and Poplar streets, and have already moved in. This followed the reorganization of the organization of film exchange managers upon a recent visit here of a representative of the Hays organization.

Ned Depinet, general manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, was in Atlanta Universal exchange the past week holding conferences with the local sales force.

In and Out of the Des Moines Exchanges

M. J. FRISCH, associated with A. H. Blank Enterprises in Des Moines for the past three years, left Saturday to accept the managership of the Iowa and Nebraska territory for the Al Lichtman Productions. His headquarters will be at Omaha. Mr. Frisch has acted as salesman for First National in this territory and is one of the best thought of salesmen in the territory.

First National employees gave a party at the Elks Club for Mr. Frisch Saturday night. There was dancing and a feed. It would be hard to find one who has more thoroughly the good wishes of his associates than Mr. Frisch.

Sympathy is extended to Dan Burgum, manager of the Garden theatre, on the death of his father, William C. Burgum, at his home in Pittsburgh, Pa., last week. Mr. and Mrs. Burgum and Mr. Burgum's brother and his wife returned to Pittsburgh for the funeral services. Mrs. Ban Burgum and her daughter Ruth had a narrow escape on their return from several months in California when they came through in the section following the one which was wrecked in Utah. Mrs. Burgum had made considerable effort to get on the section ahead but had failed.

Robert Ballentine, formerly an exhibitor at Norfolk, Neb., is now manager of the Pathe Exchange. A. W. Plues, who for thirteen months was manager of the Des Moines exchange and before that in the picture business in Greenfield, Miss., is acting as branch manager at Indianapolis.

William Strickland, more often known as "Bill," is proving popular as salesman for Pathe in the Block C territory, after some years spent on the office staff.

Exhibitor and Trade News from Florida

Lon Burton, who operated the Alimar theatre at Live Oak for several years, and sold out last fall to C. C. Price and son, bobs up again at Okeechobee City, where he is Editor and Manager of the Okeechobee News.

Lawrence Sharpe, house manager of the Strand, Tampa, and star advertising man, has been confined to his home for several days. His wife says she just naturally can't keep him in, and he's rarin' to get back on the job.

Jack Frost, General Manager of the Strand and Grand theatres of Tampa, has joined the Rotary Club.

The property on which the Grand theatre, St. Petersburg, now stands, has been sold. The Grand is being operated now by the Southern Enterprises, who have all of the white theatres in that city.

Warners Launch Contest For Posters

A poster contest has been launched by the Warner Brothers in an effort to secure a design which will best convey to the motion picture public the significance of the eighteen "specials" planned for production this season. The entire series of pictures will be made from popular novels and stage successes.

In the launching of this contest the Warners, contrary to the usual custom of contests, have enlisted the aid of their entire organization, and thus far more than 100 ideas have been submitted for the approval of Harry M. Warner, who is at present at the Coast studios, and his brothers Sam and Jack Warner.

The prize to the winner of this contest is in the nature of a cash award, the figure being dependent upon the excellence of the drawing submitted.

Back of this contest is the primary motive to not only capture the interest of the public, but also to aid the theatre owners throughout the country.

Burr Reveals Production Plans Will Make Eight Features, Four With Male and Four With Female Star

C. C. BURR announces that he will make eight features for release the coming season. Four will have a male star heading the cast and four will feature a female star. Each of the eight pictures will reveal a carefully selected and well balanced all-star cast, as has been the rule in all of Mr. Burr's productions to date.

In an interview this week Mr. Burr reviewed the progress made by Mastodon Films, Inc., of which he is the head, and made public the above announcement.

"Looking backward for the moment," said Mr. Burr, "it must be perfectly obvious to those who have given the matter any thought, that during the several months just passed the independent producer and the independent exchanges have come into their own. Never before in the history of the industry have the independents registered such unqualified hits. They have established themselves as one of the most important, if not the most important factors in the business and all signs point to an even greater activity and success for them.

"It is a matter of record that independent productions have been life savers in a great many instances lately. Facts will back up the statement, that in proportion to the number of pictures produced the independents have scored more real hits than the so-called National producing and releasing organizations. Go over the list of box-office winners of the past few months and you will be surprised to learn the great number of successful independent productions. It is a record to be proud of and one that I am confident will be much greater when the returns are in for the season to come."

Mae Murray Here For Month Visit Star Arrives With Print of "French Doll"; Will Confer With Metro Office

MAE MURRAY and Robert Z. Leonard, her husband and director, came to New York last Saturday on the Twentieth Century Limited, prepared to spend a crowded month after a winter of picture-making in California. They brought with them the completed print of Miss Murray's newest picture, "The French Doll."

The Metro-Tiffany star has an intensive schedule to be followed during her stay. First in importance are conferences with executives of Metro Pictures Corporation, distributors of her photoplays, and with Tiffany Productions, under whose auspices they are produced; then the star and director will busy themselves with fall producing plans, which call for the launching of two new photoplays for Metro under more elaborate and striking circumstances than any Mae Murray picture hitherto released.

Conferences out of the way, Miss Murray will make a semi-holiday of it, dividing her time between shopping along Fifth Avenue for her next season's gowns and viewing all the good plays on Broadway.

The two big Murray pictures to follow "The French Doll" will be "Conquest," by Howard Higgins and Sada Cowan, and "Mlle. Midnight," by Edmund Goulding. These, from plans now in the making, will be the most elaborate of the star's productions. Metro officials expect that they will strike the popular keynote even more than the previous spectacular successes,

"Peacock Alley," "Fascination," "Broadway Rose," and "Jazzmania."

"Conquest" has the advantage of the collaboration with Mr. Higgins of one of the most successful scenarists, Sada Cowan, who has provided vehicles for the screen's most prominent players. Written especially to suit Miss Murray's talents, it provides her with one of her most promising opportunities, it is said. Miss Murray has already commenced designing some of the gowns she will wear in this production.

Renee Adoree Victim of "Kleig-Eyes"

Renee Adoree, star in Reginald Barker's Metro production "The Master of Woman" now in production on the west coast is reported afflicted with "Kleig-eyes," the dread malady of all who work before the motion picture camera. Miss Adoree's attack was hastened by a series of weeping scenes which weakened her eyes and made them an easy subject for the attack of the powerful lights which glared down on the sets.

Because of Miss Adoree's temporary withdrawal from active work in the cast Reginald Barker has taken his company to the location at Big Bear Lake where several exterior scenes will be filmed and where Miss Adoree will join the company as soon as her eyes are normal. Miss Adoree is at present confined to her home under the care of a physician.

Novarro Voted Favorite Screen Lover

LEADING by a majority of more than two thousand votes, Ramon Novarro won over Rodolph Valentino as the favorite lover of the screen, in a popularity contest conducted by the Garrick Theatre in Minneapolis recently. The contest lasted for seven days and Novarro was a consistent winner with each separate audience.

At the Garrick Theatre the contest was concurrent with the showing of Rex Ingram's Metro production "Where the Pavement Ends." This picture was adapted to the screen by Mr. Ingram from John Russell's story and was photographed by John F. Seitz.

Mr. Novarro is now enacting the title role in "Scaramouche" which Rex Ingram is filming at the Metro studios in Hollywood. "Scaramouche," from the novel by Rafael Sabatini, was adapted to the screen by Willis Goldbeck. John F. Seitz is at the camera.

Lesser Concludes Large Distribution Deal

An unusually large distribution deal has just been consummated by Irving M. Lesser, vice-president and general manager of Distribution of Principal Pictures Corporation, for the territorial rights for the Super Five Series which his company is releasing. The pictures which comprise this group are "The Spider and the Rose," "East Side, West Side," "Temporary Marriage," "Bright Lights of Broadway" and "The Man From Ten Strike."

This transaction involves the rights to Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, West Virginia and the western section of Pennsylvania, thus comprising fifteen per cent. of the total distribution rights of the entire United States. Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Company, who acquired these pictures is one of the largest and best known distributors in the state rights field.

"Man, Woman, Marriage" Sold Abroad

"Man, Woman and Marriage" has been sold by Associated First National for the territory of Egypt, Palestine and Syria to Cattermoul and Wettstein, of London.

Far-Sighted Exhibitor In Effective Appeal

Manager A. L. Middleton, Grand Theatre, De Queen, Ark., has forwarded to Pathe a copy of his effective appeal to his patrons for recognition of his theatre as a "public service institution." Mr. Middleton thinks that every whole-hearted exhibitor of motion pictures should endeavor to attract the same sort of cooperation.

"Thank God for the Movies," is his slogan, quoted from a widely published statement made by the Rev. Hay Watson Smith, of Little Rock, Ark. All of the material of Manager Middleton's printed propaganda is displayed on the two sides of a small card headed with the slogan quoted here, together with credit for its estimable source: The matter of the card in part follows:

"You'll say the same if you will only discard prejudice and SEE the movies. They will convince you by their own merit and power to entertain, educate and appeal through the eye, the particular one of the five senses that conveys 85 per cent of all human knowledge to the brain.

"The management of the Grand Theatre needs the support and co-operation of every good citizen in De Queen and Sevier County to make of it the public service institution he wants it to be. Are you offering encouragement or throwing stones?"

Realistic Duel for "Under Red Robe"

What is said to be a most thrilling and tensely dramatic duel scene is that fought by John Charles Thomas and Captain Henry C. G. Mills who won fame with the Dragoon Guards of Australia during the war, in "Under the Red Robe." Thomas, who is making his motion picture debut in the new Cosmopolitan feature and who with Robert B. Mantell and Alma Rubens is featured, impersonates Gil de Berault. Captain Mills appears as a trooper.

The duel, which is made doubly dramatic in that it is fought on horseback as well as on foot, was filmed this week at the 104th Field Artillery, Sixty-eighth street and Broadway, New York City.

Beauty Prize Winner in "Brass Bottle"

Hazel Keener, who was awarded by a jury of artists selected by the Chicago Tribune, a prize of $1,000, as the most beautiful woman in the state of Iowa, has a part in Maurice Tourneur's forthcoming First National production "The Brass Bottle."

As an Oriental princess of Solomon's day, Miss Keener has a magnificent opportunity to display the beauty which won her the Tribune prize and later the first prize of the International Photographic Fair in London, it is said.

F.B.O. Has Elaborate Press Book

Will Outdo All Previous Effort With Copy for "Human Wreckage"

"NEXT to having a good picture an exhibitor must have a good pressbook," says Nat G. Rothstein, and with this end in view the Film Booking Offices claim to have been making history in the way of an advisory sheet for the theatre.

Despite the fact that press books of this company in the past have been unusual affairs their book now on the press for their picture "Human Wreckage" is by far the most elaborate of all, they claim.

Carrying 36 pages that measure eighteen by twenty four inches the book will be printed in five colors. The thirty six pages consist of cuts, ads, scene mats and ad mats, newspaper stories and exploitation ideas. Photos of the paper are carried in colors so that the exhibitor knows exactly what he is ordering. In actual size the book is about six times as large as is generally printed. A line of novelties numbering fifteen are printed while over forty column of advance, during showing and editorial articles are reproduced.

As a selling argument much credit must be given the press-book for the marvelous showing made by the Emory Johnson production "The Third Alarm," says F. B. O. Months before the picture was released and while it was showing at the Astor theatre on Broadway many thousands of these books were mailed broadcast to theatres with a result of many contracts by the exhibitor before the actual screening of the picture.

"Westbound" book was an almost duplicate for "Third Alarm" in size and make-up, but the forthcoming one on Mrs. Wallace Reid's anti-narcotic photo drama "Human Wreckage" is half again as big.

Its opening pages are given over to the dignified angle of exploitation which gradually gives way to the real showman's campaign covering every possible angle from sympathy to force in getting them into the theatre. Three full pages are given over to newspaper copy alone. Advance stories, editorial copy, reviews and special interviews with world known figures. Over twenty different scene cuts are illustrated as well as over thirty different styles and sizes in advertising newspaper matter.

The posters illustrated in the book are also of two styles—dignity and circus stuff. Of the paper printed for the release the radio is two sheets of circus to one of the more dignified. On the list of the paper their appears three styles of twenty four sheets, three of sixes, three of three sheet size, three ones, one two sheet and one half sheet.

Runs on "Safety Last" Extended

Exhibitors in Many Cities Demand Extra Time on Feature Bookings

AS an upsetter of screen traditions, Harold Lloyd in his seven reels of alternate terror and laughter spasms, "Safety Last," adds to his popularity. This statement generalizes reports received by Pathe from big and little theatres in important and unimportant cities in all sections.

Bookings made under the Pathe get-together policy producing contracts that are equitable and enable the giving of the maximum service to the patrons of each community, are said to be resulting in extension of runs far beyond expectations. For example, when the "Safety Last" contract was made with John Kunsky for the Adams theatre, Detroit, the "three weeks" clause was agreed upon with trepidation on both sides. But Kunsky got busy with up-to-date exploitation, including display newspaper advertising in which he autographed his own statement that "Safety Last" was the best comedy ever produced, and there never was a performance during those three weeks that did not see patrons turned away at the door, it is claimed. The added fourth week is reported to have failed to satisfy the demand of the Detroit patronage for the Lloyd masterpiece, but the carrying out of other contracts could not be longer deferred.

Extension of the "Safety Last" run at the Rialto theatre, Newark, N. J., was inevitable from the start, in the opinion of Manager Kashin, who personally attended to a brilliant line of exploitation. For eleven days the crowds were so dense about the theatre entrance that the brass rail at the box office window was repeatedly swept away, it is said, and it was found expedient to have one or more policemen constantly about the premises.

At Worcester, Mass., the management of Gordon's Park theatre, reported to Pathe that extension of its "Safety Last" engagement to three weeks was a public service necessity.

The Strand theatre management at San Francisco wired Pathe threatening to "send Hal Roach a bill for broken seats—audience screaming every second." Another wire came from the manager of the Eastman theatre at Rochester, N. Y., saying: "Picture broke all records."

Kathlene Martyn Given Extended Contract

Kathlene Martyn, appearing in C. C. Burr's All-Star Comedies, will continue as one of the featured players in this series. Miss Martyn, formerly a "Ziegfeld Follies" girl, was originally signed to play in one comedy but did so well that she has been given a contract that will keep her busy for some time.

RAINY FILM ABOLISHED

Exhibitors and Producers Enthusiastic over the Dura Company's Method of Protecting Prints

Producers have spent fortunes to give the public the best screen results that money could buy. They select their story, their director, their cast; they build elaborate sets, in short every detail is carried out to make a perfect picture. Finally the producer sees his picture on the screen and is delighted to find the result of his labors justified the enormous expenditure of money. The exhibitor with equal enthusiasm books the picture.

On the first run showings the S. R. O. sign is ignored in the mad rush of the overflow attempting to gain admittance. Everyone is happy. The picture is called a "success."

BUT: Every theatre does not have "first run." The same prints are used for second, third, fourth and subsequent runs. The same print which held the audience spellbound with its beautiful photographic quality, soon becomes full of rain, dirt and oil stains. It is full of jumps in action caused by the removal of much footage, due to broken perforations.

Patrons lured into a theatre on a promise of a good show leave disgusted. Some of them never to return. The exhibitor protests to the exchange. The exchange manager shrugs his shoulders believing himself helpless. All the above is past history.

The Dura Film Protector Co., Inc., 220 West 42nd St., New York City, has perfected a method fully protected by patents to overcome all the faults mentioned. It has registered the word "Duratize" in the United States patent office as its trade name.

It Duratizes prints by applying a thin coating of celluloid over the emulsion of new prints. This in no way impairs the photographic quality of the print, but on the contrary gives it a more brilliant appearance on the screen. The emulsion is so protected that the Duratized prints will not become "rainy."

Not only the perforations but the joins are greatly reinforced by the thin layer of celluloid.

Duratized film is oilproof and waterproof, and to clean, it is only necessary to pass the film through a cloth moistened with cleaning fluid between rewinders.

The price charged for Duratizing prints is two dollars per reel. One day's additional run will more than cover this cost. The exchange which has its prints Duratized profits by the added life to the film and will satisfy the exhibitor and please his audience.

Mrs. Reid in "Human Wreckage"

HEADING the list for the cast of "Human Wreckage" is Mrs. Wallace Reid, who, as Dorothy Davenport, first achieved fame under the direction of D. W. Griffith. It is said that the role of Ethel MacFarland, the wife of the noted lawyer in "Human Wreckage," with whom she stands shoulder to shoulder fighting the involuntary servitude of narcotic addiction, is the most heartfelt interpretation that she has ever done.

"She does not act the part," says one critic who saw the film, "she lives it—lives it as only one who had passed through the agony of her experience could."

James Kirkwood, the actor whose fine performance in this year's Broadway success, "The Fool," was considered one of the finest characterizations on the speaking stage today, abandoned that show in the middle of a highly successful season at the request of the ministers of New York to do his bit, with Mrs. Reid, in the great war against the invisible foe.

In the role of Mary Finnegan, an unfortunate young mother whose baby inherits from her the curse of addiction, is Bessie Love. In a part somewhat deeper and more mellow than those which she has taken in the past, this dainty little actress is said to prove that she is an emotional actress of the first rank. Bessie turned down many other parts in favor of that of the little Irish girl, for she considers it as one of the finest opportunities for a full display of her power that she has ever had.

And there are still many more to this cast of film celebrities. No follower of popular film successes has to be told that George Hackathorne was the juvenile lead in

Heads Cast in Production Based Upon Narcotic Evil

"The Miracle Man." In "Human Wreckage" he plays the part of Jimmy Brown, a victim of circumstance, who carries his tempter, the man who re-enslaves him after a total cure of the disease, on a "ride to Hell." Hackathorne, known especially for the sincerity of his work, made an extensive study of dope conditions from the inside.

Robert McKim, known as one of the most convincing heavies in the moving pictures, who has figured in such screen successes as "The Mark of Zorro" and "The Count of Monte Cristo" competes with Harry Northrup, whose work in "The Christian" and "The Four Horsemen" brought him distinctly into the foreground, for villain's honors.

There is a long list of distinguished actors in Mrs. Reid's play. There is Eric Mayne, as the doctor; Claire McDowell, as Jimmy's mother, and Victory Bateman as Mrs. Finnegan. There is Otto Hoffman, Philip Sleeman, George Clark, and Lucille Ricksen. And in addition, well-known public authorities appear in parts of the picture, including George E. Cryer, Mayor of the City of Los Angeles; Dr. R. B. Von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California; Benjamin Bledsoe, United States Judge of the 12th Federal District, Louis D. Oaks, Chief of Police, City of Los Angeles, and Brigadier C. R. Boyd of the Salvation Army.

Johnson Animal Film Is Commended

As an indication of the manner in which Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's animal picture, "Trailing African Wild Animals" released by Metro has impressed both the public and educational authorities is the following telegram sent by Will I. Wood, Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of California to the Los Angeles Metro Branch manager.

"I thank you for the privilege of seeing Martin Johnson's wonderful film 'Trailing African Wild Animals.' It is contrary to the custom of my office to say anything, but I feel I should make an exception in the case of this picture. It is not only clean and interesting but it is a distinctly educational picture. I could not but wonder how the cameraman succeeded so well in making these pictures. I take pleasure in commending the film as being the best of its kind I have seen."

"Main Street" in Fifth Week in L. A.

"Main Street," the Warner Brothers latest release, adapted from the novel written by Sinclair Lewis, has entered its fifth successful week at the Mission theatre, Los Angeles, where the feature booked for an indefinite run is being shown to capacity audiences. The picture will be given a pre-release presentation in the Chicago and Southern territories, many of the theatres having booked the feature long before a date had been set for distribution.

One of the features of the recent presentation at the Mission was the appearance in person of Monte Blue and Louise Fazenda, both of whom play prominent roles in the production. Harry Beaumont directed the picture, and the leads are played by Florence Vidor and Mr. Blue.

"Last Hour" Goes Well in Philly

"The Last Hour," one of the C. C. Burr features in which Milton Sills and Carmel Myers play the leading roles, had a successful engagement at the Regent theatre in Philadelphia last week, it is said.

The house management reported very good business while the Philadelphia dailies were lavish in their praise of this Edward Sloman production. The critic of the Evening Ledger described "The Last Hour" as "a tense drama," while the Inquirer referred to it as "replete with thrills and exciting incidents." The public thought well enough of this attraction to give it splendid patronage despite unusually strong opposition.

"The Last Hour" was written by Frank R. Adams and was originally published in Munsey's Magazine under the title of "Blind Justice."

Savings Banks Issued on "Dollar Devils"

ATTRACTIONAL saving banks have been issued as an exploitation accessory for "Dollar Devils," a Victor Schertzinger production distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. These banks are of heavy tin, blue in color with the name, "Dollar Devils," lettered in gold. They will be sent to the Exchanges to be used in exploiting this romance of an oil-boom town.

Sermon Based on "Down to Sea in Ships"

What is considered by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation as undeniable proof of the educational and entertaining value of the Elmer Clifton production, "Down to the Sea in Ships," is shown in a recent letter received by Rowland and Clark, owners of the State theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., which recently played "Down to the Sea in Ships." This letter was sent by the Rev. Edwin J. Van Etten of the Calvary Church, Shady Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., and reads as follows:

"I see with great interest that you are having that fine picture, 'Down to the Sea in Ships,' this week. By a curious chance I am preaching on those words as a text, Psalm 107:23 next Sunday night in Calvary Church. The service is to be broadcasted by KDKA wireless to sailors and seamen. We are going to sing hymns requested by sailors on the Great Lakes and on vessels in the Coast wise trade. Letters have come from keepers of lighthouses and from various islands including Bermuda.

"It is surely interesting that Pittsburgh, an inland city, will be the first to send a special service for those at sea. I thought you might be interested in this in connection with your wonderful picture this week."

Big Plans for "Winning of Barbara Worth"

"The Winning of Barbara Worth" is definitely selected by Principal Pictures as the first vehicle to be given everlasting life on the silver sheet. According to Sol Lesser, president of the organization, the picture will be made on a big scale and no expense or time will be saved in giving the film world a gigantic presentation.

Harold Bell Wright has been in conference with the Principal Pictures officials for the past ten days and every angle for the perfection of the story for the screen has been thoroughly adjusted. Harry Carr and Walter Anthony have completed the script and actual filming is scheduled to commence within a two week period.

Eddie Cline, who has just completed "The Meanest Man in the World" for the above organization and who also directed Jackie Coogan in "Circus Days," adapted from "Toby Tyler" for Sol Lesser, is to have charge of the direction of this feature production.

A group of views from Edwin Carewe's production of "The Girl of the Golden West" for First National release.

Belasco Off Soon For Warner Studios

An event of particular significance to the motion picture industry is the announcement that David Belasco will leave on June 4 for the Warner Brothers Coast studios to personally supervise the making of a number of features which will be known as David Belasco productions. Mr. Belasco will be accompanied by Lenore Ulric, who will be starred by the Warners in the film version of her famous stage success, "Tiger Rose."

The significance attached to Mr. Belasco's departure is that this will mark the first time in the notable career of the theatrical producer that he becomes definitely identified with the industry.

According to an arrangement with the Warners, Mr. Belasco will supervise the making of several plays, the first of which will be Miss Ulric's, starring vehicle, "Tiger Rose." Preparations for the filming of this play are now under way at the Coast studios, and the cast which will be subject to Mr. Belasco's approval is being selected. Jane Farrell, who created the original part of Wa-Wa on the stage, has been engaged to portray the same role in the screen play.

Mr. Belasco has selected Sidney Franklin to direct Miss Ulric, and Edmund Goulding to write the scenario.

Fox Productions on Russell Sage List

Three Fox Film Corporation productions are on the list of eighteen best pictures of recent years issued by Russell Sage Foundation as the result of a questionnaire submitted to high school students in eighty representative American cities.

The three photoplays are "Over the Hill," "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," the screen version of Mark Twain's classic, and "The Queen of Sheba," the J. Gordon Edwards spectacle. All were classified as specials on the 1921-22 Fox release program, and according to announcements this week, will be withdrawn from circulation on September 1st after two and a half years of successful presentation throughout the world.

The questionnaires which were filled by more than 50,000 students were made with the hope of establishing a concrete list of the productions that have appealed to the American youth and of determining the extent of their likes and dislikes with a view of correcting misunderstanding.

Novel Theatre Scenes in "Rouged Lips"

A series of novel features have been arranged by the Metro staff of technical experts to make the theatre scenes of "Rouged Lips," Viola Dana's newest starring picture for Metro, distinctive from any other production dealing with life behind the footlights.

A reproduction of the interior of a theatre has been constructed on one of the huge enclosed stages at the Metro studios. In addition to a thousand seats it includes an orchestra pit, a glass surfaced runway with electric lights beneath, and a complete stage.

Would Create Research Archives

Schenck Suggests to Producers Bureau For Permanent Historical Data

IN recommendations to the Motion Picture Producers' Association, Joseph M. Schenck, producer of Norma and Constance Talmadge features for First National, suggests the establishment of permanent archives in which would be kept records of the results of research made by motion picture producers during the preparation for the filming of historical pictures.

"I am willing to turn over to this proposed museum all the data collected by my staff concerning the period of Charles IX of France," says Mr. Schenck. "And that includes architectural, costume, and historical 'properties' and a wealth of other accessories including a specially chosen library of 1,100 volumes of the period which were consulted for the filming of 'Ashes of Vengeance,' Norma Talmadge's latest photoplay."

"It would be a splendid and altruistic thing if all the data concerning other period plays such as

"Robin Hood," "Intolerance," and many others which I could mention, were turned over to this museum," says Mr. Schenck.

"It took a great deal of time and a large expenditure of money by my technical staff to assemble information regarding details that enter into the making of 'Ashes of Vengeance.' I am willing to place this information at the disposal of any other producer who may in the future produce a story of the same period and the same locale—France of the 16th century.

"We had to comb all the libraries within our reach and men had to go to New York to continue the work there before all the details we wanted were assembled. It does not impress me as economic wisdom for another producer to have to do what we have done already. If all such information were on file with the Producer's Association it would greatly lighten the research work of all the studios."

Denver Commercial Travelers Will Show "Down To The Sea In Ships"

THE distinction of selling salesmen, instead of selling buyers, goes to the Denver branch of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation regarding a recent contract made with the United Commercial Travelers for showing, the early part of June, of "Down to the Sea in Ships" at the Broadway theatre, Denver, Col. It is seldom that a sales organization can overstep the bounds and sell their product direct to a salesmen organization. But this has been accomplished by the Denver branch.

The United Commercial Travelers will present "Down to the Sea in Ships" at the Broadway during the early part of June. According to word received from the Denver branch the Travelers Organization have taken the picture and the theatre on a straight rental basis. They are planning extensive exploitation and advertising and are handling the matter entirely themselves.

Special window displays have been obtained throughout the city of Denver. In order to stimulate interest in the showing the United Commercial Travelers are giving away approximately 200 prizes at a total value of $2,500. The prizes include an automobile, traveling bags, electric irons, toasters, cigars and etc.

The Broadway theatre, Denver, is a legitimate house playing the biggest and best road shows in this section of the country. The appearance of "Down to the Sea in Ships" at this house under the auspices of the United Commercial Travelers will be first run in this territory.

It is estimated that over 400 people are out selling tickets for this presentation. H. O. Barteles, manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in Denver, and his able crew of salesmen have been responsible for this contract.

Elaine Hammerstein Is Convention Guest

Elaine Hammerstein, Truett star, is in Chicago as the guest of the Exhibitors' convention. Miss Hammerstein carried the greetings of Mayor Hylan, of New York, which she presented to Mayor Dever, when she was welcomed officially by the latter to the City of Chicago.

During the convention Miss Hammerstein put in the busiest days of her life and by her simple and unassuming manner made a deep impression upon the congress of exhibitors assembled. The convention appointed a committee to wait upon the Truett star and see that she was shown all the sights of Chicago.

Miss Hammerstein met M. H. Hoffman in Chicago, and headquarters were established at the Renown Exchange, one of the territorial offices of which Mr. Hoffman is directing head. During her visit Miss Hammerstein met all the local exhibitors, and exchangemen, as well as the newspapermen of Chicago.

Shipman to Show Fight Pictures in Canada

Ernest Shipman announces that he has acquired for exclusive distribution in Canada the pictures of the fights staged at the Yankee Stadium on May 12th, for the benefit of the Free Milk Fund, in which Willard conquered Johnson and Firpo knocked out McAuliffe. The pictures will be released in the Dominion through Shipman's own exchanges, which he established last year for the handling of his personally-produced Canadian subjects.

In the past, fight films have had a difficult row to hoe at the hands of Canadian censor-boards, particularly in Ontario—permission to show any exhibition of such a nature having been almost repeatedly refused. In this instance, however, it is confidently expected that the censor-boards will let down the bars and sanction the general public showing of the film.

The distribution of the pictures will be under the general supervision of William C. Cranston, manager of the Shipman exchange in Toronto, with headquarters in the offices of Canadian Educational Films Ltd.

Acclaim "Girl of Golden West" New York Reviewers Hail Picture Version as Better Than Stage Play

NEW YORK newspaper critics hailed the renaissance of the swift, virile story of the West as exemplified by "The Girl of the Golden West," Edwin Carewe's picturization of the Belasco masterpiece, which opened this week at the Broadway Strand.

Robert E. Sherwood, speaking through the New York Herald, says: "The movies have always reached their highest level of entertainment in swift moving, actionful Western melodramas. . . . There is plenty of good old-fashioned punch in 'The Girl of the Golden West,' which is now on view at the Strand. This melodrama of the frontiers, which has done service as a Belasco masterpiece and as a grand opera, is at its best on the screen."

Quinn Martin in the Morning World gave a similar welcome to the melodrama. "In putting Mr. Belasco's play into pictures," writes the critic, "Mr. Carewe knew he was dealing with the cinema's best bet, so far as play types go. Melodrama of the broadest kind is on view most of the time the film is under way. It is acted by Mr. Kerrigan, Miss Theby and Sylvia Breamer almost faultlessly and the photography could not be much more attractive."

Don Allen, in the Evening World, wrote: "'The Girl of the Golden West' was a fine play, a successful grand opera and now, as shown on the Strand screen, it is better than ever as a picture."

The review in the Evening Sun states that "from all appearances the 'Western' picture is coming into vogue again. It ('The Girl of the Golden West') is the most exciting thing that has come to town since 'The Covered Wagon' started breaking records."

"They've made a good motion picture out of 'The Girl of the Golden West,'" writes Joseph Mulvaney in the New York American. "They have preserved in the film all the quixotic chivalry of the play. They have staged it in the natural splendor of the mountains."

New Fisher Production Due Soon With "Youth Triumphant" Completed Producer Is Considering New Stories

WITH the completion of "Youth Triumphant," the initial Fisher Production staged at the Hollywood studios the past two months, Victor B. Fisher announces that work on the second independent production will be started immediately.

"We plan to lose no time in our producing schedule which calls for a series of superlative pictures," said Mr. Fisher, "and several stories are now being considered for the second production."

"Distributing plans for 'Youth Triumphant' and other Fisher Productions will be announced within the next two weeks. Several propositions have been submitted but we have made no definite decision in the matter pending the conclusion of negotiations with various distributors. Meantime we are going ahead with plans for our next picture which will be of the standard of quality offered in 'Youth Triumphant' and which will offer an all-star cast of established box-office merit."

"Youth Triumphant" is an adaptation from George Gibbs' most popular novel which also recently appeared in serial form in the Green Book. It presents a mystery drama revolving around a young street waif who grows into beautiful womanhood to become confronted with a mystery that shakes her life and threatens the happiness of a dozen people.

The story was adapted and directed by Miss Lillian Ducey who has been associated in similar work with Maurice Tourneur, Allan Dwan, Eric Von Stroheim and others during the past three years.

Among those in the cast are Virginia Lee Corbin, Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Joseph Dowling, Kate Price, Claire McDowell, William Boyd, Ward Crane, Mary Anderson and others.

In the production of Fisher pictures, the producers have announced a policy of closely following stories that have been popular in book form. It is believed that this close adherence to popular stories will be welcomed by the public who are constantly disappointed in picture versions because they are not recognizable by the time they reach the screen.

Big Feature Schedule Planned by F. B. O.

With a wealth of good stories purchased and put into form for production, the Film Booking Offices are planning the most expansive film schedule that has been undertaken since the corporation was organized under P. A. Powers.

Reading continuously in preparation for the gigantic program that has been outlined, the Powers studios staff under direction of Offeman and Art Director Forest have finally weeded out from the mass of material which is submitted to them daily, a few dozen stories which they consider the season's best possibilities for the screen. The majority of these are magazine stories by well-known authors.

Among those which have been whipped into shape and are due to be filmed soon by F.B.O. are "The Stumbling Herd," by John A. Morosco; "Quenado," by Marvin White; "The Isle of Retribution," by Edison Marshall; "The Coward," by Arthur Stringer; and "Life, Liberty and —," by Wyndham Martyn.

Second National Has "I Am the Law" Rights

THROUGH mistake it was reported last week that Griever Productions had purchased the Illinois rights to "I Am the Law." This is not so. The territorial rights for Illinois on the C. C. Burr feature, "I Am the Law," were contracted for some long time ago, and are owned by Second National Pictures of Chicago.

C. B. C. Is Lining Up Fall Product

That the new Fall product of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation will be especially distinguished by catchy titles, is the announcement that comes this week from Joe Brandt, president of that organization, who has just arrived at the West Coast studios to confer with Production Manager Harry Cohn and Director Edward J. LeSaint.

Mr. Brandt announces that plans are already well under way for the lining up and production of the eighteen features which shall comprise the C. B. C. 1923-24 product. While announcement is being withheld for the time being on the casts and well known authors whose names will be represented in the lineup, pending complete final arrangements, Mr. Brandt says that this lineup will include picturization of "Mind Your Own Business," "Innocent," "Discontented Husbands," "The Marriage Market," "What About the Children?" and "Buyers of Souls." These, and the other productions on the schedule, will come under the banner of Columbia Productions, Inc., which will be distributed through C. B. C.

"Lovebound" Approved by Trade Critics

Trade paper reviewers were unanimous in their praise of "Lovebound," starring Shirley Mason, which was released by Fox Film Corporation in April.

The Moving Picture World is quoted: "The star is charming in a part that suits her style and has been exceptionally well directed. 'Lovebound' is a good attraction that will please Shirley Mason fans and interest most anyone. The story has some well developed situations of suspense."

The Exhibitors Herald said: "This is a first-rate human little story, well acted and well produced. It is the sort of thing that Shirley Mason does best and with an excellent supporting cast, it makes a good all around attraction."

The Motion Picture News classifies the production as a "good program picture" and casts a favorable light on the "competent work of the star, Albert Roscoe, and Richard Tucker."

Exhibitors Trade Review commented as follows: "The story makes pleasant entertainment and should satisfy the admirers of Shirley Mason. . . . 'Lovebound' fills the bill that will reach an appeal with the majority who sees it."

"Brass Bottle" Cast Is Carefully Selected

MAURICE TOURNEUR has drawn from the casts of the season's two most pretentious productions for players to enact the leading parts in his newest production for M. C. Levee, "The Brass Bottle," presented by First National.

From the cast of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," Tourneur selected Sam De Grasso, who did the cruel King John, and Roy Corliss whose portrayal of the jester attracted much favorable comment. In "The Brass Bottle" De Grasso again appears as a King—King Solomon—and Corliss as "The Evil Eye" an eerie creature of the spirit world.

Ernest Torrence and Tully Marshall are two other actors in a recent screen triumph, who appear in the Tourneur picture. Torrence as the eccentric scout and Marshall as the drunken trapper, in "The Covered Wagon" will long be remembered. In "The Brass Bottle" they have characters that are expected to prove fully as distinctive as their respective portrayals in the big Western drama.

Vanderbilt Kin with Cosmopolitan

Following the example set by his friends, Park Benjamin II and Craig Biddle, Jr., Amos Tuck French, Jr., has gone into motion pictures. Mr. French, of the well known family of that name of Newport and New York, made his debut as a film actor this week in "Under the Red Robe," the screen version of Stanley Weyman's famous story which Alan Crosland is directing for the Cosmopolitan Corporation.

Amos Tuck French, Jr., is a grandson of Mrs. Stuyvesant Le Roy and a nephew of Mrs. Paul Fitz Simmons, formerly Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt. He is also a cousin of William H. Vanderbilt.

In the same picture, in which Robert B. Mantell, John Charles Thomas and Alma Rubens are featured, Park Benjamin II is also appearing. Mr. French, Jr., attended Princeton University.

Pastor Approves "Town That Forgot God"

Rev. Irving E. Deer, executive secretary of the Dayton Council of Churches, has written a letter of commendation on "The Town that Forgot God" to Fox Film Corporation following the presentation of the special at the State theatre in that city.

The letter follows: "It is not often that I permit myself to give a written endorsement of a photoplay, for it is unfortunately not often that one can do so with ease. But after seeing the private screening of 'The Town that Forgot God' I wish to say that the film has my unqualified endorsement, and I am sure all who see it will thank you for bringing it to Dayton."

Critics Praise "Soul of Beast"

Washington Reviewers Commend Ince Production at Successful Showing

"SOUL OF THE BEAST," a Metro picture produced by Thomas H. Ince, played a successful week at Loew's Columbia theatre, Washington, according to report. Managing Director Lawrence Beatis of Loew's Washington theatres, and Manager Gates of the Columbia, carried out an elaborate advance campaign on the picture and reported excellent results. Motion picture critics of the Washington dailies were enthusiastic in their praise of "Soul of the Beast." Following are some of their comments:

Herald—Thomas H. Ince offers what is probably the outstanding cinema novelty of the year in his vivid drama of two circus runaways. It is one of the most appealing pictures of the year.

Post—The Columbia this week presents about the closest approach to a three-ring circus in screen form that the local silver sheet has ever offered to the public.

Star—The wanderings of Oscar the elephant in search of his mistress are beautiful in story as well as in photoplay. The Canadian backwoods lend an entrancing background to the picture.

Daily News—Some romance—some thrills—some laughs. The feature has 'em.

Times—One of the screen's real novelties is the attraction at Loew's Columbia this week and all who have thrilled with enjoyment at the circus should not fail to see this film—"Soul of the Beast." Were it not that Miss Madge Bellamy is so entrancingly pretty one might say that Oscar, a big elephant, is the star of the entertainment. What this monster pachyderm does in the course of five reels is really marvelous. "Soul of the Beast" serves as a vehicle which brings Miss Bellamy to the very edge of stardom.

"Enemies of Women" Approved

Mayor Dever of Chicago Declares It Most Magnificent Production

ONE of the greatest tributes ever accorded a motion picture was that tendered "Enemies of Women," Cosmopolitan's picturization of the Ibanez novel, by Mayor William E. Dever of Chicago last week, it is said. After viewing the film at the Roosevelt Theatre, Mayor Dever said:

"I guess Mrs. Dever and I didn't miss many of the big pictures, but this film is undoubtedly the most magnificent we have ever seen. The story is forceful, the actors are the best to be had, the scenes, particularly those made in Monte Carlo and Paris, are educational and make a stirring background for the play itself. The greatest achievement of the producers of this picture is the manner of presenting this great moral so attractively that it gains force rather than loses it by the magnificence of its presentation. The whole story is told in the line:

"For those who sow self-indulgence can reap only emptiness of heart and loathing of life. Only through sacrifice in the shadow of the cross can happiness be found."

"Enemies" is now in its fifth capacity week at the Roosevelt Theatre. In its first week there it broke all records, playing to more than $26,000, it is said.

Fisher Meets Footage Demands

Announces That Production Policy Will Put Limit at Six Reels

THE popular demand on the part of exhibitors throughout the country concerning footage of feature production, has been accepted by Fisher Productions, newly formed producing organization of San Francisco with studios in Hollywood.

In an announcement issued by Victor B. Fisher, supervising director, the Fisher Company goes on record as favoring the six-reel production and states this will be the policy of this organization in the instance of "Youth Triumphant," just completed, as well as future pictures.

"The popular request of exhibitors urging producers to keep the length of feature pictures down to six reels," said Mr. Fisher, "is something that cannot be ignored by producers."

"Believing that it pays to give the exhibitor what he wants, Fisher Productions announces its decision to comply with the exhibitors demands and will confine 'Youth Triumphant' and all future pictures to a footage of six reels.

"Fisher Productions agrees with exhibitors that with a very few exceptions, it is not necessary to go beyond six reels in telling a story on the screen. In 'Youth Triumphant' we have a story that we had originally planned for a nine reel production. The story is replete with action, drama and romance and it was a difficult matter to confine it to six reels. However, acting on the requests of exhibitors we did so and now, upon completion of the film, we find that the picture loses nothing by its presentation in shorter form."

"Youth Triumphant," the initial Fisher Production will soon be ready for release. The picture is now in its final cutting under the supervision of Mr. Fisher and Lillian Ducey who directed and adapted the story by George Gibbs.

Preferred Envoy Sees Good Business

GEORGE S. JEFFREY, Special Representative for the Al Lichtman Corporation returned to New York this week after a business trip through Canada and New York State. He reports that every key city in New York is now playing the Preferred product.

In Canada, Mr. Jeffrey announces that business is rapidly recovering from the blow dealt it by the failure of the crops in the West. Exhibitors say business is normal again.

Mr. Jeffrey organized a Canadian sales drive and called a meeting at the Home Office of the Allens, who handle the Preferred product in Canada. Reports from Quebec, Ontario, and the Maritime Provinces showed that Preferred Pictures had gone over with the exhibitors who awaited eagerly the fifteen releases announced for next season.

"Are You A Failure?" especially, is going strong and is soon to play in both Toronto and Montreal at the Allen theatres.

Shipman Seeking Long Island Beauties

The newspapers of Long Island—numbering about seventy-five, and headed by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle—are said to be unanimously endorsing and supporting the movement of Ernest Shipman to find two Long Island beauties who will typify the "Sunrise Trail." They are beginning, this week, a contest—and will conduct it for a period of sixty days—in an effort to determine the most beautiful blonde and the most beautiful brunette in their respective communities. At the conclusion of the contest, the winners will be again judged by a committee of experts, whose choices will be awarded the opportunity to make their debut on the screen.

Shipman's search for pulchritude is in connection with the forthcoming production of "Sunrise Trail" Pictures on Long Island, by the recently-organized Long Island Cinema Corporation.

Broadway Showing for "If Winter Comes"

With the completion of the William Fox screen version of "If Winter Comes," A. S. M. Hutchinson's sensational literary success, negotiations virtually have been completed for a large Broadway theatre in which the photoplay will make its first appearance.

Mr. Millarde, with a company of players headed by Percy Marmont and Miss Ann Forest, who play Mark Sabre and Effie Bright respectively, were in England the greater part of a year to take the picture.

The screen version of "If Winter Comes" is said to have adhered with absolute fidelity to the original story.

Massive Goldwyn Set Is Assured

The Goldwyn studios are taking no chances with the largest motion picture set ever constructed at the Culver City studio. The set is a medieval palace, and was built for use in "In the Palace of the King," the historic spectacle of Spain in the sixteenth century which Emmett Flynn is directing.

Following completion of the palace, Abraham Lehr, vice-president of the Goldwyn company, contracted for an insurance policy with Behrendt and Levy, insurance brokers. The contract insures King Philip's massive residence for $500,000, and protects it against fire, storms, lightning or, to quote the policy, "any act of God which may damage or destroy the edifice."

Mr. Lehr declares that destruction of the palace now would mean more than a $500,000 loss to the company, not only through the cost of the building alone, but also in delay caused in making the picture.

Fisher Will Closely Follow Novels

Victor B. Fisher, supervising director of "Youth Triumphant," the initial offering of a series of Fisher Productions, announces a policy of close adaptation of popular novels in all pictures released under this trade mark.

"So much criticism has been made against producers who change the original story to such an extent that nothing but the title remains—and sometimes that is changed—that we believe a close adherence to well-known novels will meet with the hearty approval of both exhibitors and public," said Mr. Fisher.

"Youth Triumphant" has a cast including Virginia Lee Corbin, Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatten, Joseph Dowling, Kate Price, Claire McDowell, William Boyd, Mary Anderson and other popular players.

Preferred Pictures Well Received in England

Preferred Pictures are doing an exceptional business in England, according to a letter just received from David L. Blumenfeld, of the Walturdaw Company, Ltd., which handles the Schulberg-Lichtman product abroad.

"Shadows," the Tom Forman production in which Lon Chaney is featured at the Regent Theatre, Brighton, he writes, "Queues a hundred yards formed up outside every evening," "attracted by the astounding press notices which the film received."

He goes on to say that thirty-five enthusiastic stories about "Poor Men's Wives," a Gasnier production for Preferred, appeared in the London dailies during a ten day period. Sales Manager Allen Byre of Walturdaw reports a record number of bookings on this release.

"Famous Mrs. Fair" Is Approved

Civic Leaders of Paducah Acclaim Production at Private Showing

TWO hundred men and women, ministers, leaders in club and civic affairs, welfare workers, and those socially prominent, were guests of the Orpheum theatre management at Paducah, Kentucky, several weeks ago at a private showing of Fred Niblo's Metro-Louis B. Mayer picture, "The Famous Mrs. Fair." This was done prior to the run of the picture during the week of April 30th. The result it is said was an avalanche of praise and enthusiasm which was sent broadcast through Paducah by those who had previewed it.

Victor Doering, Metro exploitation representative in that territory, arranged the private showing which was the pivot of the entire campaign. Doering enlisted the aid of the "News Democrat" the leading Paducah paper, which in addition to giving the picture unusual space for press material all through the run, conducted a symposium among the townspeople as to the moral question involved in "The Famous Mrs. Fair" and a spread of advertising in which nine leading merchants co-operated. The advertising was tied up with a cut-up puzzle of a scene distributed through the ads for which prizes in money and tickets were given if properly put together.

"The Famous Mrs. Fair" was unanimously endorsed by Paducah. It was cited by the press and by the public as an unusual and brilliant achievement and a great credit to the industry.

"The Famous Mrs. Fair" is from the stage play of the same name by James Forbes. It was adapted to the screen by Frances Marion and photographed by Charles J. Van Enger. It is a Metro-Louis B. Mayer attraction released by Metro Pictures Corporation.

"Counterfeit Love" Due in June

Murray Garsson Will Present Drama of Romance, Crooks and Horse Racing

COUNTERFEIT love and counterfeit money are pitted against honor, real affection, and the indomitable will of a high-strung Southern girl, in "Counterfeit Love," the Playgoers Special, whose release has been set for June 10. This five-reel feature, described as a thrilling melodrama of romance, crooks and horse racing, is presented by Murray W. Garsson.

The locale of the action is Dixieland, with the picturesque background of a county fair as the scene of the big dramatic climax—a nerve-wrecking race, upon the result of which hangs the fate of the fortune and life happiness of the heroine, a belle of the South. Ralph Ince directed the production and in the list of players are Joe King, Marion Swayne, Norma Lee, Jack Richardson and Alexander Giglio.

Mary Shelley, whose father had once been a prosperous breeder of race horses, assumed the burden of maintaining the Shelley household when the father died penniless. She had a crippled sister and a shell-shocked brother to provide for. To the community drifted a handsome and apparently wealthy stranger, who proceeded to make love to the Southern beauty. Almost coincidentally Mary was advised that a note owing the bank was almost due and could not be renewed.

The big county fair was an event of deep importance to the Shelleys, for Mary had entered in the grand sweepstakes the one thoroughbred remaining from the once extensive stable, and on the result seemed to depend the retention of the old homestead. The Shelley entry led until the last lap was reached—then collapsed, almost in front of the grandstand.

The fascinating stranger took advantage of the financial stress of the family to press his suit with Mary, and she, with the happiness of her sister and brother in mind, finally accepted his offer of marriage. A flood of counterfeit money had poured into the town and some of it was traced to the Shelley home. At about the same time a man was brutally assaulted and circumstantial evidence pointed to Mary's brother as the criminal, but all turns out well.

Principal Creates New Theatre Department

Principal Pictures Corporation has made an intensive study of the theatre owner's problems and as a direct result they have organized a department comprised of five experienced and successful showmen whose sole duties are the conception and preparation of advertising material which may be depended upon to bring results at the box office.

The exhibitor aids which Sol and Irving M. Lesser are supplying with their Super Five Series include the following: an elaborate line of lithographic paper executed by the Otis Company, the sketches for which were made by Prival who was especially commissioned for this work by Irving M. Lesser; hand painted and gold carbon lobby photos made by Ullman Mfg. Co., who also made the two-color rotogravure press books; complete musical programs arranged by James Bradford; a series of three slides for each production; beautiful lobby frames by Krauss; miniature photos, 2 x 3 inches, to be given to patrons, these being actual photographs of striking scenes from the photodrama. A portion of the advertising helps supplied, are a four-page, full newspaper size, rotogravure section which has been completed for "The Spider And The Rose."

Elaborate Setting For "Green Goddess"

Distinctive Pictures Corporation claims to have built the largest set ever constructed at an Eastern studio for the mob scene in "The Green Goddess," now well under way at the Distinctive production plant in the Bronx. It is an entire section of a Himalayan mountain town, showing the principal street going up a hillside. On top of the hill is the palace of the Rajah, the part played by George Arliss.

Clark Robinson, Art Director, designed the set after a study of Hindoo architecture to which he devoted many months. The building and decorations were done under the supervision of Mr. Robinson, Frank Muchmore, the scene painter, and Roshanara, the East Indian dancer, who is in charge of the technical detail on the picture. At the base of the hill are homes of the people. Further on up the slope are bazaars and public buildings, lining both sides of the street.

Alice Joyce, David Powell and Harry T. Morey play the roles of the victims of the mob's frenzy. "The Green Goddess" will be distributed by Goldwyn and Cosmopolitan.

Penwomen Endorse "The Famous Mrs. Fair"

The Fred Niblo screen production of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," which is a Metro-Louis B. Mayer attraction, has received the official endorsement of the League of American Penwomen through its resident, Mrs. Louis N. Geldert, who is also chairman of the department of fiction of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Following a special viewing at the studios of Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, director of public service and educational department, Crandall Theatre, Washington, D. C., the following telegram was received by Fred Niblo at Los Angeles.

Doug's "Robin Hood" at Mikado's Theatre

For the first time in the history of the Japanese empire a motion picture has been shown in Tokio at the Imperial theatre, which is owned by the royal family and recognized as the most famous playhouse in the Orient.

The picture was "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," a United Artists release, and represented the introduction of this feature to the populace in the Land of the Rising Sun.

In order to present this production at the Imperial theatre it was necessary to cancel the engagement of a very famous Japanese drama which had been booked for the time given over to the Fairbanks film. This arrangement was effected through the good graces of Baron Okura. The musical score for the picture was effective.

How to Make the Theatre More Attractive Valuable Suggestions on Renovating and Remodeling That Should Be Considered

IT is now the season of the year for exhibitors to be giving thought to remodeling and renovating their theatres. This matter requires considerable thought and study to secure the most effective results with the minimum of cost. It is therefore advantageous to make a preliminary study of this problem well in advance of the time for the actual work.

Possibly some exhibitors feel that the problem of renovating or remodeling the theatre does not confront them individually. That their house is in excellent condition and well satisfying to the clientele to which they cater. Perhaps this condition holds true to a degree in a few instances, mainly in the modern picture palace. But only in a minority of cases.

In the average motion picture theatre there is unlimited opportunity for alterations, not necessarily of an expensive nature, but alterations which will give to the clientele of that theatre a change of atmosphere to which they have become thoroughly accustomed.

Good pictures are an essential. This we have stated time and again. Their importance is understood universally by every successful exhibitor. But what is under-rated, due no doubt to a natural lag in understanding and appreciating the development of the American motion picture goer's demands and tastes, is the necessity for refinement and perfection in the physical characteristics and appointments of the theatre.

Increasing the Popularity of the Theatre

These demands which the public now make, on the theatre, must be met if a generally increasing popularity of pictures is to be enjoyed. That is why the matter of remodeling or renovating should command the serious consideration of exhibitors. Changes throughout the theatre can be of a greatly diversified nature.

Possibly that phase which lends itself with the greatest effectiveness is interior decoration. No matter what the style or type of house, if the proper artistic touch be given, a pleasing, restful and inviting atmosphere can be created. Color schemes and designs may be made to harmonize with any architectural design. Naturally some theatres lend themselves to better advantage for this purpose than others. Yet take any ordinary house and apply that certain quality of taste to the scheme of interior decoration and the general attractiveness of appearance will be increased many-fold.

To secure this result requires time and thought and probably the recommendation or services of some expert decorator. Interior decoration is an art and must be considered and treated as such in its application.

While the front of the theatre may not be of paramount importance yet a neat attractive exterior certainly lends a degree of dignity and creates a popular impression among the townspeople.

A well proportioned and designed electrical display sign which harmonizes with the theatre exterior not only serves to improve the appearance but in most instances will be found a good investment from its advertising value alone. Here lies an opportunity for many exhibitors to add a new or improved feature to their house that will give a double value, and possibly will give their particular building exterior predominance over all other buildings in that locality.

A Venerable Point for Effective Re-design

The marquee proves an equally venerable point for re-design in many instances. A re-design in this case may only involve the changing of the illumination of the marquee as effective lighting is very important in marquees. In this again lies an opportunity to make the theatre front the center of attraction of a given locality.

Lobby frames, ticket booths, and the other innumerable details of the theatre exterior are all subjects on which an improvement may be made. Such improvements can be counted upon to immediately attract the attention of the town or neighborhood.

When considering the stage or what represents the stage in a motion picture house, the matter of the exhibitor's skill in showmanship enters, for it is here that individuality may be displayed to best advantage. The general decoration of the stage comes within the scope of interior decorating, but the finishing touch for each show must be supplied from an individual's fund of original ideas and tastes. This subject of staging and presenting a picture is fast becoming an art in itself and can no longer be ignored by any far sighted exhibitor.

Two Subjects of Greatest Importance to Theatres

There are two subjects without which no discussion on the physical characteristics and appointments of a theatre would be complete. They are ventilation and projection. While the above discussion has given stress to many other subjects, these last two mentioned have been reserved as having the greatest influence on the popularity of a theatre.

A large number of houses now operate throughout the complete summer. This record, which in the past was impossible, is now within the grasp of every theatre through the installation of proper ventilating equipment. Ventilation is now only important in the summer but proves nearly as useful in the winter. The cooling effect in summer in many parts of this country is an absolute essential, yet the exhaust of foul air in winter is nearly as great an asset.

Every Exhibitor Must Come to One Conclusion

Exhibitors must come to one conclusion, i.e., ventilation is essential for the successful operation of a theatre and eventually every theatre will embody this feature. Providing a theatre does not have the facilities for proper ventilation, then no other remodeling or renovating should even be considered until this condition is remedied.

There are various ventilating equipments on the market, some one type of which will amply fulfill the requirements of any particular type of theatre. This department of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS offers its service gratis to exhibitors in the selection of the necessary equipment.

Projection and screening of the picture does not necessarily come under the heading of remodeling or renovating. They are subjects which should be under the constant attention of the exhibitor for it is through these that the effectiveness of a picture is enhanced or destroyed. Why there is one single exhibitor today that does not realize this to its fullest degree is highly problematic. An exhibitor who tolerates imperfect projection cannot be excused. The manner in which large numbers of exhibitors shun improving their projection department might lead to the belief that a heavy expenditure was necessary for the installation and maintenance of up to date equipment. Considered as a percentage of the theatre's yearly expenses, this proves negligible. Many articles have appeared in this department from time to time on projection and there is therefore no necessity of going into details at this time. Sufficient to say that good projection is as essential as good pictures. The one cannot be had without the other.

Articles treating in more detail with the subject of renovating and remodeling well appear in this department in the near future. The suggestions contained in the above discussion will serve as a reminder to the exhibitor so that he may start planning for improvement on his theatre this summer.

Smooth Movement of Pictures Explained

Description of Qualities of Eye and Vision that Permit Phenomena

By DONALD A. LAIRD

University of Iowa *

THE story of the development of the motion picture industry is a fascinating bit of history in financial organization and international trade competition. Why the movies move is as fascinating a morsel from the recent history of applied science and the progress of mechanics.

The present excellence of clearness, freedom from the flicker, and the illusion of motion in the movie are due to the ingenious application and capitalization of certain facts primarily from the field of psychology. It will be necessary to review these interesting discoveries in order to establish a basis for an understanding of why these pictures, which are really intermittent, motionless and flat, nevertheless appear to be continuous in motion and to possess depth.

Three Questions to Answer

There are three questions for us to answer regarding the motion picture. First: Why is it that the pictures seem continuous when as a matter of fact the screen is in total darkness more than thirty times a second? Then the second question is: Why do we get the impression of motion from these pictures which in reality are absolutely motionless? And, third: Why do the pictures have the appearance of depth when in reality they extend only to the right and left, and up and down, and do not possess any objective third dimension or depth?

It is to the eye that the motion picture makes its first appeal. And since it is through vision that the apparent motion is perceived it will be necessary for us to take up first of all some phases of the structure and function of the eye as a basis for our understanding of the movies.

The human eye is a miniature camera, capable of a large variety adjustments. The eye is wonderfully responsive and automatically so, to the slightest change in light, color or position. But it is not without its defects and shortcomings even in so-called normal eyes. It is by the capitalization of some of these peculiarities, which almost amount to defects, that the movies are made possible.

Just behind the pupil of the eye is a small crystal line lens that automatically adjusts itself to different distances and conditions of vision. The eye thus differs from all other cameras in being self-focusing.

No light can enter the human eye except through the lens, since the remainder of the eye forms a light-proof box. The rays of light which pass through this lens into the eye are focused upon the inner surface of the eyeball. This is covered with a layer of highly specialized nervous substance which is acted upon by changes caused by the light. This specialized layer is called the retina and corresponds to the sensitive film or plate in the ordinary camera.

In the camera the momentary exposure of light causes a chemical change on the sensitized surface of the film. But before the picture can be brought into view further chemical changes must be effected by the photographer in the processes of development and fixation.

Not so with this marvelous human camera. Although vision is essentially momentary in character, due to the continual movement of the eye itself, exposure follows exposure and chemical change follows upon chemical change. There is not time to call in the photographer to develop and fix the pictures after each exposure. Indeed, there is no need.

Nature has provided the human camera with a chemical substance sensitive to light which automatically renews itself. This material is called rhodopsin, or visual purple, from its appearance in freshly dissected eyes. This visual purple permeates the entire retinal structure and is probably the keystone to vision.

Development and Fixation in Human Camera

The development and fixation in the human camera takes place mainly outside the eye. This occurs principally in the brain, to which the eyes are connected by a direct nervous pathway. The retina of the eye is the outpost of the brain, but the nervous material in the retina is not affected directly by the rays of light focused upon it by the crystalline lens.

There is an interesting bit of experimental evidence which demonstrates this beyond doubt. Retinas which have been washed free from all chemicals which might permeate the network of nervous fibres have been used for experimentation. It has been found that in order to stimulate this purely nervous structure of the eye directly the light must be so strong as practically to destroy these nervous elements. And still it is a matter for common observation that we can see, that is our retinas are stimulated by lights of weak intensity.

The only explanation is the one already suggested. The light acts first upon some photo-chemical substance which bathes the retina, and the changed chemical composition which the light waves bring about stimulates the nervous parts of the retina.

Just what this substance is remains an open question. There is some evidence to indicate that it is not the visual purple. For example, Kuhne found that through continued exposure to light the visual purple in a frog's eye was completely bleached. Still the frog reacted to light and changes in light in a practically normal manner after this thorough bleaching had taken place.

Function of Visual Purple of Eye

The visual purple is probably the chemical medium for the adaptation of the eye to light or dark illumination. In passing from the open air into the darkened motion picture theatre it takes some time for one's eyes to "get used to the dark." This is technically known as adaptation, and its chemical basis in the eye is the visual purple. This same substance may have a prominent part in the general vision, or another still undiscovered chemical substance may be the basis for vision.

At any rate, vision is primarily photo-chemical. Without the intervention of some photo-chemical material the energy which we call light has no ordinary effect upon the eye.

The light which is focused upon the retina by the lens alters the arrangement of the molecules in the photo-chemical material; the energy which we call light has no ordinary effect upon the eye.

The light which is focused upon the retina by the lens alters the arrangement of the molecules in the photo-chemical substance. This changed chemical condition stimulates the nervous endings in the retina and these carry their impulses to the brain where they are developed (perceived) and fixed (remembered).

This photo-chemical structure in the retina of the eye is not only the keystone in ordinary vision; it is through some of its properties that the motion picture is made possible. We will now turn our attention to those properties

Direct Current Machinery

LESSON VI—PART I.

HE subject of direct current machinery is taken up principally with revolving devices such as generators and motors. There is practically no difference between these two machines and a generator can be operated as a motor and a motor can be operated as a generator. The word dynamo is sometimes applied to such machinery and means either a generator or motor.

Direct Current Generators

The principal parts of a direct current generator consist of the following parts:

1. Yoke
2. Pole pieces
3. Field winding
4. Armature core
5. Armature winding
6. Commutator
7. Brushes.

These various parts are shown assembled in Fig. 52. The yoke serves two purposes. It acts as the frame of the machine and also carries the magnetic flux from one pole to another. The pole pieces carry the field windings of the machines and are bolted at one end, to the yoke. A pole face is bolted to the other end and this pole face is made up of steel sheets in order to reduce the small currents (called eddy-currents) set up in the metal to variations of the magnetic density in the pole faces. The field windings consist of wire wound around the pole pieces and are used to set up the magnetic flux in the machine.

winding and is built up of thin steel sheets separated by insulating varnish to reduce the eddy currents induced in the core by the magnetic flux. Such a core is said to be laminated.

The armature winding is carried on the core in slots punched out around the edge of the core. It is principally the number and size of these armature conductors which determine the voltage and kilowatt rating of the machine.

The commutator consists of a number of pieces of hard drawn copper built in the form of a cylinder and to which are soldered the ends of the wire coils which go to make up the armature winding. The two ends of every armature coil are connected, one each, to a commutator segment as these copper pieces are called, and so form the terminals from which current can be tapped off to supply the line.

Rubbing contacts, called brushes, bear down on these commutator segments and these brushes, in turn are connected directly to the line.

How Current Is Generated

We have already learned that when a conductor is moved, or forced, through a magnetic field, a voltage is set up in the conductor. If the conductor forms a closed circuit the voltage so generated will cause a current to flow. The direction in which this current flows can be determined by what is known as Fleming's three finger right hand rule. If the thumb, first finger and second finger of the right hand be held as shown in Fig. 53 with the thumb pointing in the direction in which the conductor is moving and the first finger pointing in the direction of the magnetic lines of force, then the second finger will point in the direction in which the induced current is flowing.

A practical application of this rule is shown in Fig. 54. This shows a single loop of copper wire, the ends of which are connected to two commutator segments, revolving between two magnetic poles marked N (north) and S (south). We know of course that the lines of magnetic flux will flow from the N pole to the S pole as shown by the arrows. If, now, this copper loop is revolved so that section a is moved down past pole N a voltage will be induced in the section a which will flow in the direction of the arrow as determined by the three-finger rule. The voltage in section b however, will act in the opposite direction because this part of the conductor is moving up past the pole S. If the wire loop is traced out, however, it will be seen that these two voltages are really acting in the same direction and hence one is added to the other. That is the total voltage of the coil is equal to twice that of either section. If an incandescent lamp be connected across the two commutator segments current will flow out of one segment and in the other. These segments are accordingly marked + and -.

Types of Armature Windings

The single armature loop shown in Fig. 54 would have, under best conditions, but a low voltage and low power output. In practice, the voltage commonly supplied by generators ranges between 110 and 550 volts. Voltages both higher and lower than these are also used, of course, but the largest percentage lies between the limits mentioned.

In order to obtain these comparatively high voltages efficiently, it is necessary to use all the available space on the armature for the conductors since the total voltage of the generator depends, among other things, directly upon the number of conductors on the armature. As a matter of fact, the voltage generated in the armature of a direct current machine depends upon the following things:

1. The number of armature conductors.
2. The magnetic flux crossing the air gap from one pole.
3. The speed of the armature in revolutions per second.
4. The number of poles.
5. The number of paths in multiple between terminals.

For any given power rating, then, in order to save material and make the machine small, the entire surface of the armature must be covered with conductors. Indeed in most machines the conductors are placed one on top of another in slots punched out of the armature core.

Lap Wound Armatures

This naturally calls for some systematic method of arranging the conductors on the (Continued on page 2695)

core in order to efficiently use all of the space. There are two common methods of doing this. The first is called a lap, or multiple, winding and Fig. 55A shows a single coil of such a winding. This coil is made up of only one wire and both ends of the wire are each connected to a commutator segment. Such a winding is said to have only one conductor per shot. The distance from the first conductor to the second of the same coil is called the pitch of the coil or simply, coil pitch. Thus if the coil pitch were 8, then the first conductor of the coil would be in slot No. 1 and the second conductor would be at slot No. 8. Fig. 55-B shows a number of coils arranged on the armature core in proper order. In the figure while the coil pitch is shown as being 8, it is actually less so as not to complicate the drawing.

Generators and motors usually have a number of conductors in each shot, as stated once before, the arrangement being as shown in Fig. 55-C and D.

Wave Wound Armatures

The second type of winding is known as the wave. This is illustrated in Fig. 56-A and B which show only one conductor in each coil.

Figure 56

Here too a number of conductors usually make up a single coil and Fig. 56-C and D show this in detail. The name series is sometimes also applied to this type of winding.

Standard Slide Severs Connections with U. T. E.

Through the purchase of the stock holdings of the U. T. E. in the Standard Slide Corp., 209 West 48th Street, New York, the largest slide manufacturers in the country, H. A. Rosenberg and Nat Cherin, who have been the active heads of this enterprising concern since its inception, now control practically the entire holdings, paying a sum of $22,500 for the U. T. E. interest.

When asked whether this was not quite a big amount for the U. T. E. interest, Mr. Rosenberg admitted it was, but felt the investment well worth while, and Mr. Cherin concurred.

The new officers of the Standard Slide Corporation, are now H. A. Rosenberg, president; Nat Cherin, first vice-president and treasurer; Dave Harris, second vice-president, and Samuel Matloff, secretary.

I. Perse Reports Business Favorable

I. Perse of the Capitol Motion Picture Supply Company, New York City, reports that the supply business in the New York district is now operating on a more business-like basis than at any previous time during Mr. Perse's sixteen years of experience in this field.

Mr. Perse further reports that the business of the Capitol Motion Picture Supply Company has enjoyed a steady increase during the last year and makes the prediction that this increase will be consistent throughout the rest of the year. As a pioneer in this field, Mr. Perse's predictions should carry considerable weight.

"Rialto" Under New Management

C. F. McQuilkin, owner and manager of the Rialto Theatre, Enid, Okla., has recently purchased the Royal theatre from Roy Abernathy and C. Ticker.

Mr. McQuilkin will redecorate the Royal and will install a large Photoplayer organ instead of using an orchestra. Several important improvements will take place at an early date. It is said that he will place the screen in front of the theatre, at the entrance, and will place the booth at the back end in order to gain more room for a larger seating capacity.—Trout.

Lyric, South Bend, to Be Razed

Work of razing the old Lyric theatre in South Bend, Wash., began recently, preparatory to clearing the ground for the erection of a modern new combination vaudeville and motion picture house.

George Reizner, Willapa Harbor theatre magnate and owner of the property on which the Lyric stands, has purchased fifty feet additional frontage and expects to begin work on the new house within the coming few months.

All the motion picture equipment and other apparatus from the Lyric has been moved to the Grand Opera House in South Bend, which Mr. Reizner is now operating as a motion picture theatre. The Lyric was the oldest theatre in the city and was one of the landmarks of that locality.—Prager.

Broadway Theatre, Council Bluffs, Opened

The Broadway theatre in Council Bluffs, Iowa, opened recently, representing an investment of $250,000. The Broadway was built under the general direction of the A. H. Blank enterprises.

The stage proscenium width is 32 feet, the stage is 62 feet from wall to wall. The appointments include an up-to-date switchboard and ample dressing rooms. There are 1,500 seats and about 90 boxes and loges. The decorating scheme is in ivory and gold, with tapestry and carpets in harmony. There are eight massive chandeliers and the latest improvements in heating and cooling systems. The projection is possible through two Powers latest type machines in a large booth with sanitary accommodations. All chairs in the auditorium are leather cushioned. Walter F. Davis is managing the Broadway, which is just the last word in elaborate small-town theatres.—Black.

Family Theatre to Be Remodeled

N. Dipson of Batavia, N. Y., will remodel and redecorate the Family theatre in that town this summer and reopen it in the fall. The Family now has a seating capacity of 600. The remodeling plans call for the addition of 600 more seats. It is reported that Mr. Dipson will also remodel a store in LeRoy, N. Y., into a picture house, starting operations there in about six weeks.—Taylor.

Taunton Company Resumes Building

The Empire Theatre proposition on Broadway, Taunton, Mass., originally sponsored by the Black and Spitz interests, has been acquired by the Donovan Amusement Company, of Taunton, who already control the Park theatre, Casino and Auditorium in that city. It is the intention of the new owners to build a combination business block and theatre.

I. Roth, expert at handling film in Tropics

Becomes Expert in Handling Film in Tropics

Roth's career began some fifteen years ago as the man behind the camera with the Nestor Film Company. Roth established a reputation for himself, and then decided to retreat to the laboratories in order that he might be as expert as possible in every angle of his work. He eventually became head of this department for Unista Film Mfg. Company, where he again attained a place among the top-notchers.

Two years ago Roth was induced to take a trip to Porto Rico where he has been in charge of the Gonzalez's Studio Laboratory, experimenting with new effects and doing some research in the difficulties of handling film in the Tropics. Some of the remarkable results he has been able to achieve are denoted in "The Tents of Allah," just completed.

He promises some entirely new and very beautiful effects in the next picture, soon to be started in the Porto Rico Studio.

Emery Majestic to Show Pictures

The Emery Majestic opened recently in Providence, R. I., as the most beautiful theatre devoted to photoplays in that city. Erected about six years ago by the Emery Amusement Company, it was devoted for the past five years to the legitimate, and now, with the expiration of the Shubert lease, passes back into the hands of the Emery Amusement Company, who inaugurates a high-class policy of photoplays with presentation.

The equipment installed includes a Wurlitzer organ, at which will preside Aurele J. Forest and Earle C. Snow as organists.—Strong.

of this substance upon which the motion picture depends.

Every material mechanism exhibits a property which physicists term inertia. By virtue of this property matter tends to remain in a state of uniform motion unless acted upon by some external force. One finds many illustrations of this in every-day life. Let us take an example from automobiling. If it were not for the initial inertia to be overcome there would be no need for a shift of gears from low through intermediate into high in order to get the machine under way. The initial sluggishness or inertia of the machine has to be overcome before the automobile can be propelled at its usual speed. And when once under way it will continue to move when the power is shut off; it is necessary to apply the brakes in order to bring the machine to a halt. The effects of inertia are met with both in starting and stopping an automobile.

But what has this matter of inertia to do with motion pictures? A great deal, indeed. An example or two will suffice to demonstrate the inertia which is present in the eye.

It is only to be expected that we find inertia in the organ of vision since we have found the eye to be mecano-chemical in operation. Inertia is found in the eye as in any other material mechanism.

Initial inertia—the inertia to be overcome in starting—manifests itself in the retina in what is known as the latent time. A few hundredths of a second elapse between the moment a beam of light falls upon the retina and the beginning of the resulting nervous impulse in the retina. This time is consumed in overcoming the molecular inertia of the photo-chemical stimulating medium.

In the case of the automobile the initial inertia can be overcome quickest by the highest powered car. In the case of the retinal lag—the initial inertia—the latent period also decreases with an increase in the intensity of the light.

This initial lag in the retina is difficult to demonstrate except with the aid of intricate laboratory apparatus. The retinal persistence, or what corresponds to the inertia of stopping in the automobile, however, is easily demonstrated. In a recent issue of The Journal of Experimental Psychology I described a new apparatus for the study of visual after-images. A rough and ready demonstration apparatus along the same lines can easily be improvised.

Stand in a dark room with the eyes about two feet from a round, gas-filled, clear glass electric bulb. Remain in the dark for about five minutes so the visual purple of the eye may become adapted to the dark. Then switch the light on for just an instant, watching the bright yellow filament closely.

What is seen after the light is switched off? Although all stimulation is removed an identical image of the red-hot filament remains for a considerable length of time and is seen as if it were projected out in space in front of the eyes. Move your eyes and you will find this image follows the movements of the eye, showing that it is not imaginary but really in the retina. This phenomenon is due to the inertia and is termed retinal persistence.

This retinal persistence is always present and the experimental procedure simply accentuated it in a manner to make it readily observable. All ordinary visual images persist for about three thousandths of a second at the full intensity of the original stimulus, even after it has ceased to act upon the eye. Intense stimulation, such as the gas-filled bulb main for a much longer time.

This identical image which remained after the stimulus was withdrawn is known as the positive after-image. After this positive after-image fades away it is followed by another which is the exact reverse in coloring and hence called the negative after-image.

If you will try the light bulb experiment again you will observe, after the positive after-image has disappeared, a line identical in form and position with the red-hot filament, but opposite in coloration. This is the negative after-image. Under these conditions it is usually so dark as to be easily seen even in the already dark field of the eye. Usually this dark image is seen fringed with a narrow light greenish-yellow band. When colors are used to cause these negative after-images, they always have the complementary coloration. For example, the negative after-image of a blue square of paper is yellow, the negative after-image of a green paper is red.

Supplies Frames for N. Y. Celebration

Agnes E. Cobb, Selling Agent of the Ritz Frame Company, New York City, had the honor of being selected to supply the frames for the Aldermanic Booth (the Marriage License Bureau) in the Grand Central Palace, by the Mayor's Committee on Celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Greater City of New York. Alderman Thomas A. Williams notified Mrs. Cobb of the preference and invited her to assist them in artistically arranging their booth for the occasion. President Murray A. Hulbert and sixty-five Aldermen have had their photographs taken, which will be framed and hung on the wall in the booth.

Mrs. Cobb has a very handsome line of leather frames and can carry out any color scheme that may be desired for theatre lobbies, window displays, exploitation ideas or photograph frames.

The New York Capitol theatre has purchased twelve of these leather frames in brown, from Mrs. Cobb. Mr. Rothapfel, the Managing Director of the Capitol theatre, told Mrs. Cobb "they looked like a million dollars."

stocks as it is. How much have you lost by the I. O. so far, Mr. Shandon?"

"There has been invested six hundred thousand of my own money and one hundred thousand public bonus."

"Well, we will see you in the clear. Of course if our stock did go off it would cover as soon as the I. O. died of innutrition. But meantime you would secure some of our business; in brief, it's better to buy you off now than to bother with you."

"I am not to be bought off," but three million five hundred thousand will buy me out. That is the sum Burke Shandon collected for building the I. O., and I have now made it as good as on the day he turned it over to the stockholders."

This announcement raised all but Allison out of their chairs; he only smiled wearily. "Mr. Shandon, I know what your railroad will do. Even if you could secure through business in paying tonnage, which you cannot, you would practically have to rebuild at, say, ten thousand dollars a mile to hold it up."

"It is junk," laughed Creighton. "Look what happened when you tried to drive the mogul over it."

He said he had enjoyed the story of a wrecker chopping the bent of the trestle. Cole gave him an evil glance, and Allison observed hastily, "Whether you are actually getting business illegally, Mr. Shandon, or endeavoring to secure it legally, I trust Mr. Blair to show you that your position is absolutely untenable. He will call on you shortly at Elm."

As Cole walked out alone he was coolly joined by Barbara in the outer office. "Don't you think your devotion rather fantastic to throw a million and a half away in trying out the I. O.? Its building was an obscure job, and your father's reputation does not depend on proving it as monumental as the building he did in the Northwest."

"So you have learned that? And also that I have a million and a half?" commented Cole. Their shoulders hunched, almost pressed together; she glanced searchingly into his face.

"I have looked you up," she replied. "You are now an interesting figure."

"Upon the discovery that I have a million and a half?"

"Could you expect," she demanded levelly and with a trace of bitterness, "that I could afford an interest—otherwise?"

Cole with a smother in his breast was suddenly afraid of his enemy's daughter; he chose his words cautiously: "I'd respect myself very little to solicit an interest which was denied at a time I needed it."

"You mean while you stood in papa's office drying your eyes with the back of your hand. I was tired and bored that day. I am not always like that. And I have been used to people who cry for their relatives in public."

She gave her trivial excuses as reasons why one had not shown sympathy. Yet she was honest, and Cole could help a queer acknowledgment that Barbara for all her caste aloofness and stony still felt the human touch.

"It is evident that your own devotion will never be fantastic," he said at the platform, but not ill-humoredly.

She replied quickly and breathlessly though involuntarily, "Who could what it might be!"

Cole turning away saw Allison observing them interestedly from the headquarters window.

As for Barbara, she stood on the station platform of the car looking after steadily, meditatively.

"I could marry Shandon," she told self. "I ought to do it. I believe it become necessary. And it is not impossible that I should be in love with him."

Cole made a five-day junket on the End, covering grain elevators, tank and mercantile houses. He even came several big ranches to give emphasis to threat he made to certain elevator men.

"Not yourselves, but the ranches," farms are the source of grain shipping, told the latter. "You progressives with some Federal aid, covered all the nation with hard-surface highways. You reflect that those roads, which make farmer quicker, cheaper transport your elevators, also enable me to go with ten-ton trucks as part of the common-carrier system, and bill through from the ranch granary to the Make any ranch house my freight

Extraordinary Lineup of Big Universal Productions

THE eyes of the entire industry are focussed upon Universal, which will shortly announce the biggest array of productions ever released under the Universal banner. The following are the Jewel releases for the first six months of the coming season:

"MERRY GO ROUND," a mad whirl of life, love and luxury, is one of Universal's early Fall releases. One of the most beautiful love stories ever screened, this Super Jewel is a masterpiece from the standpoint of lavish production, splendid settings, and contains a great cast of thousands headed by Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry. This Super Jewel has been in production for over a year and is destined to prove a sensation.

"A LADY OF QUALITY," starring Virginia Valli, with an extraordinary cast including Milton Sills, Earl Fox and Mary Philbin. It was adapted by Frances Marion from the famous play and novel by Frances Hodgson Burnett, and is to be presented as a Hobart Heuley Production.

"A CHAPTER IN HER LIFE," from the story of "Jewel" by Clara Louise Burnham, will be presented by Carl Laemmle as a Lois Weber Production. This story, taken from the famous novel read by millions throughout the world, has been produced with a remarkable cast headed by Jane Mercer, Claude Gillingwater and Jacqueline Gadsden.

"THE ACQUITTAL," from George M. Cohan's sensational successful production of Rita Weiman's powerful play, will shortly go into production. The cast for this has not definitely been decided with the exception of Norman Kerry, who will play one of the big leading roles.

"THE SIGNAL TOWER," Wadsworth Camp's tensely dramatic story, will also appear on the first half year's list. A great surprise is promised when the cast and director are announced.

"UP THE LADDER," the big New York stage success, now a great hit in Chicago, will also shortly go into production. Owen Davis, the author, has just been awarded the Pulitzer prize for his current New York success, "Icebound." "Up the Ladder" was originally produced by William A. Brady.

(Advertisement)

Following these productions there will be released by Universal the pictures hereinbelow mentioned:

"DRIFTING," from the famous Wm. A. Brady stage success by John Colton, starring Priscilla Dean, with a cast including Wallace Beery, Matt Moore and Anna May Wong.

"THE TURMOIL," Booth Tarkington's famous novel, will be made as a special all-star production.

BABY PEGGY will appear at the head of a large cast in a special production as yet unnamed and now being directed by King Baggot.

"THE STORM DAUGHTER," from an original story by Leet Renick Brown, is sure to prove a thriller of the first degree.

"THE MAGICIAN," the remarkable novel by W. Somerset Maugham, author of a series of successful novels and plays, of which "Rain" is the New York sensation of the current year.

"DAMNED," the sensational best seller by an anonymous author, is another big picture worth waiting for.

"WHITE TIGER," starring Priscilla Dean, with a big cast, including Wallace Beery, Matt Moore, will also be released during the coming year.

Priscilla Dean

Reginald Denny in Special Productions

MEETING an overwhelming demand from exhibitors and the public, Universal has announced that during the coming year Reginald Denny will be featured in a group of special de luxe productions in which this gifted star will have the best in stories, direction and production the facilities of Universal City affords. Lovers of romantic actionful, thrilling dramas will find them in these new Denny productions.

Big Variety in Century Comedies

Variety being the spice of life—and the spice of most exhibitors' programs—showmen will be interested in plans of Century Comedies for the coming year. Besides popular little Baby Peggy in a number of new subjects and Buddy Messinger in a series of his inimitable comedies of boyhood, Century has added a number of other funmakers to its list of stars—notably Billy Engle, Jack Cooper, the Century Dollies Girls among others. All of which would seem to point to a highly successful year, both for Century and for showmen who feature its products.

The Gumps Come to Life in Movies

AT last The Gumps are in the movies—and with Joe Murphy and Fay Tincher, inimitable funsters, playing Andy and Min these famous characters will find a following of millions upon the silver sheet, just as Sidney Smith's famous cartoons are read and chuckled over by millions who read the newspapers in which they appear. Produced by Samuel Van Ronkel, directed by Norman Taurog, and released through Universal, they will be the comedy aces of the coming year.

Hoot Gibson

Reginald Denny

High Praise for Universal Jewels

Exhibitors everywhere are enthusiastic in praise of "The Abysmal Brute," starring Reginald Denny, of which the New York Tribune critic says: "One of the most entertaining pictures we have seen in a long time. Don't miss it." This is a Hobart Henley production, from Jack London's sensational story.

"This is a corking good picture," says the N. Y. Morning Telegraph of "Trifling With Honor," which is Universal's latest success, in which Rockliffe Fellowes, Fritz Ridgway, Buddy Messinger and Hayden Stevenson head a superb cast. It is directed by Harry Pollard, and is from a Collier's Weekly story by Wm. Slavens McNutt.

These two current Universal Jewels are vying with H. A. Snow's "Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera," the wild animal masterpiece of which the Broadway Strand Theatre, Detroit, recently wired: "Have had the most remarkable audiences that ever entered the theatre"; and this is but a repetition of its huge success wherever shown.

Another timely Jewel, the everlastingly exciting "Bayu," is also cleaning up for exhibitors. From Earl Carroll's play, and directed by Stuart Paton, it "keeps you glued to your seat and your eyes glued to the screen," as Grace Kingsley said in the Los Angeles Times.

Still another big success is "The Shock," starring Lon Chaney, with Virginia Valli. This absorbing drama of faith, love and adventure, with the productions listed above, rounds out one of the most successful seasons in Universal's career.

Star Series to be Released by Universal

EXHIBITORS everywhere are eagerly waiting for the first releases under the Star Series recently announced by Universal. In this group will be found the best of stories, casts and direction, with a list of stars which includes Jack Hoxie, Herbert Rawlinson, Gladys Walton, Roy Stewart, and William Desmond.

Pictures in this series will be released upon a schedule which will give exhibitors at least one good picture every week, of a wide variety of themes.

Big Reception for Leather Pushers

THE best two-reelers ever made! That was the verdict of the thousands of showmen who played and profited with the first two series of "The Leather Pushers," starring Reginald Denny.

And now the new Third Series—the de Luxe Edition—is off to a flying start, the first Round being featured at the Rivoli, Broadway, New York, and being enthusiastically received by critics. Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune said: "We went to see three motion pictures, two at The Rivoli and one at The Strand, and by far the best of the lot was 'The Wandering Two' at the Rivoli, the first of the new Leather Pushers."

Directed by Harry Pollard, and with the original cast, including Hayden Stevenson, these new "Leather Pushers" are the biggest and best of the entire series.

Bert Roach to Star in New Comedies

His tremendous success in Universal one-reel Comedies created such an overwhelming demand for a series of comedies in which he has starred alone, that Universal will offer Bert Roach in a series of hilarious one-reel subjects. Exhibitors who have shown the "Nervy Ned" series, in which Roach appeared with Neely Edwards, will look forward to some real laughmakers in this new series—and, according to all indications, they will not be disappointed.

More Tramp Comedies With Neely Edwards

Wherever Neely Edwards, as Nervy Ned, the Comical Tramp, has played in Universal Comedies there are fans who will be interested in the new series planned by Universal to star this inimitable comedian. With bigger and better stories, and with the best direction obtainable, this funmaker will be eagerly awaited in his new subjects, released one a week.

"Bump the Summer Slump" Advises Laemmle

Universal advises exhibitors to "bump the summer slump" with tried and proven pictures, and offers the following list of Universal Jewel productions as examples of pictures which have been overwhelmingly successful at box-offices all over the country:

Virginia Valli and Honsel Peters in "The Storm," from Langdon McCormick's play, directed by Reginald Barker; "Human Hearts," with Honsel Peters and a superb cast, from Hal Reid's play, directed by King Baggot; Priscilla Dean in "Under Two Flags," from Ouida's immortal novel, directed by Tod Browning; Reginald Denny in "The Kentucky Derby," from C. T. Dazey's "The Suburban," directed by King Baggot; Booth Tarkington's masterpiece, "The Flirt," a Hobart Henley production; Priscilla Dean in "The Flame of Life," from the novel and play by Frances Hodgson Burnett, a Hobart Henley production; "Driven," with a great cast, a Charles Brabin production.

Thousands of wires and letters shouting the praises of the above productions as box-office attractions have been received by Universal. Every one is a PROVEN success—an attraction which has lined them up at the box-office.

Universal Releasing Powerful Serials

At least three recent Universal Chapter Plays have opened the eyes of exhibitors all over the country to the power of this form of feature to get and hold paying crowds. The first of these is "The Oregon Trail," starring Art Acord and directed by Edward Laemmle. This is a story of thrilling adventure in the Northwest. Showmen everywhere have sounded its praises.

"The Eagle's Talons," a ripping, gripping story of a fight for a fortune, starring Fred Thomson, world's champion athlete; Ann Little, the world's most daring actress, and Al Wilson, world's champion stunt aviator; directed by Duke Worne.

Universal's next big historical serial is "In the Days of Daniel Boone." This is planned to be the most pretentious Chapter Play ever released by Universal. It stars Jack Mower and Eileen Sedgwick, and is directed by William Kraft.

"Will prove entertaining to every audience that sees it"

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

M. P. NEWS: Through a splendid treatment of its salient points, coupled with a first rate production and a capital interpretation, "The Critical Age" will prove entertaining to every audience that sees it. The sponsors deserve credit for telling it in five reels, thus heightening the action and making the scenes compact.

It is thoroughly pleasing and capably conceived and executed in every department.

M. P. WORLD: Pauline Garon is a type that is immensely popular right now and proves in this picture that she is well qualified to act.

It is an interesting picture because it is in some ways apart from the stereotyped and is wholesome and youthful.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: It is a delightful little Canadian tale of romance at the "puppy-love" stage, and easily holds the interest. It is an outdoor picture and includes many lovely scenes of natural beauty.

"The Critical Age" should be satisfactory entertainment for any audience.

FILM DAILY: . . . is handled in the right way, given a good production and played by a company that is well suited and capable, as well as being carefully directed.

Pleasing offering that is short and can fit on any program.

Pauline Garon, the latest screen flapper and a very busy one judging from all the pictures she has appeared in recently, will be well liked in the role of Margie Baird and will gain more friends for her work in this.

The CRITICAL AGE

adapted from "Glengarry School Days"

This is pleasant entertainment that should satisfy almost any audience. It is a short picture and should satisfy the demands of exhibitors crying for features that do not run into seven and eight reels. With this one they can use a good program of short reels and with the feature offering a good entertainment, it should give their patrons a nice bill.

MORNING TELEGRAPH: A charming little thing touched lightly and skillfully and making a delightful entertainment.

Pauline Garon is delightful as the girl.

It is a good picture, light and agreeable, and should meet with success.

PICTURES

Another great RALPH CONNOR success "The Man from Glengarry"

Produced by OTTAWA FILM PRODUCTIONS LTD.

"The Man Next Door" Is a Splendid Picture

It is a big jump from cowpuncher on the western plains to a debutante in New York society, but Miss Alice Calhoun did it with ease and grace last night in a new picture by Emerson Hough, entitled "The Man Next Door" which will run only this week at the Cameo Theatre, in West Forty-second street. It is a Vitagraph production and one of the best this season.

Miss Calhoun, playing the leading role, is the daughter of the richest ranchman in Wyoming and as a cowpuncher she looks just as pretty as she does in evening clothes. Aside from the many stars appearing in the cinema there is also one of the most remarkable dogs on the screen. His name is Peanuts, and he does everything but talk.

To carry out the dying wishes of Mrs. Wright the ranchman, Colonel Wright (David Torrence), desires that his daughter should have an education, which she obtains and then, just as a surprise to her father, she builds one of the most fashionable mansions in this city. But her neighbors refuse to recognize her, despite her father's vast wealth. In the West all persons are neighbors, but the daughter finds this custom does not obtain in this city.

Heartbroken, she falls in love with Jimmie the gardener (James Morrison), who is merely working as a gardener to be close to the beautiful daughter of Colonel Wright. They become fast friends, despite the objections of her father, who wishes her to marry into society.

Following an elopement in which the young couple disappear for several weeks, Colonel Wright decides to go to his neighbor next door to complain against his daughter marrying their gardeners. Just then the couple come in and following a little explanation, the bride is radiantly happy, when her father gives them his blessing. The gardener is almost as rich as the girl with the result that the young girl is not only taken into society but is its favorite.

Frank Sheridan as Curley, foreman of the ranch, and Colonel Wright's best friend, was humorous throughout the picture.

Larry Semon, in "Midnight Cabaret" is perhaps the best of his funny pictures. Despite his vocation as a waiter he is in love with the star of a review at a cabaret and after almost insurmountable obstacles he wins her.

THE EVENING WORLD, NEW YORK and screenically, is well up to the standard set by the Capitol.

"The Man Next Door," by the late Emerson Hough, author of "The Covered Wagon," is the feature offered on the Cameo screen for the week.

It is a corking good story of the East and West and goes right on to prove that Kipling was right.

The story, starting as it does by showing a rancher's daughter raised by cowpunchers and then sent East to a finishing school, and her discoveries in re society, has been done countless times before on and off the screen, but never quite so well as in "The Man Next Door."

The company, presenting the film is an excellent one and the principal roles are played by such folks as David Torrence, Frank Sheridan, James Morrison and Alice Calhoun. To Victor Schertzinger, the director, must go a great deal of the credit for the real "finish" of the picture, and Vitagraph has given it as fine a production as could be desired.

It is a pity Emerson Hough did not live long enough to see his story screened, for those who do not see it will, in our opinion, miss a whole lot.

"The BRIGHT SHAWL"

A First National Picture

By ROBERT GARLAND

THOSE motion-picture critics who deal knowingly in percentages have been dismissing Richard Barthelmess and "The Bright Shawl" with a mere 95 per cent. After telling the world that the screen version of the Joseph Hergesheimer story is flawless, that the narrative is top-hole, the scenario skillfully devised, the acting superb, the backgrounds everything they should be, the scribblers in question pause to deduct 5 per cent. from perfection when they come to their summary. Value, they say, 95 per cent.

Now, what I want to know is this: Where is the 5 per cent. of imperfections to be found? Looking at the Rivoli's current offering for the second time, I most certainly cannot find them. To my mind, the photoplay which enters upon its second week today at Mr. Wonders' movie palace on the City Hall Plaza is just about as good as a photoplay can be. As you know, I'm no slacker where faultfinding is concerned. This being so, "The Bright Shawl" looks to be like a first-rate example of motion picture perfection.

The cast, like the picture, is flawless. As the American Lafayette, Richard Barthelmess is at his best, which is fine indeed. From start to finish he is the humorless young adventurer of Mr. Hergesheimer's imagining. Dorothy Gish is excellent as La Clavel. Her projection of the Andalusian dancer comes as a revelation. Mary Astor makes an adorable Narcissa, although hers is a rather thankless role. The photography is as good as the backgrounds, while the backgrounds are as good as the photography.

Were I given to percentages, I'll sum up "The Bright Shawl" in this fashion: Type of film, romantic drama; Theatre, Rivoli. Value, 100 per cent.

Wandering

What's wrong with the flapper? Has the Jazz gone to her pretty head, and is she straight on the road to Perdition as the moralists would have us believe? Or is she just as good as her grandmother, only more frank? Here is a problem that is being discussed throughout the country, in every pulpit, in every class room, in every magazine, in every home. It is the burning topic of the day. Imagine the interest that will be aroused in your patrons by a picture dealing with this question. Here it is—a peep into the forbidden romance of two girls who wandered into an unknown world, and of one girl who returned.

A James Young Production.

Build It Right

THE Convention is over and so are our editorials on the subject.

As to the election of Mr. Cohen as President, we have only to repeat the honest and sensible remarks made on the convention floor by W. S. MacLaren of Michigan.

He said, substantially: If you intend to elect this man President—then get back of him. Give him more than hurrahs and applause. Give him a treasury to work with. Give him an organization.

Right! Give him an organization. That's your job, you exhibitors who elected him—not Mr. Cohen's.

A President is only a presiding executive. Give him an organization.

Otherwise, when the year rolls around and the admissions tax is still milking your business of hundreds or thousands of dollars and no real effort has been made to repeal or modify it, don't charge it up to Sydney Cohen.

Unless, of course, you consider that a convention should only be a circus and that a national exhibitor organization exists merely to elect a President and to pass high-sounding resolutions.

The choice is yours—and the job is yours.

We have nothing more to say about the convention—its personalities and politics. All these were duly recorded in our news columns.

But we have something to say about national exhibitor organization. And that is the one important thing.

There is something wrong—fundamentally and radically wrong—with the present scheme of exhibitor organization.

It was apparent enough at Chicago. It was evident at Washington; and in one form or another the writer has seen it, in its painful, discouraging nakedness, at twelve national conventions beginning in 1913. At each of these conventions I have seen leading exhibitors go home discouraged and never to appear again. They were men dis-interested politically but strong and hopeful for a national organization that would protect their business.

Under the present scheme national organization is not cohesive. And because it isn't cohesive, it is a good deal of an empty shell.

It should be a federation of state units but it isn't—except once a year, at election time. This occasion is called a national convention, but it isn't. It is a political election. When that is over the spirit is utterly gone. On Saturday at Chicago there were by actual count not over forty men in the convention hall including newspaper men.

The futility of the thing is best evidenced by the fact that once a state or local unit becomes powerful—becomes simply what it should be in numerical and financial strength—the so-called Federation cannot hold it. There is either an actual or threatened split. There is bitterness, disintegration open or suppressed.

Now, gentlemen, the trouble is not with Sydney Cohen. He has worked harder, more ably and with better success than any previous President. The mistakes he has made, the limitations he has are largely due to his blueprint plans. And the trouble with these plans is that they build down from the roof instead of up from the foundation. The roof is national organization and the foundation stones are state and local units. And every practical man knows that you can't build a house that way.

We don't want to tear down. If the present scheme of things is right—right to accomplish national organization, we are for it. We are open to the proofs; we'll publish them in black face type. But, if on the other hand, the building scheme is futile, the sooner it is known the better. The better for national exhibitor organization! That is all that counts.

The thing is serious, gentlemen. If you don't achieve national organization—and do it quickly, you're a loser in cash and security. There's no argument about it; and every thinking exhibitor in the country knows that. It's a plain business proposition.

You want national organization. Then you've got to build it—build it just as sensibly and shrewdly as you build your own business. Build it right!

W.M. A. JOHNSTON

RECENTLY there was produced a play in New York entitled "The God of Vengeance," which was condemned as a violation of public morals. Its sponsor and cast were indicted and the producer and leading man were fined and placed on probation, while the subordinate players were given suspended sentences. This answers any argument for censorship.

The trial served to show (to quote an editorial in the New York World) the superior effectiveness of legal prosecution over censorship in determining charges of immorality brought against works of drama or literature. It accomplishes directly and by due process of law the result which under a most rigorous censorship would remain inconclusive, and convicts or acquits on the evidence. The Penal Code contains an adequate remedy for all offenses in the name of art against public decency, and it is well to have the facts exemplified by this case.

Certainly the action against "The God of Vengeance" knocks the props away from State censorship to protect public morals which are fully safeguarded by the law. The case places an effective argument in the hands of the screen powers who are determined to do away with censorship.

IF its New York run is any criterion, Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan's "Enemies of Women," based on the novel by Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen," is likely to prove another record-breaker. Opening for a run at the Central theatre, it was taken to the Rivoli. Its success at the Rivoli was such that it was moved to the Rialto for two weeks. Now it is to go into the B. S. Moss Cameo theatre for an indefinite run.

HOWARD ESTABROOK of Distinctive was invited by Columbia University to speak to the motion picture class last Tuesday night. He was introduced by Dr. Rowland Rogers.

PAUL KIMBERLEY, O.B.E., director and manager of Hepworth Picture Plays (1922), Ltd., and managing director of Hepworth Film Service, Ltd., has arrived in New York.

During the last six weeks he has visited Glasgow, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Leeds, Manchester, Liverpool and other prominent British cities, in order to study the various problems from every angle. He is bringing with him some of the newest Hepworth Productions, including "The Pipes of Pan" (by George Dewhurst)—a subject which is filling the picture houses in the old country and has achieved the distinction of being shown simultaneously in 14 of London's largest Super Cinemas.

Paul Kimberley was created an Officer of the Order of the British Empire for services rendered to the Allied cause during the Great War. His record in the industry is a long one and too well known to need repeating. No man is better informed than he of the actual conditions in Great Britain as they exist today. Anyone desirous of talking "shop" with him will find him in the offices of T. F. McMahon, 1400 Broadway.

THE elite of England's film world gathered recently at the Savoy Hotel, London, to welcome Betty Compson on English soil. The star is to play the leading role in Graham Cutts' production, "Woman to Woman." A good time was reported by all, and when Betty was called upon to make a speech she replied with commendable brevity (a virtue which should be acquired by several of our best film speakers) that she was in England to do her job, and meant to do it well.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

And then she thanked the Britishers for their hospitality.

NO * this week from the National Board of Review. How come? Are the exceptional pictures being kept back 'till fall?

WILLIAM LE BARON, production manager; Joseph Urban, designer, and Luther Reed, scenario writer of Cosmopolitan are off to California to begin the preliminaries for the filming of Marion Davies' next picture, "Yolanda." This is an adaptation of the romance by Charles Major, the same author who wrote "When Knighthood Was in Flower." While abroad the star will attend the world premier of "Little Old New York" which opens in London, on June 11th, and then travel on to Italy to collect atmospheric backgrounds for "Yolanda."

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S latest, "The Pilgrim" is in "dutch" again. The comedy aroused the ire of California clergymen out Venice way. They sent out a petition to the board of trustees to prevent further exhibition of the film in the beach city.

SPEEDING across the vast open spaces of what constitute these United States is Sid Grauman, the Los Angeles impresario, on his way to New York. He will be parked at the Ambassador during his stay in the metropolis.

EVERY once in a while some defender of the morals of the screen announces from his position behind the speaker's table during a film luncheon or dinner that the press is largely to blame for blighting Hollywood and the film colony which composes the Los Angeles suburb. No matter how small the item may appear in print—no matter if it is buried in an inconspicuous place on the most unimportant page, someone who loves to indict the screen discovers it, pounces upon it and airs it before his fellow up-lifters. True it is that many screen players have been wrongly condemned without benefit of giving them a chance to prove their innocence.

Which is by way of commending the Hearst papers for squaring Bill Hart's reputation. The editors have not buried the story, but have prominently displayed it in big, bold type on the front pages. And the actor who put westerns on the screen map stands vindicated.

Bill Hart showed himself every inch a man by his willingness to go into retirement and save his profession from further prejudices. Now that his innocence is established his popularity will carry him to still further heights. Who knows but that his silent suffering through the stigma which was attached to his name will make him even a more gifted artist!

The story of his vindication reads like a fanciful tale out of Balzac or de Maupassant. The heroine of this morbid drama was carried along through an infatuation which led her to do a strange and almost inexplicable thing. Her's was no infatuation of the boarding school miss who is satisfied with a portrait of her favorite. Her infatuation is a subject for psychologists and psychiatrists—a wish fulfillment for a child—and whose imagination painted a fanciful picture of Bill Hart as the father of her borrowed baby.

And now the ugly indictment of Bill is quashed through the press. How easy it is to blast reputations. An evil whisper, gossiped about—and printed without substantiation can wreck happiness and homes. Such calumny has made martyrs. Bill Hart is big enough not to suffer martyrdom.

SPEAKING of Bill Hart all of Hollywood must be rejoicing over the exoneration of the disciple of the big, open spaces. It is said that Jesse Lasky hopes to be able to announce the return of Bill to the screen in Paramount pictures. And the famous executive speaks for all the screen's well wishers when he says that his personal happiness will be shared by hundreds of thousands.

WE would like to know the identity of the film star who kept Bonar Law, the British ex-premier, waiting in the lounge while checking out of the Hotel Crillon in Paris.

WITH no bombast of trumpets or ostentatious noise, but on account of his huge physique unable to hide his identity, Fatty Arbuckle arrived in Chicago last Wednesday, where he has an engagement to do a skit at the Marigold Gardens. What a difference just a few years make.

A. C. BROMHEAD, chairman of the Gaumont Company, Ltd., sends us a pamphlet which introduces his company as possessing the best equipped laboratory in the world. In his accompanying letter he writes of the efficient printing of negatives and the presentation of perfect technical results on European screens must be a matter of paramount importance to American negative owners who have hitherto considered it impossible to get first class laboratory results in England.

J. LEO MEEHAN, the director, has heard the call of romance. Jeanette Porter, daughter of Gene Stratton Porter, is to be his bride. Mr. Meehan directed Mrs. Porter's picture, "Michael O'Halloran," an adaptation of the novel of the same name.

A RAPID-FIRE courtship of ten days which terminated at the altar was realized recently when Charles Schoen Johnson of Philadelphia married Katherine MacDonald. The happy husband first met the screen star when she was working in Betzwood productions. A brief introduction led to an uninterrupted correspondence which has continued for several years.

HARRY REICHENBACH had his day recently when the A. M. P. A. turned out to pay him homage. If the boys tried to razz Harry they had their hands full—for he is there with the snappy retort. Some day it is possible that the prize publicity purveyor of pictures will make capital of his busy and varied career. A biography of his life would make very interesting reading. Come, come Harry.

BERT LYTELL is on his way to New York to begin work on "The Lone Wolf." Since the star formerly appeared in stock in Schenectady and Troy, a car-load or two of residents of these cities will tender him a banquet as soon as he gets time to register and arrange the articles of his portmanteau.

THE popular musical comedy success, "Maytime," which is in its seventh year of stage presentation, has been purchased by the Al Lichtman forces and will be adapted to the screen for release next season. A quaint romance of the days when grandma was a girl is "Maytime"—a play which is saturated with charm and sentiment.

THE casualty list among the screen luminaries has been increased—the latest entry to be rendered hors de combat was Johnny Hines. While on location he received a deep cut in his hand which forced him to forego further production for ten days. The injury was received aboard a tramp steamer in San Pedro Harbor, Los Angeles.

LARRY SEMON, the human jumping jack of comedies, has signed with Truart. This contract calls for a different type of production than what he has been associated with heretofore. No more two-reelers and slapsticks, but five reel comedy dramas. The first will be "The Girl in the Limousine."

A SURE enough indication that the picture industry has grown by leaps and bounds and that it is firmly established among the major industries of the country is proved in the maintenance of its executive offices. There isn't an important company, but what has offices which will compare favorably with those conducted by large railroad and shipping interests—or with high class insurance companies.

First National is the latest company to be installed in offices which may be called the last word in appointment and efficiency. Anyone passing the portals of 383 Madison Avenue will be immediately impressed by the floor space, appointments, equipment and the atmosphere of BIG BUSINESS—especially BIG BUSINESS. It carries the background of the New York Central's executive offices and testifies to the truth of the statement that the picture industry is being conducted on a scale in keeping with its important position among the first five industries of the country.

IT is being whispered about that the best entertainer of the stage—a man who always packs a house from Coast to Coast—whose salary and royalties net him a tidy fortune each year—who is known far and wide as a sure-fire box-office attraction will soon be enlisted under the banner of D. W. Griffith. Gentlemen, his name is Al Jolson, the blackface songbird and comedian. It is said that as soon as his present theatrical engagement is ended, at the Winter Garden, New York, he will make a picture for D. W. in a role which calls for burnt cork.

D. W. saw the possibilities in a blackface star when he found the role of the Negro retainer in "One Exciting Night" attracted the sympathy and admiration of audiences all over the country. Jolson's comic ability and pantomime in the legitimate has convinced D. W. that the man who made the "Mammy" song a national characteristic could act before the camera. It is said that the comedian expects to sign a contract very shortly.

PLAYWRIGHTS, novelists, editors, writers of all descriptions will be heard at the International Congress of Motion Picture Arts to be held next week. The Authors' League is sponsoring the meeting—the first of its kind ever held. The importance of the story in picture making will of course be emphasized. And that is as it should be. Because the sooner the original story is given the pre-eminent place in the screen scheme of things the better for the whole industry. The authors and playwrights who will participate in the Congress include practically every nationally known writer in America.

Crandall Houses for School Courses

Washington Education Board Conducts Studies with Educational Pictures

HARRY M. CRANDALL, owner of the Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C., through the agency of his Public Service and Educational Department, of which Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher is director, has the distinction of being the first motion picture exhibitor in America to turn his neighborhood theatres over to the Board of Education for the purpose of visual instruction upon topics that can be more readily grasped by being seen than by merely being read about.

Visual education of our public school children, which Thomas A. Edison recently predicted would comprise one of the most important future uses of the motion picture, thus already is a reality in the National Capital.

A co-operative scheme has been devised by which the Crandall neighborhood theatres, covering all but one school section of the Capital, are thrown open to the public schools on specified dates for the attendance of scholars in charge of supervising principals and teachers, not for a period of recreation but for a study hour of very tangible value. This arrangement has been duly authorized by the Board of Education and the plan has been perfected by Dr. Stephen Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, working in conjunction with Mrs. Locher.

To date there have been four consecutive sessions of visual instruction made possible solely through the co-operation of the Crandall Public Service and Educational Department and the District of Columbia Board of Education. The films used have been supplied by the Interior and Agricultural Departments of the United States Government, which signalizes another immediate advantage of the plan in operation.

Owners of chains of theatres in both the East and West have sent representatives to Washington to confer with Mr. Crandall and

Mrs. Locher and to secure for themselves the privilege of exhibiting the Government's educational pictures. Thus has there been put in motion in Washington an activity that will be initiated throughout the nation. Mr. Crandall by this move has pioneered one of the most important forward steps the picture industry has ever taken.

The classes in visual instruction have been discontinued in the Crandall houses for the examination period in the public schools, but will be resumed when that period is over. Next season this branch of the public school work will be in charge of a specially appointed teacher who will work in conjunction with the Crandall Public Service and Educational Department exclusively in the presentation of a regularly scheduled series of releases which will afford an outlet for the most valuable educational subjects produced. It is believed that by that time a national circuit will have been established with the Crandall unit as its center.

Dahnken Buys American at Salt Lake City

The American theatre and the American Dansante in Salt Lake City together with the site on which it stands has been sold by the Swanson Theatre Company to Fred Dahnken & Co., Inc., owners of many West Coast theatres. It is said that the consideration involves about $530,000.

A. J. Davis will remain as manager. Photoplay plans include the booking of a series of the biggest pictures of the year, a number of which have not been shown in Salt Lake. The first of this series, Mr. Dahnken said, would be the film version of "The Girl of the Golden West."

Denies First National Has Bought Allen Theatres

ARUMOR that Associated First National had purchased the 36 theatres of Allen Theatres, Limited, throughout Canada on May 23 became widespread. The report was so persistent that G. T. Clarkson, trustee of the Allen affairs, found it necessary to issue an emphatic denial on May 25. It had been generally stated that First National had taken over all assets of the many Allen theatres which are now in bankruptcy.

"There have been negotiations with a number of parties but nothing definite is in prospect," it was stated by Mr. Clarkson. In the meantime, the theatres are being operated under his supervision.

Kansas City Exhibitors Perfect Organization

The Kansas City Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was organized in Kansas City this week, marking a new move in exhibitor organization.

A. M. Eisner, formerly secretary of the M. P. T. O. Missouri and a veteran exhibitor of Kansas City, was elected president of the new league, which was organized at a meeting of exhibitors and chamber of commerce officials in the Hotel Baltimore. Other officers are J. Means of the Murray theatre, Kansas City, vice-president; A. F. Gibbons, of the Prospect theatre, Kansas City, secretary, and Archie Josephson, of the Victory theatre, Kansas City, treasurer.

The formation of the new association, in that it includes a tieup with the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, is regarded as one of the most important moves towards advancing the industry that ever has been made in Kansas City. The new organization, it is believed, will do away with the consolidation of the Western Missouri and Kansas units, which has been pending for some time.

In the future the motion picture industry officially will be recognized by the chamber of commerce, exhibitors will constitute a motion picture committee, to work with the chamber of commerce, and this committee will co-operate with the Kansas City Parent-Teacher Association, an organization which has done much for the screen in Kansas City.

It is estimated, that under the plan of finance adopted, that the Kansas City division will be able to raise $7,000 annually from membership dues, which will be graduated from $3.50 to $25 a month, each theatre paying as its dues the amount of money obtained from running slides.

To Establish Better Film Library in Seattle

Several hundred women, members of the State of Washington Parent-Teacher Associations, meeting in Seattle last week, passed resolutions urging the establishment of a better film library in Seattle and encouraging the production of better films generally. The resolutions were later passed and an organization composed of state and city motion picture P.-T. A. workers was founded.

A list of ninety-six current subjects being released in Seattle this season by fifteen national and local distributing organizations were announced at the P.-T. A. convention as "endorsed pictures."

M. P. T. O. A. Delegates Adopt Code of Ethics

A CODE of ethics was unanimously adopted at the Chicago convention of the M. P. T. O. A. which if lived up to would dispense with the necessity of censors and add much to the patronage of the motion picture theatre. The code as adopted in full is as follows:

To build ever upon the firm foundation of honor and integrity, even when a different course might offer greater monetary profit.

To recognize my duty as a moulder of public opinion and an educator of youthful minds, by refusing to show upon my screen any picture that might have an unpatriotic, unwholesome or immoral effect upon the life of mind of any auditor.

To give full co-operation with City, State and National Governments and to all movements that will tend to raise the standards of morality and society and the ideals of the human race.

To so conduct my business as to reflect honor upon my industry to the end that the Motion Picture Theatre may take its rightful place as a real and valued asset to the community in which I reside.

To honestly advertise all attractions with no effort to overpraise or misrepresent them for the sake of momentary gain.

To deal fairly and honorably with my fellow man, whether he be one whom I am serving or one serving me.

To use the full power of my screen to further the cause of education, helpful science and all religions, in order that the world may be a better place in which to live because of my work.

To be loyal to my patrons, honorable with my competitor and just to my employees.

To seek only such profit as is just and not attained at the sacrifice of truth, honor or manhood.

To deliver to all with whom I deal the highest quality of service, resolving all doubts against myself and remembering at all times that any dishonest or dishonorable act of mine will reflect upon everyone engaged in the great industry of which I am but a small part.

Arbitration in Effect on Nation-Wide Scale

Boards Are Named in Various Exchange Centers Under Terms of Uniform Contract

ARBITRATION, under the provisions of the uniform contract, is now a reality throughout the country.

The boards have been constituted in thirty-one exchange centers and they are functioning. Equal representation is accorded distributors and exhibitors and selection of this personnel is practically completed.

With the perfecting of the machinery for arbitration on a nation-wide scale, distributors will, as rapidly as possible, it is learned, put the uniform contract into effect in booking pictures to exhibitors. In many instances it is already being employed. The list of exchange members of the arbitration boards indicates that the use of the uniform contract will be standard throughout the industry.

Attitude of Several M.P.T.O. Units in Doubt

Formation of Organizations in Central West and Southeast Talked; Steffes Declares He Personally Is "Through"

THE future relations of various state organizations with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, whether they would continue to be affiliated, to take an active part in the work of the organization and contribute to its financial support, are questions which have agitated those who attended the convention at Chicago and who know from first hand observation—the bitterness of feeling engendered by the events of that week.

There has been considerable talk of several states seceding from the M. P. T. O. A. and forming a central west organization, also rumors of a new organization among the states of the Southeast, but neither of these movements have developed into anything tangible up to the present time and it is problematical as to whether action in furtherance of these plans will be taken.

After adjournment of the convention and previous to his departure for his home in Minneapolis, Al Steffes made a sizzling statement, which follows:

"I absolutely refuse to be affiliated with an organization headed by a double crosser. I am reiterating the statement I made on the floor of the convention that if Sydney Cohen repudiated his promise not to run, that personally I was absolutely through. In making this statement I want it understood that I am speaking for myself and not as president or on behalf of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Minnesota."

Mr. Steffes refused to predict what his state unit would do, but Director Kaplan, of the Minnesota organization, made the following significant comment:

Minnesota's Attitude

"We will go back and tell the story of the convention to our members and leave the question of further affiliation with the national organization to them. They have always found Al Steffes a square and upright leader in the past. He has never double crossed them and they have always gone along with him. We are for Steffes and organization."

H. M. Richey, of Michigan, just before leaving for Detroit, issued a careful written statement which appears elsewhere in this issue.

Michigan's Attitude Defined in Statement by H. M. Richey

THE following statement was issued by H. M. Richey, General Manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., after the Convention at Chicago:

"Michigan has only well wishes for President Sydney S. Cohen and his assistants. It is our sincere wish that those who were insistent that he become the next president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will stand behind him, will help him by their efforts and financial backing.

"Michigan leaves Chicago with no apologies. That we are for national organization is best told by the records of the National organization and the cancelled checks on file in the Association Headquarters.

"The impression should not be gained that because the Michigan delegation left after the election of a first Vice-President that Michigan bolted the convention. At that time the entire list of officers had been nominated and the work of the afternoon practically done, and many of the delegates were anxious to catch afternoon trains.

"James C. Ritter entered the field as a candidate with a definite platform. He became a candidate because of the published and personally given statements of Mr. Cohen that he would not be a candidate. Confident that Mr. Cohen's word meant more to him than the insistence of advisers, Michigan put up a clean campaign for its candidate ran him on a business platform, prompted only by a desire to put into the background inactivity and to give the exhibitors of the United States service and results.

"When it became known that Mr. Cohen was going to run, when he was nominated on the floor of the convention, Michigan realized that there was not the slightest opportunity of any man bucking Mr. Cohen's organization. Therefore, Mr. Ritter's name was not given to the delegates.

"An attempt was made to get Mr. Ritter to reconsider under the arrangement that a new office, Chairman of the Board of Directors, be created, contrary to the Constitution and By-Laws, and to give Mr. Cohen this office. This Mr. Ritter refused, knowing that such an arrangement would mean that he would be little more than President in name only, a condition that would not permit the successful application of the plan that it was his conviction would result advantageously for the organization.

"Sydney Cohen's statement that Mr. Ritter's idea of the selection of a Board of Directors would mean the elimination of certain leaders is untrue. Mr. Ritter's signed statement, which Mr. Cohen himself read, specifically stated that Mr. Cohen, W. A. Steffes, always a tireless worker in national organization, and one Michigan man should be placed on the Board, leaving the selection of the balance of the Board to the list nominated by the convention.

"Michigan intends to go back to its state and exert every effort to make Michigan organization worth while to the exhibitors of Michigan, make it a real asset, and to carry on with the sincere desire that the time will come when the exhibitors of the country will all be united in a functioning, cohesive organization, democratically run, as a business proposition, entirely devoid of personal ambitions, personalities and petty politics.

"And when any big, constructive movement comes along that needs any help that Michigan can give, as it has in the past, so it will in the future, assist in its small way.

"And, if Michigan has a single apology to offer, it is to the exhibitors of Michigan who came to Chicago and wasted a week of valuable time in doing nothing more than to elect a president of their organization, without getting down to the things that are next to the heart of the exhibitor."

The directors of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners will take action on convention results at their next regular meeting to be held on June 6th. There is considerable talk of secession among them, but it is thought that after more mature consideration, they will stay by the present national organization.

President Griffin, of Northern California, whose organization is not officially affiliated with the M. P. T. O. of A., as its constitution presents its acceptance of certain provisos in the national constitution, stated that this matter would again be taken up after his return to the coast, but it was impossible to predict what action would be taken.

Wisconsin from present indications will not take any drastic action for the present time, although if the talked of central west association plan comes to a head they may at least consider joining.

The final session of the M. P. T. O. A. convention at Chicago was in an atmosphere which may be likened to calm after storm. The electric tension had been so apparent at the session where the nominations for national officers were made and the day following, when Sydney S. Cohen and the other officials of the organization were elected, had disappeared, and only about forty of the delegates were in their seats.

Atlantic City, Los Angeles and Rochester, New York, extended invitations to the national organization to hold the next annual meeting in those cities. Rochester appeared to be the favorite but many delegates favor some central west city. As in the past this matter will be decided by officials of the M. P. T. O. A. at a later date.

The report of the insurance committee was delivered by Julian Brylawski and a number of resolutions adopted before adjournment of the session, which lasted only about two hours.

Resolutions Adopted

Among the more important resolutions was one authorizing the directors to propose a budget plan which will be referred to the state units for approval, a two-thirds vote of the state organizations represented officially in the M. P. T. O. of A. being necessary to approve:

A resolution calling for the abolishment of the music tax and pledging the organization to continue the fight against its collection:

A resolution calling on the national organization, through its president and officers, to sit in with the producers in an effort to avoid wastage of film by continued making of extra long features, to the end that varied programs may be offered to patrons of theatres and high cost of feature pictures reduced:

A resolution calling for the providing of ways and means for establishing and maintaining a lobby at Washington to protect the interests of the industry:

A resolution condemning the increasing activity among producers and distributors in purchasing theatres and operating in opposition to independent exhibitors; this practise was characterized as unfair and tending to encourage monopolistic control of the industry:

A resolution calling for a showdown on the distributor's policy in the non theatrical field and the abandonment of leasing pictures to non theatrical organizations, and showing of pictures in opposition to professional exhibitors:

A resolution condemning the alleged boycott of the Motion Picture Palace of Progress by the Hays organization and producing-distributing companies affiliated with it:

A resolution authorizing the selection of a representative committee of exhibitors to confer direct with producers and distributors on the establishment of a uniform contract:

A resolution proposing the widening of the functions of the public service department and commending its work during the past year:

A resolution condemning propagandists outside of the industry for propaganda tending to show the screens of the country were purchasable and affirming President Cohen's statement that the screens are independable and incorruptible:

A resolution opposing daylight savings, opposing road shows endorsing Movie Chats, and endorsing Mrs. Wallace Reid for her undertaking in the picture field, were also passed.

Mr. Cohen reported that applications for new charters had been received from Northern Illinois, the City of Chicago and Eastern Missouri, and declared that contrary to reports heard at the Sherman Hotel and the Coliseum, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Kansas and Michigan would remain in the national organization, and added that this was "much to the displeasure of those interested who would like to see this happen otherwise."

Joseph W. Walsh, of Hartford, Conn., was elected third vice-president to fill the place of W. W. Whitson, who declined to accept the office.

A code of ethics prepared for exhibitors by the Fourth Vice-President Eli W. Collins, was read by the author, and received hearty praise. Among the highlights of Mr. Collins' code was the pledge by exhibitors not to run unpatriotic, immoral or unwholesome films and promise to co-operate with state and civic bodies in all possible ways; a pledge to honestly advertise; to use the full power of their screens to advance the cause of education, science and all religions; to be honest with competitors, just with employees and loyal to patrons; to deliver the highest quality of service, refraining from any dishonest or dishonorable act that will bring discredit upon himself or others engaged in the industry.

Following the report of Clarence Cohen, brother of Sydney Cohen, who is in charge of the adjustment bureau at national headquarters, which set forth how the bureau had helped many small town exhibitors, and that not one claim had been sent in without being settled, the convention came to a close.

Cohen Issues Statement

Upon his return to New York, President Cohen issued the following statement:

"The conclusion of the big convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in Chicago, finds the organization in the best position that it has occupied since its inception at Cleveland, and better able to give the fullest measure of protection to the independent theatre owner now than at any other time in its history.

"Despite the allusions made by one publication, in particular to alleged walkouts at this convention as a result of misunderstandings and dissatisfaction, there was no walkout. This statement was made very plainly at the sessions of the convention on Friday, illustrating that the theatre owners generally want a strong, cohesive organization and realize that in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of

Text of Resolution Adopted by M. P. T. O. A. Rejecting Uniform Contract

FOLLOWING is the text of the resolution adopted by the M. P. T. O. A. Convention at Chicago, turning down the uniform contract:

"Whereas, one year ago our convention ordered a conference with Will H. Hays following his speech 'Confidence and Co-Operation' made before our members; Whereas, the contract offered by the Hays' organization contains these obnoxious clauses:

"The clause containing the ownership by the distributing company of advertising accessories after the exhibitor has paid for them.

"The clause requiring cash deposits.

"The clause denying us the right to cut out any part of a film, even advertising matter skilfully worked in, objectionable scenes or political propaganda.

"The clause requiring us to advertise the name of the producer and distributor in our paid newspaper advertising.

"The cumbersome method of fixing play dates and the omission of any method of changing play dates.

"The clause affecting the automatic rejection of applications for contract.

"The arbitration clause which attempts to deny our constitutional right to trial by jury and to compel our members from California to Maine to arbitrate under the laws of the state of New York and under rules drawn up by the distributors."

"Resolved that we heartily approve the action of our officers and directors in rejecting the so-called uniform contract, and

"Be it further resolved, that we urge all exhibitors not to sign this unfair, inequitable, un-American contract that members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., are attempting by concerted action to force upon the exhibitors of this country."

The resolution is signed in behalf of the theatre owners by W. W. Whitson, chairman; Charles T. Sears, Martin G. Smith, C. C. Griffith, Tom Arthur, Howard Smith, C. E. Williams.

America that desire is being fully satisfied.

"We hope to make this year the most constructive and helpful in the history of the organization. In this relation there are no yesterdays with us. We desire the complete co-operation and assistance of every theatre owner in the country. Not only is this co-operation asked for, but we want all to feel at liberty to participate in the affairs of the organization to the fullest possible extent and make themselves active living progressive units in all that appertains to the general welfare of the motion picture theatre owner.

"One of the outstanding events associated with this convention, was the direct participation of five of the Government Departments—the Post Office, Departments of Commerce, Labor, Agriculture and Interior, wherein the different elements associated in these divisions of Federal service, were brought to the direct attention of the theatre owners, and lines of cooperation established which will be productive of wonderful results for the people in all parts of the United States.

"The screen power of the nation has been placed at the disposal of the United States Government in this relation and this great element of expression and means of transmitting information—the screen, will bring to the attention of every citizen of the country, these wonderful lines of service and secure hearty cooperation from millions of Americans who have up to the present given but passing attention to these elements of Government service.

"The Board of Directors and officers of the Organization convened immediately after the adjournment of the Convention and prepared a comprehensive plan of action for the year, appointing such committees as will enable this governing body to function best in all parts of the country.

"Leading exhibitors from every state represented in the convention, came to the National Officers of our Organization at the conclusion of the sessions and pledged their complete support and cooperation, holding themselves in readiness at all times to be of such service to the organization and the cause of the independent exhibitor represented through our National Body, as was within their power to render.

"A considerable sum of money was pledged in the convention and additional pledges have been made by prominent exhibitors and state and regional organizations throughout the country, assuring the National Organization of sufficient revenue to enable the officers to conduct its affairs along constructive and efficient lines during the year.

"A pleasing circumstance connected with the convention was the announcements of several states for the introduction of the paid business managers plan of action and that an intensive organization program in these territories has been adopted and is now being put into execution.

"With the great strides that theatre owners organization is making, it augurs well for the advancement of the industry generally, because the theatre owner is gradually taking the dominant position in the industry, being the only direct line of contact with the public, and thus furnishes the only means by which motion picture films can be properly presented to the people of the United States.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will seek to establish lines of cooperation with the other divisions of the industry to take care of National legislative matters and also to advance the general welfare of our industry along all lines.

"We look to the coming year to be productive of many lines of real advantage to the theatre owner and the business generally, and we will miss no opportunity to effect real lines of cooperation and progress in the industry.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, having passed through various lines of difficulties associated with its three years of life and weathered successfully every crisis, is now reaching a point in our industry where it is on substantial ground, capable of affording the most complete kind of protection to the independent theatre owner, and we will advance and develop it along these lines for the advantage of every section of our great industry."

Federal Hearing Adjourns for Two Weeks

Will Be Resumed in New York June 11; Sydney Cohen Among Witnesses to Be Examined

ONLY one witness—N. Dipson, an exhibitor of Batavia and Olean, N. Y.—has testified in the hearing on the Federal Trade Commission charges against the Famous Players-Lasky group since the last issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

By agreement of counsel, the hearing was adjourned on May 28 until Monday, June 11, when it will be resumed in New York at the local offices of the commission, No. 105 West Fortieth street. Among those who will testify is Sydney S. Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. A.

It is expected the New York sessions will be finally concluded within a week after they are resumed, and the scene of action will be transferred to Philadelphia. Other cities on the schedule are Boston, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas and Los Angeles.

At the brief session held on May 28, Marvin Farrington, of Government counsel, stated that the Federal attorneys had been unable to get in touch with certain witnesses who had been at the Chicago convention and for that reason a two weeks' recess was requested. Examiner E. C. Alvord then granted the recess.

Testifying on May 25, Mr. Dipson explained that he was the owner of the Grand and Family theatres, Batavia, houses of 500 and 650 seats, respectively. He had played Paramount from 1914, with one interruption, he said, until the 1922-1923 season, when Paramount wanted him to book the entire "41" at an average of $85 per picture. He considered the price too high, and the number of pictures too great, and offered to buy four specials. Again the price was prohibitive, said the witness, who added that he was asked $400 for each special.

Harry H. Buxbaum, F. P.-L. district manager, and Allan Moritz, Buffalo exchange manager, called on him, he continued, and in an effort to convince them that the price was too high he showed them his books, Dipson testified.

"I also let them look at my contracts with other exchanges—Fox, Goldwyn and First National—" the witness went on, "and I finally offered $30 per picture. Mr. Buxbaum said I wouldn't get the specials at that price."

The witness then said he had offered a little more than $30, and fixed the figure at $34.50.

Subsequently, he testified, the assistant manager of the Paramount Buffalo exchange "clocked" his houses when he was showing "Smilin' Through" and a Goldwyn film.

Shortly afterwards, Mr. Dipson said, he

Fox Managers Are Arriving for Convention

FOREIGN representatives and delegates to the Tenth Annual Sales Convention of Fox Film Corporation are arriving in New York to attend the yearly meeting of branch managers, district representatives and sales executives. The convention this year will be held at the New York headquarters of the Fox company for one week starting June 11.

In addition to Branch managers from the twenty-seven key cities there will be representatives from Canada, England France and Australia at this meeting which promises to be the most important convention ever held at the Fox studio.

Special significance is given the convention this year because it also marks the twentieth anniversary of the entrance of William Fox into the motion picture field. One of the chief subjects to be taken up at the meeting will be the sales policy for the coming year. All the special productions completed or now being edited will be screened for the managers during their stay in New York.

heard from the Buffalo Goldwyn office and the First National exchange there, both of which claimed he was doing enough business to pay higher rentals. The Goldwyn manager, he declared, accused him "of stealing pictures" at the price he was paying, although Dipson gave the former an affidavit on his receipts on Goldwyns, which averaged about 34 per cent of his gross.

"I figured everybody was going to raise the price on me," Mr. Dipson added, "so I decided to book Paramount in a hurry because Paramount pictures are easier to put over than those of any other company."

He then booked the "41" and seven pictures from the previous season, paying an average of $50 per picture, the witness declared, adding that he had to promise to run two a week.

He came to New York to complain to Adolph Zukor about the treatment he said he had received, but Mr. Zukor was not in town. He tried without success to see S. R. Kent and finally went with Charles L. O'Reilly and Samuel I. Berman to see E. J. Ludvigh, of F. P.-L., so the witness testified.

Mr. Ludvigh had a stenographer take down Mr. Dipson's complaint, and told him, according to the witness, that he (Ludvigh) would see that copies of it went to Messrs. Zukor and Kent.

The "clocking" of his theatres was ordered by Mr. Buxbaum, the witness declared. In the presence of himself and Mr. Cranides, manager of one of the Olean theatres, Mr. Moritz admitted to Mr. Buxbaum that he (Moritz) has informed the First National Buffalo manager of the prices Dipson was paying for Paramount. Metro wanted the same rentals as F. P.-L., said the witness.

The witness then explained that he and his associates had formed a corporation in Olean and that his two theatres and those of his competitors were leased to it. This was after the Gem theatre, playing Paramount solid, had opened in Olean. After the corporation was formed, two of the four theatres in the town were closed, and the remaining two have not played Paramount for a year, the witness said, because of "prohibitive prices."

The result was, he went on, that Paramount sent about 3,000 letters into Olean, advising the people of the town to demand Paramount pictures.

On cross-examination by Robert T. Swain, Mr. Dipson stated that the "war" between his interests and the Gem continued for about a year, and that the formation of the corporation referred to above had become necessary to prevent the town from remaining over-seated. He admitted that admission prices had been raised.

The witness also admitted that F. P.-L. did not have any monopoly on current methods of bargaining between exhibitor and exchange.

Asked which distributor had the best consistent average of pictures for the past five years, he said "Famous Players."

"What about the last two years?" Mr. Farrington queried.

"The main thing today is pictures like 'Robin Hood' and 'Safety Last,'" the witness replied. "Nobody would compare 'Bella Donna,' for example, with them."

Scalping Bills Sidetracked by Penn. Senate

The so-called anti-ticket scalping bills which early in May precipitated a fight in the Pennsylvania Senate in Harrisburg between Senators Barr and Eyre, have been sidetracked and may not be revived during the present session of the Legislature, which is likely to be adjourned before June 1. After a hearing on them on May 15, the Senate Judiciary General Committee voted to take no action on reporting the bills from committee.

Several other measures relating to the motion picture industry, including the bill giving equal rights to negroes with whites in theatres, are still in committees and may never be brought to light again in the present session of the Legislature.

Universal Will Screen Novel "Damned"

UNIVERSAL will screen "Damned," the anonymous novel of the other world, which in seven weeks is said to have gone through eight editions. Its purchase by Universal was ordered by President Carl Laemmle, who after reading the book ordered Leon d'Usseau eastern head of the scenario department, to secure it immediately.

Over four weeks were consumed in negotiations because the anonymous author, through the publishers, wished to have it made into a play first.

Nearly all the action takes place after death—in Heaven or Hell—and the earth sequence before the heroine dies is merely a sort of prologue to introduce one to the characters.

Universal has not made up its mind yet as to the rest of the cast but the leading role of Dolores has been given to Barbara La Marr. Production will not be started until next October when Miss La Marr will be back from Europe.

Hays Invited to Speak in North Carolina

WILL H. HAYS will be requested to make a public address to the people of Wilmington and Wrightsville Beach, N. C., he attends the North Carolina M. P. T. O. convention at Wrightsville Beach, June 28 and 29. Plans for the convention are progressing nicely and a large attendance is looked for.

South Carolina and Virginia exhibitors have been requested to meet with the Tar Heel organizations.

Report Submitted on Conferences

Hays Organization Dealt Unfairly on Uniform Contracts, Is Claim

WD. BURFORD submitted to the M. P. T. O. A. at the Chicago convention a report on the conferences between the organization and Will Hays representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America relative to the uniform contract.

It was agreed, according to the report, that special committees be named to go into the accessory matter. It was alleged in the report that no notification of the appointment of such a committee was ever received from Mr. Hays.

With regard to advance payments and cash deposits the report alleges that the M. P. T. O. A. was unable to get any concession on this payment.

The exhibitors contended that they were the best judges in their own communities regarding necessary eliminations in films and pointed the impossibility of conferring with distributors regarding them. No agreement, it is alleged, was ever reached on this point, nor was any reached on the contention of the exhibitor that as he paid for newspaper advertising he had the right to use such copy as he saw fit.

In regard to an arbitration clause on differences over contracts, the report says the entire question of arbitration was to be elaborated and when completed was to be embraced in some document outside of the contract. In spite of this, according to the report, Mr. Hays submitted a contract on September 28, 1922, with an arbitration clause included and with a drastic penalty against the exhibitor who should refuse to arbitrate any case or refuse to abide by the decision of the arbitration board.

Just before the conferences broke up, the report says, Mr. Hays made a statement of the wonderful progress made and suggested printing of the contracts to include the seven clauses not agreed upon. The M. P. T. O. A. Committee pointed the unfairness of such a contract to the exhibitors without concessions being made on both sides. The report says the committee left the conference room with a definite understanding that no contract forms would be printed until the next conference. No further negotiations were conducted, it is said, but on January 27, 1923, a letter was received by National headquarters containing twenty copies of a proposed contract with a request from Mr. Hays for a meeting on February 2. Mr. Cohen, the report says, pointed out to Mr. Hays the impossibility of a meeting at such an early date. It is alleged in the report that Mr. Hays held a meeting at which his organization and a few New York exhibitors were present. At this meeting on February 2, the report says the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America adopted a contract form of their own draft and promulgated, advertised and attempted to apply it to theatre owners of the country without consulting the M. P. T. O. A. and entirely without the sanction of the organization.

The contract, the report says, brought a letter of protest from Sydney S. Cohen and numerous letters of protest from exhibitors throughout the country to the effect that it would be business suicide to accept the contract adopted by the Hays organization.

As a result of all this resolutions were adopted at the Chicago convention, as prepared by a special committee of which W. W. Whitson of San Diego was chairman. These resolutions will be found printed elsewhere in this edition.

"Human Wreckage" Booked for N. Y. Lyric

Mrs. Wallace Reid's anti-narcotic photodrama "Human Wreckage" distributed by the Film Booking Offices opens in New York at the Lyric theatre, July 1st.

The arrangements for the booking of the Lyric theatre were made last week with a definite date of July 1st set with a chance of going into the house before that time if a vacancy occurs. That Mrs. Reid has the heartfelt sympathy and support of the entire motion picture industry in her film venture can be seen by the action taken at the convention last week when over twelve thousand visiting exhibitors adopted resolutions of sympathy for Mrs. Reid and support in her "fight against the drug evil."

For the New York showing the Film Booking Offices are making arrangements to bring Mrs. Reid on from her Los Angeles home to make a personal appearance with some of the members of her cast, including Bessie Love, and, if possible, James Kirkwood.

Katherine MacDonald Weds Charles Johnson

Katherine MacDonald, film star, was married to Charles Johnson at Atlantic City on May 23 at the home of Dr. R. Johnson Held, uncle of the bridegroom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Marna S. Poulson, pastor of the Ventner Congregational Church.

This marked the second venture into matrimony for Miss MacDonald. In 1911 she married Malcolm Strauss, a New York artist, whom she divorced in 1916.

The bridegroom is a grandson of Charles Shean, millionaire inventor of the pressed steel railroad car. The couple left for an auto tour following the ceremony. The destination and the length of the tour were not divulged.

Mrs. L. A. MacDonald, mother of the bride, and Miss Mary McClaren, a sister were present at the ceremony, as were Mrs. Charles T. Shean, grandmother of the bridegroom, Dr. and Mrs. Held, and others.

T. & D. Junior Circuit Buys Two Theatres

One of the largest theatrical transactions in San Francisco recently was the sale of the Royal and Polk theatres for a price stated by J. R. Saul, theatre broker who represented the various interests involved in the transaction, to be $250,000. The two theatres were purchased by the Turner & Dahnken Junior Circuit, with which are associated R. A. McNeil and the Nasser Brothers, all of San Francisco, representing twenty-seven theatres throughout northern California. The sellers were A. C. Karski, Frank Levy, H. W. Jacobs, and Mrs. Esther Oppenheimer.

Improvements, refurbishing and other alterations contemplated by the purchasers of the two theatres will add about $30,000 to the quarter of a million involved in the initial transaction.

Governor of N. Y. Vetoes Steingut Film Bills

ALFRRED E. SMITH, Governor of New York, on Wednesday afternoon of this week stated that he disapproved both of the Steingut measures, the Steingut bill being a proposed law to regulate the use of motion picture projectors outside of fireproof booths and authorizing the use of standard width projectors with non-inflammable film.

"These bills are disapproved because of the strong recommendation against their enactment by the local authorities of New York City," said the governor. "I am particularly impressed by the statement of the chief of the Bureau of Fire Prevention, who pointed out at the hearing that the introduction of projection machines capable of being operated with inflammable film presents a dangerous fire hazard."

NEW SY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

BALABAN & KATZ will break ground early this summer for what is expected to be the finest and largest of their magnificent houses and it is said it will surpass, in splendor and size, both the Chicago and the Tivoli, the seating capacity running well over the five thousand mark. Rapp & Rapp, the architects who designed the Chicago and Tivoli, have been at work on plans for the new house for some time and their representatives have been scouring America and Europe for the latest theatre developments which can be incorporated in the proposed north side cinema palace. This house will be located at Lawrence and Broadway, on the site which is now occupied by the Greenmill Gardens, and will have a greater floor area than either of the other Balaban & Katz houses and the architecture will be a radical departure from that used heretofore by this firm. Tom Chamales, owner of the Greenmill Gardens, is retaining the corner of Lawrence Avenue and Broadway for an office building and the theatre will be built around this site. It will have a Broadway entrance lobby sixty feet wide, extending back 110 feet, 25 feet deeper than the Chicago lobby, to the theatre proper, which will have a floor area of 181 x 188 feet. The frontage on Lawrence Avenue will be 181 feet, the west line of the house 188 feet and the north line of the property 291 feet. Chicago's north side is the fastest growing portion of the city and Balaban & Katz have been searching for the past two years for a suitable location in this district. The decision to put in a new L station at Lawrence Avenue, is said to have been the determining factor in choosing the new site. The Riviera theatre, across the street from the new location, on which Balaban & Katz hold a long term lease, will be retained by this firm, but no announcement has been given out as to the policy under which it will be operated after completion of the new house.

Duke Kemp, owner of the Owl theatre, at 4653 South State Street, has purchased the Atlas theatre at 4715 South State Street from H. J. Dooley and was scheduled to take possession of his new house on June 1st. Mr. Kemp is one of the old time Chicago exhibitors and has a wide acquaintance among the trade.

Edward A. Bertram, technical secretary of the Chicago Rothacker Laboratory, has received word of his election to membership in the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, this action having been taken at the recent Atlantic City convention. Mr. Bertram is entering his sixth year with the Rothacker organization. George Gibson, superintendent of the Chicago Rothacker Laboratory, is now saying hello to friends on the west coast. He has been transferred to the Rothacker-Aller plant for a period of several months in keeping with Watterson R. Rothacker's policy of an occasional interchange of executives between the Chicago and Hollywood plants. Mrs. Gibson accompanied him west.

L. J. Trevor, formerly manager of the Empire theatre at Aledo, Illinois, has taken possession of the Opera House, formerly controlled by John Edwards, the lease of which was recently announced in this column.

Theodore Coleman, of the American theatre, Mount Carmel, Illinois, has bought out the Hurley B. Gould interests in Mount Carmel and has taken over the Gem theatre.

General Representative Ralph Kettering, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer's, is back at his desk after vacationing at West Baden Springs, Indiana, with his family for a few days.

Van and Bohler, two well known Chicago production managers, have entered the motion picture field and are now prepared to give exhibitors anything in the way of high-class singing acts, prologues or specialties. Mr. Bohler has had the review at the Terrace Gardens in the Hotel Morrison, Chicago, and also, one at the Baltimore Hotel, Kansas City, for several months, and his Peacock Parade was considered a hit of Ruben & Finklestein's programs in Minneapolis and St. Paul. His prologue, The Butterfly Parade and the "clock novelty," have also made hits in motion picture theatres.

McVicker's Jazz Week program proved such a success that it was held over for a second week's record business. Jones, Linick & Schaefer, their production and musical staffs deserve congratulations on the splendid program offered and the masterly way in which it was presented. Another interesting program is on for the current week, Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman appearing in their newest offering, "Modern Marriage," a novel webbing of the silent with the spoken drama. The co-stars appear in person on the stage with their assisting players and enacting a thrilling climax to the story told on the screen.

"Safety Last," Harold Lloyd's feature which is as full of laughs and thrills as an egg is of meat, got away to a good start at Orchestra Hall on May 28th and it is expected will have a run of several weeks. This is probably the first time that an independent exhibitor in Chicago has rented both the picture and the house to show it in. Martin Henoch of the Stratford theatre is the man to initiate this practise in Chicago. Mr. Henoch has installed a high class orchestra to give musical setting for the picture and has arranged for several specialties calculated to give it a high class presentation. Donald Brian was host at a private, midnight showing of this picture on May 24th in Sam Harris' theatre and many convention visitors availed themselves of the opportunity of viewing "Safety Last."

J. L. Stiner, of the Yorkville-Casino theatre on 86th Street, New York City, made some interesting comments on Chicago exhibitors while he was here for the convention. He finds a difference between the advertising campaigns of New York and Chicago exhibitors, the latter devoting much more time and money to this important work than their New York brethren. Stiner also finds Chicago exhibitors work and worry continuously about their houses and from his viewpoint the Chicagoan carries this too far. Eastern men are more inclined to get a little more out of life in so far as he, Stiner, can observe the time they spend in recreation and relaxation does not militate against their box office records. Better get the golf clubs out, boys.

W. K. Lendon, Universal's traveling auditor, well known to many exhibitors throughout the country, has left for New York where he will prepare for an extended trip through the Orient, where he will be engaged in special work for Universal in the nature of a general survey of motion picture conditions. Before his departure from Chicago, the local Universal staff presented Mr. Lendon with a beautiful wrist watch.

Manager Simmons of Hodgkinson states that the opening of "Down to the Sea in Ships" at the Roosevelt theatre on July 29th, for a four weeks' run, will be heralded by an extensive billboard campaign, starting July 10th, which will be continued till Sept. 10th, so that theatres throughout the territory showing this important feature will receive the benefit of the out-door advertising. The picture will be given general release immediately following this Chicago loop run.

Paramount's team of ball tossers went down to defeat when they played Universal's huskies last week. The game was close as the score six to five indicates. A return game was played on May 26th, which ended in a tie, nineteen to nineteen after the heavy hitters had developed "charlie horses" running the bases and the outfielders had been worn to a frazzle chasing drives.

Herb Hayman has succeeded Otto Bolle as sales manager of Famous Players-Lasky Chicago exchange, the latter having been transferred to Detroit as branch manager.

David Bader, who has been acting for some time past as west coast representative for Century Comedy Company, passed through Chicago, Sunday last, en route to New York where he will take up the duties of general publicity director for the same producing company.

Herman Stern, assistant general sales manager of Universal, lived up to the reputation he has made for himself as a live wire, by his activities in arranging for the pleasure and comfort of visiting film men during the convention. Automobiles were available for free service between Universal exchange, the Coliseum and the Hotel Sherman. A convention number of Universal Weekly was placed in the hotel room of each exhibitor guest and the entire Universal sales staff remained in the city to act as assistant hosts and apparently contributed their full share towards the good time had by exhibition visitors. Wednesday a motion picture of the crowds visiting Universal offices was taken—the boys returning to their respective theatres with this evidence of their visit to show the home folks.

George A. Hickey, district supervisor of Goldwyn Pictures, and Manager B. B. Reingold, of the Chicago exchange, have returned from Atlantic City where they attended the convention of their organization. Eddie Bonns and Howard Dietz, of Goldwyn's home office, are expected to arrive at the Chicago exchange this week for a short visit.

Manager Meyers, of Fox's Chicago exchange, plans to leave for the annual sales convention of his organization the end of this week. Executives, branch managers and star salesmen from all over the world will be present and will get first hand knowledge of Fox's program and plans for the balance of the year. "The Town Which Forgot God," which was released in New York several months ago, will have its premier Chicago showing some time in July, according to Mr. Meyers.

Manager Jack Sampson and Sales Manager Gettelson, of F. B. O's Chicago exchange, were in New York this week for a conference with home office officials. They are expected to return in a few days.

Word comes from Adolph Linick, who is vacationing in Europe, that he is at present in Germany. It may be several months before this member of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer organization returns to headquarters.

Fox Signs Favorites for Productions

The demands of the stories now in production both at the Hollywood and New York studios of Fox Film Corporation have necessitated the company's signing to contracts many of the screen's leading favorites, according to announcements this week.

Among the artists who have been engaged to appear in the forthcoming Fox releases of 1923-24 are Barbara La Marr, Doris May, Bessie Love, Ruth Clifford, Billie Dove, Alma Tell, Irene Rich, June Elvidge, Eva Novak, Martha Mansfield, Richard Tucker, Alla Hale, Mabel Julienne Scott and Ernest Truex. These are, of course, in addition to regular Fox stars, leading ladies and character actors.

Barbara La Marr has been assigned a prominent part in the Fox version of Augusta Evans's famous novel, "St. Elmo," in which John Gilbert is to be featured.

Ernest Truex, the latest newcomer under the Fox banner, has starred on Broadway for the past two years in William Anthony McGuire's comedy, "Six Cylinder Love," which was purchased recently by William Fox for screen adaptation.

Schenck Plans $3,500,000 Program To Produce Nine Features This Year; Four New Directors Signed

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK has announced four new directors for 1923; also what is said to be the largest program ever outlined for a single year by an independent producer. He will spend $3,500,000 on nine feature plays to be produced before January, 1924.

Frances Marion will co-direct with Chester Franklin on forthcoming Norma Talmadge pictures. Victor Herman will assume direction of Constance Talmadge productions, starting upon her next picture, "The Dangerous Maid," an adaptation from the novel, "Barbara Winslow, Rebel," by Elizabeth Ellis, dealing with Revolutionary days of England in the seventeenth century, on June 18. The productions of the Talmadges will be distributed by First National.

The three stories for Norma Talmadge, which will follow the making of "Ashes of Vengeance," now nearing completion under the direction of Frank Lloyd, are: "Lost of Desire," by Margaret Peterson, an English author; "The Mirage," by Edgar Selwyn, and "Secrets," by Rudolph Besier and May Edgington.

The three stories for 1923 in which Constance Talmadge will star, and which will follow her present production of "Duley," by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, with Sidney Franklin at the megaphone, are "The Dangerous Maid," "Madame Pompadour," a story of Napoleonic days, adapted by John Emerson and Anita Loos from a foreign play, and a third story as yet unnamed. The Talmadge pictures will be made at the United studios.

C. Gardner Sullivan, for many years associated with Thomas Ince, will head the Schenck productions' scenario staff, with Willard Mack, playwright, actor and author, acting in an advisory capacity.

"This $3,500,000 will not be spent recklessly, merely for big sets and elaborate settings," says Mr. Schenck, "but for better casts and better stories, and everything that will in any way insure better pictures. I do not believe that the peak of motion picture prosperity will be reached this year. I am firmly convinced that 1924 will be an even greater year for pictures."

"A Wife's Romance" Is New Metro Title

West Coast Planning New Houses

Lesser Interests Estimate Construction Costs to Total $3,500,000

IN their announcement of the huge theatre construction program for the first eight months of the 1923 season, officials of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., see prosperity ahead for every community, which will benefit materially by an estimated total expense of $3,500,000 for the construction of new theatres.

It is contemplated that every one of these houses will be ready by September 1, 1923. Seven new theatres are now being built in various parts of Southern California.

They include an 1,800-seat house in San Pedro, which will be ready for opening within five weeks. This theatre will represent an investment in excess of $500,000, it is said.

In Pomona, California, a 1,500-seat house is being built for the Gore Brothers, Ramish and Sol Lesser interest by the Milwaukee Building Company, in the heart of the city. This house will be ready for opening about August 1 of this year and represents an investment of $200,000.

At Herman Beach, California, one of the most prominent citizens there, Mr. Mattison, is constructing a huge block into which are incorporated a bank building, a theatre, stores and offices. The theatre will have 1,000 seats.

is being built by R. F. D. List for West Coast Theatres, Inc.

On the corner of Washington, Vermont and New Hampshire, a Los Angeles key corner, will arise a magnificent 2,500-seat theatre of Class A construction. Plans for this theatre are now being prepared so that construction can begin at an early date. The total investment of the building alone, not including real estate, will be in excess of $750,000, it is said.

On York Boulevard, between 51st and 52nd streets, J. A. Badeley is erecting a theatre which will be of an Egyptian architectural design. Construction and real estate costs are estimated at $165,000.

For all of these houses Messrs. Gore Bros., Ramish and Sol Lesser are awarding contracts for organs, masonry, carpentry, decorating and other manual labor, the sum total of these contracts being estimated to keep thousands of workmen busy for an entire year.

Three more deals are now pending for theatres contemplated and in stage of negotiation ready for announcement at a very early date. All of them will be situated in Los Angeles at a total investment of $750,000.

With the completion of "The Street Singer" Miss Pickford expects to plunge right into the work of a new photoplay, either "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" or "Faust" for both of which she had scenario script prepared.

It is also expected that Jack Pickford will soon start production on a new film play. At the present time he is awaiting the preparation of a story of the Kentucky mountains.

Bill Hart Completely Vindicated

Boston Woman Admits Charges Brought Against Star Were Without Foundation

WILLIAM S. HART has been vindicated of the charges brought against him some time ago by a Boston woman and which brought about his temporary retirement from the screen. Hart was charged by the Boston woman with being the father of her child. Through the efforts of the New York American, it was divulged that the boy had been borrowed for the occasion and when confronted with the evidence the alleged mother admitted the truth.

Following the complete vindication of Hart, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, gave out the following statement at his office in Hollywood:

"Following William S. Hart's retirement, which the whole photoplay-loving world hoped was only temporary, we had arrived at a point where we hoped to be able to announce his return to the screen. When this trouble, based on the charge which now has been absolutely repudiated, arose, I was firmly convinced of Mr. Hart's integrity and the public ability to reach just conclusions. Knowing him innocent, I repeatedly urged him to appear once again, as a star in Paramount pictures.

"Mr. Hart came to see me several times. I knew no one believed the charges against him and I strove to convince him this was so but Mr. Hart, splendid man that he is and super-sensitive, refused to return to the screen until there remained no shadow of doubt as to his innocence in the mind of a single person in the world. He possessed strong convictions upon the necessity of keeping faith with the public. He resolutely refused to return unless he could share his old-time sense of comradeship with those he worked to entertain. Mr. Hart said to me, 'I will never accept a dollar of the public's money until I have convinced them I am worthy to receive it. I want to be able to look out from the screen and meet every man, woman and child eye to eye. Until then I will remain outside the profession I love and to which I might have returned if it had not been for this terrible accusation.'

"As he faced me across my desk, it came upon me then what a great tragedy it was that he should suffer penalties of guilt when I knew him to be innocent. Those who know him well always have believed him guiltless. My personal happiness that the charges have been proved groundless will be shared by hundreds of thousands. I am awaiting the moment, which I hope will be within a very few days, when William S. Hart, one of America's greatest and most popular film stars, will come to me in my office and say, 'Mr. Lasky, I am ready to go to work.'

"Buster" Collier in "Dust in the Doorway"

Arthur H. Jacobs has engaged William "Buster" Collier, to play a prominent part in his next Frank Borzage picture for First National, the temporary title of which is "Dust in the Doorway."

Other members of the cast of this Borzage-First National picture are Virginia Pearson, Josef Swickard and Frederick Truesdell.

The picture is a screen adaptation of Dixie Willson's story of a boy's love for his mother.

Glenn Hunter at Work on Film Guild Production

Glenn Hunter begins work this week on his next Film Guild production for W. W. Hodkinson, according to an announcement from Fred Waller, production manager. The picture is "Grit," adapted from a Scott Fitzgerald story by James Ashmore Creelman. "Grit" was formerly titled "Braver and Braver."

The picture will be directed by Frank Tuttle. The cast includes Dore Davidson, Osgood Perkins, Townsend Martin, Helenka Adanowska, Mary Foy, Alfred Stewart, Arthur Earle and Charley Fang.

"Fog Bound" is a Paramount picture with Dorothy Dalton as the star. She is shown herewith in three strong scenes

F.B.O. Announces Releasing Program

Exchange Managers Discuss Exploitation Plans for Thirty Coming Features

THE releasing program as planned by the Film Booking Offices for the season of 1923-24 will amount to thirty pictures. This does not include the short subjects contracted for by this company for the coming year.

This announcement was made at the annual sales managers' meeting held this week in New York and attended by all the eastern exchange managers for the purpose of planning campaigns for the year and to make special plans for the release of Mrs. Wallace Reid's forthcoming picture, "Human Wreckage."

The plan as announced to the exchange men by J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president, includes a total of about seventy subjects, including the Witwer "Fighting Blood" and his third series based on the telephone girl. Of the thirty regular releases, ten will be specials starting with the release in the late summer of "Daytime Wives" and "Blow Your Own Horn." The story of "Daytime Wives" is the glorification of the office girl and the help she can give the poor tired business man to offset any annoyances he might have had at home. The story is from the pens of Lenore Coffee and John F. Goodrich and was adapted to the screen by Wyndham Gittens and Helmar Bergman. The direction was handled by Emile Chautard and carries a cast including Wyndham Standing, Grace Darmond, Derelys Perdue, William Conklin, Edward Hearn, Katherine Lewis, Kenneth Gibson and Christina Mont.

"Blow Your Own Horn," the second special, concerns an ex-service man and his entrance into society as a partner to a young inventor. The adaptation was made by Rex Taylor from the story by Owen Davis. The direction was handled by James W. Horne and carries a cast including Warner Baxter, Ralph Lewis, Derelys Perdue, Eugene Acker, Earnest C. Warde, William H. Turner, Dell Boone, John Fox, Jr., Stanhope Wheatcroft, Billy Osborne, Joe Harrington and Frank Norcross.

Of the thirty pictures scheduled, twenty-six are to be produced by the Film Booking Offices with the other four produced by Emory Johnson. Johnson's first of the four is now in production at the Powers studio and is based on a government postal employee, featuring Ralph Lewis. The Johnson pictures that are to follow are to be made with the same exploitation possibilities of his other productions.

Eight of the remaining sixteen will be the western type of picture. Eddie Hearn is to carry the feature role in these which will be released once a month starting in the Fall. Hearn is well known to the screen fans, having appeared in some of the bigger productions in leads and having worked opposite Pauline Fredericks in "The Glory of Clementina," by William J. Locke.

The remaining eight pictures will be of the program type.

In addition to the above named thirty productions the exchange managers were informed that a big special would be injected here and there on the schedule.

"Winning of Barbara Worth" Postponed

Filming of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" by Principal Pictures Corporation has been postponed until the Fall. Sol Lesser, president of this organization, announces that the amount of research work and the extensive preparations and plans necessary to properly film this Harold Bell Wright novel, have made this expedient.

"When a Man's a Man" has been chosen to take the place of "Barbara Worth" at this time. This is another of the Wright novels.

Florence Vidor and John Bowers will play the leading roles in the screen version of the latter story.

The company will leave shortly for Arizona, the locale in which most of the Wright stories is laid.

The entire cast is subject to Mr. Belasco's approval.

To portray the role of the inimitable Mabel, the Warners have secured Louise Fazenda; Alec Francis is cast as Lawyer Blake; Gertrude Short as Topsy, and Wyndham Standing as Steven.

Hope Hampton, who will play one of the leading roles, arrived last week at the Warner studios. The production will be directed by Harry Beaumont. The script of "The Gold Diggers" was written by Grant Carpenter.

Three New Paramounts Go to Cutting Room

Three Paramount pictures have been completed at the Lasky studio in respect to "shooting" during the past few days. One is "The Cheat," starring Pola Negri, with Jack Holt featured and Charles de Roche in support. This is a Fitzmaurice production adapted from Hector Turnbull's story by Ouida Bergere.

"Hollywood," made by James Cruze, is also completed. Thomas Geraghty adapted the story by Frank Condon and Walter Woods supervised.

"Fair Week," Rob Wagner's first directorial effort, with Walter Hiers as star, is also finished. Walter Woods wrote and will edit this picture.

Edward Kimball Engaged for "Trilby" Cast

Richard Walton Tully has engaged Edward Kimball for the part of the theatre manager in his production of Du Maurier's "Trilby."

In "The Masquerader" Kimball appeared as Brock, the vigilant butler, and in "Omar the Tentmaker," Kimball played the part of Omar's father, and now he is to have a characterization in the latest Tully picture, "Trilby," in which Andree Lafayette will play the title role.

Airplanes Aid Shooting of "Unseeing Eyes"

Aeroplanes figure prominently in Cosmopolitan's picturization of Arthur Stringer's story of "Snow Blind," which is being made under the title of "Unseeing Eyes."

Actual flying scenes were made in the otherwise inaccessible Canadian Northwest, with Lionel Barrymore and Seena Owen piloted in two Curtiss planes by "Casey" Jones, chief test pilot of the Curtiss company and Captain William G. Sharpe.

E. H. Griffith, who is directing the picture, and the Cosmopolitan company have returned to New York after two months in the Canadian Rockies, and it will now be rushed to completion.

Among the latest of Metro's presentations is "The Fog," scenes from which are shown herewith

Feinman Goes to Europe for Warners

A. L. Feinman, of the Warner exploitation staff, leaves for England on the S. S. Majestic, June 2d, to do special publicity and exploitation work for the Warner Brothers' features, the physical distribution of which is controlled by the Film Booking Offices of Great Britain.

Feinman's trip to England is in the nature of a well-deserved promotion. Ever since he joined Warner Bros. as a member of the Company's exploitation forces, he has revealed himself as an exploiter of uncommon ability. He exploited "Brass" with unusual success at its world premiere at the Park Theatre in Boston.

Mooney is general manager, has taken up new quarters on the twelfth floor of the new building which is just being completed at No. 383 Madison avenue, northwest corner of Forty-sixth street. Larry Semon Is Signed by Truart Report That $3,000,000 Will Be Paid Star in Three Years; Elaborate Plans

DURING the national convention of the motion picture theatre-owners in Chicago, M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of Truart Film Corporation, signed Larry Semon, the star comedian, to a contract which calls for the payment of in excess of $3,000,000 to the star within a period of three years, it is declared.

In the series of super-productions which are to be produced by the star for Truart Films, Larry Semon will go into a different phase of production from that in which he has hitherto appeared. All the comedies will be in feature length; in fact, they will be in what is termed natural length or as much footage as the story requires whether it is 4,000 feet or 8,000 feet. They will consist of broad, clean comedy made from feature stories appearing in magazines, published books and successful stage plays. They will contain everything that a feature production requires, all star casts, big sets, the best photography obtainable, thrills, heart-interest and more than their quota of laughs.

Larry Semon's contract with Truart covers a period of three years during which time not less than six feature comedies will be completed and franchised by Truart on the independent market.

The announcement of the signing of this contract was the biggest individual event which took place at the annual convention of the exhibitors, and it was given front page space in practically every one of the Chicago daily papers. In addition to this, the photograph of the actual signing of the $3,000,000 was used in most of the dailies in conjunction with the features news story. When the Chicago convention adjourned, Larry Semon proceeded to the New York office of Truart Film Corporation with Mr. Hoffman, and upon his arrival was greeted by an enthusiastic gathering, because the information regarding the signing of the contract had already preceded him, having gone over the wires of the Associated Press to all parts of the country. Pictures of the principals in the transaction were used in most of the New York daily newspapers and front-page stories were used in many of the dailies, including the New York Times. Very rarely has a contract executed in the motion picture industry received the wide notice or the favorable comment that was given to the Semon-Truart contract.

The editorial departments of both the Semon unit, with which the star has been furnished for his exclusive use by Truart Film Corporation, and of the Truart organization are already busily engaged in going over the successful New York comedy successes and published novels with the view of acquiring at least three properties ahead so that production activities can proceed without interruption.

"Ragged Edge" Booked for N. Y. Capitol

"The Ragged Edge," second of Disitinctive's specials for the current year, will go into New York's Capitol theatre on June 3. The picture is made from Harold MacGrath's romantic novel. It was adapted to the screen by Forrest Halsey.

"The Ragged Edge" marks the screen debut of Mimi Palmeri. In this picture she is playing opposite Alfred Lunt. Others in the cast are George MacQuarrie, Christian Frank, Charles Fang and Charles Slattery. Harmon Weight directed it. It is distributed by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

U. S. Fleet Will Aid in F. B. O. Production

The United States Government will help Emory Johnson make his next production for the Film Booking Offices which is based on a postal employee, according to word from F. B. O. Production on the picture started last week at the Powers lot and one of the first tie-ups made was with the government to have the U. S. Pacific fleet of battleships assist in the production.

The new Johnson picture marks his fourth production for the Film Booking Offices. On this new one Ralph Lewis will again lead the cast.

Richard A. Rowland, General Manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.; Robert Lieber, President, and Harry O. Schwalbe, Chairman of the Executive Committee.

Lieber Pledges "Big Time Attractions"

First National Primarily Concerned with Success of Key City Houses, He Declares

BECAUSE of one outstanding fact, exhibitors may next season depend upon our organization for the finest line of product we have yet handled," declared Robert Lieber, president of Associated First National, in a statement issued this week. "Our executive committee has definitely decided that every First National Picture must be produced solely and exclusively to meet the requirements of the country's big-time metropolitan theatres. My associates in First National are primarily concerned with the success of the key city picture palaces because we feel that pictures exploited and established by them are looked forward to by patrons of subsequent run theatres and that a superior grade of product is the best possible stabilizer of the entire exhibiting business," Mr. Lieber continued.

"Winter and summer, week in and week out, the key city house must have high grade product or it cannot survive. It is our organization's plan and purpose to supply that year-round demand. We did not form First National merely because we believed there was money to be made in the distributing business. We did form our company because we believed in the necessity of fostering and developing production talent which would in turn develop and secure the future of the vast investments in theatre property.

"As evidence of our sincere purpose to meet the year-round needs of big-time houses we invite attention to our releases for the summer months just ahead. Twelve pictures, varied in type and story, each by a front rank star or director, each a fitting offering for the leading screens of the country. I believe I may point to our summer releases as proof that exhibitors may safely depend upon First National.

"Our schedule for next season gives every promise of exceeding in brilliance and variety any of our past years. With eleven of the

Gloria Swanson Starts Work in "Zaza"

GLORIA SWANSON started work in the title role of "Zaza," at the Paramount, Long Island studios. The picture is being produced by Allan Dawn.

"Zaza" will be the first Paramount picture Miss Swanson has made in the East, all her work heretofore having been done at the Lasky studio in Hollywood. It is an adaptation from the opera and play by Albert Shelly Le Vain.

H. B. Warner, who is at present playing the lead in the Harvard prize play, "You and I," will play Bernard Dufrene, opposite Miss Swanson. Ferdinand Gottschalk, another member of the "You and I" company, will play the Duke de Brissac. Lucille LaVerne will be Aunt Rosa and Mary Thurman will have the part of Florianne. Other members of the cast are Riley Hatch, Ivan Linow, Marie Sheldon, Edna Wheaton, Eleanor Dell, Fern Oakley and Hazel Webb, a dancer.

biggest and most successful directors, three of the six leading box office stars and contracts with a number of prominent screen favorites, we know we have the strongest array of production talent in our history. To exhibitors who think back and recall the class of product with which First National has been associated, our prediction that next season's pictures will set a new high mark may seem difficult of fulfillment. Yet confidence in our independent producers and belief in their artistic growth and will to outdo their past performances leaves no doubt in my mind that the performance will verify the promise.

"In conclusion, I feel that, both as an official of Associated First National and as an exhibitor, I personally owe a debt of gratitude to those talented artists of the screen who have and still are contributing so much to the success and advancement of our industry. Our theatres can develop only with the artistry of our creative talent. Each is dependent upon the other. Side by side, producer and exhibitor must work out their destinies. And it is Associate First National's sincere purpose to so conduct its business that both independent producer and independent exhibitor may feel security in us,—that they may truly depend upon First National."

Big Set Is Built for New Barthelmess Film

The Richard Barthelmess Company, filming "The Fighting Blade," a romantic story of the Cromwellian period in England, which will be a First National release, is this week working on what is said to be the biggest set ever made in the East, covering the entire Universal studio at Fort Lee, N. J.

It is a replica of the English court of the seventeenth century, in which hundreds of extras attired in the gay costumes of that period are appearing.

Dorothy Mackaill is playing opposite the star in the leading feminine role. John S. Robertson is directing.

Sylvia Breamer Assigned New Leading Role

Sylvia Breamer, who created the title role in "The Girl of the Golden West," and who was recently signed on a long-term contract to appear in First National pictures, will play the leading feminine role in "The Lord of Thundergate," a story of Japan and America, by Sidney Hershal Small, which will be one of First National's full releases.

Joseph De Grasse has been selected to direct this production.

Well-Known Authors on First National List

Many Books and Plays by Big Writers Being Transferred to Screen

IN the opinion of First National, players, directors and story form the trinity which count largely in the production of a successful and entertaining motion picture.

"The attention given by First National to the last named of these three, the story, has been just as great as that bestowed on the choice of the cast, and director, and as a result this distribution corporation is now able to announce some of the biggest and most successful novels and plays, some of them of recent publication and some old favorites which have stood the test of time for a long period of years," an announcement from the company this week points out.

The policy of the First National is probably best illustrated by the purchase of the screen rights of "Black Oxen," Gertrude Atherton's novel, which is reported to be the most successful book published by Boni and Liveright in a period of years.

First National declares that its current releases show that that company's policy of big stories worthy of big pictures has been in effect for some time past. Instances cited are "The Bright Shawl," starring Richard Barthelmess, a screen adaptation of the novel of the same name by Joseph Hergesheimer which has already run into many editions; "Within the Law," starring Norma Talmage, by Bayard Vellier; "Wandering Daughters," directed by James Young from the magazine story by Dana Burnett; "The Girl of the Golden West," considered by many the premier American drama; Booth Tarkington's "Penrod and Sam," directed by William Beaudine and produced by J. K. MacDonald, and "Children of Dust," Borzage's screen version of "Terwilliger," by Tristram Tupper, presented through Arthur S. Jacobs.

Announcement has been made by Richard Walton Tully that he would bring "The Bird of Paradise" to the screen. Mr. Tully wrote this play twelve years ago and its fame has made it a household word.

Under a recently signed contract Samuel Goldwyn will produce "Potash and Perlmutter" for First National release. This play followed the publication of many stories by Montague Glass in the Saturday Evening Post, revolving around the characters of Abe Potash and Mawress Perlmutter. So popular was the play in New York that two sequels have since been offered.

"The Bad Man," a play by Porter Emerson Browne, is awaiting First National production. "The Bad Man" had a long run on

Private Showing Set for "Mark of Beast"

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation that a private presentation of "The Mark of the Beast," adapted from the novel by Thomas Dixon's "The Beast," will be given at the Town Hall, West 43rd Street, New York, N. Y., at 2.30 P. M. on Friday, June 1st.

Special invitations are being mailed. A special musical score has been arranged for this presentation. Many notables will be present, among them being Thomas Dixon, author and producer of the picture, who will make an address before the presentation.

Doris Kenyon Signs Long Contract with Burr

C. C. BURR has just announced the signing of Doris Kenyon to a long time contract. Miss Kenyon will be one of the leading members of the permanent stock organization Mr. Burr is forming for the production of feature pictures at his Glendale, Long Island studios.

Miss Kenyon has already appeared in two pictures produced by the Burr organization. She was featured with Johnny Hines in "Sure Fire Flint." Recently, Miss Kenyon was seen as co-star with James Kirkwood in "You Are Guilty," the Edgar Lewis production produced for Mr. Burr.

Miss Kenyon has had an extensive screen career. She appeared in the Famous Players production of "The Traveling Salesman," with Pathe in "The Hidden Hand" serial, with Wharton in "The Great White Trail." She was also seen in International's production of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" and in "The Conquest of Canaan."

C. C. Burr states that he has some elaborate plans for Miss Kenyon. She will be seen in several productions now being arranged for filming at the Glendale-Mastodon Studios.

Broadway and has already played two years on the road. Edwin Carewe will produce this picture with Holbrook Blinn playing his original role on the screen.

Thomas H. Ince will present "Anna Christie," the Eugene O'Neill play which was awarded the Pulitzer Prize as the play which had done the most during the year to advance the interests of American dramatics.

"Secrets" is another dramatic hit which First National will distribute. Joseph M. Schenck has purchased the screen rights and Norma Talmadge will be seen in the role created by Margaret Lawrence in New York.

Another play to be picturized is Avery Hopwood's "Why Men Leave Home," a Broadway success. Louis B. Mayer has purchased the screen rights and John M. Stahl will direct.

A European stage sensation, Madame Pompadour, will be imported by Joseph M. Schenck for Constance Talmadge. "Her Temporary Husband," Edward Paulton's farce comedy which will be brought to the screen with Sydney Chaplin in the leading male role. "The Spite Corner," a comedy drama in which Madge Kennedy starred during a long run on Broadway.

In addition to Gertrude Atherton's "Black Oxen," First National has more than two dozen books and magazine serials which are either in production or in the hands of the screen adapters.

Among the stories are: "Circus Days," from the famous old circus story, "Toby Tyler," by James Otis, in which Jackie Coogan is starred. "The Huntress," a comedy drama of the great American outdoors, from the pen of Hulbert Footner. It will be Colleen Moore's first starring picture.

"The Fighting Blade," a period drama from the pen of Beulah Marie Dix, which will be produced by Inspiration Pictures with Richard Barthelmess in the stellar role. The action is laid in England in the time of Cromwell.

"The Wanters," by Lelia Burton Wells, a comedy drama with New York society life as a background. John M. Stahl will direct this picture for Louis B. Mayer with Marie Prevost and Robert Ellis in the starring roles. Little Richard Headrick has been signed to play an important role.

"Her Reputation," adapted from the novel, "The Devil's Own," by Talbot Mundy and Bradley King. Thomas H. Ince will present this story through First National. "Purple Pride," by H. B. Somerville, an English authoress, which has been popular in that country and which will be published here in novel form. Norma Talmadge will star. The novel was published as "Ashes of Vengeance" in England and is to be issued in this country shortly.

"Flaming Youth," a Metropolitan Magazine story by Warner Fabian. "The Lord of Thundergate," a Sunset Magazine serial and novel from the pen of Sidney Herschel Small. "Dust in the Doorway," Dixie Wilson's McClure's Magazine story, which Frank Borzage will bring to the screen. "Country Lanes and City Pavements," a novel by John Fleming Wilson, which will be personally directed by Thomas H. Ince.

"Ponjola," from the Cosmopolitan Magazine serial and novel by Cynthia Stockley. James Young will direct. "The Eternal City," Hall Caine's famous novel, which will be produced in Rome by George Fitzmaurice for Samuel Goldwyn. "The Swamp Angel," from the Collier's Magazine story by Richard Connell. "Rope," a novel by Holworthy Hall. "The Dangerous Maid," from the novel "Barbara Winslow, Rebel," by Elizabeth Ellis, which has been purchased by Joseph M. Schenck, which will be transferred to the screen with Constance Talmadge in the stellar role.

"The Sea Hawk," by Rafael Sabatini, author of "Scaramouche" and "Captain Blood," who is rapidly becoming one of the most famed authors of the present day. "Moving Fingers," by Elizabeth Irons Folsom, which was published in Everybody's Magazine in serial form. "Pearls Before Cecily," a Saturday Evening Post story by Charles Brackett.

Four More Stories Bought by First National

FOR the coming season, First National has purchased four more stories by well-known authors. They are:

"The Sea Hawk," a story of the days of Queen Elizabeth, written by Rafael Sabatini, published last Fall in Adventure Magazine and later brought out in book form.

"Rope," by Holworthy Hall, first published as a serial and later in book form. It is a comedy drama and concerns a gilded society youth.

"The Moving Finger," by Elizabeth Irons Folsom, which was published in Everybody's Magazine and is a smart society drama with a triangle situation.

"Pearls Before Cecily," a Saturday Evening Post story by Charles Brackett. In picture form it will be a comedy-drama.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Novel Street Ballyhoo is Used on "Deserted at the Altar"

Wilmington, Del.—When "Deserted at the Altar" played at the Arcadia theatre, a strong campaign was put over by the theatre management and Leo Garner, of Super Film Attractions.

The picture was well advertised in advance of showing. Ten thousand miniature photos of scenes in the picture were distributed. Five hundred half-sheet snipes were posted for seven miles around the city and five hundred window cards were used. Ten thousand wedding rings with cards attached were also used as a throw-away. The tags attached read on one side: "This is no good to me. I was deserted at the altar." The other side read: "See this wonder picture all this week at the Arcadia." Another interesting exploitation feature was a double tandem bicycle rode by a couple who were in costume to represent one of the scenes in the picture.

The biggest tie-up that was used, however, and one that aroused the interest of the whole city was a wedding on the stage of the Arcadia the Thursday night of the picture's run. For this Mr. Garner secured a tie-up with dozens of Wilmington stores. These stores gave the bride and groom presents that included a lot in the suburbs, a complete dining room and bed room set. A one hundred dollar bank account. Complete clothing outfits for both bride and groom. A Maxwell automobile, a baby carriage and numerous other

Sightseeing "Omar" Makes Exploitation Tour

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—The old street ballyhoo was given an ingenious twist that lifted it out of the rut in the exploitation for "Omar the Tentmaker" at the Strand theatre.

"Omar," or his painted and turbaned twentieth century namesake, toured the city streets in a Chevrolet. It was called "Omar's Schenectady Sightseeing Tour."

The added twist gave a novelty to the old form of street ballyhoo and furnished the opportunity for a newspaper story on sights to see in Schenectady.

articles. Mr. Garner secured the merchant tie-up by displaying the presents in the lobby of the theatre and announcing from the stage each night of the run that the wedding would take place on the stage on Thursday and naming the participating merchants.

The newspapers caught on the proposition and devoted plenty of space to it. On the night of the wedding the society editors of all the papers attended and played the affair up highly in the following day's papers.

Straw Hat Season Tied Up to "Safety Last" Campaign

Columbus, Ga.—Taking a clue from the picture, in which Harold Lloyd wears a straw hat throughout his climbing stunts, Manager I. C. Holloway, of the Grand theatre, saw possibilities of a straw hat tie-up with a merchant to boost "Safety Last." This proposition was met favorably and the Kuppenheimer representative, the Walter Smith Clothing Co., ran an ad with cut of Harold Lloyd clinging to the face of the clock.

Their copy read: "Can you connect this picture with a new straw hat? You can connect with the best straw hat in our store if you sit through 'Safety Last' at the Grand theatre, without laughing, etc."

Many tried it out, but were forced to give it up, for they could not comply with the conditions. This gave a lot of good publicity, however.

Amateur Comedy is Filmed to Exploit "Lady Hamilton"

Boston, Mass.—An unusual stunt put over by L. R. Brager, Hodgkinson exploitation man, in conjunction with the Boston American, on "The Affairs of Lady Hamilton," at the Park theatre, comprised the actual making of a two-reel travesty on the picture entitled "The Affairs of Lady Boston." The cast, numbering over fifty, were composed of residents of Boston only. The stunt was worked with a coupon printed in the Boston American. This coupon was presented to Mr. Brager, who opened his "casting office" in the lobby of the Park theatre for three mornings. There he accomplished the task of selecting the proper types for the various roles.

The picture was made in two reels and is to be shown at the Park theatre as soon as completed.

An unusual amount of interest has been created in Boston over this amateur motion picture offering. Screen aspirants from every section of the city swarmed the lobby of the theatre in an effort to get an opportunity to see themselves on the screen.

The Boston American gave front page publicity to the stunt.

Traction Company Tie-up Made to Boost "Over the Hill"

Anniston, Ala.—Manager Ray Smart, of the Noble theatre, put over an extensive campaign for "Over the Hill," but one of the outstanding features of it was the tie-up with the traction company by agreeing to pay everybody's car fare to attend the matinee at the Noble theatre on a certain afternoon. Here is how it was worked:

The traction company allowed large banners placed on every car explaining the proposition. And, of course, the title was played up prominently. Then every person riding in the car was given a ticket entitling them to a discount from the price of the theatre ticket in the amount of the car fare, if purchased in the afternoon of a certain day.

The tickets cost $3 to have printed, about $4 worth were redeemed, and Manager Smart figures that this was good publicity gotten cheaply. The traction company was pleased, so here was real co-operation.

Another angle of exploitation was the enlisting of school children in a certain community where they are accustomed to receive little patronage. They sold tickets for the attraction on 25 per cent. commission, and it is believed that this method brought into the theatre many persons who had not been in the theatre in months.

"Back Home and Broke" Is Essay Contest Theme

TACOMA, Wash.—The always effective essay contest was used with a new twist by Manager McManus of the Colonial theatre, with the aid and assistance of Harry C. Eagles, Paramount exploiter, for the exploitation of "Back Home and Broke."

The theatre tied up with the News-Tribune, local paper, and a story was run telling briefly the plot of the play and urging the business men of the town to relate their experiences in a not-more-than-200-word letter to the editor of the paper, and the best letter written to be awarded a 90-day complimentary ticket to the theatre, and the next best story a 30-day ticket.

Each day the results were printed and since speculation was rife as to whose story was the best, the picture got more good publicity than the theatre expected.

Excellent Newspaper Publicity Obtained on "The Rip Tide"

Boston, Mass.—The showing of "The Rip Tide" and "Night Life in Hollywood" at the Park theatre was given the usual advertising, in addition to which a special stunt was employed, which was the planting of an actor in Boston made up to represent the principal character in "The Rip Tide." And let it be said in passing that this stunt while not new proved most effective.

The Prince (Prince Tagor Khan in the picture) arrived in Boston from New York and went at once to the exclusive Copley Plaza Hotel where he registered as Prince Tagor Khan of Darawli, India. He was in costume and attracted a great deal of attention with the natural result that the newspaper reporters scented a story and interviewed him and photographed him enough to satisfy the most greedy press agent.

And what is more they printed columns about him and his romance with the Princess Indora. And by a strange coincidence the story the "Prince" told the reporters was the story of "The Rip Tide" so that when the reviews of the picture appeared in the Monday papers the town was wise and had a good laugh.

"Westbound Limited" Ballyhoo Gotten Into Big Parade

New York City, N. Y.—One of the most unusual exploitation stunts put over on a picture in New York City recently was handled last week by the Film Booking Offices in planting a 60-foot ad. on "Westbound Limited" in New York's Silver Jubilee parade on Fifth Avenue.

The affair was made possible by a tie-up with the New York Central railroad, who had contributed heavily to the Mayor's fund for the jubilee. The event is now being held in the Grand Central Palace and was supported by contributions of local industries. To open the jubilee, which marks New York's fiftieth year as a consolidation, a large parade was held on Fifth Avenue, Saturday afternoon. Thousands of civil employees participated in the parade, while hundreds of thousands lined the curb to watch the procession.

The day before the parade the Film Booking Offices succeeded in borrowing an old engine and cars on exhibition in the New York Central terminal. Mounting this on two trucks they sent it in the parade carrying the name of the railroad on a large banner on the first truck while carrying an ad. for "Westbound Limited" on the back truck. The old train represented the first passenger carrying conveyance on the road, and as such was entitled to enter the parade as a historical float.

Native Idol Dance Is Used as "Lost and Found" Prologue

New York City.—Native Hawaiians in a genuine idol dance were the performers in the prologue to "Lost and Found" arranged by Reed Albee for the showing at B. F. Keith's 51st Street theatre.

The scene was a section of beautiful tropical beach, with the sea rippling away to the horizon and heavy, dark clouds floating by overhead. An Hawaiian grass hut was at one side of the stage, and in front of it sat a brown skinned native chanting a plaintive air and beating upon a weird instrument.

His chant called forth the woman to do the dance, and she performed its gyrations and twists with expertness and skill.

"World's Applause" Tie-up Is Made-on Toilet Articles

HOUSTON, TEXAS.—Manager E. E. Collins, of the Capitol theatre, advertised "The World's Applause" by means of a clever tie-up with the local Colgate Company who donated 4,000 small bottles of toilet water and 3,000 small vanity cases for distribution at the theatre and around the town. Each bottle of toilet water and each vanity case carried a small card marked—these goods received "The World's Applause" now showing at the Capitol theatre.

Four young ladies dressed in attractive costumes and wearing a satin ribbon tied from one shoulder on which was the title of the picture—The World's Applause, distributed these toilet articles on the streets, in the department stores and at the theatre to women.

Appeal Made to Fight Fans on "The Abysmal Brute" Run

Seattle, Wash.—As part of the exploitation for "The Abysmal Brute" when it played at Manager R. W. Case's Columbia theatre recently, Robert Bender, Universal exploiteer, placed a good share of his advertising and publicity where it would reach prize fight disciples of the city.

One of the biggest stunts was the distribution of five thousand cards at the smoker given by one of the city's athletic clubs during the early part of the week's engagement. The cards were about two and one-half by four and one-half inches in size. They were handed to the spectators as they passed into the building to see the fights. On one side of the card was the list of five events on the program, arranged as they were to appear. At the top the card read "To-Night's Card." After each name there was a blank square. At the bottom of the card the wording read: "Check the winners and then see Pat Glendon score a knockout at the Columbia." The opposite side of the card read, in large type: "Another Good Fight! All This Week Jack London's 'The Abysmal Brute,' Starring Reginald Denny at the Columbia Theatre."

In addition to the cards, Mr. Bender used special advertising and action cuts in the sporting papers of the city

Constructive Campaign Is Put Over on "Mighty Lak' a Rose"

Seattle, Wash.—A constructive campaign was executed by Manager Frank Steffy, of the Coliseum theatre, with the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce, on "Mighty Lak' a Rose."

Enthusiastic about the picture, Mr. Steffy first sought to give away rose seeds but later changed this to small bushes because of the length of time required for rose seeds to mature and then obtained the promise of the Flower Committee of the Chamber of Commerce to support a "Plant a Rose Week."

Not only did the Chamber of Commerce support the movement, but appointed a committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. A. E. Guy to supervise the activities of such a week. Letters of endorsement from Mayor Edwin J. Brown and prominent citizens followed. The Seattle Rose Society became interested actively. A Rose Girl chosen by the Chamber of Commerce from a large number of society "buds" was crowned by the president of the association at an "official" rose planting at Volunteer Park, attended by newspaper cameramen and reporters, several park rose garden plantings followed, and the expression "Mighty Lak' a Rose" became as common in Seattle as "Nice day today, isn't it?"

"Isle of Lost Ships" Is Given Strong Navy Hook-Up

Los Angeles, Cal.—An exploitation campaign including the dedication of "The Isle of Lost Ships" to the Pacific Fleet of the U. S. Navy, the advance showing of the picture before Admiral Eberle on board the flag-ship, an "Isle of Lost Ships" Night at the Cindrella Roof dancing pavilion, including a treasure hunt, a newspaper and billboard campaign, a semaphore sailors on roofs of buildings at busy corners, and various window displays was put over in conjunction with its first run booking at the Kinema theatre.

In view of the cooperation extended Mr. Tourneur in the production of the picture by the U. S. Navy in supplying the producer with data, etc., and because of the nature of the film, as well as the fact that a U. S. battleship brings about the rescue of the hero and heroine, the Los Angeles engagement was dedicated to the Navy. A special dedicatory title to this effect was made part of the film. Three days in advance of the opening, the picture was shown before Admiral Eberle and his staff on board his flag-ship. At this time it was announced that all men attached to the fleet would be admitted to the Kinema to see this film at a 25 cent reduction in admission price. This made good newspaper copy and brought hundreds of sailors to the theatre.

On Tuesday evening after the film opened, a tie-up with the Cinderella Roof dancing pa-

Book Store Hook-Ups Made on "Souls for Sale"

BOSTON, Mass.—Goldwynner Buddy Stuart put "Souls for Sale" across in Boston through book store tie-ups, newspapers and window cards. One of the best bets in exploiting the picture in the Modern and Beacon theatres was the book store tie-ups. Stuart obtained a big window display at the Old Corner Book Store and with Jordan-Marsh Company. This was the first time that Jordan-Marsh had ever tied up with any motion picture. The R. H. White Company gave an inside book section display. In each case, oil paintings, photographic enlargements and special cards were used.

A "How movies are made" tie-up was obtained in the Bryant Drug Store in fashionable Brookline. Photographs showing the making of motion pictures were used in the window in connection with the Palmolive cold cream hanger with the picture of Eleanor Boardman.

vilion was effected. Huge cut-outs and signs were carried on the building of the big dance hall as well as announcements in their daily advertisements and publicity stories. One of the features of the evening was a treasure hunt. Twenty-five dollars in gold were hidden around the hall. Another feature was a "storm dance," during which several blowers were turned on the dancers, lightning and thunder were reproduced and appropriate dance music rendered. The effect proved such a hit it had to be repeated several times during the evening. The hall was decorated with sails, belaying pins, life-boats and other ship paraphernalia. In the centre of the floor was reproduced a small lighthouse. Advertising for this evening was spread broadcast a week before.

Semaphore sailors on the buildings at busy corners also attracted much attention a week before and the week of the run. These sailors wiggled from one to another until the messages reached a sailor on the marquee of the Kinema. On the flags used by the sailors were printed the title of the picture. One flag read "The Isle" and the other "of Lost Ships." At night searchlights were spotted on the sailors who wore white duck uniforms.

Shoe Stores Are Hooked Up to "Souls for Sale" Campaign

Springfield, Ohio.—A half dozen of the more important shoe shops in Springfield tied up with the showing of "Souls for Sale" at the Liberty theatre. The displays which they carried in their windows were arranged by J. Gregory, manager of the theatre, and Goldwynner H. T. Snowden. The displays consisted of a large block of leather used for shoe soles with an ad for the picture painted in water colors on the leather. The sign read: "We have soles for sale, durable and lasting." The Liberty theatre has "Souls for Sale," Rupert Hughes' thrilling story of Hollywood. One week, commencing Friday, May 18."

Studio streamers were used in ten big downtown windows. Fourteen downtown drug stores allowed Palmolive hangers to be displayed in their windows. Two thousand of the teaser envelopes and inserts, "How to Get Into the Movies," were distributed to high school girls, attracting a lot of attention among the younger element in Springfield.

The lobby was decorated with a 24-sheet cutout, a three-sheet display board, with heads of forty players cut from stills.

One hundred and fifty window cards and 5,000 hangers were used in the business section of the city. The Daily Sun used a telegram from Eleanor Boardman to the residents and the News one from Rupert Hughes.

Attractive "Grumpy" Prologue Is Put Over by Soriero

Baltimore, Md.—A specially arranged prologue was given in conjunction with "Grumpy" when that photoplay was presented at the Century theatre, staged and directed by Thomas D. Soriero, general manager of the Whitehurst Interests.

The main curtain rose, revealing a fetching tableau. On the raised portion of the stage in the rear, a young lady about eight years of age was discovered in ballet costume in a pose on her toes against a solid background of very dark blue velvet formed by a back drop. Over her, near the top of the stage and to each side, pearl grey curtains formed a soft background.

As the orchestra went well into the strains of "Whispering Flowers," she tripped down the stairs to the front of the stage and gave a little ballet dance called the "Gardenia."

When this was finished, she went back up the stairs and posed while the stage was darkened. The orchestra then went into the strains of "March of the Dwarfs."

Then in the semi-darkness of the stage, four figures entered—two from each side. All were dressed alike; in dark man's suit with grey

"Safety Last" Goggles Are Given Out by Paper

KINGSTON, N. Y.—Manager Keeney of the Keeney theatre and the Opera House, tied up with the Kingston Leader to aid in exploiting "Safety Last."

The Leader carried a story, to the boys and girls of the town, requesting them to call at its office and receive free of charge, a pair of Harold Lloyd goggles. The kiddies needed but one call and stormed the office of the Leader. The effect of this stunt on the children was tremendous, and in less than a week, 1,000 of these goggles had been distributed.

cap and a black silk handkerchief over the face from the nose down.

Each carried a flash light and they went through an eccentric dance supposedly like burglars, hunting for loot. This was entitled the "Burglars."

As they finished the dance, the little ballet dancer again came on the stage. In the semi-darkness she went into her original tableau pose. The "burglars" spying her, dashed up the steps and all knelt around her, lighting her up with their flash lights.

A transparent drop was lowered on this tableau, and as the picture began, the lights gradually dimmed and went out on the stage. The music and action were arranged especially for the prologue by Frank Rehsen, formerly with D. W. Griffith, and now director of music at the Century.

Lifebuoy Soap Hook-up Is Made as "Daddy" Exploitation

Joliet, Ill.—A statewide tie-up between "Daddy" and Lifebuoy soap was inaugurated during the run at the Princess theatre.

More than 75 Joliet drug and grocery stores used display material furnished by the Lifebuoy people, two large stores using elaborate window displays. The material supplied by the Lifebuoy company was extremely attractive and gave the theatre an opportunity to announce its play dates. In addition, the Lifebuoy company supplied the theatre with 2,000 samples of the soap encased in a package, one side bearing an ad for the picture.

The soap was distributed around the theatre, on the streets, by Princess ushers. The tie-up is now being continued on a national scale.

Elaborate Lobby Display Used to Aid "All the Brothers"

Seattle, Wash.—An elaborate lobby display, a costumed prologue and usherettes in special costumes were three of the items used by Manager H. B. Wright to exploit "All the Brothers Were Valiant," when that picture played at the Strand theatre recently.

By using cut-outs from the 24 sheets, in conjunction with some special art work, Mr. Wright dressed his lobby to resemble a ship. The box office was disguised as the captain's cabin, and in front of it stood a ship's wheel. On each side of the lobby were hung red, green and white marine lamps. Life preservers, coils of rope and other sea effects were laid about the floor and hung on the sides of the lobby.

The usherettes in the theatre were all attired in special sailor costumes made for the occasion. The costumes were made of white silk with light blue trimmings. They were in two parts, each consisting of a middie and trousers. A sailor cap, made of the same materials, was also worn.

For his prologue, Mr. Wright engaged the University of Washington quartet. The quartet appeared at each performance in the costume of ordinary seamen, with either a heavy "slicker" or navy "pea-jackets" and rain hat. The stage was decorated with a small cabin at one side and a ship's railing at the other, and more marine lights were strung along the cabin and across the top of the stage.

Japanese Theatre Exploits Run of "Robin Hood" Heavily

Tokio, Japan.—The showing of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Imperial theatre called forth unusual preparations. Press stories, sent out weekly to Japanese newspapers and magazines all over the empire, as well as to English publications in Japan, had aroused the public's curiosity for months, and United Artists, having been so lucky as to obtain the Imperial theatre in Tokio for a five-day run in the last week in April, this curiosity was answered by an advance announcement in Tokio newspapers, foreign as well as Japanese, of the play dates at the "Imperial"—the golden key to successful showings in all other theatres in Japan. These announcements appeared five days before the opening performance.

Sidewalk Still Frames for "Isle of Lost Ships"

S. T. JOHN, N. B.—During the run of "The Isle of Lost Ships," the Queen Square theatre initiated a new line of exploitation co-operation with the retail merchants by putting a frame set of stills on the sidewalk outside of the stores. They naturally caught the eye of the shopping crowds and meant immeasurable advertising for the picture.

A large model of a sailing vessel, surmounted by a cutout of a barque was the eye-attractor used inside the lobby of the theater. Like the stills, it aroused considerable interest, coupled as it was with the descriptive slogan regarding the film "The Triumph of the Screen."

well as foreign newspaper men were formally invited for a private showing at the Imperial Hotel. This brought much favorable comment and a lot of free and effective advertising.

The interest of the educated class was aroused by an appeal to the students to look upon "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" as an indispensable link in their education, necessary to form a more vivid idea of European history, costumes, morals and customs of the Middle Ages than ever possible by text-books.

This message was also broadcasted by wireless telephone, the first moving picture advertising stunt by wireless ever done in Japan, from the roof of the Hochi Shimbun, one of the largest newspaper buildings in Tokio. A magnovox, or sounding drum, was installed at Ueno Park and a publicity talk on Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" was broadcasted to the large crowds at the park, which novelty stunt was repeated several times during the show dates.

In addition to sixty-five advertisements in the Japanese and ten in the English newspapers, ranging between twenty lines and forty inches each, 1,000 beautifully lithographed Japanese posters in the form of tournament banners and 500 larger ones of the regular one-sheet size were posted all over the capital.

Balloon Ascension Hoax Pulled to Exploit "Racing Hearts"

Kankakee, Ill.—Manager William Cadoret, of the Majestic theatre, and Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiteer, gained publicity for "Racing Hearts" in the Daily Republican through a hoax which they framed up.

They tied up with the Buick agency in connection with "Racing Hearts" and for two days previous to the exhibition of the picture ads were run in the paper announcing that a Buick car, attached to a gas balloon would be lifted eight miles above the head of the shortest citizen of Kankakee. This created considerable comment and was given much free space under the "amusement" and "theatrical" columns.

On the day the picture would be shown another ad appeared stating that because of innumerable protests from the public, the Buick car would not go up, as previously stated, as it would mean too great a risk and would endanger too many lives.

In addition, a general merchants' tieup campaign was waged in which the music store tied up for harmonicas, the United Cigar Stores for cigars, thereby exploiting Theodore Roberts; the town's largest auto supply company tied up for accessories, throwing in the automobile angle, and nine confectionery stores had a "Racing Hearts" sundae.

Special Theatre Front Made on "Affairs of Lady Hamilton"

Boston, Mass.—"The Affairs of Lady Hamilton," at Jake Lourie's Park theatre, was preceded by a heavy exploitation campaign conducted by Louis R. Brager, representing the Home Office, in conjunction with the theatre management and the Boston Hodgkinson Exchange.

Aside from the unusual newspaper space used in conjunction with this picture and the amount of front page publicity that it received, Mr. Brager originated a number of different ideas and stunts that kept the title of the picture before the eyes of Boston inhabitants for a long time preceding the showing of the feature.

Two weeks before the showing of the production the town of Boston had quite a discussion relative to new traffic rules governing vehicular traffic. Mr. Brager took advantage of the local discussion by printing up a yellow legal sized envelope captioned "New Traffic Rules." These envelopes were attached to every automobile parked in the city of Boston. The insert stated that the traffic would be unusually heavy about the theatre on account of the appearance of Liane Haid in "The Affairs of Lady Hamilton."

Utilizes Safe Robbery to Exploit "Go-Getter"

FORT SMITH, Ark.—Manager Hugo Plath of the Palace theatre had advertised the showing of "The Go-Getter" extensively in advance.

The night before the picture opened the theatre's safe along with six other safes in town were burglarized so the next day Mr. Plath capitalized upon this robbery to bring him business by placing the blown up safe in the lobby of the theatre with a large banner which read:

"It was a clever 'Go-Getter' that got this but not as clever as T. Roy Barnes in 'The Go-Getter' now showing."

The front of the lobby was decorated with a large plaster paris dummy made to resemble Lord Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar. An old sail with the billing of the picture was also added. Two spot lights were thrown upon it, illuminating the display at night and making it discernible at a great distance.

For a street stunt an old fashioned shay was used with two coachmen and a charming young lady occupant. This was driven about the streets of Boston for eight hours a day and continued for ten days preceding the showing.

Barthelmess Notes Are Sent to 1,000 Fans on "Fury"

Streator, Ill.—When "Fury" played the Majestic theatre, letters from Richard Barthelmess came to 1,000 of the most prominent Streator families. The envelopes bore the star's private correspondence mark and were mailed from his address in New York City.

All of which goes to prove again that paying attention to the little details pays. Al Sobler out of First National's Chicago office took the trouble of having the letters printed with Barthelmess' New York address and then having them sent to Gotham to be mailed.

It may have been the first time Barthelmess knew that the role of Boy Leyton was "as near to realizing my ideal part as anything I had hoped to find"; but this frank confidence, coupled with a letter of unusually good sales news won Streator over.

Pola Negri Telegrams Exploit Showing of "Bella Donna"

Atlanta, Ga.—Five days in advance of the showing of "Bella Donna" at the Howard theatre, the reproduction of a telegram alleged to be from Pola Negri to Manager Howard Price Kingsmore pertaining to her "first American picture" was run in the newspapers.

Five thousand of these telegrams were sent to mailing lists in original telegraph envelopes. Three thousand heralds were wrapped in packages of laundry leaving the Mays Laundry Co. Two thousand heralds were enclosed in advertising matter sent out by Phillips and Crew Piano Co. Five thousand fan photos were distributed to all patrons attending matinees and in the advertising catch lines were used telling that photos of Pola Negri, showing why Charlie Chaplin was so anxious to marry her, would be given to all attending the matinee. Five thousand rotos were distributed by the Howard ushers to ladies as they boarded the street cars to go home.

Exhibitor Capitalizes Star's Appearance for Opposition

Fort Worth, Texas.—Although Theodore Roberts appeared in person at an opposition theatre, Manager Harry Gould of the Hippodrome theatre took advantage of the appearance to help exploit "Grumpy" at his house.

As soon as Mr. Roberts arrived in town, Manager Gould called upon him and invited the star and his wife to the Hippodrome theatre to see himself on the screen. Mr. Gould then "tipped" off the newspaper men that Mr. Roberts would be present and for them to be there also to obtain his opinion of his own film. This they did and published several articles advertising Roberts' appearance in person at the Hippodrome and his personal endorsement of his picture, "Grumpy."

Then at a special Kiwanis luncheon where Mr. Roberts was an honored guest, Mr. Gould had placed at each guest's plate a cigar that carried a small tag reading as follows: "Two of My Favorites—This Cigar and 'Grumpy' —(signed) Theodore Roberts."

A fanfoto with the Hippodrome program printed on the back of it was also presented to those attending this special luncheon.

Live Monkey in Lobby for "Hunting Big Game"

MUSKOGEE, Okla.—A novel lobby display for "Hunting Big Game in Africa" was used by Manager Olie Brownlee of the Palace theatre.

Extending across the front of the lobby was a banner on which was painted the title of the picture against an atmospheric background. On each end of the banner was hung a wildcat hide.

In the center of the lobby was a live monkey which played around a small table that it was tied to. The monkey attracted considerable attention and especially for the children who would bring peanuts to feed to it. Out near the sidewalk was placed a moving picture camera which was borrowed from a local news photographer. Hanging to this camera was the following sign: "This is the kind of camera that made the picture 'Big Game' possible."

"Mighty Lak' a Rose" Tied Up to Victor Records

CINCINNATI, Ohio.—When "Mighty Lak' a Rose" played at the Strand theatre, its publicity department took the trouble to look up the phonograph records of the song that were available. It discovered, for example, that the Victor Library had five records of it: a Farrar solo, an Alda selection, a harp solo, an orchestra record and a quintet. On the back of a herald it got out it listed all five.

The extra trouble meant a tie up with the Victor shops and brought additional exploitation at no additional expense.

"Mr. Billings Spends His Dime" Gets Bank Tie-up

HOUSTON, Texas.—Manager E. E. Collins of the Capitol theatre used a number of tie-ups to exploit "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," but his most successful was that which he made with the National Bank of Commerce.

The bank gave a special window display of small savings banks together with several announcements about the picture and then ran large ads in the newspapers carrying cuts of Walter Hiers and the title of the picture.

Special blotters were also printed on this picture and placed on the counters in the bank and in office buildings.

Book Department Makes Strong "Souls for Sale" Hook-up

WORCESTER, Mass.—An unusually complete store tie-up was obtained by Goldwynner Buddy Stuart and Manager Elmer R. Daniels of the Olympia theatre for the showing of "Souls for Sale." The tie-up was with the book department of Barnard, Sumner & Putnam's Department Store. The store gave a big window display and also a counter display inside, using posters for the picture, special cards and stills in addition to copies of the novel. The management of the store also took 5,000 of the "Souls for Sale" heralds and had one wrapped in every package that left the store. The herald contained an additional line by the date blank—"Buy the book at Barnard, Sumner & Putnam's. See the picture at the Olympia theatre."

W. J. Jamieson, manager of the book department, used a two inch ad for the novel and picture in the store's regular newspaper advertising space on Sunday, the day of the first screening. The ad mentioned the fact that the book was for sale at the department store and the picture could be seen at the Olympia.

Regional News From Correspondents

Albany Notes and Eastern New York Briefs

F. S. HOPKINS, a former manager of the Universal exchange, in Buffalo, was appointed last week as manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, which has been handled for the last five years by C. R. Halligan, and who will remain with the exchange with no difference other than a change of title. While managing the Buffalo exchange, Mr. Hopkins suffered a breakdown, resulting in his being away for about a year, during which time he recuperated. For the last few months Mr. Hopkins has acted as salesmanager in the Albany exchange.

With Earl Cramer succeeding H. Bernstein as manager of Universal's Buffalo exchange, which has supervision over the Albany office, the announcement that Mr. Hopkins would head the Albany exchange, was forthcoming. Mr. Cramer accompanied by Mr. Herbel, general salesmanager of the eastern division for Universal, was in Albany the past week, installing a new system, and looking after matters generally.

Several picture theatres in central New York have changed hands during the past week or so. In Schenectady, the Broadway theatre, which has been owned by W. H. Loomis, has just been acquired by Samuel Rosenberg, of Syracuse, while the Central Park, in the same city, has been bought by James Humphrey. A new house is being erected in Afton by John Anderson, of Bainbridge, who owns the Lyric, in that place. The house will open in about two months. In Canton, the American has been acquired by Papayanokos brothers, who were prominent for years in Watertown, N. Y., as owners of motion picture theatres, and who sold out some two years ago, only to later acquire a house in Gouverneur.

There are quite a number of picture theatres in this section which will close during a part of the summer for remodeling. Louis Buettner cancelled all bookings the past week for the Casino in Waterford, which closes June 9. Mr. Buettner also stated that the Opera House, which he owns in Cohoes, would be closed for part of the summer. Nate Robbins will also close the Colonial in Utica, for the summer, while Cohen's theatre in Newburgh, closes the first week in June.

Marie Wilsey, of Syracuse, has started an action against the Robbins-Eckel theatre of that city, for $2,000 damages for alleged injuries received when she fell in an aisle.

A theatre which has been in course of construction in Albany for several months, was leased the past week by the Shuberts, and will open about September 1, with spoken drama. The house will seat 1,400, and will offer sharp competition to the picture theatres of the city, which have had only a stock company as a competitor for the last two years. The new house is located in the business center. Construction work halted for several weeks following the financial entanglements of Max Spiegel, and the filing of a mechanics' lien.

William Shirley, owner of the Strand, in Schenectady, made a short trip to New York last week.

Under the ownership of Meyer Schine, the former Maxsey, in Oneonta is known as the Palace.

Charles Sesonke and E. H. Arnold, who have just sold the Avon in Watertown to the Robbins Amusement Company, will give a farewell party to the school children of that city on June 3, as a token of the friendship which has developed in the last two years. Every child will be admitted free.

Burglars entered the Strand theatre in Schenectady last Thursday night, but were frightened away before they could open the safe which contained several hundred dollars.

Chairman George H. Cobb, of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, is recovering at his home in Watertown from injuries received a few days ago, when he was struck by an automobile in his home city. The driver of the car was later sentenced to three months in jail, a fifty dollar fine, and had his license revoked.

The picture theatres in Schenectady have been unusually hard hit during the past week by a trolley strike which not only tied up all the city cars, but the interurban service as well. On some nights, the larger houses played to little more than a handful of people. The strike is still unsettled.

The Oneonta theatre, in Oneonta, N. Y., has now adopted a policy of closing three days, and running three days each week.

Central New York exhibitors, who were callers along Film Row the past week, included B. S. Thornton, of the Orpheum in Saugerties, George F. Leo, of Staatsburg, William Shirley, of Schenectady; Morris Silverman, of the Happy Hour, in Schenectady; H. E. Wilkinson, of the Lincoln, in Troy, and Lew Fischer, of Ticonderoga.

Miss Renee Craven, a well known employee in the First National exchange here, was a member of a house party at Lake George over Memorial Day.

George Ross, former branch manager for F. B. O., in New Haven, but who has lately been in Albany, was called to New York last week where he will work out of the home office of F. B. O.

G. W. Turnbull, formerly connected with the State, in Schenectady, is now looking after the press work for the Oneonta, Palace and Strand theatres, in Oneonta.

Vic Bendell, manager of the F. B. O. exchange, in Albany, was in New York the past week end, attending a sales meeting.

R. Hutchinson, of Boston, is the new manager for Smalley's house in Sidney.

Harvey Edick, of West Winfield, where he runs Bisby's Hall, was in Albany the past week, booking up his summer's program.

Bennie Stern, who has been connected with the State, in Schenectady, is assisting Walter Roberts who has just been transferred from the Mark Strand, in Albany, to the Troy, in Troy, as business manager. Herman Vineburg succeeds Mr. Roberts at the Mark Strand.

The Mark Strand, in Albany, took on its summer aspect Decoration Day, when the orchestra and the ushers appeared in summer uniforms. Fans are being installed at the Troy, and within a few days, the employees in this house will also be in summer attire.

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange in Albany, is leading in the present contest with Simon Feld, of the same exchange, running neck and neck, with the New York and Albany offices in a salesman race.

Phil Markell, of Adams, Mass., a well known exhibitor across the line, made a run to Albany last week, and visited several of the exchanges.

Marvin Kempner, manager for Paramount in Albany, was in Gloversville the past week, and sold Meyer Schine many pictures for his circuit.

Vacation schedules have been received in nearly all of the Albany exchanges, and vacations will begin among the employees early in June.

With the taking over of the American Releasing Corporation, by the Selznick Distributing Corporation, the exchange maintained for some time past by the former in Albany, passed out of existence. The Selznick company, however, will retain not only the office occupied by American Releasing, but will also retain the entire office force from Manager Robert Bendell down. Robert Schussel, of New York, connected with Selznick, was here engineering the transfer.

Margaret Sullivan, whose brother owns the Sans Souci, in Watervliet, does all of the booking for the house, and visits the exchanges two or three times each week.

The daughter of C. R. Halligan, of the Universal exchange, in Albany, is on the road to recovery following an attack of diphtheria.

Samuel Suckno, owner of four theatres in Albany, has arranged to show "The Birth of a Nation" at the Albany, during the week of June 3, at popular prices, and with an augmented orchestra. Mr. Suckno also announces his intention to return to first runs as soon as he can complete plans.

Frank Bruner, manager for Pathe in this city, is bound to have a pleasant vacation, whatever his decision. He has an opportunity to motor through New Jersey, and has also an invitation to visit his brother's hunting lodge in Minnesota.

With large crowds attending, the fight pictures opened at the American, in Troy, on Sunday. It is the first occasion when this type of pictures has been booked by Ben Apple, but the crowds apparently justified his decision.

George Roberts and William Berinstein were the only exhibitors from Albany who attended the Chicago convention. Just before Mr. Berinstein took the train, he ran over to the First National exchange, and was presented with a lucky pocket piece by Mr. Herman. Just how lucky it proved to be is not known, for Mr. Berinstein is still in Chicago.

Speaking of Chicago, Morris Silverman, who runs the Happy Hour and the Pearl, in Schenectady, declared the other day, that while every exhibitor in his city would like to have attended the Chicago gathering, it was impossible to rake together the $200 for the trip.

There may be a change within the next two weeks in the presidency of the Albany F.I.L.M. club, which is now headed by C. R. Halligan. The club is made up entirely of exchange managers and with F. S. Hopkins heading the Universal exchange, in place of Mr. Halligan, it is probable that Frank Bruner, the vice-president, may head the club.

Washington Film Row and Theatre Brevities

HARRY M. CRANDALL, owner of the Crandall theatres in Washington and vicinity, has returned from a week's visit to Chicago where he attended the annual national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Some idea of the magnitude of the $30,000 Wurlitzer orchestra-unit pipe organ being installed at Crandall's Avenue Grand theatre may be gathered from the fact that seven trucks were required to haul it to the theatre. In its knocked-down state, the organ parts filled forty-two huge packing cases. The pipes range from three inches in length to sixteen feet. The console is one of the most complicated pieces of mechanism ever devised, with a series of stop combinations permitting any desired instrumentation. The keyboard is a triple-manual unit. The organ will be dedicated by Stanley W. Rhoades, concert organist, who is at present at work on the inaugural program which will embrace many original novelties. The Avenue Grand organ when completed will be the largest south of New York.

Joseph P. Morgan, general manager of the Crandall enterprises, left Washington last Wednesday for a business trip to Philadelphia and New York in the interests of the Crandall houses.

N. Mirsky, conductor of the Symphony Orchestra at Crandall's Metropolitan theatre, took advantage of the opportunity afforded by the second week's run of Harold Lloyd in "Safety Last" to catch a breath of fresh air by spending the greater part of the week in Detroit and Buffalo. Mr. Mirsky left the city Monday night and returned yesterday morning.

Miss Ruth Estelle Smith, of the Federated Film Service, announces her forthcoming June wedding to Herman Dwight Cole.

Post Master General New is billed to play a "lead" role, in a new picture "Loyal Lives," "designed," says the Washington Star, "to show the romance of the postal service." The studio working on the film is the Yonkers plant of the Whitman Bennett concern and is to be released through Vitagraph, says Manager Spoehr, who says further that Brandon Tynan, Mary Carr, Faire Binney, Blanche Craig, Buster Collier, and Charles MacDonald are in the cast in support of the P. M. G.

Harry Levey, Baltimore representative for J. G. Bachman's Educational exchange of Washington, is telling the film world of the arrival of a new present from his wife. He now fathers a baby daughter.

News from Springfield, Ill.

The Chatterton is to close its season shortly and the place will then be torn down. Plans call for the erection of a new theatre, to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000. The present structure is a dilapidated affair, built many years ago. The Hickox estate plans selling bonds to cover the cost of the building.

Springfield has another of its numerous reports of a new motion picture theatre. This time it is to be built north of the Majestic on the Harris Hickox property. The site is a fair one, probably better for vaudeville or legitimate attractions than for a picture house. Hickox, who is quite a property owner here, has been trying for years to get someone to come in and build on his property. Plans have been made time and again, but all have gone by the wayside. Maybe it's a go this time.

RAYMOND S. PECK, director of the Moving Picture Bureau of the Canadian Government at Ottawa, has returned to the Canadian Capital with the announcement that the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will be held in Ottawa early next October. This decision was reached by the members of the society at their recent gathering at Atlantic City, N. J., Ottawa winning out over New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

The daylight saving advocates of Hull, Quebec, finally triumphed over the standard timers in the question as to whether the city should have summer time or not this year. The Hull City Council first decided against changing the local clocks, but the subject was reopened and the final result was that "summer time" was ordered to start Sunday, May 27. The measure was opposed by the various local exhibitors. For several weeks confusion had reigned because Ottawa, just across the Ottawa River, had adopted daylight saving.

The Family theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, which had been dark for several months, was reopened Monday, May 28, for an indefinite run of "Robin Hood," which had played the Russell theatre at $1 top only two weeks previously. The Family theatre is one of the two local houses owned by Harry Brouse, who has been ailing for many weeks past with blindness.

"The Hottentot" was the special attraction at the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of May 28, this booking having been arranged because of the spring meeting during that week at Connaught Park Jockey Club. ANYONE with a prescription for material guaranteed to effect a piano finish on golf clubs, please communicate with Christie Deibel, manager of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown. Whenever Deibel isn't polishing up the clubs, he's out on the links of the Youngstown Country Club, getting in trim to enter the Film Golf Tournament to be pulled off Tuesday, June 5th at the Belleclair Golf Club on Long Island. It's said around Youngstown that Deibel's as good a golfer as he is an exhibitor. And that's going some!

John J. Murray of the Opera House and Hippodrome at Warren, gladdened the hearts of Cleveland exchange men and fellow exhibitors by paying them a visit last week—the first in many moons. Murray has just recovered from an illness that kept him too long away from Cleveland. Aside from acknowledging the extra share of welcome that was being handed out on all sides, Murray managed to do a little business. He closed with First National for "Within the Law." This picture will open his newly acquired Hippodrome the week of June 10th.

G. L. Fleishman, of the World and Atlas theatre, Toledo, paid the Cleveland exchanges a personal visit during the week, and reported business very good in his neck of the woods.

George Mock, of the Mock theatre, Girard, was in town getting exploitation ideas for big feature productions.

B. Warner, equally famous as manager of Opera House at Niles and as father of the well known Warner Brothers, was in town on a booking expedition which kept him in Cleveland several days last week.

Art Hoganson, managing director of the Pantheon and Alhambra theatres, Toledo, came over just to see what was doing in a big city and says that Cleveland hasn't anything on Toledo when it comes to picture presentation.

"Doe" Horater, who was managing director of the Pantheon and Alhambra theatres in Toledo until poor health forced him to withdraw from the field, is back from a winter in Florida. It is said that while not physically strong enough to enter the exhibiting field again, he is about to enter the motion picture supply business in Toledo.

T. S. Cooper has severed his connection with the sales department of the Cleveland Fox Film exchange. Cooper formerly covered the Youngstown territory.

Charles F. Decker, of the Liberty theatre, Vermillion, was a visitor at the local Pathe exchange one day this week, and reports that the cool weather has made for continued good business with him.

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio theatres, is in New York. He left Cleveland Saturday.

Max Marcus, manager of the U. S. theatre, Woodland avenue, Cleveland, is the only exhibitor known to be satisfied with present motion picture conditions. Marcus says he hasn't a kick against anyone or anything. He's playing daily change, giving his patrons a varied program with novelties, and a five-piece orchestra, all for five and ten cents. His seats are always filled. So is the cash box. So why kick?

The Rex theatre at Youngstown is to be abandoned as a theatre. The building is to be entirely altered and will be used as a market when completed.

The Rev. Father Edward Tasnacht is preparing to show pictures at Doylestown, Ohio.

The Rev. Father Maerder of the R. C. Church at Jones Island is showing motion pictures at the school auditorium once a week. If the experiment proves a success, he will show pictures other days as well.

The Tawa theatre at Ottawa, Ohio, has been closed for an indefinite period by Manager Rhodes on account of the death of his wife.

It is authoritatively reported that the Delmar theatre, Bowling Green, has been closed for an indefinite period.

Tom Colby, Universal exchange manager in Cleveland, is, at last, at liberty to talk to Ohio exhibitors about "Foolish Wives." After being repeatedly rejected during the past two years, the Ohio Censor Board has finally passed the picture. It's not the same picture that has been exhibited elsewhere, however. The Ohio edition is unique. It is a brand new edition of the photoplay, made to fit Ohio Censor Board requirements. One of the requirements is that the character of the ambassador has been changed into that of an oil magnate. The Ohio Censor Board objects to slighting remarks about an ambassador. Another change regards the characters of the counterfeiters. Ohio movie patrons will know them only as money lenders. Titles have been changed throughout the production. Having now measured up to Ohio Censor Board standards, "Foolish Wives" is about to be released throughout the state, Ohio being the only state in the union in which the picture has been refused exhibition.

Joe Mayer, former publicity representative for Universal in Cincinnati, is now making the Cleveland Universal office his headquarters, and will devote his time and efforts for the benefit of the northern Ohio exhibitors.

C. L. Peavey, local Hodgkinson exchange manager, made a short trip through the territory this week.

Portland, Ore., Exhibitor and Exchange News

PORTLAND'S board of motion picture censors, which works through a large group of volunteer viewers, has taken a step to arm the viewers with proper authority by providing identification cards to each one. Such cards, however, shall, the board makes very plain, not be used in any case to gain admittance to a theatre.

"The board appreciates the necessity for taking such precautions," a statement says, "in order to protect the exchanges from any misuse of the privileges accorded the viewers and members of the board." The board requests, too, that when viewers resign from this work they immediately surrender their identification cards to Mrs. E. T. Colwell, who has been secretary of the board since its inception. Portland's problems of censorship are entirely in the hands of the official board. Its viewers see every film before it is shown in Portland and the official board of three members, appointed by the city council, is a court of appeal from the viewers' decision. The mayor and council, however, may over-rule the board, and actually did so in one case in recent history.

Photoplay Personals and Events in Southeast

THROUGHOUT the Southeastern states business conditions generally are reported on the upgrade, despite the opening of summer. There are a few bad spots remaining and right in the Atlanta territory conditions are far from good. But in Texas, Florida, Oklahoma, the exchanges report a very optimistic outlook on the part of the theatre owners as a whole.

Members of the Atlanta and Charlotte Paramount exchanges who attended the general sales conference held in New Orleans are back home very enthusiastic over the general outlook for business next season. Details of the new sales policies were expounded at length to them, together with the announcement of many of the super-specials to be released during the next season. The announcement that "The Covered Wagon" will be available among next season's releases was received with great enthusiasm. Fred M. Creswell, Southern division manager, made a great hit with his explanation of policies he has followed so successfully in gaining the co-operation and confidence of small town exhibitors. Sidney R. Kent declared it one of the most original and forceful plans he has yet heard explained and intends adopting it in all the exchanges.

The long distance marathon dances are getting a big share of the business in several Carolina towns to the discomfiture of the motion picture theatre owners. The novelty of the non-stop dance appeals generally to the public and they are thronging the places where they are being held. In Wilmington two such contests have already been held, one of which went for a solid week. In Columbia, South Carolina, the past week tremendous crowds flocked to a local park to watch the non-stop contest nightly, and next week Charlotte will have one, all of which hurts business considerably in the picture theatres.

William Oldknow, president of Southern States Film Company, distributors in this territory for the Warner Classics, has received world rights patent on a sanitary paper milk bottle, and plans to exploit it on a large scale.

After two weeks spent in the Boston exchange, Arthur Lucas has been transferred back to the division superintendency of the Atlanta territory.

The Howard theatre, Atlanta, recently celebrated a Radio Week, having nightly radio concerts, as well as a novel demonstration of broadcasting the softest musical strains from the theatre orchestra and having the music relayed back in volume to the theatre. It went over big with large audiences all week.

T. A. Branon, of Eltabran Film Company, is back in Atlanta after spending several days in his Charlotte office.

Harry K. Lucas is on a combination pleasure and business tour through Florida.

Ned E. Depinent is out on the road for a series of sales conferences with the Universal salesmen.

Arthur C. Bromberg is back from a two weeks' trip through the Carolinas.

R. B. Wilby, formerly Alabama supervisor for Southern Enterprises, now on his own with H. F. Kincy, has purchased the Rylander theatre, Americus, Georgia, from Emory Rylander.

Turner Jones, public relations representative of Southern Enterprises, made an address before the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce on better motion pictures last week.

W. T. Murray has resigned as manager of the Alamo No. 2 and is succeeded by Matt Whittham.

L., is now exploitation manager for the Saxe Amusement Enterprises of Wisconsin. Mr. Durlam assumes his new duties immediately, succeeding James Kehoe.

Beginning June 2, the Butterfly Theatre will incorporate a change of policy for the summer months. Both first and second run features will be shown at popular summer prices. "Robin Hood" has been selected to initiate the change of program. The management personnel will remain the same.

Sam Shurman, local manager for Goldwyn, attended the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan convention at Atlantic City, May 20-24.

Charles Glett, formerly with Goldwyn at Chicago, is attached to the Milwaukee office, covering southern Wisconsin.

Pathé is making extensive plans to move into its new building at 104 Ninth Street by June 15. W. A. Ashmun, branch manager, announces the exchange building will be the finest of its kind in the country.

F. B. O.'s Milwaukee office has been moved to larger quarters at 501-5 Toy Building, where greater space and exchange facilities are at hand.

More than 1,000 persons gathered at the Arena Gardens Tuesday night to see Rodolph Valentino dance his famous Argentine tango. Mr. Valentino came to Milwaukee en route from Chicago to the west in his private car. He addressed the M. P. T. O. convention at Chicago, and came directly to Milwaukee.

His appearance created considerable interest, but to a much lesser degree than his heralded visit some months ago.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE SHORT-LENGTH PRODUCTION

Short Subjects and Serials

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR THE DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM

Short-Subject Market Is Ready for Summer Test

WELL, folks, judging from the kind words received from many quarters during the past week, the special Short-Subject Department has struck a responsive chord among the readers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. And what makes us particularly cheery is the success of our premiere despite the heavy competition of a National Convention just a few pages from us.

The Convention and the first number of our new department were not the only events of importance last week. We enjoyed our first taste of really warm days this season, and watched the straws bloom in abundance. But warm days suggested summer, and summer suggests that most effective antidote of hot weather slumps—variety programs. Which brings us to our point.

We have been conducting a still hunt for the past few weeks, taking stock of the short-length product that will be made available during the sultry days of the approaching months. Our survey left us with no misgivings. The hot spells of July may dry up the streams and wither the crops, but one thing we're sure of: there will be no dearth of short subjects for the well-balanced program.

Next week we will give you the results of our survey of the short-subject market. For the present, we will simply observe that never since the early days of the industry has the short-subject market been so well stocked both as to variety of product and quality of entertainment.

The next step is up to the individual exhibitor, and that means booking dates—and advertising.—E. F. S.

New Educational-Hamilton Series

Comedian Signed for Another Group of Specials; To Increase Facilities

Lloyd Hamilton, the popular big comedian, has just put his signature to a contract with Educational for another series of two-reel comedy specials, according to an announcement made this week by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchange, Inc.

After several weeks in New York, combining his annual vacation with conferences with Mr. Hammons regarding production and distribution plans, Hamilton has returned to the Coast, and after a brief visit with his mother in Oakland, Cal., will start work on the first subject of the 1923-1924 group.

Increased facilities will be provided for Hamilton and special attention is going to be paid to the scenario department, which will be enlarged by the addition of one or two more scenario writers.

In order to effect such economies as will permit the spending of more money on the actual production of the comedy stories and pictures without too great an increase in the total production costs, the new Hamilton Comedies will be made by the Lloyd Hamilton Corporation on the same lot used by the Jack White Corporation, whose pictures for Educational next season will include twelve Mermaid Comedies and three Jack White Specials.

Hamilton has made six two-reel comedy subjects in the season now drawing to a close. Beginning with "The Speeder," the 1922-1923 series of Hamilton Comedies has also included "The Educator," "No Luck," and "Extra! Extra!" and the more recently released "Uneasy Feet" and "F.O.B."

Lloyd Hamilton, who has just renewed his contract with Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., under the terms of which he will make a new series of two-reel Comedies during the coming season.

The first picture in the 1923-1924 group of Hamilton Comedies will be ready for early fall release by Educational.

Gus Edwards' Protege Back with Century Comedies

Sadie Campbell, Gus Edwards' child protege, has returned to Century Film Corporation, according to a dispatch from the West Coast studios.

Miss Campbell, who is nearing her twelfth birthday, will resume her former place in Century Comedies as leading lady to Buddy Messinger, thirteen-year-old boy star.

Since she last appeared in "All Over Twist," Sadie has been playing in Universal pictures. Her last appearance at Universal City before returning to Century was in one of the Andy Gump pictures.

Planning Series to Follow Second "Fighting Blood"

The Film Booking Offices announce this week that an additional series of two-reelers have been planned at the studios, written by Witwer and to be released in the middle of the second series of "Fighting Blood" on which production has just been started. The third series was based on the telephone girl stories now running in Cosmopolitan Magazine, and concerns the experiences of a telephone operator in a New York hotel. Harold Goodwin has been selected for the feature role in these pictures.

The second and third series of Witwer stories will alternate with releases twice a month.

Two Week Engagement on B'way for "No Luck"

"No Luck," the Educational-Hamilton Comedy starring Lloyd Hamilton, is playing a two-week engagement at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres in New York, having gone into the Rivoli May 27th. Universal Starts 12-Episode Serial

William Duncan Star and Director of
New Picture; Edith Johnson Opposite

UNIVERSAL'S third chapter-production of the "super-serial" classification has been put under way on the West Coast. The title selected for the new serial production is "The Steel Trail" and was so chosen because the story is built around the construction of a railroad system in California. William Duncan is starring in this new Universal serial, and the supporting cast presents Edith Johnson, Duncan's wife, in leading feminine role.

Duncan besides appearing in the leading role is also directing the production. George Plimpton is responsible for the story. The company is at the present time on location at Pacoima where a large rock crusher is at work.

Edith Johnson is appearing in the role of Judith Armstrong, the daughter of a wealthy California ranch-owner. John Cossar is playing in the part of Colonel John Armstrong. Other important roles in the supporting cast are being enacted by Harry Carter, Ralph Fee McCullough, Mabel Randall, Frank Whitson, Harry Woods, and Cathleen Calloun.

Production work on "The Steel Trail" was temporarily halted owing to an injury sustained by Duncan during the filming of the first episode. During his time out, however, Duncan continued his direction of such scenes as did not require his presence in them. This temporary delay has now been passed, and work is reported to be progressing rapidly.

"The Steel Trail" is the first production to be made by Duncan under his recently signed contract with the Universal Pictures Corporation. This serial will be only twelve episodes in length as Universal executives felt a shorter length chapter-picture would be more in demand during the coming summer months. "The Eagle's Talons," the first chapter-production of the "super-serial" classification reaches a length of episodes, while "Daniel Boone," the second of this series will be chapters in length.

The launching of "The Steel Trail" with Duncan in the stellar role is announced by Universal as marking only the beginning of a series of elaborate plans that are being formulated for the star. These productions have progressed so far in fact that already two additional serial stories have been adapted to continuity form. In all a year's writing and planning have been done for him, state Universal officials, and every effort will be made to supply him with supporting casts of adequate talent.

The story of "The Steel Trail" with railroad construction as its background is concerned with a successful construction engineer who goes to the help of a Western rancher and his daughter and saves a railroad they have been building to reclaim one of the most valuable tracts of land in California. There will be no mystery element in "The Steel Trail." It will be a clean cut virile, type of western serial with plenty of hard rough riding, romance, many thrilling moments and lots of excitement, declares advance statement from Universal.

Turpin Finishes "Pitfalls of a Big City" for Pathe

Under the supervision of Mack Sennett, Herman Raymaker has completed the second Ben Turpin Comedy production for Pathe release, titled "Pitfalls of a Big City." The comedy star claims to be happier this time than at almost any other, that his picture is finished, because as he says himself, "Now I will be able to stay in an upright position for a while. The last few days I worked in 'Pitfalls' I was on my head most of the time."

Logging Camp Background of New Christie Comedy

As has already been announced, the Christie Film Company is going in for unusual locations for its product. The first instance of this policy was seen in "Roll Along," the blackface comedy produced in genuine Southern locations. Now another comedy subject filmed in the lumber camp of the Red River Lumber Company, located 1,200 miles north of Los Angeles in Lassen County, California, is announced to have been completed. The title of this one is "Back to the Woods." All the operations and atmosphere of a logging center are caught by the camera in the staging of this new Christie comedy.

Neal Burns is featured in "Back to the Woods," which was directed by Scott Sidney. The production is scheduled for release in June.

Joe Farnham Title Writer for "Carmen Junior"

Joe Farnham, comedy title writer, is responsible for the titles of "Carmen Junior," one of the Baby Peggy comedies soon to be released for Stern Brothers by Universal. Farnham's latest work was the complete titling of "Mary of the Movies."

"Hyde and Zeke" is the title of the two-reel drama of ranch life, featuring Leo Maloney, which has been scheduled for June 10th release. This number of the Range Rider Series, according to the advance announcement from the Pathe office, is a combination of fast action and humorous incident with some surprising complications.

"Haunted Valley," Ruth Roland's chapter-production, reaches its sixth episode, which is titled "The Brink of Eternity." In this chapter the hidden machinery of the heroine's arch enemy is seen in operation, with the lovers apparently victims of frightful convulsions of the earth beneath their feet.

"The Stork's Mistake" is the title of the Aesop's Film Fables number due June 10th. The arrival of a pup in the midst of an already numerous family of cats leads to some amusing results.

Pathe Review No. 23 presents among its highlights a scientific demonstration showing the body to possess magnetism, a funny cartoon story of an absent-minded poet under the title "All Wet," and a Pathecolor section. "The Laughing Cascades of the Pyrenees."

While abroad, Mr. Stern will be on the lookout for available material, both in the nature of comedy talent and written works.

Reports Business Boom in South Pathe General Representative Brings Back Word of Industrial Expansion

JUDGING from conditions in the South as reported by John E. Storey, General Representative for Pathe Exchanges, Inc., the outlook for the motion-picture business in general and that of the serial and short-subject in particular is decidedly cheerful. When business conditions register progress in the South, where the serial and the short subject have always been particularly strong, the forecast invariably sounds an especially optimistic note for the short-length production. Mr. Storey in his interview declared that the industrial expansion and increase of general prosperity in the South as far west as New Orleans, realized during the past year, is of a most striking character.

The observations of Pathe's General Representative were not based on a hasty survey of just the principal key cities of the section and the more prosperous industrial centers. His tour took him not only to Charlotte, N. C., Atlanta, and New Orleans, Pathe's main points of distribution for the South, but also to many of the smaller cities served by the branch offices located in these three larger centers.

He was especially struck by fresh signs of manufacturing activity in the southeastern district, which showed North Carolina rapidly approaching its goal as a great world's centre in the textile industry. In the Charlotte region he noted fifteen enormous textile plants in full-time operation which had been hardly more than planned a year ago.

"Last year's good cotton crop in the Carolinas and prospects of an equally good one this year," said Mr. Storey, "wonderfully encourage the enterprise of manufacturing this staple right where it is grown. It is not difficult to foresee results in the shape of continuous and solid prosperity that will be felt by the whole population."

From Atlanta south through Alabama and to Florida all signs pointed to greatly improved conditions. New Orleans and all that part of the South, Mr. Storey said, shared in the return of prosperity so marked in the Southeastern states. He referred to the new quarters recently occupied by the Pathe branch exchange at Charlotte as material evidence of greatly increased activity in the motion picture business.

Selmar Jackson Signed for Series by Robt. Bruce

Selmar Jackson, for several seasons leading man with the Baker Stock Company in Portland, Ore., and more recently leading man with the New Bedford, Mass., stock company, will return to Portland early in July as leading man for Robert C. Bruce this week received from Jackson a confirmation of his offer to the popular actor, who will be starred in four one-reel pictures.

The pictures all will be made near Portland this summer. Bruce and his company will start work about June 5, working first in the Oregon coast country.

Jimmie Harrison Seen in Christie Comedy Again

Jimmie Harrison comes back to Christie Comedies again in "Back to the Woods," the latest picture from the Christie studios.

E. V. Durling has been secured by Oscar A. Price and H. E. Aitken to re-edit and re-title the New Edition Keystone Comedies to be released through Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc. His appointment is in line with the policy of securing the services of people who were in close touch with the production of the comedies from the studio angle when they were made.

Mr. Durling has already begun work on "Our Dare Devil Chief" with Ford Sterling and will have it ready for release June 15. Following this, he will re-edit "When Ambrose Dared Walrus," with Chester Conklin and Mack Swain, and "His Prehistoric Past," with Charlie Chaplin. Chester Conklin and Mack Swain, to be released on July 1 and 15, respectively.

Traffic Halts to Watch Bald Heads Measured

The filming of the most representative members of the Bald Head Club by Pathe News during their recent gathering at Hartford, Conn., has excited comment in the columns of the New England press. The American of Waterbury, Conn., devoted an entire column to a somewhat humorous version of the actual filming which was carried on in public while Hartford's traffic stopped temporarily to take in the unusual sight of seeing bald heads submit to the tape measure to determine who possessed the broadest hairless expanse.

Three Short Subjects for June Release by F. B. O.

THE release of short subjects on the Film Booking Offices program for this month consist of Witwer's "Fighting Blood," number eight, entitled "Christopher of Columbus"; Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven in "Borrowed Trouble"; and Pop Tuttle's "Russian Rumor."

Beginning this month these three subjects are the only short subject matter that the Film Booking Offices will release. The last of Starland Revue, a one reeler based on the inside lives of various stage and screen stars and made by the C.B.C. has been released, and to date no further contracts have been made for this type of stuff by the F. B. O.

"Dippy Doo Dads" Opens at California Theatre

According to advices from the West Coast, Pathe's new one-reel "Dippy Doo Dads" comedy is an out-of-ordinary piece of entertainment. The subject was made at the Hal Roach studios and presents an all-animal cast. The newspapers commented favorably on its showing at the California theatre the week of May 13, one reviewer classing the subject as "the most interesting picture" at the house.

Charles Goos, writing in the Los Angeles Express, said: "Following this picture comes the much exploited 'Dippy Doo Dad' comedy from the Roach studio. It lives up to all its advance notices and is a corking good comedy. Its principals belong to the feathered and furred tribes, and their antics provoke great laughter."

Witwer Signs Five Year F. B. O. Contract

H. C. Witwer, author and sporting writer, has contracted to the Film Booking Offices for his exclusive services for the next five years.

This announcement is a result of the visit this week of P. A. Powers to New York City to attend the first annual sales meeting of the exchange managers of the Film Booking Offices held Sunday.

Witwer's contract to the F. B. O. gives this firm the exclusive right to everything he writes for the next five years. The second series of his "Fighting Blood" two reels have already begun at the Powers studios while his first feature, "The Fourth Musketeer," featuring Johnnie Walker, has been released for some time.

Good Supporting Cast for Turpin in Pathe Comedy

Ben Turpin's supporting cast which will be seen in the first Mack Sennett comedy release under the Pathe banner will present Madeline Hurlock, Priscilla Bonner, Dot Farley, and Jim Finlayson. The picture titled "Where's My Wandering Boy This Evening?" shows Turpin in the role of a swain victimized by the vampish intentions of a city girl. Madeline Hurlock plays the vamp role. Priscilla Bonner appears as the rural sweetheart who eventually forgives and forgets. Dot Farley is the doting mother, and Finlayson plays the part of a jealous farm-hand.

Harry Langdon, who will be a featured comedian under the Principal Pictures banner.

Harry Langdon Signed for Comedies by Principal

Principal Pictures Corporation will soon start their series of comedies with Harry Langdon, the vaudeville comedy actor, as the first star. Langdon has been signed for a lengthy period.

Langdon is now finishing a vaudeville engagement in the East and will leave for the Coast early in June. His first story is now being arranged, and it is the intention of Sol Lesser and his associates to surround the new comedian of the screen with the best available in stories and supporting players.

Langdon attracted notice because of his facial expression when he gave the footlights his act entitled "Johnnie's New Car." Recently he brought out another vehicle called "Golfing."

Jimmy Aubrey to Head Own Comedy Company

Jimmy Aubrey has organized his own producing company, following the termination of his contract with the Vitagraph Company. Leon Lee, Aubrey's business manager and former chief of his "gag" staff will continue his association with the comedian under the new arrangements. The Aubrey comedies will be produced in two-reel lengths, and it is expected that the first of the new series will be ready for release early in July.

Distribution of the Aubrey comedies, made under the comedian's own auspices, will be handled by the Chadwick Corporation of New York City. This company has closed for all the Aubrey product to be made for the next five years, it is stated.

In a statement made by Aubrey during the week concerning his new plans, he spoke in part as follows:

"These new comedies will be two reels in length. I believe that the public is tired of seeing comedians whom they have enjoyed in pictures of this length going into the production of pictures of feature length which can truly be better shown in a two-reel form. I will endeavor to make each of my new pictures two reels of condensed comedy and action without a tiresome moment and full of laughs."

Hal Roach Serial Featuring Edna Murphy Under Way

Work has been started at the Hal Roach studios on the new ten-episode serial featuring Edna Murphy, which will be released by Pathe.

In each of the ten episodes the heroine appears in a different character which is thrust upon her in the final scenes of the preceding story.

Century to Co-Star Billy Engle and Jack Earle

JACK EARLE, the seven foot giant, and Billy Engle, the comedian, will be co-starred in Century Comedies, is the information received from Abe Stern, vice-president of that company.

The first picture in which this combination will appear is Al Herman's current comedy, "Golfmania." Earle and Engle have been in practically all of Herman's comedies for Century, and at the time "Golfmania" was written it was decided to produce it with honors going to each of them equally.

Earle, who although only sixteen, is seven feet, four inches in height, has been with Century since Julius Stern "discovered" him about a year ago on one of the beaches near Hollywood. He has since then developed into a type of the first rank.

Engle has been with Century since the early part of this year. He is a graduate of New York University.

It is anticipated that Herman will direct the Earle-Engle series for Century.

The guests of the Shipping Board will comprise editors of newspapers from all over the United States, including Mr. Arthur Brisbane, and a list of notables from public and private life.

The pictures selected are Christie's blackface comedy, "Roll Along," Jack White's Mermaid Comedy, "Backfire," a July release on the Educational program, and the Robert C. Bruce Wilderness Tale, "From the Windows of My House."

Admission Coupons in Newspapers Exploit "Plunder"

The opening of Pearl White's serial for Pathe, titled "Plunder," at the Iris theatre, Hutchinson, Kan., was made the occasion for an effective exploitation campaign on the part of I. E. Runyan, the Iris' owner and manager.

Mr. Runyan had coupons printed in the papers two or three days before the opening date with the announcement that each bearer of a coupon would be admitted free to the first chapter of the serial. Slides were also used in the theatre several days prior to the opening of the chapter-picture, calling attention to the issues of the papers in which the coupons would appear.

Mr. Runyan adds that of the several exploitation methods already tried to launch a serial this method just described proved the most satisfactory. He says that at the showing of the opening episode 900 of these coupons were taken in besides enough tickets to cover the average daily expense.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Golf as Played by Gene Sarazen"

(Educational—One Reel)

HERE'S one that will delight the hearts of picture fans who include golf among their pastimes. Gene Sarazen, the national open golf champion, is shown in action on the links, right close up to the camera lens so that every trick of grip and swing is intimately revealed. The sub-titles explain the fine points of each stroke and next is presented, in slow motion, the action itself. This camera analysis of the champion's methods on the links is a feature of the reel. No phase of the game is neglected. The handling of each club—driver, brassie, mid-iron, mashie, putter and niblick—is shown, first at normal speed and then in slow motion with explanatory titles. In the same way, Sarazen's styles of play under all manners of circumstances—in the rough, out of traps, approaches from off the green, putting, evading a stymie, etc.—are interestingly demonstrated. The golf enthusiasts of your neighborhood will probably repeat to see this one.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Hyde and Zeke"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS is a two-reel western in which Leo Maloney plays the featured role. We consider it to be one of the most entertaining numbers that has been offered thus far in this series. There is the two-fisted, rough-and-tumble action commonly associated with subjects of this type, but in addition to the flying fists and alert trigger fingers there are real suspense and some touches of humor. The story relates how Lafe Hyde, the country's biggest ranch owner, in order to promote his own selfish designs plans to force his daughter Ruth to marry Job Larabee, a mean but wealthy neighbor of Hyde's. Zeke Enright (played by Maloney), who is Ruth's sweetheart, rouses the ire of Hyde and is discharged. He is given a job as caretaker of a neighboring ranch during the owner's absence. Ruth determined to escape from her father's tyranny temporarily takes refuge at her neighbor's house unaware that the owner is away and that Zeke has been appointed custodian of the property. Then follows some amusing complications which keep Zeke and Ruth tracking each other all over the house, neither being aware of the other's identity. The rejected Larabee next comes on the scene determined to compromise the girl and thus force her marriage to him. His entry adds to the complications. Finally, Hyde arrives in search of his daughter and when attacked from behind by Larabee administers a thorough whipping to his assailant. Zeke arrives in time to put a finishing touch to the trouncing. Father shakes with Zeke and decides to let the lovers have their way. Josephine Hill proves very attractive in her part as Ruth opposite the hero.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"The Watch Dog"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is the second of Hal Roach's "Dippy Doo Dad" series in which the cast is composed entirely of animal players. We thought the first of the series, "The Flirt," to be decidedly clever and amusing, and we consider this current number to be even better entertainment than the first. The story involves a monkey, a goat, a dog, and a cat; and between the four they get in as much clever comedy work in the space of one reel as we have seen in a good many alleged fun films of the same or even greater lengths. The big idea is that the monkey is determined to raid a peanut and fruit stand but is deterred by the dog, who stands guard over the property. The monkey resorts to various tricks to get Towser away from his post and eventually succeeds, with resultant disaster to the stock of peanuts. With but slight assistance from the sub-titles the monkey's expression becomes almost human in force in certain parts of the action. If your audience likes to see clever animal players in human roles, don't miss this one.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"The Kid Reporter"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS Century comedy presents Baby Peggy in the role of a reporter out to cover the theft of a valuable string of pearls stolen from a wealthy society woman. The plot is of the conventional type with the "newspaperwoman" enacting the part of a detective while on the scent of the "big story." The baby star in a trick make-up of check suit, cane, and monocle gives a very amusing performance, especially in those scenes where she outwits the butler, who is really the thief, and regains possession of the stolen pearls. Another amusing bit is found at the beginning where the kid player, who is presented as the publisher's stenographer, suddenly cuts short the boss's dictation to go in search of something which remains quite a mystery for a time. Before she completes her search she has the entire editorial staff trailing her quite as intent as she is on the discovery of the missing object. She finds it at last, to their chagrin—the proverbial wad of "Stenog's" chewing concealed under the ledge of a desk. Where clever kid comedies are popular this one ought to register unusually well. There is another kid in this one, a typical, sophisticated office-boy with the customary weakness of his kind for dime-novel thrillers. Between the two of them the kids get in some clever gags. The rest of the cast is adequate.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Pathe Review No. 23"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS number offers a pleasing variety of subjects, interspersing science with human-interest topics. At the outset are offered a series of demonstrations to prove that the body possesses magnetism. Next is presented, under the title "All Wet," an animated cartoon story of an absent-minded poet who goes a-wooing a mermaid. This is a decidedly amusing offering. Also included in the number is an interesting display of "god dolls," made by the primitive Indian of America as toys for his children. "Unbobbing the Bobs" shows the processes of making wigs to assist milady who has bobbed her hair and is now suddenly confronted with the task of wearing long tresses again to comply with the edict of Dame Fashion. The "Laughing Cascades of the Pyrenees" is the Pathe-color number.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"No Luck"

(Educational—Two Reels)

IT'S a dream story—this "No Luck," and living up to its character it is filled with ridiculous absurdities which contain a fair amount of chuckles. It will not win much sustained laughter because there no ingenious moments of humor, and the fun which it furnishes is generated by Lloyd Hamilton with his bag of tricks. The comedian uses a wry expression and there is individuality about his walk and mannerisms which make him a good entertainer. A few laughs are gained when he attempts to fish in a small pond and is bitten and otherwise humiliated by the leaping fish. But these are all old gags which have lost their novelty.

It is when Bud is invited to attend a reception that the comedy picks up and warrants its place on the program. The comedian executing the apache dance cuts up a few didoes. But all the incident is threadbare—even the scene which shows the house being wrecked by species from the barnyard which have been blown through the doors because of a violent storm. A fair number which ends with the dream situation. Hamilton has passed out unconscious because of a strong cigar. And the preceding incident is his nightmare.—LAURENCE REID.

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS number of Universal's "Tales of the Old West" series, with Roy Stewart in the featured role, is built around the proposed construction of a tunnel near a small mining town in Nevada, where considerable opposition to the enterprise has been developed by Logan, an important mine-owner of the district. The story is a conventional one, with Stewart in the part of an ardent champion of the new tunnel in opposition to Logan, who is the father of the girl he loves. The conflict centers largely around a plot and counter-plot to dynamite the tunnel with the customary hard riding and hand-to-hand encounters injected from time to time. The burning of a hut containing the dynamite, while Jane Logan lies unconscious on a bed near the explosive, develops considerable suspense towards the close. The blowing up of the hut, with the girl's safety still unknown, adds a spectacular flash. The types are well chosen and the western atmosphere faithfully depicted. However, the story as a whole offers nothing original in the way of situation or incident.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Shooting the Earth"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of the Lyman H. Howe "Hodge Podge" series of shots from real life interspersed with comic animated cartoons. The subject, in its world survey, takes in the Panama Canal, the Philippine Islands, China, Japan, Egypt, Italy, Scotland, Ireland and New York City. The views of actual locales and the cartoon sketches are pleasingly blended, the comedy touches of the cartoons giving a note of freshness to the otherwise serious educational character of the reel. There are some cleverly executed art titles that add to the interest of the subject.—E. F. SUPPLE.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"Snowdrift"

Fox—4617 Feet

CONVENTIONAL and uninspired is this picture of the frozen North which gives Charles Jones an opportunity to play a role of character development. It is crudely constructed and the titles are amazingly frank in carrying on the conversation of the figures. Indeed, "Snowdrift," is just another picture of the white spaces—a picture which has to do with the regeneration of a young wastrel of the Yukon whose love for liquor and gambling has wiped away his "poke of dust."

There isn't much doing in the way of action until the concluding reel, the early scenes getting off to a slow start and not releasing any highlights aside from a colorful dash behind a dog team and a suggestion that there will be a FIGHT between the hero and the heavy.

The story is slight and revolves around the hootch-drinking gambler who, when he gets down on his luck, is taken away by his Indian friend to recoup his losses in the far North. The incident is not refreshing and the dragged-out action is over-emphasized by lengthy subtitles. The ending is in sight all the way. The hero comes to his senses once he looks upon the charming heroine who is reared as a half-breed. Since the audience knows better the suspense of the situation is entirely lost.

In fact there are no illusions about how events will shape themselves. The villain rides on the scene and kidnaps the heroine for his honky-tonk. So Jones, now completely regenerated, rides to the rescue, and in a stirring fight in which lamps are overturned and the honky-tonk set on fire, and the villain thoroughly punished, the girl is saved.

The production itself is satisfactory and the detail and atmosphere meets all requirements. Lovers of fast and furious action will be disappointed in "Snowdrift" even though they may get some reward in Jones' display of emotion. An attraction which lacks the vigor of the locale in which it is laid.

"The Crimson Clue"

Clark Cornelius Corp.—(S. R.)—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

CATTLE rustlin' villains, heroic strangers who rescue heroines and battles a-plenty on perilous cliffs—that's "The Crimson Clue," all in a bundle. It is doubtful if there is a single scene in the picture which at some time has not been duplicated in other productions, figuratively speaking, but it contains all that an audience sympathetic with western productions would ask for.

The plot, if plot it can be called, compares favorably with the average western production, while the title is one of the many that is not incongruous with the theme. The continuity is commendable, while plenty of suspense is effected, although to a hardened fan the climax would be bared before 100 feet of film had been shown. The minor details leading up to the major occurrences in the picture are well woven in with the story and provide good atmospheric effects. For a dishonest foreman of a ranch that harbors a beautiful girl to be discharged, later to be discovered as one of the band of rustlers, while an unassuming stranger steps in to rescue the girl, become foreman of the ranch and marry the girl—all this is just about what can be expected to be seen in the general order of importance. So that's that.

The outdoor shots are good, while the directing has been done in a creditable manner. The work of the cast, as a whole, is good.

The Cast

Jose Castillo.....	Jack Richardson
Marion Gray.....	Josephine Sedgwick
"Bash" Dixon.....	Frank Thornwold
Dick Benson.....	Parker McConnell
Judge Cyrus Gray.....	Hugh Saxon
Pearl LaRue.....	Eve Sothorn
Sheriff.....	Fred Burns
Can Opener, the cook.....	Fred Gamble

The Story—Discharged foreman of ranch is about to kidnap daughter of ranch owner when cowboy from "other parts" rescues her. He is made foreman, later being unjustly arrested on a charge of rustling cattle, but girl, who is in court disguised as man, notices that blood stain on handkerchief, which is used as evidence, does not correspond with cut on hand of the foreman, but corresponds with a wound on the hand of the discharged foreman. The "stranger" is acquitted and marries the girl.

Classification—Western drama, containing a love story.

Production Highlights—Outdoor shots; scene where stranger rescues girl from villain; scene in courtroom when hero is found not guilty.

Exploitation Angles—"A red-blooded picture of the West" is about the best line that is adaptable.

Drawing Power—For the smaller suburban and rural houses only. Not a good bet in the larger houses.

"The Sheriff of Sun Dog"

Arrow—1949 Feet

AS LONG as we have westerns—and we'll have them 'til the end of Time—we will have to accept them as conventional and based entirely upon threadbare plots. No author writing of the cow country or the open spaces can become original except in the most inspired moments. There are a number of regulation patterns which the public has become accustomed to seeing—and one of these is the long established feud between the cattlemen and the sheep owners. If a story is founded upon this ancient formula and is fairly well conceived and executed it will pass muster provided the director has pepped it up with creditable speed of action and crammed it with sufficient incident and suspense.

"The Sheriff of Sun Dog" is written by W. C. Tuttle, a writer having considerable experience with stories of the cow country. His tale is an obvious design in plot and characterization. What is incorporated has been seen time and again. But because it moves along with adequate speed and carries sufficient vigor and vitality it will pass with the audience in the smaller houses. There is a plentiful amount of snappy riding which is coupled with the usual assortment of stunts—some of which contain an element of novelty. The stunts, incidentally, do not appear episodic, but appear to compose an integral part of the story.

The conflict between the cattlemen and sheep owners gives Fairbanks a chance to show his skill in the saddle. He protects an aged rancher from his enemies and gets involved in a deal of trouble before he is able to extricate himself as well as the daughter of the old man. The picture because of its crisp incident and speed forces one to forget its obviousness during the actual unfoldment of scenes. It isn't until the conclusion is reached that the conventions are remembered. "The Sheriff of Sun Dog?" A good western of its kind.

The Cast

"Silent" Davidson.....	William Fairbanks
"Harp" Harris.....	Robert McKenzie
Scott Martin.....	Jim Welch
Jean Martin.....	Florence Gilbert
Pete Kane.....	Ashton Dearholt
Jeff Sedley.....	William White

By W. C. Tuttle. Scenario by Daniel F. Whitcomb. Directed by Ben Wilson. Released by Arrow

The Story—Sheriff discovers sheep rancher badly wounded. He is suspected of murdering him. The old man finally recovers consciousness enough to tell his daughter who really shot him. She is taken prisoner before she can report the affair. The sheriff frees himself as well as the girl and the villains are duly punished.

Classification—Western melodrama involving feud between cattlemen and sheep owners.

Production Highlights—The fight put on by Fairbanks. The snappy action. The good performances by the star and the rest of the cast. The appropriate atmosphere and detail. The good suspense in the scenes which contain lively action.

Exploitation Angles—Readers of western stories are familiar with author's name. So play him up as vigorous writer of such tales. Play it up as exciting play of life in the open spaces. The cowboy quartette singing in an atmospheric setting would furnish an effective prologue.

Drawing Power—Good for small neighborhood and second-class downtown houses.

"Fog Bound"

Paramount—5700 Feet

EXCEPT for some first rate photography suggesting a genuine foggy atmosphere and some appropriate backgrounds this picture does not furnish any highlights. True it is acted in competent fashion and its story carries a little suspense, but the spectator is not going to be carried away on the high road of adventure. The material is quite threadbare and is based upon romantic misunderstanding and a conflict between eighteenth amendment violators and revenueurs. Once the plot gets under steam it does not offer much logic, since the action revolves around the determination of the chief revenueur's daughter to protect a wealthy young man from the clutches of the law.

It is melodramatic from the start with the Florida coast in the vicinity of Palm Beach used as a background. Word comes to the revenueurs that a fashionable casino is violating the Volstead act and that considerable gambling occupies the attention of the wealthy guests. But the proprietor is tipped off in advance and saves the place from a raid. The villainy unfolds when a crooked revenueur is seen by his chief pocketing a large retainer. There is an argument and the chief is killed. But the spectator is supposed to imagine that the fatal bullet was fired by the hero who is being 'framed' behind the door of another room. The hole in the door indicates that the gun was fired from that direction. But the plot could be easily punctured by a competent district attorney inasmuch as the bullet that killed the chief was fired from an angle.

The audience is not supposed to analyze this gap. The patrons are invited to watch the conflict between the crooked revenueur, the hero who escapes, and the girl, determined to protect him. The villain makes it plain that the youth killed the heroine's father. So the pursuit takes up the rest of the action. This scene is rather suspensive and picturesque, for the swampy Everglades compose the background. The eye-witness gives away the evidence and the story is over. David Powell and Maurice Costello as the hero and villain respectively give the best performances. Dorothy Dalton is mostly ornamental here. "Fog Bound" is just a fair picture and the ending is in sight from the start.

The Cast

Gale Brenon.....Dorothy Dalton
Roger Wainwright.....David Powell
Mildred Van Buren.....Martha Mansfield
Deputy Brown.....Maurice Costello
Sheriff Holmes.....Jack Richardson
Mammy.....Mrs. Ella Miller
Deputy Kane.....Willard Cooley
Gordon Phillips.....William David
Revenue Officer Brenon.....Warren Cook
By Jack Bechdolt. Scenario by Paul Dickey.
Directed by Irvin Willat. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Florida girl whose father is revenue chief is attracted to rich young man whose estate is close by. The young man is an idler among a group of wealthy idlers who spend much of their time in a casino where liquor is served. The chief raids the place and is killed by one of his crooked deputies. The young man is accused of the crime and arrested, but escapes with the aid of the girl. Eventually the real culprit is caught.

Classification—Melodrama based upon conflict between revenueurs and violators of the eighteenth amendment.

Production Highlights—The photography and lighting which bring out a fog-like atmosphere. The pursuit through the swamps. The climax when villain is caught. The scene when revenue chief is killed.

Exploitation Angles—The atmosphere and backgrounds. The title. The work of the star and David Powell. A teaser campaign would stimulate patronage.

Drawing Power—Should satisfy in average house. Should interest lovers of action and melodrama.

Ida Lewis and Lois Wilson in a scene from "Man of the Man," an F. B. O. picture

"Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande"

Universal—1894 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A WILD, harum-scarum western with plenty of fast ridin', straight shootin', and oodles of comedy horse-play which may or may not have been intended makes "Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande" quite an unusual feature in its way. Certainly it gets away from orthodox incident—even if its plot is orthodox in character—what with its high speed and dash and danger. It simply tells the adventures of a romantic cowboy who tries to emulate the courage of Don Quixote after reading the Spanish classic.

And how the director and star, Jack Hoxie, whoop it up! Right out there in the open spaces, where cows are cows, the green beneath and the blue above, Jack has the time of his life knocking the bandits off their horses after the manner of a nifty golf drive, and rescuing the distressed heroine.

It's a simple, obvious yarn which if read in cold print would most easily please the adventurous youngster of twelve. There are the ornery bandits, the sheriff and the boys, the girl and her dad, a wealthy cattleman—and our romantic hero. From the introductory scene the boys are in the saddle and there is much fast ridin'. The hero stages a quick battle in a cow town gin mill and gets in bad with the bandits. He gives us a couple of thrills when he kidnaps the girl from her father whom he mistakes for an outlaw. And it's a mad ride in a farm wagon with the wheels dropping off and everything. A barn dance gives Hoxie some more opportunity to indulge in wild acrobatics in making his escape. But the finish wins the prize for fast comedy action when he soaks the bandits in the head with a strong and heavy stick.

No one but an expert rider who is something of an athlete could possibly get away with the stunts. Which shows that Jack Hoxie knows his business. The pursuit takes up most of the action. It's a wild meller and a fast one. It'll keep an audience up on its toes with its excitement and the hokum will keep them laughing most of the time. Whoopee!

The Cast

"Pep" Pepper.....Jack Hoxie
Big Jim Hellier.....Emmett King
Tulip Hellier.....Elinor Field
Vivian.....Fred C. Jones
Bill Barton.....William A. Steele
Sheriff Littlejohn.....Bob McKenzie
By Stephen Chalmers. Scenario by George Hively. Directed by George E. Marshall. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Treats of romantic cowboy who intervenes in saloon quarrel and wins enmity of bandits. He escapes and later meets the girl as he dashes alongside a train and clammers aboard. He effects her rescue from cowboys whom he mistakes for bandits. After many exciting adventures, including his capture by a sheriff's posse, the real killer is captured.

Classification—Western comedy melodrama.

Production Highlights—Hoxie's dashing performance. The thrills during the train episodes. The barn dance high jinks. The pursuit.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the title. It should stimulate patronage. Play up Hoxie as real horseman. Put on your cowboy quartette or a lariat expert, etc. Use trailers.

Drawing Power—Should please audiences in any program house.

"The Man Next Door"

Vitagraph—6700 Feet

EMERSON HOUGH'S name on a story means something now since "The Covered Wagon," and while "The Man Next Door" is cut from a familiar pattern and won't create the interest of the other opus, it, nevertheless, is well constructed and directed, and contains sufficient romantic flavor and character sketching to please the majority of picture patrons. Put it down as a first rate audience picture—even if its theme goes back to one of the oldest formulas—that of a wealthy cattleman selling his ranch to give his daughter the benefits of an Eastern education and the culture and refinement which result from it.

There isn't much footage given up to the western atmosphere. After a few brief glimpses of the cow country, the westerners are transferred bag and baggage to the effete East—where it behooves the author and director to show the father unable to assimilate the manners of the drawing room.

The picture is best in its contrasts, for its conflict carries no substance. We have the parent presiding over a Park Avenue "ranch house," the hall of which is built on the dimensions of the Grand Central Station. And he remains as uncouth and typical of the soil as his daughter develops in culture and deportment. What conflict there is revolves around the girl carrying on a romance with the rich youth next door who leads her to believe that he is a gardener—to ward off fortune hunters. She has to see him unbeknown to her father since there is a feud established between the men—a feud based upon the snobbery of the cultured Easterner.

The high lights are released in the character sketches of the Westerner admirably depicted by Frank Sheridan and David Torrence—the latter disguised by a drooping moustache characteristic of the cattleman. He is ill at ease in his "biled" shirt and he doesn't care a whoop who knows it. The sentimental side of the picture offers Alice Calhoun a splendid opportunity to display a gift for romantic expression. She contributes a highly charming portrayal of the girl whose love affair is cherished because it has to be carried out in a clandestine manner. It is often dull and always obvious but manages to interest the spectator after a fashion through its sentiment and character sketches—to say nothing of a talented dog who acts as an ambassador of love between the young romancers. He is used to carry the notes from one to the other. The picture could be improved and the action heightened if trimmed of some of its unimportant detail.

Production-Distribution Activities

Hodkinson Shortening Features

Will Make Every Effort to Reduce Footage on Forthcoming Productions

EVERY effort is being exerted by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation to keep some of their feature productions below the 5,000 foot mark in length. With the exception of specials or stories that cannot be cut too short without materially affecting the dramatic value of the production, it is considered likely that feature length productions will have less footage.

"The Critical Age," adapted from "Glenarry Schooldays" by Ralph Connor, produced by Ernest Shipman for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, is an example of the shorter length features.

The length of this production caused the Film Daily in their review of this feature to say "should satisfy the demands of exhibitors crying for features that do not run into seven and eight reels. With this one they can use a good program of short reels and, with the feature offering good entertainment, it should give their audiences a nice bill."

The Motion Picture News declares that "it is thoroughly pleasing and capitally conceived and executed in every department." The Exhibitors' Trade Review labels it "an action picture which directs its appeal toward the average movie audience."

The Motion Picture World calls it "An interesting program picture because it is in some ways apart from the stereotyped and is wholesome and youthful." Harrison's Reports says that it "should be satisfactory entertainment for any audience."

Film Daily further adds that the picture contains "plenty of fine atmosphere with many good touches that get it off to a fine start from a romantic standpoint." The Morning Telegraph declares that it is a "delightful entertainment that should meet with success."

All of these reviews linked together with the fact that "The Critical Age" is 4,500 feet in length proves, in the estimation of the Hodkinson Corporation, that this latest filmization of Ralph Connor's popular novel will provide exhibitors with a good attraction.

"Hunchback" Is Near Completion

Invention Simplifies Work of Taking Mob Scenes at Universal City

INVENTION has been able to cut down the working days on Universal's super-Jewel, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," to such an extent that the tremendous mob scenes which were left until the last are almost completed at Universal City. It is anticipated that the final scenes in the production, being made under the direction of Wallace Worsley, will be shot by the 15th of June.

The invention which has caused the saving of very nearly a month and, in consequence, a tremendous amount of money in salaries, light and over-head, is a voice amplifier which magnifies the director's voice to such an extent that he can speak in a whisper to 3,000 extras scattered over ten acres of sets comprising medieval Paris.

Heretofore the directing of mob scenes in the huge "Hunchback" sets had required hours of painstaking planning between Worsley and his three assistants; other hours of rehearsal; while four megaphones deafened the ears of those who were close, and barely reached actors one hundred yards away. Furthermore, the new system has been found to cut down lighting bills so materially as to make a saving in this department alone of between twenty-five and fifty thousand dollars, it is said. The lights in the furthest sets can be switched on and off at a moment's notice and the entire filming time of scenes has been cut down at least 50%.

The set in which the first "public addressed" scenes were shot was in the court-yard in front of the huge Cathedral of Notre Dame set during the scenes when Clopin's followers attack the mansion of Madame Gondelaurier on the opposite side of the square from the Cathedral. The entire square, four acres in extent, was included in the action.

Richard Walton Tully

Tully To Film "Bird of Paradise"

Will Screen It After Completing His Version of "Trilby"

"THE BIRD OF PARADISE," a perennial favorite of the American stage, it is announced will reach the screen under the guiding hand of its author, Richard Walton Tully.

At the present time Tully is putting the finishing touches on Du Maurier's "Trilby," which James Young is directing. "Trilby" is the third production which Mr. Tully has supervised for First National release. His first, "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post, was followed by "Omar, the Tentmaker," with the same star. Both these plays he had produced on the stage over a period of years.

For producing "Trilby," Tully had the co-operation of Sir Gerald Du Maurier, son of "Trilby's" author, and now a prominent London actor. In his months of research work abroad, during which time Tully assembled the data for the correct presentation of the play, the younger Du Maurier lent him invaluable assistance. Not only did the Englishman approve of the selection of the young French actress, Andree Lafayette, for the title role and the other leading members of the cast, the work of most of whom was known to him, but he also sanctioned the continuity which Tully fashioned from his father's novel.

James Young, who directed "The Masquerader" and "Omar, the Tentmaker," also is directing "Trilby." Arthur Edmund Carewe enacts the role of Svengali. Andree Lafayette, playing the title role, is a French favorite, imported from the Parisian stage especially for this role. Creighton Hale will play Little Billee, the artist lover of Trilby; Wilfred Lucas will be Laird and Philo McCullough Taft; two other picturesque artists of the Latin Quarter of Paris, Francis McDonald is cast as Gecko and Maurice Canon will play Zou Zou.

Following the completion of "Trilby," Mr. Tully has announced that he will start the preliminary work on "The Bird of Paradise." No time or expense will be spared to make this romantic drama of the South Seas the biggest picture of the producer's career. The announcement of the cast of this play, which has been the stepping stone for some of the famous stars of stage and screen, is eagerly looked forward to.

Miss Ruth Arnold, C.B.C. Potential star, selected from a Chicago Beauty Contest

Marguerite De La Motte Signs Long Contract

Another popular feminine player has attached her signature to a long term contract with Principal Pictures Corporation. Marguerite De La Motte has signed an agreement which calls for her services with this organization for a lengthy period.

Miss De La Motte's initial role under her new contract will be the lead in the forthcoming Harold Bell Wright story "When a Man's a Man." The actual shooting on this production will begin next week and the company will leave for location at Prescott, Arizona.

The following players will participate in the filming of the Wright story: John Bowers, Robert W. Frazer, Forrest Robinson, John Fox, Jr., Fred Stanton, George Hackathorne, Charles Mails and Robert Thompson.

Edward F. Cline will direct the production with Frank Gereghy acting as his assistant. Camera work will be under the supervision of Ned Van Buren with Harold Janes in charge of second camera.

Exciting Horse Race in "Counterfeit Love"

Persons who have had pre-views of "Counterfeit Love," the five part feature which Playgoers Pictures is releasing June 10, declare it has the most realistic horse race scene yet portrayed on the screen.

The horses, closely bunched, are followed as they encircle the entire mile course. On the last lap one of the horses collapses and its rider somersaults upon the turf, narrowly avoiding the heels of some of the other entries.

The locale of the action is a southern state, and the picturesque settings of Dixieland offer an attractive background. Joe King and Marian Swayne, and Jack Richardson play the most important roles. Ralph Ince and L. R. Sheldon directed the production.

Stories Picked for Colleen Moore

Initial Vehicles Are Selected for First National's Newest Luminary

FOR Colleen Moore, who is to star in a series of pictures for First National, "The Huntress" has been selected as her first vehicle and put into production under the direction of Lynn Reynolds. Opposite her in the leading male role is Lloyd Hughes. In the supporting cast will appear Russell Simpson, whose latest work was "The Sheriff" in "The Girl of the Golden West"; Wallace Bery, and "Snitz" Edwards. The continuity of the story, which is a novel by Hulbert Footner, was prepared by Percy Heath.

"Flaming Youth," Warner Fabian's story, which appeared in The Metropolitan, will also be a vehicle for Colleen Moore. Without either condoning or condemning it presents an accurate picture of the jazz tendency of the age. Miss Moore is cast as the youngest daughter, "Dee," a girl who wearies of the endless rounds of parties and their accompanying flirtations and kisses and who seeks a deeper and more sincere meaning in life.

Jack Dillon has been selected to direct this production and the continuity is now being prepared.

Miss Moore has been in motion pictures since 1916, when she met David Wark Griffith and was persuaded by him to go to California to play a small part in one of his productions. Her more recent productions are "The Nth Commandment," directed by Frank Borzage; "The Ninety and Nine," a railroad drama in which she was co-featured with Warner Baxter, and "Broken Chains," an Allen Holubar production.

Her contract with First National calls for a series of pictures to be made over a period of years. "The Huntress" and "Flaming Youth" are the only two announced at this time.

Griffith's "White Rose" Praised by Critics

OPENING to a packed house at the Lyric theatre, New York, D. W. Griffith's new photoplay, "The White Rose," began its premiere Broadway showing Tuesday evening, May 22nd. It was announced that this screen feature, which inaugurates Mr. Griffith's sixth New York season, would have a four weeks' run at the Lyric, and then would be ready for release through United Artists Corporation.

"One of the biggest pictures made in years is 'The White Rose' because it is so very, very human. It comes as near being a real picture as we have seen in years. It is an unqualified success, and Mae Marsh reaches out and twangs away at a mighty sad little symphony on one's heart strings, and never strikes a discord," said Don Allen in the Evening World.

"Aimed straight at your heart 'The White Rose' hits its mark, boldly tearing away the old dual standard of morals, and showing man accepting blame for the sin along with the woman," said Quinn Martin in the World.

"'The White Rose' easily ranks with the most important pictures made in America," said the critic for the Sun. "The acting is magnificent—as fine as any the screen can boast of, and the photoplay is of an incomparable physical beauty."

"'The White Rose' is the best picture D. W. Griffith has made since 'The Birth of a Nation,'" said the reviewer for the Evening Journal.

"A singularly fine picture, and the treatment of the big dramatic moments is superb. 'The White Rose' is beautified and exalted by the presence of that exquisite creature, Mae Marsh, the divinely inspired," said Robert E. Sherwood of the Herald.

"'The White Rose' is indeed, a triumph for its splendid cast," said P. W. Gallico in the News.

"There is suspense galore, and sobs scenes a-plenty," said the reviewer in the Times.

"Mr. Griffith in 'The White Rose' gives us another pictorial and sentimental gem," said the critic for the Journal of Commerce. "It is doubtful if the magician Griffith has ever done anything finer."

Metro Animal Picture Praised

New York Reviewers Give Approval to "Trailing African Wild Animals"

MR. AND MRS. MARTIN JOHNSON'S picture, "Trailing African Wild Animals," was launched into the Capitol theatre, New York, Sunday, May 20th, for a week's run to the accompaniment of an enthusiastic tribute from the New York papers. The critics were unanimous in their praise of the picture and the public flocked to the Capitol through the week to what proved a highly successful run.

"The feature picture at the Capitol this week is called 'Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson Trailing African Wild Animals,'" wrote Harriette Underhill in the Tribune, "and that is about the first 'movie' caption we ever saw which wasn't in the least misleading. One can easily believe that this is the world's most perilous camera expedition."

"The Capitol theatre" wrote P. W. Gallico in the Daily News, "has more entertainment per square inch this week than it has had for a long while—which is saying a good deal. The film is truly marvelous."

The New York Times wrote: "Trailing African Wild Animals at the Capitol was received with constant outbursts of applause. The film is a remarkable piece of work. Incidentally, Mr. Johnson's film has the distinction of being endorsed by the American Museum of Natural History as a scientific record."

"Nothing but blind bravery and an utter disregard for what might happen to them could have caused Martin Johnson and his attractive wife to take the chances shown in 'Trailing African Wild Animals.'" So writes Quinn Martin in the World.

Rose Pelwick writes in the American: "Life as it is in the jungles is pictured in Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's 'Trailing African Wild Animals' at the Capitol. The photography is excellent, the scenery is beautiful, the procedure is picturesque and the animals screen enthusiastically."

"Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's 'Trailing African Wild Animals' is the most entertaining feature we have ever seen at the Capitol," wrote the Evening Mail critic. "This remarkable film taken at the risk of the lives of the man and the woman who carried the camera through miles of country little known is one we do not hesitate to say 'go and see.'"

The New York Sun said: "'Trailing African Wild Animals' is one of the most impressive we have ever seen."

Inceville Again on Production Map

Inceville, that historic strip of ground at Santa Monica, Cal., made famous by the production there of the Triangle "Westerns," is on the map again.

The Rocky Mountain Productions, Inc., has leased the entire ranch, now owned by a development company, for the purpose of making it the locale of a series of eight outdoor pictures featuring Bill Patton, who is being supported by Peggy O'Day.

Barker Company Again Off on Location

Not content with the refreshing experience of daily risking life and limb for six weeks in the snow-bound interior of Alberta, Canada, the Reginald Barker company is off again for another location trip to film thrills for "The Master of Woman," a future Metro-Louis B. Mayer special based on G. B. Lancaster's novel, "The Law-Bringers."

Truett offers "The Empty Cradle," with Mary Alden and Harry T. Morey, from which these scenes were taken.

Carewe to Start "The Bad Man"

Technical Staff Completed, Holbrook Blinn Will Play Leading Role

WITH the technical staff engaged and an all-star cast of players being assembled, everything will be ready within the next two weeks for the filming of "The Bad Man," which Edwin Carewe is to produce for First National. Holbrook Blinn, who starred in the stage play on Broadway and for three years throughout the country has been engaged to interpret the same role in this picture. Mr. Carewe's last First National picture was "The Girl of the Golden West."

John D. Schulze, who for the last ten years has designed the settings for many of the biggest screen productions, has been engaged by Carewe to create the sets for "The Bad Man." Schulze has filed the position of art director on several of Carewe's previous productions. His latest for this producer-director was "Mighty Lak' a Rose," one of First National's successes during the past season. Some of the other productions, the settings of which he designed, were "The Lotus Eater," "Rio Grande," "Playthings of Destiny," "The Invisible Fear," "Fools First" and "Notoriety." Schulze recently arrived in Los Angeles from New York and started immediately upon the work of providing "The Bad Man" with the proper settings.

Sol Polito has been selected as chief cameraman for the picture, Thomas Storey, assistant cameraman, and Wallace Fox assistant director. Carewe expects to announce the complete cast within the next week.

"Luck" Premiere Scores in South

Johnny Hines Latest Melo-Comedy Is Commended by Dallas Reviewers

"LUCK," the latest of the Johnny Hines melo-comedies, sponsored by C. C. Burr, had its premiere in the Southern territory last week when it had a most successful engagement at the Capitol theatre, Dallas.

Newspaper critics were enthusiastic about it. The Dallas Morning News had this to say about Johnny's latest feature.

"Without a cent for capital, he made $10,000 in one year and he made it with luck. This is what Johnny Hines does at the Capitol theatre in his new picture, 'Luck,' which started Saturday. He was born lucky. The whole show is a whirlwind. One never has time to think. The action carries the picture and the picture carries the audience. He won a cross-country race without training, he beat a negro with his own dice, he struck a match in a supposedly gas-filled tunnel—he was lucky.

"Johnny Hines is not handsome, but a person with his smile could not be called ugly. He has the cheeriness and the whole-heartedness of youth, the bombast of the undefeated and the sureness of the successful. His philosophy of life is 'It can be done.' He is a living example."

"Luck" was originally published in People's Magazine. Jackson Gregory is the author. It is essentially speedy but it has enough of a plot for interest. Hines rides a horse hard and well, but it is his unconquerable smile that is memorable.

Exhibitors' reports from every section where "Luck" has played all attest to the fact that this latest Hines' melo-comedy has created an enviable record, it is said. The Illinois premiere of "Luck" will take place in July when the feature is booked for the Chicago theatre where it will be given a special presentation.

"Garrison's Finish" Wins Critics

Jack Pickford's Latest Given Approval of Reviewers at New York Capitol

CAPACITY business and enthusiastically applauding audiences greeted Jack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish" when this Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release had its first showing in New York at the Capitol theatre, Sunday May 27.

"Garrison's Finish" is a story of the race track and seems to be quite the thing which a large portion of the general public likes, if one may judge by the applause after the finish of the picture at the Capitol," said Dorothy Day, reviewer for the Morning Telegraph. "There is plenty of suspense throughout."

"A picture which should not disappoint any one," said the critic for the Tribune. "Jack Pickford is quite convincing as Billy Garrison, the jockey. The photography is good, the direction good, and the acting excellent."

"It offers charm and entertainment," said the P. W. Gallico in the Daily News. "Villains are defeated, the hero gallops home triumphant and a girl is won."

"In an hour 'Garrison's Finish' masses before the spectators' eyes the brightest epic in sport—the rise of a Derby winner," said the World's reviewer. "From the days of minor sweepstakes up to the morning of the great event, one shares the strain of the horse, the care of the jockey, the anxiety of the owner."

"A smoothly built story, adorned with legitimate humor," said Robert E. Sherwood in the Herald. "Jack Pickford as Billy Garrison, is much better than he has ever been before. The race scenes at Belmont Park and of the Kentucky Derby are as exciting as race scenes always are."

"Jack Pickford plays the role of the heroic jockey, and plays it well, too," said Don Allen in the Evening World. "Taken all in all, 'Garrison's Finish' is about as full of thrill's and chills as one could ask of any film."

"A colorful and thrilling screen feature," said the critic for the Evening Telegram, "with an intensely interesting plot."

"Garrison's Finish" is a delightful bit of entertainment telling of racing horses and those who race them," said the reviewer in the Evening Mail.

Boston Praises "Covered Wagon"

Paramount Production Warmly Greeted at Initial Showing in Hub City

JAMES CRUZE'S Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon," had its first showing in Boston at the Majestic theatre Monday evening. A brilliant audience attended the opening performance and judging from the capacity attendance at succeeding performances and the reception given the picture by the press, the record-breaking success scored in New York, Chicago and Hollywood seems certain to be duplicated in the Hub.

The Telegram said: "There are times when we wish we had been less prodigal in our use of superlatives in the early days of our reviewing. And the present is one of these times. For what shall we say of 'The Covered Wagon' that shall begin to do it justice? No description by written or spoken word can do it justice. . . . A great picture; don't miss it!"

The Globe: "'The Covered Wagon' is an epic in motion picture photography. It stands out as the biggest and most interesting photoplay that has been shown in Boston since the famous 'Birth of A Nation.'"

The Herald: "The play was forcibly acted by principals and minor characters; by the crowds, Indians and pale faces; by the oxen and horses. The management of the masses, the various dispositions of the caravan, the views of the plains and deserts, valleys and hills—these were admirably planned and realized."

The Traveler: "It is the kind of instructive entertainment that David Wark Griffith gave us in his first great and memorable masterpiece,

'The Birth of A Nation.' It intrigues with fact as well as fiction and therefore has absorbing effect."

The Post: "When a motion picture is all the advertisements say it is—and more—then it is a great picture. 'The Covered Wagon' is a big picture, probably the biggest picture we have yet seen."

The Advertiser: "Fulfilled every expectation. Nothing just like 'The Covered Wagon' has been given to the screen."

The American: "'The Covered Wagon' has set up a new standard of motion picture production. Photographically it is flawless, and in spectacular details it easily outranks anything yet shown on the screen."

According to the Globe, the audience at the opening performance was probably the most distinguished that has ever witnessed the exhibition of a motion picture in Boston. Among those noticed in the audience were Mrs. Channing H. Cox, Lieut.-Gov. Fuller and the members of the Governor's Council, Rear Admiral Wiley, Commandant of the Boston Navy Yard, and the members of his staff; Mayor and Mrs. Curley, City Treasurer John J. Curley, Fire Commissioner Thomas Glynn, Police Superintendent M. F. Crowley, Commander William H. Doyle, of the American Legion; Prof. and Mrs. Bliss Perry, Prof. and Mrs. Dallas Lore Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Cabot, Prof. A. J. Andrews, Public Librarian Charles F. D. Balden, Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall, Willis J. Abbot, President and Mrs. Henry Lawrence Southwick, of Emerson College.

Leah Baird Appears in Richmond

LEAH BAIRD is in Richmond, Va., this week making personal appearances at the Broadway theatre, where "Is Divorce a Failure?" the first of her 1923 Specials for Associated Exhibitors, is the feature attraction.

Miss Baird is enthusiastic over picture prospects throughout the country and the prosperous conditions which she found prevailing wherever she stopped on her trip across the continent. She was highly elated with the warmth of the receptions tendered her in Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi, where she was received by governors, mayors, women's clubs and civic organizations, and was guest of honor at an endless round of luncheons and dinners.

Elaine Hammerstein Convention Star

From the moment of her arrival in Chicago on the opening day of the Annual Convention of the M. P. T. O. A., Elaine Hammerstein, Truett star, was an attraction until the day of her departure. A delegation of exhibitors, accompanied by brass bands and a long line of automobiles, met the star at the station upon her arrival and accompanied her to the office of Mayor Dever of Chicago, to whom she delivered a message from Mayor Hylan of New York.

A special police detail escorted Miss Hammerstein through the streets of Chicago and the publicity in all of Chicago's daily newspapers, derived from this event did a great deal to stimulate interest in the exhibit at the Coliseum which was being held in conjunction with the exhibitor convention.

During her stay in Chicago, Miss Hammerstein had as her guest over one hundred kiddies from the Home for Destitute Crippled Children.

Bandit Tie-up Helps F. B. O. Picture

Fate took a hand last week in helping the Film Booking Offices to put over Ethel Clayton in her latest picture, "The Remittance Woman," with a tie-up that netted them columns of daily paper space, due to the Chinese bandit outbreak.

The story of Miss Clayton's picture which was released May 13th is based on a yarn having to do with the mysteries of the Orient with Chinese bandits here and there and in some instances duplicates the stories that have been coming over the cables. The break in the news columns of the dailies enabled the F. B. O. advertising forces to take advantage of the situation by tying up the clippings with a scene taken from the picture of Miss Clayton being directed before the bandit chief.

Hodkinson Makes Theatre Tour Gets Information On "Down to Sea in Ships" by Visiting Thirty Houses

IN order to secure first hand information regarding the simultaneous showing of "Down to the Sea in Ships" in thirty theatres in Greater New York last week, W. W. Hodkinson made a personal tour of most of the houses during the week of the showing.

Starting in the early evening he covered Manhattan, Harlem, Bronx and Brooklyn. He talked with exhibitors in each section visited, and was very much gratified at the enthusiasm and satisfaction expressed everywhere, he says.

He reports that practically every exhibitor said that the picture was breaking house records against the stiffest kind of opposition.

Mr. Hodkinson says: "The night which I chose for making my tour of inspection was Thursday, which is usually considered an 'off' night. The weather was warm as well, with beach and amusement parks such as Coney Island offering their attractions, which is not ordinarily conducive to theatregoing. In nearly every theatre visited, however, I found them playing to standing room, and many had a line at the box office extending down the block.

"As a result of this phenomenal showing," Mr. Hodkinson continued, "we have booked 'Down to the Sea in Ships' in some forty additional theatres in the Metropolitan district, including the Stadium, Grange, Ogden, Harlem Grand, Concourse U. S., Consolidated Circuit, Yoozt Circuit, Westchester and many outlying sections of Long Island and New Jersey. Many new bookings are coming in every day. We backed this picture in Greater New York alone with one of the greatest exploitation and advertising campaigns ever put over, and its success is directly traceable to the skill with which it has been merchandised, both to the exhibitor and by the exhibitor to the public.

"Based on attendance records, we have estimated that over three-quarters of a million people witnessed 'Down to the Sea in Ships' during the past week."

Canadian Beauty Given Role with Fox

The production, including in its cast, Virginia Lee Corbin, Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Mary Anderson, Kate Price, Joseph Dowling and other popular players, will be shown publicly within the next three weeks.

Larger space for future production, has already been taken over by Fisher at the Hollywood studios.

Extend Runs of "Safety Last" Many Theatres Prolong Engagements of Latest Harold Lloyd Feature

HOW Pathe's reciprocal get-together booking policy, emphasized in the cast of "Safety Last," has worked out to date is indicated in the statement from Pathe that twenty-seven theatres in sixteen states have closed capacity runs extended from the original contracts to fourteen days and over.

The longest extended run of the Lloyd seven-reel comedy thus far covered a total of 35 days, at the Strand theatre, San Francisco. Twenty-eight days was also the "Safety Last" record of the Rialto and Goodwin theatres, Newark, N. J.

The Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, and the Nixon theatre, West Philadelphia, extended their runs to 24 days. At Salt Lake City the Kinema theatre kept the crowds coming for 21 days, with the same record shown by the Park theatre, Worcester, Mass., and the Miles theatre, Cleveland, O., and the Majestic theatre, Portland, Ore.

The "Safety Last" runs extended to 14 days were at the following theatres: Old Mill, Dallas, Texas; Strand, Minneapolis; Astor, St. Paul; Strand, New York; Olympia, Boston; Broadway, Lawrence, Mass.; Capitol, St. Louis; Walnut, Cincinnati; Colonial, Columbus; Alamo, Louisville; Liberty, Youngstown, Ohio; Metropolitan, Washington; Liberty, Kansas City; Apollo, Indianapolis; Liberty, Spokane; Capitol, Bridgeport, Conn.; Strand, Hartford, Conn.

The foregoing are completed extended runs. Another indefinite run began at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, on May 28. The contract for the Chicago engagement covers seven weeks.

Banquet in Connection with "Brass" Premiere

An elaborate banquet and trade showing has been arranged by the Warner Brothers for the premiere presentation of "Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce, at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, in the near future. The picture is a Harry Rapf production, directed by Sidney Franklin and adapted for the screen by Juhen Josephson.

The Granada theatre of that city has booked the feature for an early showing, and this is to be preceded by the special presentation and banquet at the St. Francis Hotel. Through the efforts of the Federated Exchange, San Francisco, controlling the rights to the Warner pictures on the coast, many of the leading exhibitors in the territory will attend the premiere. Newspapermen of Northern California, and scores of prominent people of the Hollywood district will also be present.

Harry M. Warner, who is at present on the coast formulating plans for the forthcoming series of eighteen features, and Mr. Rapf will represent the firm of Warner Brothers at the trade showing. Marie Prevost, Monte Blue and Irene Rich, all of whom play prominent parts in the film, will appear, and word has been received from Mr. Norris, the author of the novel of his promise to attend.

Beauty Selected for C. B. C. Pictures

In accordance with a plan expressed a long time ago when "Only a Shopgirl" was in the making, the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation this week selected a Chicago working girl, and will send her to California to appear in motion pictures. The girl's name is Betty Arnold, and she was selected as the prettiest and best film type in the entire city.

When "Only a Shopgirl" was being made, the C. B. C. officials sent broadcast a notice to exchanges and exhibitors handling the picture that if they would co-operate in selecting a girl, preferably a shopgirl, but positively a working girl, that girl would be given an opportunity for a screen career.

The latest Universal release is "Fools and Riches," with a cast that includes several stars. The pictures in this layout were made from the production.

"Soul of Beast" Highly Praised

Washington Reviewers Enthuse Over Production Seen at Loew's Columbia

"SOUL OF THE BEAST," a Metro picture produced by Thomas H. Ince, played a successful week at Loew's Columbia theatre, Washington, it is said. Managing Director Lawrence Beatis of Loew's Washington theatres and Manager Gates of the Columbia carried out an elaborate advance campaign on the picture and reaped excellent results. Motion picture critics of the Washington dailies were enthusiastic in their praise of "Soul of the Beast." Following are some of their comments:

The critic of the Herald wrote: "Thomas H. Ince offers what is probably the outstanding cinema novelty of the year in his vivid drama of two circus runaways. It is one of the most appealing pictures of the year."

"The Columbia this week," wrote the Post reviewer, "presents about the closest approach to a three-ring circus in screen form that the local silver sheet has ever offered."

"The wanderings of Oscar the elephant in search of his mistress are beautiful in story as well as in photography. The Canadian backwoods lent an entrancing background to the picture."—The reviewer of the Washington Star.

The Daily News said: "Some romance — some thrills — some laughs. The feature has 'em."

The critic of the Times wrote in the course of a lengthy review: "One of the screen's real novelties is the attraction at Loew's Columbia this week and all who have thrilled with enjoyment at the circus should not fail to see this film, 'Soul of the Beast.' Were it not that Miss Madge Bellamy is so entrancingly pretty one might say that Oscar, a big elephant, is the star of the entertainment. What this monster pachyderm does in the course of five reels is really marvelous. 'Soul of the Beast' serves as a vehicle which brings Miss Bellamy to the very edge of stardom."

Schulberg Is Swamped with Titles

The volume of replies received by B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, in answer to his announcement that he was in the market for good box-office titles suitable for a number of stories he contemplates for future production, has reached such proportions that he is now asking that exhibitors cease stressing this announcement to the public. No more titles can be considered.

The tremendous publicity given Schulberg's search for appealing titles in every newspaper and magazine and in many theatres all over the country has resulted in the receipt at the Preferred Studio of so many letters listing suggestions that the staff especially engaged to handle the communications is completely swamped.

The response from the public has so overwhelmingly surpassed Mr. Schulberg's anticipations that his final decision will necessarily be delayed, though he hopes to announce several purchases as soon as the replies can be arranged for his consideration.

Poster Campaign Aids Picture Selling

Ben Amsterdam, Lichtman franchise holder in Philadelphia, is selling "Are You a Failure?" direct to the exhibitor's patrons by a bill posting campaign. Forty-two 24-sheets advertising this recent Tom Forman production for B. P. Schulberg are now on the boards in the Quaker City and Mr. Amsterdam reports that they are building business for him and for the local theatres.

Photoplay Edition of Novel Is Help

Exhibitors are finding the specially prepared photoplay edition of Bertha M. Clay's novel, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," a valuable aid in putting over B. P. Schulberg's Preferred Picture version which is a Lichtman release.

"Midnight Alarm" Is Completed

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, announces that "The Midnight Alarm" has been finished and is now being assembled at the studios in Hollywood. This melodrama is another Vitagraph super-feature produced under Mr. Smith's policy of bigger and better pictures.

One of the biggest and most costly sets ever constructed by Vitagraph was erected for "The Midnight Alarm."

More than five thousand persons are said to have gathered at the Vitagraph lot to watch the shooting of the fire. An entire battalion of the Los Angeles Fire Department was on hand, not only to play its part in the thrilling rescue scenes, but to safeguard the studios of Vitagraph nearby.

In addition to Miss Alice Calhoun and Percy Marmont in the leading roles are Cullen Landis, Joseph Kilgour, Maxine Elliott Hicks, George Pierce, Kitty Bradbury and J. Gunnis Davis.

Denison Clift Directs English Feature

London newspapers accord a high place to Denison Clift's latest British picture, "This Freedom," dramatized and directed by Clift from A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel. The picture has created sensational interest in England, and has been acquired by William Fox for America for 100,000 dollars, a record price for a British sale, it is claimed.

Clift has finished directing "Out to Win," pictured from the London stage success, with Clive Brook and Catherine Calvert in the leading roles.

Fay Compton, most famous of English film stars, is starring as Mary Stuart in "Mary, Queen of Scots," which Mr. Clift is just completing.

Upon completion of this picture September 1st, Mr. Clift will return to California to resume directing in Hollywood.

Farnum Praises New "Spoilers"

William Farnum, who played the leading role in Selig's screen version of "The Spoilers," ten years ago, recently attended a pre-view showing of the Jesse D. Hampton production.

The actor seized the hand of Milton Sills, who played the lead in the new picture, and congratulated him.

"Marvelous, immense," said Farnum. "It is the greatest picture I have ever seen."

Then he added, "Gee, I would have given ten years of my life to have played the part again."

"Stormy Seas" Promises Thrills

Romance, Suspense Mark Associated Exhibitors Release for July 1st

ROMANCE, suspense and thrills are said to be mingled in the Associated Exhibitors feature, "Stormy Seas," starring J. P. McGowan and Helen Holmes, which is set for release July 1. The grounding of a big steamship is followed by the realistic burning of a yacht at sea, and the rescue of those aboard by another vessel, after a mad chase in response to an "S. O. S." call.

On the single condition that he will overcome an inherited weakness that threatens to ruin his career, a girl promises to marry a handsome young skipper with whom she is in love. The man breaks his word, his recklessness causes the wreck of his ship—a tragedy that is vividly portrayed, and he brings disgrace on himself and humiliation and sorrow to his fiancée.

The young man's chum, himself a ship's officer and a warm admirer of the girl, goes to the aid of his pal when the latter seems hopelessly down and out, and ultimately succeeds in making a man of him again. This result is not accomplished, though, until the former skipper has been made to work as a common stoker, a target for the gibes and taunts of his one-time subordinates.

The great climax comes when the ship picks up an "S. O. S." from the girl, who, with her father, is aboard the burning yacht. The former skipper had established in his prosperous days a reputation for ability to extract the maximum speed from a vessel and he is summoned from the stoke-hole to command the rescue ship in its dash to the stricken craft.

The girl is rescued and then—the story ends "differently," it is said. In many films the girl would forgive and forget, and wed the man who had saved her life after humiliating her. But in this case the rescuer doesn't permit that. He effaces himself, pretending to have made arrangements to marry another, and leaves the girl to the care of the chum who had helped him to "come back."

J. P. McGowan is said to be such a good-looking hero, and to make of him in his better moments so much of a man that audiences may almost forget his sacrifice, heroic as it is. Helen Holmes, co-starred with him, is the girl. The story of "Stormy Seas" is by Arthur W. Donaldson, and throbs and thrills mark every moment of it, according to Associated's statement.

"Masters of Men" Is Approved

Newspaper Critics Commend Vitagraph Picture After First Run Showings

NEWSPAPERS in cities which have enjoyed first run presentations of "Masters of Men," Vitagraph's picturization of Morgan Robertson's sea story, have been unanimous in their praise of this super-feature, it is reported. The picture played two weeks at the Cameo theatre in New York City. Excerpts from some of the criticisms in the daily New York press follow:

The Evening Telegram: "In 'Masters of Men,' Morgan Robertson, its author, has given us one of the best pictures of the year. It is not only a good story but it is well told, well pictured and exceedingly well acted."

P. W. Gallico in the Daily News: "It is right entertaining and well played. We enjoyed it hugely. It is quite different."

The New York Times: "The story moves along and there are very good effects on the sailing ships and warships introduced in the course of the film."

Don Allen in The Evening World: "'Masters of Men' is a gripping, rollicking tale of the briny. We think you'll like 'Masters of Men.' We did."

The N. Y. American: "'Masters of Men' is full of red-blooded romance with the right atmosphere to tell a story that affords some thrills."

Harriette Underhill in the N. Y. Tribune: "A picture called 'Masters of Men' is at the Cameo. We enjoyed it. In no place does the story drag. This is praise indeed. Some one has written some good titles."

When "Masters of Men" played at the Newark theatre in Newark, N. J., the Evening News said: "It's incessant and varied action fixes attention. . . . So excellent is the cast and so well drilled in their duties are the supernumeraries that the general performance leaves such an impression of vitality and completeness as gratifies the spectators."

The Newark Star-Eagle said: "This year is the quarter centenary of the Spanish-American War and a timely photoplay, vibrant and soul stirring, is 'Masters of Men.'"

Warner Brothers Hold Benefit Drives

The Warner Brothers during the past few weeks have aided two worthy causes toward a fulfillment of plans to aid and care for unfortunates. The first donation was made to the National Vaudeville Artists at a recent benefit drive on the west coast. To this organization the Warners contributed $1,000 cash and a pledge for further assistance in the future.

Harry M. Warner is a resident of Mount Vernon, New York. In a drive for $400,000 to enlarge and adequately take care of an increasing number of patients, the Mount Vernon Hospital appealed to Mr. Warner for a donation. In addition to giving the hospital a substantial sum, Mr. Warner went a step further and had made at his own expense a propaganda film some two reels in length revealing the hospital conditions and why it was imperative for the citizens of Mount Vernon to contribute to this worthy cause.

Lesser Sells Wisconsin Rights to Series

Irving H. Lesser, vice president and general manager of Distribution of Principal Pictures Corporation, has sold the rights to the entire state of Wisconsin for his Super Five Series and "Mind Over Motor" to Mid West Distributing Company of Milwaukee. Charles Trampe is general manager of Mid West, and Moy B. Toy is president.

This transaction makes the Mid West Company practically a Principal Pictures exchange, as they have handled all of the Principal product in the past, and have had marked success with such productions as "The World's a Stage," "Environment," "Flesh and Blood," and all of the David Butler, Lester Cuneo and Dick Hatton series.

The Super Five Series consists of "The Spider and the Rose," "Bright Lights of Broadway," "Temporary Marriage," "The Man from Ten Strike" and "East Side, West Side."

N. Y. Hippodrome Chorus with Doris Kenyon

Thirty-five chorus girls from the New York Hippodrome are presented in a big act with Doris Kenyon as the star in one of the episodes of "Bright Lights of Broadway." This is in the sequence of the story which depicts her arrival at stardom in a New York musical comedy.

The costumes worn by the Hippodrome chorus girls in this act were especially designed by Andre Sherri, the noted French modiste.

Song "If Winter Comes" Is Popular

The song, "If Winter Comes," dedicated to A. S. M. Hutchinson, author of the novel of that name, and commemorating the Fox Film Corporation's screen version, has gained a country-wide popularity, according to M. Witmark & Sons, New York music publishers. Phonograph manufacturers who have contracted for the recording of the song likewise report a waxing popularity wherever dance music is in vogue.

The Witmark edition of the song is unique. The illustration on the front cover consists of a cut showing two opened pages of the novel with Mark Sabre and Nona stepping through the typed pages into view. Small portrait inserts are shown of Mabel, Effie, Lord Tybar and High Jinks and Low Jinks. Below the cut there is a personal letter from the author to William Lee Dickson and Frederick W. Vanderpool, the lyricist and the composer of the song. The illustrations were made with scenes from the screen production.

Sennett Rushing Work on "Extra Girl"

Preferring a career to matrimony the extra girl in Mack Sennett's latest screen feature, "The Extra Girl," now well in course of production for release by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, refuses as a husband one of the wealthiest men in the little town of River Bend, Ind., and instead of settling into domesticity, leaves home and family, journeys to Hollywood, and seeks the casting director's office of one of the prominent film producers. From then on the forthcoming picture unfolds a most wonderful story of love and romance, thrills and adventures, it is claimed.

"The Extra Girl" is from Mack Sennett's own story adapted for the screen by Bernard McConville. The title role is being played by Mabel Normand, and F. Richard Jones, whose previous efforts with this star have been so successful, is the director.

The cast includes Ralph Graves in the male lead, George Nichols, Vernon Dent and Charlotte Mineau.

No definite release date has been set, but plans now are to give "The Extra Girl" a first showing during the early summer.

Mary Pickford to Have Emotional Role

A grown-up Mary Pickford; a Mary Pickford with her curls of gold piled high in a coiffure of the style in the Empire period in Spain during the Nineteenth century; a Mary Pickford portraying a highly emotional role—this is the Mary Pickford the public will see in her new photoplay feature, "The Street Singer," which will be completed soon for release through United Artists Corporation.

"It isn't a new Mary Pickford this picture will present," say her associates, "but a grown-up Mary Pickford whose capabilities as an emotional actress never have been fully revealed until now."

"Thief of Bagdad" Progressing

Fairbanks Promises Production That Will Dwarf His Own "Robin Hood"

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS again has set for himself the task of producing another photoplay sensation, and according to reports from the studio, is well on the way to succeeding with "The Thief of Bagdad," plans for the production of which are now under way.

"Where 'Robin Hood' left off, 'The Thief of Bagdad' will begin," that is the slogan being pasted in the hats of those who are to be associated closely with this forthcoming feature.

On the ten acres recently added to the Pickford-Fairbanks studio property, sets of gigantic proportions already are under way.

After several months' work William Cameron Mexzes and Irvin J. Martin, specially engaged by Mr. Fairbanks to create something wholly new and different in the way of settings, have produced what it is believed will bring forth a startling innovation in motion picture edifices, it is said.

While no names have been announced definitely, for the cast the studio teems with types that are images of the pictures which have stamped such stories as "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" and "Sindbad the Sailor," indelibly upon the memory.

"Our plan is to choose players who are the living counterparts of the illustration of the Arabian Nights," says Douglas Fairbanks, "and it is thus we will carry conviction in our story. While we might after a manner, achieve this effect with make-up, it would be far less effective. It would satisfy the eye, but it would never satisfy the soul."

One of the unusual sets promised will have for its base a concrete floor which covers one and one-half square acres, and is estimated to cost $20,000. Around the edge of this floor, which will serve as a sort of patio or plaza, will be constructed the bazaars of Bagdad. Other sets, foundations for which are now being laid, will tower above the turrets of the King's castle in "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," dwarfing the castle to what will appear quite ordinary proportions.

More players will be used in filming "The Thief of Bagdad" than appeared in "Robin Hood," according to Robert Fairbanks, production manager. Raoul A. Walsh will direct the production and Arthur Edson will head the staff of camera men. Despite the announced magnitude of the picture, it is hoped and planned now to have it ready for autumn release.

Veterans in Personnel for Jackie Coogan

Many interesting experiences are part and parcel of the personnel that makes up the production organization for "Long Live the King," Jackie Coogan's first picture for Metro now in the course of production. Jack Coogan, Senior, spent fifteen years in vaudeville and musical comedy. Director Schertzinger is still one of our best known composers of popular and semi-classical music. Studio Manager E. A. Biby was one of the real pioneers in the film industry in California. Art Director J. J. Hughes gave his first year in pictures to working as laborer, electrician, prop boy and mechanic, so that he could add this concrete information to his store of knowledge of the theatrical production, before he took his place in the film world.

"Long Live the King" is from the novel of the same name by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It was adapted to the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan and scenarioized by Eve Unsell. It is being filmed under the personal supervision of Jack Coogan, Senior.

Tri-Stone Reorganizes] Department

President Oscar A. Price and Vice-President and General Manager H. E. Aitken of Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc., have reorganized and enlarged the advertising and publicity department of that organization preparatory to the release of a series of re-edited Triangle features.

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Americano" will be the first of the new edition Triangle features to be released, probably about June 15. John Emerson, Frank Wood and Fairbanks, himself, collaborated on the story. Emerson and Anita Loos wrote the continuity, and Emerson directed it under the supervision of D. W. Griffith. Alma Reubens plays the leading feminine role. Emerson and Miss Loos have entirely re-edited and retitled the feature for its release by Tri-Stone.

Eugene Clifford, Jr., formerly with the Trimble-Murfin Productions in charge of the publicizing of the "Strongheart" features, has been placed in charge of the advertising and publicity departments.

"Street Singer" to Have Many Big Sets

Sets built for Mary Pickford's new feature, "The Street Singer," now in production for United Artists' release, probably establish a record for the number constructed for a single motion picture, it is claimed.

Forty-six complete structures were erected at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios, exclusive of draperies and flat backings.

The story is said to be one of compelling drama and romance, and boasts a cast of stars which, in addition to Miss Pickford, includes Holbrook Blinn, Irene Rich, George Walsh, Charles Belcher, Mme. Mathilde Comont, Frank Leigh, George Periolat, Bert Sprotte, Snitz Edwards, Mme. De Bodamere, Phillipe De Lacey, Donald McAlpin, Doreen Turner, and others.

Effects of Laboratory on Picture in Theatre

Watterson R. Rothacker Tells How Printing and Developing Can Make or Mar Productions

Paper Before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers

AFTER all is said and done, the proof of the "picture" is in the print, for the positive print is the final link in the chain which leads to the eye of the public. But, print proof is dependent upon projection and screening; many a good print which reflected unusual negative value has been criticized or condemned because its excellence and utmost were dimmed by faulty screening.

The laboratory is one of the most important factors in motion picture construction. All of the artistry of author, director, players and cinematographer, is lessened or lost if the negative is improperly developed; and, the beauty which is latent in a perfectly exposed and perfectly developed negative is a deep, dark secret if the print is inferior or is not properly presented.

Inasmuch as the laboratory has to do with developing the negative which registers the first film result of enormous investments in dollars, thought and art, and inasmuch as the laboratory makes the positive prints which show the public whether the picture is good or bad, it may be reasonably stated that upon the laboratory rests a responsibility at least as great, and just as important as that of the author, director, star and cinematographer.

The Laboratory Not a Spectacular Feature

The laboratory is not a spectacular feature in the motion picture industry, but without proper laboratory cooperation, the production itself suffers, the distributor fails to deliver 100 per cent to the exhibitor, and the exhibitor fails in his duty to the public.

In making quantity prints for release use, the laboratory in many instances is instructed to make up for various deficiencies in the negative, such as under or over exposure or development, flat or hard lighting, and other defects which may be present in the negative because of faulty handling or because the picture was "shot" under unavoidably poor conditions.

It is not always within the province of the laboratory to select colors or timing. It often happens that the specification of a client who has individual color ideas, or who has a fondness for soft or out of focus effects, results in a print which is delightful to the man who ordered it, but which does not suit the taste or requirement of the majority of exchange men, exhibitors or public.

Another thing the laboratory has to contend with is the difference in "throw" and lighting at the various theatres. Until we have standardized illumination, the same print cannot look as well in a small house in Oshkosh as it does at the Chicago or Strand, where the "throw" or current is different.

The laboratory has solved this problem to the extent possible under present conditions, but it will never cease to be a problem until standardized projection is an accomplished fact.

The important points which characterize the best positive prints are general density, degree of contrast, color of the silver image, correct timing, tinting, toning, freedom from mechanical defects such as dirt, scratches, "greenness," etc., and even when all this is properly done, it is obvious that the final appearance of the print depends upon the quality of the negative from which the prints are made, for, after all, the prints are merely the result of mechanical multiplication, and serious defects in the negative appear as serious defects in the positive just the same as impressions from a defective halftone appear defective in the reproductions.

The physical condition of the print is of the utmost importance. The principal defects that lessen the life of the print and are traceable to poor laboratory work are injured perforations, too many or poorly made patches, improper fixing either through not entirely removing all silver salts with subsequent deterioration of the picture, or too great hardening effect on the fixing bath rendering the film unduly brittle and liable to break and crack, and improper washing which does not entirely remove all traces of hypo and silver salts dissolved in the hypo.

To prolong the life of the print it is advisable that all prints be waxed at the laboratory where they are made. This should be done by means of a specially prepared wax, applied in a narrow strip along the perforations, of such nature as to give proper lubrication when warmed by the heat of the projection light, but which will not melt under such heat and spread over the picture. If the waxing is improperly done, or the prints are not waxed at all, oftentimes an operator resorts to the application of oil to the film or attempts to lubricate it by some other crude and destructive method which invites print ruin.

It is gradually becoming the custom of all reputable laboratories to wax all prints, which is far better, safer and more economical than where the waxing is done at exchange points.

The use of continuity sheets, which establishes an outline of scenes and titles so that the exchanges can quickly order small replacements by number, has proven to be an economical, efficient innovation. I believe that it is only a question of time when every big distributing organization will insist that the laboratory making its prints furnish to the home office and to each exchange point a complete continuity sheet on each and every subject. This comes under the head of service and service is one of the most important functions of the laboratory; without service the work of the laboratory is only half accomplished.

How the Laboratory Can Enhance Negative Value

The one thousand and one things which represent the difference between a good print and an ordinary print or poor print are of a character too technical to be interesting to the average layman, but so obviously understood by the members of this technical organization that I will refrain from even mentioning them.

In conclusion, I would like to remark that while the laboratory cannot develop a perfect negative without perfect lighting and exposure, and while the laboratory cannot make a perfect print from an imperfect negative, the laboratory can make a great picture look great and it can make an ordinary picture look good; and it can, by a system of cooperation—

What the Laboratory Can Do for a Negative

"In conclusion I would like to remark that while the laboratory cannot develop a perfect negative without perfect lighting and exposure, and while the laboratory cannot make a perfect print from an imperfect negative, the laboratory can make a great picture look great and it can make an ordinary picture look good; and it can, by a system of cooperative service, greatly reduce the risk, worry and maintenance expense of the producer and distributor and certainly add to the enjoyment of the exhibitor and public."

"The print to the theatre is as important as the cartridge to the gun."

Mr. Rothacker thus very aptly sums up in his article the important function the laboratory commands in this industry.

Views of settings employing the cyclorama curtain installed at the Brooklyn Mark Strand. As described in the article on this page tells how this type of curtain can be used to excellent advantage. Note the balance in the arrangement of the setting in these views

Curtain Offers Opportunity for Ideas

Description of Special Number Used by E. L. Hyman Gives Suggestions

Article by Lee S. Ferguson

A VAST amount of credit is reflected upon the exhibitor or showman who can get a variety of uses from his cyclorama drops, at the same time making them unusually effective. To be sure, a cyclorama is not very much to work with. It appears lifeless and sombre and is not incentive to creative ideas. Nevertheless, it offers opportunities to the inventive exhibitor that should go a long way in making his theatre more popular with the patrons.

Managing Director Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand is a past master in the art of using cycloramas, as he is ever on the lookout for a new way in which to employ his cycloramas as well as other curtains and drops. Through his lighting and arrangement Hyman never fails to get a decidedly rich and artistic effect.

Description of Sets Shown in Illustrations

In the specialty illustrated with this article Hyman used the cyclorama as drapes on each side of a transparent window. The latter was lighted from behind in color harmonies and the huge chandelier was hung from overhead to lend balance and richness. The grouping of the figures also enhanced the value of the background. No lights were thrown upon the cyclorama itself, as borders, foots and spots gave all the front lighting that was used. The exhibitor who wishes to use a transparent window to split his cyclorama will find it as simple to do, if not simpler, than the Japanese fan set-piece which we wrote about in our issue of May 19. A frame is made for the transparent canvas, desired height and width, and after the frame is covered the scenic artist works the designs upon it. The higher the window the longer the designs should be as this lends depth to the setting. It is well to use the window as high as it will possibly go, as a squat design detracts from the number greatly. The window is then fastened by means of a leg, and the lamps are placed on either side. By using the gelatine slides of various colors two or more harmonies may be played on the window at one time, and these may be changed during the number if desired. This setting as used at the Brooklyn Mark Strand was an example of beauty in staging and proved its effectiveness. The window of course is the center, or base, to build the specialty around, but always with the desire to make the window merely background, or decorative, and in no way to detract from the musical numbers or dances being presented.

Stage Layout for Piano Number

At another time Hyman used two transparent windows around which the cyclorama was draped. This was for a piano specialty and as the grouping was much different from the scene illustrated, two windows served better than one. The piano was at the right of stage, with one of the windows to the left of the pianist. Two other instrumentalists were placed in symmetrical positions and thus the setting made up for lack of large numbers of people.

For a Spanish garden scene used as a prologue, Hyman hung a deep blue plush cyclorama as background behind a six-foot wall. In this case, as in the one already described, no lighting was thrown directly upon the cyclorama. In still another instance, the cyclorama may be used as a background, with silver, gold or other type of curtains drawn over it but left open in the center for a distance of four or five feet. The contrast is what is wanted and this gives excellent results, especially if soft lights are played on the side curtains and none on the eye.

In many instances, however, a neutral blue drop will serve a purpose similar to the dark cyclorama, but it is well to alternate in using them and to figure out new ways of using both so that the most may be gotten out of all the properties on hand. Above all, avoid the mistake of using a thing in the same old way time after time, as it gets the showman in a rut and his audiences will notice it much quicker than he will. Naturally system is a great thing but it cannot be adhered to in presentation and staging. There is no set rule to following and the only thing to observe is the reaction of the public—and strive to give them the real goods.

New Blue Mouse for Tacoma

John Hamrick, owner and president of the Blue Mouse circuit of theatres in Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and Astoria, recently announced that he had let contracts and that work had been begun on a neighborhood house in Tacoma, at Forty-sixth Avenue and Proctor Street.

The theatre will seat approximately 600 persons and will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 when completely finished and ready for use. The general style of architecture, furnishing and decorating to be carried out will be Spanish.

Although no definite name for the new theatre has been selected yet, it is thought possible that it will be called the Blue Mouse Junior. Contracts for the entire furnishing, decorating and equipping have been let to the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle. A Robert Morton orchestral organ will be installed.—Prager.

Malvern, Ark., Will Have Another

Charles Clark, owner and manager of the Royal Theatre, Malvern, Ark., has leased a large brick building here and will convert it into a large modern picture theatre. New theatre equipment will be installed.

Keith's Theatre

Cleveland, Ohio

The Keith Theatre is another of our installations consisting of over twenty-five hundred chairs. Its beauty can only be realized by those who have actually viewed its interior.

Comfort and Beauty Both Essential

WHEN theatre patrons enter your theatre, the first impression they get is its beauty. Their eyes wander from one point of interest to another and all unconsciously make comparison with other theatres. But, however beautiful your theatre may be, if the seating is of poor quality the lack of comfort creates a feeling of restlessness so that performance and attractions cannot be fully enjoyed.

Great care is taken by our Theatre Engineering Department to plan chairs that not only harmonize perfectly with the theatre interior but offer the greatest possible comfort as well. Ease in operation, elimination of squeaks, well proportioned backs and seats and correctly placed arm rests are only a few of the points considered for proper comfort.

A broadside is being prepared showing recent theatre chair installations made by us and also chair suggestions for the refurbishing of old or the entire equipping of new theatres.

Negative after-images have little to do with the movies except in colored projection. They are simply mentioned here that some adequate comprehension may be given of the great complexity of the retinal inertia as it is manifest in visual persistence. It is also largely through a study of these after-images that the nature of the photo-chemical properties of the eye was first brought under observation.

We are now near an answer to the first problem which we set up regarding the movies.

As almost universally projected at present, sixteen separate pictures are flashed on to the screen within one second. With the bright illumination and large pictures now in use the picture has to be still while on the screen. Otherwise nothing but one great, big, rectangular blue would be seen.

In order to accomplish this still projection of the individual pictures to produce the motion picture each picture is jerked before the lens one at a time. A "Maltese Cross" movement, such as is used for the escapement in Swiss watches, pulls the film down picture by picture in the modern projector. That the film may be held rock steady after the intermittent "Maltese Cross" movement has pulled it down it is passed through a tension gate, which holds the film firmly at all times.

The clearness, freedom from flicker and illusion of motion are all furthered by the addition of the shutter. This revolves in the path of light of the projector and is timed so that the large blade of the shutter completely cuts off the light while the intermittent movement is pulling down the next picture. The film is thus not seen while in movement but only after it has come to rest.

Figure 1. Maltese Cross Movement for pulling the pictures before the lens one at a time. The pin wheel revolves steadily, the cam band holding the Maltese cross firmly in position until the pin enters the slot; then the cross is turned 90 degrees. The axle that carries the cross also carries a sprocket which meshes with the openings in the film and jerks it down picture by picture as the pin pulls the cross around one-quarter of a turn.

This shutter cuts the light completely off from the screen while each picture is being pulled into place. Sixteen times in each second the screen is in complete darkness. In addition to this there is a "flicker" blade or two in the shutter which passes in front of the picture and shuts off the light while it is being projected on to the screen. The purpose of this "flicker" blade will be mentioned and explained directly.

In view of the findings of our brief survey of the properties of the eye and especially the manifestations of the retinal inertia it will now be possible for an adequate explanation to be given for the apparent continuity of the movie which is actually intermittent.

Explains Continuity of Movement of Pictures

Retinal persistence is the key. Although the light thrown on the screen is interrupted thirty-two or more times each second, a positive after-image of each picture remains until the next picture is projected in full intensity on the screen. The actual period of darkness on the retina is bridged over by the retinal persistence. This is what gives apparent continuity to the motion picture.

The shutter is a significant factor in giving the pictures clearness by shutting off the movement of the pictures as they are pulled into place. The absence of flicker, however, is also largely due to two other factors, namely, the intensity of illumination used and the "flicker" blade of the shutter.

The duration of the retinal lag and persistence varies according to the intensity of the stimulus, which, in this case, is the brightness of the light. As the intensity of the illumination increases, the period of lag decreases, while the period of persistence increases. Thus with the strong illumination of which the modern electric are furnished, the appearance of continuity is furthered and the intervals of actual darkness are covered by brighter positive after-images than would otherwise be possible.

If the same films are projection apparatus that are now used to project the motion pictures were combined with the old acetylene light source there would be a reappearance of the flicker, due to the lengthened lag and shortened persistence. It is therefore apparent that the bright illumination not only gives clearness and brightness, but also aids in the steadiness, continuity and the elimination of the flicker.

Now to take up the part of the "flicker" blade. Upon first thought it would seem disastrous to introduce any more flicker than absolutely necessary in order to cover each movement of the film. Obviously such is not the case. The reason for this will be made clear by reference to some laboratory experiments.

When a disc composed of two equal black and white sectors is rotated by an electric motor whose speed is under control, three series of phenomena are observed as the speed is increased. With only a few revolutions each second it is still possible for the two sectors to be clearly seen. As the speed is gradually increased, however, there seems to be a light admixture of color with the black and white sectors which now appear to be pulsating slightly. These colors are known as Fechner's colors, after the pioneer in psychological investigation, who first observed them. They are due to peculiarities in the photo-chemical materials in the retina.

Figure 2. Shutter which revolves in front of the lens, interrupting the path of light. The large blade cuts off the light while the film is being pulled down; the smaller blades are the "flicker" blades.

The second phenomenon occurs when the speed of rotation is still further increased. This is known as flicker. The even, pulsating, rhythmical alternation of the black and white observed with the slower speed is replaced by an unsteady wavering flicker which produces a great strain on the eyes. This experimental flicker is similar to the flicker which accompanied the earlier attempts to project motion pictures.

Increasing the speed of rotation still more causes this flicker to become more and more steady, until at last a certain point is reached at which fusion is produced. When this is reached, the unsteady, fluctuating flicker is displaced by a blend of black and white which appears as an even, smooth grey. In contrast to the strain of the flicker, this fusion of the two colors is pleasing to look upon and resting.

Without the "flicker" blade on the shutter of motion picture projector the intervals of light and darkness are so far separated that only the flicker phenomenon is produced. If the speed of the projector were increased so as to overcome this flicker it would result in each picture being shown for so short an interval that there would scarcely be time for each one to overcome the initial lag of the retina. With the addition of this "flicker" blade, however, the number of interruptions is doubled without increasing the speed, and this fusion is made to replace flicker.

It will be recalled that in the experiment just described the resulting fusion was neither white nor black but an intermediate grey. This lessening of intensity by the interruptions follows a definite course which is predictable by Talbot's law.

Direct Current Machinery

Commutation

It can be safely said that the most important part of a direct current motor or generator is the commutator and the size, or rating, of such machinery is limited by the ability of the commutator to function properly.

Figure 57

Commutation is explained as the reversing of the current in an armature coil by means of the brush and commutator segments. It is by no means as simple as would appear from the explanations which follow. Some of the things which affect commutation are:

1. The strength of the current in the armature coils.
2. The speed (R. P. M.) of the armature.
3. The resistance of the brushes.
4. The resistance of the individual armature coils.
5. The inductance of the individual armature coils.
6. The direction and strength of the magnetic flux cut by the coil while under commutation.

Current in Armature Coils

It was pointed out in last week's article that when a loop of wire was revolved in the magnetic field passing between a north and south pole, the side of the conductor sweeping past the north pole had a current induced in it which flowed in a certain direction depending upon the direction in which the wire was moved. This, it was explained, could be determined by the three-finger right-hand rule given. The other side of the coil, however, moved in the opposite direction and so the direction of the current in this conductor was opposite to that passing the other pole. Actually, however, these two currents both flowed in the same direction since the conductors formed a closed loop, the ends of the loop being each connected to commutator segments, which, in turn, were connected to the line.

If this single loop armature be replaced by one composed of a number of smaller loops with their ends connected to the proper commutation segments, a machine similar to the one shown in Fig. 57 will be the result. The current, assuming that the external circuit is closed and the machine is loaded, will enter the negative brush and divide in two parts, equal portions flowing through the commutator coils on each side of the dotted line shown, to meet at the positive brush and form the total current of the machine known as the line current.

The current is the same in each commutator coil since the main current divides equally and all commutator coils on each side of the dotted line are connected in series. This dotted line, by the way, is known as the neutral position. A commutator coil when occupying this neutral position would ordinarily have no voltage induced in it since, at that particular moment, it would be cutting no lines of force. This is better illustrated by Fig. 58, which shows lines of force passing from a north to a south pole and a commutator coil occupying three different positions, a, b and c, in this magnetic field. In position a, the movement of the coil, at that instant, is straight up, as shown by the arrow, and since the strength of the current induced in a coil depends on the number of lines of force cut in a certain time, it will be seen that the lines of force cut, and hence the current, are a maximum. As the coil moves around to position b, it is cutting a smaller number of lines of force and so the current in the coil is decreasing until it reaches position C, where, for an instant, it is cutting no lines of force. Here, naturally, the current has been reduced to zero, since, for all practical purposes, the coil might just as well be stationary. As the coil goes beyond this point, the current increases again until, when occupying the position directly opposite to that of a, the current will be a maximum in the opposite direction.

Low Resistance Brushes

The most logical place to put the brushes is at the neutral point, where the current induced in the coil is zero. Fig. 59 shows three views of the same section of commutator at the neutral line. The direction in which the coils and commutator segments are moving are shown by the large arrow and the neutral position by the dotted vertical line. Arrowheads show the direction of current flow in each coil. In Section A the positive brush is shown touching segment 1 and equal currents are shown flowing from coils a and b into the segment through the low resistance brush and then out to the line. In Section B the armature has moved slightly to the left and the brush is now touching segments 1 and 2. Coil b is now short circuited since the resistance of the brush is very low and hence the currents from coils a and c flow through the brush and out to the line. In Section C the armature has moved still farther and now the brush is only touching segment 2. The currents from coils b and c are now flowing through the brush. It will be seen that the current in coil b has been reversed and is now flowing in the opposite direction to that shown in Section A. As the brush leaves segment 2, however, the self induction of coil b tries to prevent current from flowing into the coil and tries to maintain the flow of current into the brush with the result that sparking occurs as the brush breaks contact with the segment. It is this sparking which causes so much trouble and limits the size of D. C. machines.

High Resistance Brushes

Sparking can be prevented by a number of methods, one of which is to use high resistance brushes. Since carbon has about ten times the resistance of copper, brushes made of this material are used in preference to copper.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

With an emphatically long scale of gradation it carries through to the screen the entire range of tones from highest light to deepest shadow that the cameraman has secured in the negative.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now obtainable in thousand foot lengths, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

The action of a high resistance brush is as follows: Fig. 60-A shows a section of a commutator at the neutral position, moving in the direction indicated by the arrow. When in this position the brush is collecting current from coils a and b through segment 1. The current in coil a is equal to that in b. An instant later the commutator has moved slightly to the left, as shown in Section B. The brush has now started to leave segment 1 and begun to make contact with segment 2. Since coil b is thus short-circuited, current will begin to flow through the brush from coils a and c. If the brush had a very low resistance there would be no current at all in coil b due to the short circuit, but, as it is, the resistance between segment 2 and the brush is so high, due to the small contact area, that only a small current flows through the segment at this place and the rest of the current takes the low resistance path through the coil b. Now the resistance between segment 1 and the brush is much lower due to the comparatively large area of contact so the full current from coil a and the smaller current from coil b both flow through this point into the brush.

As the commutator continues to move to the left the contact area between segment 2 and the brush increases, thus allowing more current to flow through this point and hence less current is left to flow through coil b and so through segment 1. On the other hand, the contact area between segment 1 and the brush decreases and also limits the current flowing through this point. This action progresses as the commutator moves to the left until, as shown in Section C, the contact areas between segments 1 and 2 and the brush are both equal. At this point, coil b is truly short-circuited and there is no current whatever in the coil. As the commutator moves beyond this point, the contact area between segment 2 and the brush is larger than that between segment 1 and the brush (Section D), so that more current flows through the former segment and less through the latter. This continues until the brush is entirely off of segment 1, when the current in this segment has gone through zero and begun to build up in the opposite direction, as shown in Section E.

Shifting the Brushes

Another way of improving that commutation, i. e., reduce sparking, when low resistance brushes are used, is by shifting the brushes forward in the direction of armature rotation in the case of a generator and backward in the case of a motor. The result of such action can be seen by referring to Fig. 61-A, which shows the positive brush of a generator shifted to the left of the neutral line (dotted) in the direction of rotation. Section B shows the commutator moved over until the contact areas of segments 1 and 2 with the brush are both equal so that coil a is short-circuited and no current is flowing through it. But as the commutator continues to move to the left, current will begin to build up in coil a because this coil is now cutting lines of force. It will be recalled that only at the neutral position does the coil cut no lines of force and we have moved the brush over so that the coil whose current is being commutated is moving in a magnetic field (Section C). Hence, as the commutator moves over still farther the current in coil a will increase until, when the brush no longer touches segment 1, the current will have reached its maximum value, in the opposite direction (Section D). The same line of reasoning can be applied to a motor with the exception that in this case the brushes are moved backward instead of forward.

Interpoles

The effect of brush shifting can also be secured by placing a magnetic field near the neutral position so that the coil moving across the neutral line will be commutated while under the influence of this field. This can be accomplished by placing a small electro-magnet over the two neutral points, as shown in Fig. 62. As the load on the machine increases, the current through the armature will, naturally, also increase. It is desirable to have the magnetic field of the interpole magnets increase along with the armature current in order to commutate properly this larger current. For this reason the windings of the interpole magnets are connected in series with the armature and so any increase in armature current will also increase the current through the interpole windings.

New Theatre for Putnam

Charles E. Seder, who, last week, bought the centrally located Hopkins property on Main street, Putnam, Conn., next to the ruins of the recently fire-razed Donahue block, is considering a modern motion picture theatre as a part of the business block he plans to build on the site. The building planned will cost approximately $75,000 and will be one of the finest and most modern business blocks in that place. It is to be of brick, two or three stories high and fireproof throughout. —Agard.

M.P.M.O. Local 306 Has Hearing Before Governor on Projection Restriction

AS a result of a protest entered by M. P. M. O., Local 306, and sponsored by the American Federation of Labor, Legislative Department, at Albany, Governor Alfred E. Smith held a public hearing, at Albany, on May 24, to listen to arguments on the Steingutz bills affecting miniature motion picture projectors, and the use of fire-proof booths. The bills had passed both the Senate and Assembly.

A delegation, chosen by Harry Mackler, president of Local 306 and led by Alfred J. McCosker, of The Morning Telegraph, represented Local 306 at the hearing. Frank H. Richardson, a technical expert, and Edgar T. Stewart, legislative agent for Local 306, were among the speakers who protested the signing of the bill.

The delegation was augmented by Chief Joseph J. Hayes, of the New York Fire Department, and by Joseph McCabe and John F. Dixon, both of whom are connected with the Bureau of Combustibles, of New York City. These gentlemen, together with Mr. Hubert Wynkoop, Consulting Engineer of the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity, delivered telling speeches against the Steingutz measures.

Proponents at the hearing were representatives of the New York State and City Boards of Education, the advertising clubs of the world and representatives of the Y. M. C. A., K. of C. and the Masonic order.

It was obvious throughout the hearing that Governor Smith is of the opinion, and correctly so, that the Steingutz bills would increase the fire hazard and there is every indication he will veto the measures.

overcoming of the flicker has also resulted in lessening to a considerable extent the apparent intensity of illumination in the projected pictures. But through the aid of the intense electric arc the lighting used is so high powered that the resulting fusion is still bright and clear.

The illusion of motion in the photo-play can not be explained in the positive way in which we accounted for the appearance of continuity and the clearness and freedom from flicker. There is still some controversy among psychologists regarding the perception of visual motion in ordinary life. The problem is gradually becoming settled, but in fairness we must review the chief accounts which are current. Then we can not only decide which one best explains the visual perception of motion in the motion picture but we can also see what the motion picture can contribute in a constructive way to these theories.

There are several of these classical theories which must be mentioned in this connection. Eye movements have been used for a long time to account for the perception of motion by the eye. This theory holds that the eye follows moving objects and that we get the impression of motion from the strain and tension on the six muscles that move each eye. There are two major objections, however, which seem to render this theory untenable in its usual form.

Inaccurate Knowledge of Movement of Eye Muscles

In the first place, the more recent experimental work indicates that after all our judgment of the movements of the eye muscles is very inaccurate. If our knowledge of these movements were used as a basis for an interpretation of motion in the external world such motions would be grossly misinterpreted to say the least. A second bit of evidence against the theory is that in addition to our inaccurate knowledge of the eye movements, the movements themselves do not conform to the external motions or objects with any degree of accuracy. This is plainly shown in the illustration of the movements of an eye in following the outline of a circle.

We must look, then, to the nervous and retinal elements of the eye rather than to its musculature for an explanation of the perception of visible motion.

The phenomena of retinal streaming has been used by some psychologists as a partial explanation of the perception of motion by the eye. This starts from the fact that there is an after-image of movement. If you look at a moving stream from a bridge and then turn your attention to the bank of the stream the latter seems to be moving in a direction opposite to that of the stream. This is a negative after-image of movement and its explanation has been attempted by assuming an actual movement on the part of some of the retinal elements. But we have corroborative evidence of this streaming of the retinal elements: in fact, what we know of the actual structure of the retina tends to contradict this assumption. It is quite improbable that the perception of motion is due to an actual and corresponding movement of certain elements in the retina.

Special Sensation to Motion

For some time it was also stated by some psychologists that there is a special sensation of motion. This was done by the earlier introspective psychologists who used the inner experience of motion, which could not be analyzed further, as the basis for their classification of the senses. They did not stop to analyze the physical stimulus to determine whether or not it was unique or a part of other stimuli. They also neglected to search for or indicate the sense organ which is necessary if there is to be a special sense of movement. Obviously as a special sensation movement fails to meet these requirements.

If we analyze movement as a stimulus we find it resolves itself into a series of changes in the stimulation of the retina. Are these changes continuous and steady in ordinary vision or are they seen only in certain progressive stages as in the motion-picture film? In other words, is the stimulation which produces the movement in the motion picture the same or different from that of daily life? We shall have an answer to this in a moment.

The eye is constantly in motion; it is never at rest for more than a few hundredths of a second at a time. Ordinarily we are completely unaware of these constant movements of the eye, but they are present and have been accurately observed and studied in detail in the laboratory. In reading a line of print, for example, the eye does not progress evenly and smoothly, but makes five or six irregular jumps.

Vision Is Momentary in Character

Partial blindness characterizes the eye during these periods of their motion. For a time it was thought the eye was completely blind while in motion. It has been proved now that during these periods it is not completely anæsthetic, although it senses only a vague, indefinite, hazy blur at most.

Thus in ordinary vision, although the moving object may be progressing at a uniform rate, the actual retinal stimulation is jerky, due to the incessant movement of the eye. Ordinary vision is essentially momentary in character and cross-sections motion in various phases, just as the motion picture camera photographs progressive phases of the action. In either instance there is no difference between the perception of motion. The motion itself is not seen. What is seen is the change in position and a blur which may be looked upon as the sensory index of the change.

The perception of motion, both actual and pictured, is largely a matter of apperception. The movement between the positions actually seen is supplied by the mind from its storehouse of past experiences. The successive pictures shown or scenes perceived serve as a framework along which the mind can fill in the idea of motion. The apparent motion results not alone from the successive stimulation in advancing position but includes the synthesizing activity of the higher mental processes. The motion picture is no exception to real life in this respect.

And neither is the perception of motion by the eye an exception in the filling-in activities of imagery and expectation. The same filling-in activity of the mind is at work in reading. Only a very few of the letters in any line are really clearly seen, the remainder are supplied by the mind's integration. It is for this reason that the inexperienced proof-reader passes over error after error; in ordinary perception the eye touches only the high spots, the mind does not rest to round out and complete the awareness of objects and activities.

This is an actual record of the eye pauses in reading a line of print by a fairly efficient reader. All out vision is characterized by these momentary fixations of the eye.

Photograph, taken by Professor Stratton, of the movement of an eye in following the outline of a circle

Emphasized again, we find these inner activities at work in the perception of depth, or nearness-farness, in the three dimensional objective world and in the flat two dimensional world of the photoplay.

The Third Dimension

Our ordinary environment extends not only to the right and left and up and down, but some objects are also seen close to us while others are far away. This nearness-farness is depth, or third dimension. Just how we perceive depth was one of the first problems to receive the attention of the early experimental psychologists.

The main criteria which we have to assist us in the perception of depth take issue from the fact that our vision is normally binocular. Two eyes make us much more accurate in the perception of the third dimension than would otherwise be the case.

Two brief examples will suffice to indicate the role of the second eye. Close one eye and glance around your room. You will notice a loss of the plastic appearance of the furniture. It all looks flat and as if it were in one plane. Try walking around with the same eye closed and find out how inaccurate is your perception of distance.

With one eye still closed attempt to touch your index fingers together about a foot in front of your eyes. See! You missed by from one to three inches, maybe more. Try doing the same task now with both eyes open. You will bring your fingers together on the first trial.

There are two prominent ways in which the fact that our vision is normally binocular contributes to our perception of depth. In the first place there is the matter of convergence. When looking at near objects the muscles on the nasal side of the eyeballs contract so that both eyes may be directed toward the objects. With far objects it is the muscles on the temporal side that contract. There is thus a measure of convergence in terms of muscle strain.

More important than convergence is the disparity of the retinal images. Since the eyes are separated by a few inches, each one sees a given object at a slightly different angle from the other. You can easily demonstrate this by holding a closed book at arm's length in front of you with the back of the book toward you. Look at it first with one eye and then with the other. The difference between the two views is marked indeed, and in each case the appearance lacks plasticity or depth.

When the same book is seen in the same position by the same eyes simultaneously a different appearance is noted. The two widely disparate views have fused into one which has depth and relief.

This principle of disparity is used in the ordinary stereoscope. The two pictures on the card are taken from a slightly different angle. When viewed through the stereoscope the prismatic lenses bend the rays of light so that the pictures are seen by each eye as if they were of a single object in front of them. Since the pictures have the requisite disparity the resulting appearance is one of a single object in clear relief.

It is not known how it is that these two images which are physiologically different still combine to form a perception that possesses the quality of depth. The important thing, however, is that such is the fact. And in this we again have an example of the integrating activities of the mind.

ative service, greatly reduce the risk, worry and maintenance expense of the producer and distributor and certainly add to the enjoyment of the exhibitor and public.

The print to the theatre is as important as the cartridge to the gun.

The Globe Installs Robert-Morton

A new Robert-Morton pipe organ was installed in the Globe theatre, Kansas City, this week. The organ, which cost $20,000, will be used for motion pictures, as the theatre is a combination house. Installation was unusually difficult as there was no provision for an organ when the theatre, which seats about 2,500 was built. Combined with the usual organ stops are a large number of "orchestral" effects.—True

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO.

Presents its Favorite Sons
in a

SAD, SORROWFUL SERIES OF STANZAS ENTITLED

"A NIGHT OF HORROR

or,

Kayoed by Oswald, the Chemist"

SCENE—Projection room interior.

TIME—Any time between shows.

PLACE—Hoosthis Theatre, Wheresthis,
U. S. A.

CHARACTERS { Twelve year old Simplex
Newly installed Simplex

NOTE

The manager of this theatre in keeping with the general tendency toward the creation of a two-machine projection room has just added another Simplex projector to his equipment.

New Simplex: "Well, Old Kid, you sure handed me a cackle last week when you told me about the confident young striplings who thought they'd pull you off the old throne by your whiskers."

Old Simplex: "Yeah—that was hot stuff. But don't get the idea that life during my twelve years here has been one long sweet dream. You remember I was tellin' you what a regular feller Jack, our Operator, is?"

New Simplex: "Sure, you don't hafta tell me that, I knew that Jack understood his business the first time he oiled me up."

Old Simplex: "Oh say! talkin' about oilin' up, I must tell you about the time that Jack went on a vacation, and he put a lad named Oswald in his place while he went away. Now this Oswald guy was a pretty good operator, but he was one of those curious birds who are never satisfied to let well enough alone. And I guess that Jack knew Oswald's failings, for he said to him before he went away—'Oswald,' he said, 'everything is alright. I've locked up the screw drivers and pliers and all the other tools so that you won't be tempted to perform any operations. Now leave everything as I've got it, only oil the old bird up every day and everything will be alright.'

"And it was, until the third day, when Oswald came into the coop with a bottle of dark red liquid. He walked over to me and after draining out my intermittent he pumped my whole system full of that evil smelling red fluid. Then he said to me—'Simplex, Old Kid, that Simplex Oil that you've been absorbing all these years is the bunk. Take it from me, it's just being boosted to make big profits for Simplex dealers. Now I've just given you a shot of oil that's my own concoction, and believe me you're gonna run like a top after it gets into your works.'

"And I did. It wasn't bad while I was running, but about an hour after the show, after everybody had gone home I began feeling a sorta numb sensation creeping into my joints and one by one my gears and bearings got stiffened up just like they were paralyzed and that horrible numb feeling worked right into my intermittent and FINALLY FROZE ME UP SOLID.

"Oh! boy, what an awful night I spent. Along about noon time the next day, this squirrel food Oswald came in and stepping over to me he gave the crank a jerk. My one impulse was to yell out to him that I was frozen up but I couldn't talk and there I was. I was afraid that Oswald would insist on forcing me to run and strain every one of my parts but he didn't.

"Well, to make a long story short, this alleged oil had hardened inside of me just like so much lard, and Oswald had to take me apart to soften and clean this mess out of my system. And the Manager lost an afternoon show on account of it.

"Jack heard about it when he got back and bawled Oswald out to a finish. 'Don't you know there's nothing better than Simplex Oil for a Simplex you poor nut' he shouted at Oswald. 'When did you ever get the idea that your home brew shellac was better than Simplex Oil?'

"'Why' sez Oswald, 'that oil of mine ran perfect in my motor boat engine'—and then Jack threw the pliers at him."

New Simplex: "Hot dog! That was some experience."

Old Simplex: "Oh, but you aint heard the half of it. Just wait 'til I tell you my next one."

UPON the shoulders of Alvin Wyckoff, supervising cinematographer for Fred Niblo's great production of "Captain Applejack" for Louis B. Mayer and Metro, fell part of the responsibility for three quarters of a million dollars and the reputation of a famous director. The Louis B. Mayer organization realized that Mr. Wyckoff's photography must be in keeping with the excellence of the story, the cast, and of Mr. Niblo's superb direction. The producers also realized that a cinematographer's artistry is largely entrusted to the laboratory developing the negative.

It is extremely gratifying to STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES that this institution should be selected for doing this work and that the result has satisfied so eminent a director as Mr. Niblo and so capable a cinematographer and exacting technician as Mr. Wyckoff. It is also gratifying to us to have a part in bringing to the public a picture that will add so much to Mr. Mayer's and Mr. Niblo's achievements for the screen.

A STATEMENT—

TO THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR:

Owing to the wide-spread publicity which attended the recent signing of the contract between Truart Film Corporation and myself for the production of feature-length comedies, and the various reports in the daily press of the country concerning this contract, I desire to announce, on behalf of Truart Film Corporation, The Vitagraph Company of America and myself, that under my present existing contract with The Vitagraph Company, there remain two two-reel comedies to be produced of the standard that I have made heretofore for that company.

If earnest effort and the sincere desire to give you worthwhile attractions count for aught, then, I honestly believe that the two comedies still to be produced under my present contract will be superior to any I have ever made before.

The full details regarding my future plans of production will be announced by Truart Film Corporation immediately upon the completion of my Vitagraph contract.

Dear Mr. Lichtman:-

I thought it would interest you to know that, after carefully scrutinizing the line-up of your productions for the next year, I was very glad to book them one-hundred percent for my theaters, Garden and Alhambra.

I feel, with the well-known plays and novels which you are producing into pictures and the lavish production policy which you have mapped out, that you have a great line-up of box-office attractions.

In booking these productions one-hundred percent I also realize that I can depend largely on your vast experience and knowledge, which undoubtedly qualifies you to determine what is and what is not a box-office asset.

At any rate, I am certain that I have made a contract which will be a profitable one for my theaters and I thought you would be pleased to know about my action; therefore this letter to you.

Wishing you all success and with kind personal regards,
I am

What the Boston press thinks of "THE AFFAIRS of LADY HAMILTON"

THE BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER

"THE AFFAIRS OF LADY HAMILTON" is refreshingly different from most of the film vouchsafed to us. We are not forced to squirm in our seats while a youth of unalloyed valor and unimpeachable standards wins a too-sweet lass after ridiculously exaggerated hardships.

"Quite on the contrary, the hero of this film is a real hero, lifted out of history. He is none other than his Lordship Horatio Nelson, admiral extraordinaire. His morals are not above reproach. He doesn't look as though he stepped from an advertisement for Kippy Clothes. In fact, during the latter part of the film, he appears minus an arm and an eye.

"Yet, thus handicapped, he proves a conquering lover."

Says

THE BOSTON TELEGRAM

"A novel picture is 'THE AFFAIRS OF LADY HAMILTON,' and one which will linger long in the minds of those who are fortunate enough to see it."

BOSTON EVENING TRANSCRIPT

"The film is untrue to history, but increased thereby in dramatic intensity. Costumes and setting create an atmosphere of reality and a thoroughly exceptional cast contributes a series of brilliant impersonations.

"The producers were assuredly fortunate in their choice of Liane Haid to play the adventuress. Miss Haid not only possesses a radiant beauty; she has the gift of being now vulgar—almost uncouth, and now reserved, quietly dignified. Through her whole characterizations runs an underlying strain of coarseness such as must have existed in the nature of the real Lady Hamilton.

"The film as a whole reminds the brutally realistic drawings of William Hogarth. There is the same pitiless exposure of human passions in the raw; the same stark pessimism; the same ill-fleshed gusto. Imagine an edition of Roderick Random in which a score of graphic passages are retained verbatim, reeking with the author's philosophy; but in which matter-of-fact summaries by an unimaginative hand gloss over inconvenient transitions. Such an anomaly would be comparable to 'THE AFFAIRS OF LADY HAMILTON.'"

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

"Beauty—alluring, ensnaring, dazzling, coupled with ingenuity and a bit of womanly intuition—that is the secret of success for any woman. If you don't believe it, hie yourself to the Park Theatre and see the greatest tribute ever paid to woman and her ability in 'THE AFFAIRS OF LADY HAMILTON.'"

"Liane Haid, living up to her reputation as the most beautiful woman in London, personifies ambition and attainment of desire, showing that with persistence and the perseverance, although not always of the right motives, the ultimate goal can be reached. Lady Hamilton certainly did reach the pinnacle of success, when in the course of the picture, she climbed the lofty heights from a humble beginning as the daughter of a humble and obscure grocer to become the idol of the English court and the Joan of Arc of England.

"If anybody ever tells you it is always a man's brains that saves an empire, tell him he's wrong. You'll agree if you see this picture, positively the only picture where rebellions are realistically typified. And as for mob scenes, you never saw so many people in your life.

"The picture is well worth seeing. What with impassioned love scenes, soul-stirring moments and thrilling episodes, there is not much more a picture could possess."

The Greatest Love story of Modern History THE AFFAIRS OF LADY HAMILTON"

What the Trade Press Thinks of It

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: This production brings to the screen one of the most beautiful women, photographically, that we have seen for some time, in the person of Liane Haid, who appears in the name role, Lady Hamilton. Brilliant scenes of court life, huge mob scenes, the Battle of Trafalgar, and the like, make up a fascinating pageantry of historical romance, with more than the usual amount of lavish and massive sets . . . we distinctly enjoyed this picture.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: The story is particularly fascinating and cannot help but entertain, for it involves a romance that possesses charm, beauty and sincerity, and grips because it is convincingly interpreted by an unusually talented cast of players who knew what they were doing at every turn. The settings are truly massive in every sense, with the Battle of Trafalgar presenting a climax that is far superior to any ever reenacted.

FILM DAILY: Splendidly cast and lavishly produced. It deals in a spectacular manner with that period of England's history made famous by Nelson's victory over Napoleon. The cast throughout is particularly capable.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: A plot rich in historical associations, enhanced by extremely fine photography and the polished work of an exceptionally clever cast, is embodied in this picture. Likely to prove a financial success.

EXHIBITORS HERALD: Excellent screen entertainment and quite above the average. The story of Lady Hamilton and her conquests is a remarkable one . . . it moves along swiftly to the rather unusual and startling end.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: Excellent. In the cities and large towns . . . "The Affairs of Lady Hamilton" should prove unconditionally successful.

MORNING TELEGRAPH: This picture is of the stupendous type. Scenes are frequent and large, and elaborate sets are used. The tale has as its foundation the influence of Lady Hamilton in connection with Lord Nelson, and the consequent result for England.

Not mentioning other pictures here's a report of a showman in the Exhibitor's Herald.

Excellent entertainment with plenty of action, but patrons are tired of so many ancient costume pictures. Give us shorter features, more modern. There is an extreme shortage of good comedy-dramas. General patronage. Poor attendance. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minnesota.

To meet the demand of the public for shorter features based on more modern stories, Thomas H. Ince has produced for current release three corking comedy-dramas

"Slander the Woman"

Holubar's First National Picture Starring
Dorothy Phillips Is Vigorous Story of Northwest

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Built on the theme so aptly described by the title, "Slander the Woman," Allen Holubar's newest First National production starring Dorothy Phillips is a vigorous drama of the Canadian Northwest. It shows how easily slander based on purely circumstantial evidence can blast an innocent woman's good name and leave her with practically no means of redress.

It is a finely made production with many dramatic moments, is beautifully photographed, and, with the opening scene in a skating rink and with practically all the rest of the picture in the snow-covered outdoors, it has an atmosphere that should be especially appealing during the coming warm weather. A feature of note is the fact that unlike the great majority of stories set in the Northwest there is no mention of the Mounted Police.

A pretty romance involving the woman's fight between her hatred for the judge's unjust treatment and her growing love for him, a strong secondary theme showing the futility of trusting to circumstantial evidence, several powerful dramatic scenes and capable acting. Dorothy Phillips is a type finely suited to the role of the woman, gives an excellent performance and elicits strong sympathy. Lewis Dayton as the judge is a handsome chap but at times seems lacking in forcefulness. Ynez Seabury gives a striking performance as an Indian girl and makes this subordinate role stand out prominently. The remainder of the cast, including such players as Robert Anderson, George Siegmann, Robert Schable, Rosemary Theby and Cyril Chadwick, all give good account of themselves.

Motion Picture News

The Step-Child

AND now we have with us the industry's step-child—the summer season.

And, as usual, the step-child is in for at least three months of spanking and starvation. The entire producing and distributing cohorts are united and determined to administer the customary walloping.

We make the sweeping statement offhand. If producers and distributors think otherwise we shall be pleased to record their intentions.

Just a few weeks ago, while the weather was cool, almost wintry, in fact, we ventured the opinion with a prominent producer-distributor that business was good.

"Maybe," he replied. "But it will be on the rocks soon."

"Why?"

"Why?" he repeated disdainfully. "Why, the summer, of course."

Of course. It's an accepted tradition. Anyone is a fool to raise the question, a theorist to argue it.

It's a confirmed state of ill-health, a misery looked forward to with a certain sense of self-satisfaction, a splendid excuse for devoted invalidism.

All of which may be all right for the invalid himself; but how about the rest of the family?

Last week we had a talk with Balaban and Katz of Chicago. Their theatre investments now total $1,400,000 in that city. Their budget is very heavy. They can't afford invalidism for three months, and undoubtedly they don't intend to.

This is an extreme case, but there are many situations like it; and anyway, the principle holds good all the way down the line—from $1,400,000 to $1,000,000, and to $100,000 and to the $50,000 investment and the $5,000 investment in the small town.

A round billion dollars worth of theatre property has got to be carried for three months on a starvation diet—if, as is customary, all the good pictures are to be held out till Fall.

And one billion dollars means pretty nearly the entire motion picture industry.

Is it at all wise to impose this strain? Is it necessary?

Frank Newman has come to New York appalled at the outlook for drab summer pictures and mindful of his heavy and unlesened carrying expense. He stands ready to advertise, to hustle in every way as never before. But he must have meat to live on.

Undoubtedly he'll get it, too—some way.

But how about the other fellow everywhere—the eighty percenter? How will he subsist?

Let's say that it isn't altogether a state of mind—the summer slump. People do stay away from theatres—but only because of greater attractions. They can always be attracted one way or another and there's no sense in driving them away from theatres with bills that make the newspapers wonder what's wrong with motion pictures.

Let's say it's a fifty-fifty situation—fifty against the theatre, but also fifty with it if good attractions can be had. And let's tackle it in at least a fifty-fifty way—fifty from the producers and fifty of renewed effort on the exhibitor's part.

How, for one thing, about the good pictures of the season just ending—the ones that get kicked out of the way by the fast processes of distribution? Millions of people have missed them. Why not some effort here—for the smaller houses; and for the bigger ones. Who will dig down in his treasure chest?

Who will come forward?

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

IT was fitting and proper that Famous Players should pay homage to Ernest Torrence who, in the words of Robert T. Kane at a luncheon tendered him at the Hotel Astor Monday noon, was eulogized as the "best character actor on the screen." Mr. Torrence contributed more than any other player toward the success of "The Covered Wagon," and he aided mightily in making "Tol'able David" a memorable achievement. Time was when Ernest Torrence was practically unknown. He had dedicated his life to the art of Make-Believe—and though he had contributed years of experience to the stage his talent was never appreciated. He realized the opportunities of the silversheet—that it offered him the BIG CHANCE to make a name for himself. That he has made that name is evident in the encomiums that have heaped upon him ever since his art flashed over the film horizon in "Tol'able David."

Mr. Torrence made a modest address. He spoke of the difficult task of breaking into pictures. He came to Hollywood with a reputation of being a "dirty dog heavy"—to quote his own words—and was rejected as a "type" by more than one producer. But Jesse Lasky appreciated the slumbering fires of emotion and passion in this man, and what he has done for "The Covered Wagon" is now catalogued among the archives of history—screen history—a performance which shows character acting at his best.

Ernest Torrence isn't a type, though most people with snap judgment would select him as such—because of his height and features and expressions. If he has appeared great as a heavy, he has appeared equally great as a comedian. His villainy in "Tol'able David" and "Broken Chains" is finely contrasted with his comedy portrayal in "The Covered Wagon."

Such a gifted actor as Torrence needs to be given the big characters of the drama and fiction. He is very enthusiastic over the adaptation of William J. Locke's story, "The Mountebank," in which he will assume the title role. But before he takes up this task he will be ideally cast as Cousin Egbert in a new picturization of "Ruggles of Red Gap."

Hail to Ernest Torrence! Famous is fortunate in having him under its banner. He enriches the screen and its canvases with his emotion which can be suppressed or volcanic. His few appearances are unforgettable. There is only a handful worthy of being mentioned in the same breath—Fawcett, Roberts and Chaney.

FRANCIS J. FORD, famous explorer, motion picture producer, director, screen writer and actor, sailed May 29 from San Francisco on the S.S. Ventura of the Oceanic Line, for the South Sea Islands.

Mr. Ford is in quest of jungle, cannibal, wild animal and under-water photographs for travelogue, educational and adventure films. He is going alone in the wilds with a motion picture camera to hunt wild tribes of natives and unfrequented spots never before pictured, accompanied only by a servant, savage carrier boys and a guard of soldiers.

A servant will join him at Samoa and he will charter a "tramp" steamer at Pango-Pango to cruise among the thousands of unknown and uncharted islands in the South Pacific. Mr. Ford will visit Honolulu, Samoa, Fiji Islands, New Hebrides, Solomon Islands, New Guinea and Borneo. He plans to be gone six months.

"ANNA CHRISTIE," the Eugene O'Neil drama which a year ago won the Pulitzer prize as the best play of the season, will reach the screen bearing the trade-mark of Thomas H. Ince. This vigorous document has been called the best which the gifted playwright ever wrote. It is a play of sailor-folk and was capitably acted by Pauline Lord in the title role—assisted by a most competent cast.

On the screen the role will be interpreted by Blanche Sweet who has shown herself capable of endowing it with plenty of emotional fervor. As a picture it should be enthusiastically received not only in America but in England. The play is now running in London and meeting with real success.

FRED KLEY, studio manager of the William Fox West Coast Studios, has left for New York City, where he will attend an important conference with Mr. Fox and other executives of the Corporation.

Mr. Kley will take with him tentative plans for construction work on the new $3,500,000 studio to be erected by the Fox Corporation on the recently acquired four hundred and fifty acre tract, located between Westwood and Beverly Hills.

According to present plans the new studio buildings and stages will be of Mission type, and embrace the newest designs and ideas in modern motion picture studio construction. It is the purpose of the Fox concern to make these studios one of the show places of the Pacific Coast.

During the eastern conference, Mr. Kley will perfect details concerning the production of many important pictures, the rights for which have recently been acquired by Fox.

It is not unlikely the Western Fox executive will return with a long list of newly acquired plays, and contracts for additional stars.

Preliminary work on the new studios will be commenced as soon as Mr. Kley returns from the East, several weeks hence.

WE had an opportunity to score one for the original scripts in the questionnaire being distributed in behalf of the Author's League. An original story written for the screen will win more plaudits nine times out of ten than the adaptations, from best sellers—provided the scenarist knows his technique and what constitutes situation, climax and characterization.

THE Paramounters who took a journey to the Coast recently with stop-over privileges in Chicago and New Orleans, have returned to New York. The party included S. R. Kent, John D. Clark, Eugene Zukor, E. E. Shauer, Henry Salisbury, A. M. Botsford, C. E. McCarthy, Claude Saunders, Mel Shauer, G. B. J. Frawley and George M. Spidell.

THOMAS DIXON has, to all appearances, anticipated one of the topics of conversation which will be aired before the International Congress of Motion Picture Arts this week—that of the direct contact between an author and the production of his script. There has been considerable argument along this idea for several years—ever since the works of celebrated authors were found to be entirely changed in character in their transference to the screen. Certainly a writer is proud of his subject matter, particularly when it is widely acclaimed as a rich and interesting story. But more than one writer has registered keen disappointment to discover after the picturization that the celluloid version of his tale bears little relationship with the original.

Thomas Dixon is carrying on the good work that was first started by Rupert Hughes. He has written "The Mark of the Beast," and because he wanted it to reach the screen just as he wrote it, he also attended to the adaptation and direction. Of course Dr. Dixon has had considerably more experience with pictures than the average author. We all know him as the author of "The Clansman," from which was adapted "The Birth of a Nation." But because a writer is inexperienced in screen production is no reason why he cannot make plain to his producers that his story must be screened just as it is written.

The author of "The Mark of the Beast" has also pointed the way for the elimination of extraneous footage. He believes that any story could be told in five reels. Certainly his newest effort is proof positive that situation and climax can be clearly defined within the regulation length. There is not a scene of wasted footage in the entire picture. What is told carries a spontaneity of action and a compactness which heightens the plot and gives it vigor.

The idea behind "The Mark of the Beast" is really unimportant compared to the high quality of workmanship with which it has been prepared. A story can be told in so many scenes and no more. When unimportant details and all the whys and wherefores of character movement are added the picture loses its substance and vitality. There are very few stories which cannot be told in five reels.

MARION DAVIES, gone abroad for a few months, has arrived in London to attend the opening of "Little Old New York" at the Empire theatre there. She will go to France and Italy before coming back to the States. Which reminds us that there is quite a little trans-Atlantic commuting going on. Charles H. Duell, President of Inspiration Pictures, accompanied by Director Henry King, Lillian Gish and other members of "The White Sister" cast, is home from Italy, whither, as we have already recorded, George Fitzmaurice has taken Lionel Barrymore, Barbara La Marr, and Bert Lytell to film "The Eternal City" in Rome for Samuel Goldwyn.

BEN BLUMENTHAL, the discoverer of Pola Negri, sailed on the Majestic last Saturday for Europe. He will look over the foreign products with an eye upon the best of them for American importation.

WILL ROGERS has left the Follies to begin film activities again under the Pathe banner. His place in the Ziegfeld show is taken by Eddie Cantor. The banqueters of Broadway and Fifth Avenue will surely miss the cowboy comedian whose impromptu speeches have earned him a wide popularity as well as considerable coin of the realm. With the cry being raised for shorter features, the Rogers three reel studies should find a welcome place on any exhibitor's program. Did any of you book "Fruits of Faith"? If not, why not?

Which brings us to Forest Halsey, a writer for the screen, who has just finished a play entitled "Foam," in collaboration with Ben Blazer which Sam Harris will bring out in the Fall.

HOOT GIBSON wires us about the latest Gibson special attraction. It is entitled Lois Charlotte Gibson. Feature size? Six and three-quarter pounds. First appearance? Angelus Hospital, Los Angeles. Hoot says the baby is a humdinger and will knock 'em dead as a box-office attraction a few years hence. Mother and child are doing nicely. Mrs. Gibson was formerly Helen Johnson, one of the members of Pat Rooney's vaudeville team who was playing at the Orpheum theatre in Los Angeles at the time the cowboy star began his rapid fire matrimonial campaign. It was a case of love at first sight. The wedding took place a year ago.

LAST Friday Bill Yearsley was given the merry send-off by his First National associates who had gathered for the occasion at high noon at the Astor. Bill is bound for the rippling brook and the sweet winds of the mountains where he will take things easy until Fall.

Bill is convalescing from an operation and it is thought that harpooning the trout for the summer will do him worlds of good.

Among those who gathered around the festive board were Richard A. Rowland, general manager, Floyd Brockell, Bruce Johnson, H. O. Schwalbe, Sam Spring, Charles Pinkerton, Worthy Butts, Hawley Turner, Bob Dexter and Lynde Denig.

Mr. Dexter will be in charge of the advertising and publicity department until the chief's return, while Mr. Denig will supervise trade, newspaper and general publicity.

With these dog days upon us, we envy Bill out there among the wide, open spaces.

Cohen Attends Meeting of T.O.C.C.

Accorded Privilege of Floor Simply as Member, Declares President O'Reilly

FOR the first time since the Washington Convention, Sydney Cohen attended a meeting of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York this week. The following statement was issued June 6 by National Headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. in connection with Mr. Cohen's appearance at the Chamber meeting:

"National President Sydney S. Cohen of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America brought an interesting message on Exhibitor Organization to the members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce at the regular meeting of that organization at the Hotel Astor yesterday.

"There was a large attendance and Mr. Cohen was enthusiastically received when he was presented to the members by Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Chamber.

"The National President told of the activities of the organization in different parts of the country, the manner in which the welfare of the exhibitor was being cared for and his business protected.

"Speaking of the recent convention at Chicago, he congratulated the Theatre Owners of New York State for the excellent manner in which they responded to the National call and the highly representative delegation which appeared for the exhibitors from New York State.

"He especially commended the members of the Chamber of Commerce in that delegation for the zeal, earnestness and enthusiasm they displayed at the Chicago meeting. He expressed himself as being much gratified over the reception accorded the Theatre Owners of New York State by the Theatre Owners from all over the country at the National Convention.

"He expressed the hope that whatever differences of opinion may have existed in the past, that all of these would be resolved in the light of the necessity for compact organization in order that all opposing influences within and outside the industry might be met and the interests of theatre owner cared for in every possible manner."

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, issued this answer to the foregoing statement:

"I am surprised that the Publicity Department of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America should attempt to use the appearance of Sydney S. Cohen at one of the regular meetings of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce to create the impression that the New York organization has again joined the ranks of the national body, under the leadership of Mr. Cohen.

"Neither Mr. Cohen's appearance nor his speech had any political significance whatsoever. Mr. Cohen has been a member of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce for over three years and, although this has been his first appearance at a meeting since the Washington Convention, as a member he was accorded the privilege of the floor and given a respectful hearing. No attempt was made by any of the members to retaliate for the treatment received by the New York delegation at the memorable Washington Convention, when the members from New York were refused the privilege of the floor."

"The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce is a business organization with no quarrels or political affiliations, and any attempt to divert its course from its well defined policies is simply throwing dust in the eyes of the industry."

First National Is Reported Considering Purchase of Allen Assets

IMPORTANT developments have taken place in connection with negotiations for the disposal by sale of the assets of Allen Theatres, Limited, Toronto, comprising 36 moving picture theatres throughout the Dominion as a result of the visit to Toronto and Ottawa of President Lieber of Associated First National Exhibitors, New York, and John G. Von Herberg of Seattle, a director of First National.

An important conference took place at Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, last Saturday, when Harry Brouse, owner of two Ottawa theatres, rose from a sick bed after treatment for more than eight weeks for blindness, in order to discuss matters with the First National officials. Mr. Brouse is heavily interested in First National himself, being a franchise holder for Eastern Canada and involved in the operation of Associated First National Exhibitors (Eastern Canada), Limited, with offices in Toronto, Montreal and St. John, N. B.

The result of the Ottawa conference was not announced but it was stated that President Lieber had returned to New York for the purpose of calling a meeting of First National directors to consider definitely the purchase outright of all Allen Theatre assets from coast to coast. For some time past, Jule and J. J. Allen, Toronto, had had First National theatre franchises for all but one of their houses in Eastern Canada while they had been directing First National distribution in Western Canada themselves. The one exception in the East was Allen's Regent theatre, Ottawa, where Mr. Brouse's two theatres and the theatre of Ben Stapleton already held First National rights. It is understood that the Allen Theatres, Limited, owes quite an amount to First National.

The Allen houses are now operated under the direction of G. T. Clarkson, Toronto, a trustee authorized by court order, following bankruptcy proceedings. The assets of all the theatres were recently offered for sale on the open market but the tenders received were not considered satisfactory. A rumor that the theatres had been purchased by Goldwyn was officially denied by Mr. Clarkson a few days ago.

Laboratories Protected by New York Law

Motion picture film laboratories in New York State are now to be protected by law in case of non-payment for work done by the laboratories in printing and developing film. The bill was introduced in the New York State Senate by Senator Levy on March 7. It amends the State lien law, to the end that it gives the laboratory a lien on all positive and negative film and prints in their possession until such time as payment is made for work done as well as material furnished. It will be known as Chapter 609 of the Laws of 1923.

Naked Truth Dinner Report Shows Profit

According to announcement of Thomas C. Wiley, chairman of the entertainment committee of the A. M. P. A., having in charge the Naked Truth dinner, that event netted a profit of $434.75. The receipts show 291 tickets disposed of at $10 each and 70 tickets at $8 for a total of $3,470.00. Against these were disbursements amounting to $3,035.75.

Connick's Report on F.P.-L. Put in Record

Document Written in 1919 Contains "Mr. Zukor's Plan to Sell His Product Direct to the People"

THE official record of the hearings on the Federal Trade Commission charges against the Famous Players-Lasky group contains a portion of the report made in 1919 by H. D. H. Connick, vice-president of the American International Corporation, to Kuhn, Loeb & Company.

It was upon Connick's investigation as a basis that Kuhn, Loeb underwrote the $10,000,000 preferred stock issue for Famous Players-Lasky, the purpose of the stock issue, according to Connick's testimony at the hearing, being theatre acquisition.

Examination of the record shows that sections of the Connick report were placed in evidence on May 3 by the Government as an important part of its case and the document marked Commission's Exhibit No. 46.

The Connick report is a lengthy affair. It is entitled "Survey of the Motion Picture Industry with Particular Reference to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation," and one of its sections is headed: "Mr. Zukor's Plan to Sell His Product Direct to the People."

Under the latter heading, Mr. Connick wrote in part: "Mr. Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has developed a plan to increase the earnings and percentage of profit of the corporation. Should his plan be carried out, they will become the most important exhibitors of motion pictures in America as well as the leading producers and distributors.

"As indicated before, the largest returns of the industry result from exhibiting the pictures to the public, not from manufacturing them. The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Sales Department estimates that the gross annual return of the 15,000 American theatres during 1919 will be $800,000,000 and that the total amount the producers will receive in the form of sales and leases of film and accessories will not be over $90,000,000. It is apparent to any one who has had theatrical experience that this is not an equitable division. Producers claim that even when full consideration is given to the extra cost of the large orchestra and attractions required of the picture houses, they should receive from 22 to 25% of the gross theatre income.

"It is a fact that in all districts the smaller houses follow in the footsteps of the larger ones of the district in exhibiting pictures. When the principal house exhibits a Pickford film the smaller house will endeavor to show it to their patrons for a smaller admission charge about three weeks later, they leasing the film at a reduced rental.

"Mr. Zukor's project takes full advantage of the practice. He plans to build or acquire about fifty theatres, properly located in the important cities of the country and several additional ones in the theatrical district of Broadway and in the minor theatrical districts of this city, and sell his product direct to the people and take the resulting profits. He also plans to make business connections with the principal motion picture theatres circuit owners in the vicinity of each of his large theatres to the effect that they take his pictures immediately after the key theatres finish with the first run. In these key theatres it is planned to give the highest type of motion picture exhibitions with a large, well-conducted orchestra playing good music.

$600,000 Drop Recorded in Admission Taxes

A DROP of $600,000 from the previous month in admission taxes collected from theatres by the Government was recorded for April, according to figures announced by the Internal Revenue Department. The total was $6,051,266.58, which, however, was greater than the tax collected in April, 1922, when the total reached $5,439,014.29.

Capacity tax collections for April this year were $18,943.16. The March figure was $15,926.84 and the April, 1922, total $18,010.05.

"This circuit of key theatres will enable his corporation to dominate the motion picture industry of this country, and, at the same time, increase its percentage of profits. It will make for economies in the cost of exhibiting the pictures and decrease the cost of sales, but the principal returns will come from the profits of the operation of the theatres and the tremendous exploitation value that the exhibition in these key theatres will give the individual films. Mr. Zukor claims that experience gained from theatres they at present operate shows that this exploitation is reflected by much larger returns from film rentals.

"It is not possible, because of lack of data, to estimate with any degree of accuracy the percentage of profit that would result from operating this system, of key theatres. Before this estimate can be made, it will be necessary to have the details regarding the ground lease for each site so that the yearly rental and the amount necessary to set aside to amortize the theatres can be determined, also the seating capacity, prices of admission, first cost of the building and the expense of operating the house.

"From an examination of such records of theatre operation as are available and assuming that the sum required to amortize the building will not exceed 2% of its cost, and that the amount of the ground rental per annum does not exceed $30 per seat, and with prices of admission ranging upward to 60c. a preliminary guess has been made that a theatre with 3,100 seats will return at least 25% on the investment in addition to the usual first run rental charge in their district for the use of the films. That this 25% is conservative is indicated by the fact that the Grauman theatre of Los Angeles is now earning profits of 100% a year; the Rialto in New York at the rate of about 80% a year; the Stillman in Cleveland at the rate of over 100% a year."

A mass of statistical data is contained in the Connick report. As to the number of theatres in the United States in 1919, the report says: "The most reliable data comes from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation . . . Their distributing department estimates that there are now about 15,000 picture theatres in the country with a combined seating capacity of 8,120,000. They are divided into four classes, according to average admission charge, as follows: 4,100 theatres, with an average admission of 10c. and average seating capacity of 300; 6,000 theatres with an average admission of 15c. and average seating capacity of 450; 2,400 theatres with an average seating capacity of 600 and an average admission of 18c.; 2,500 theatres with an average seating capacity of 1,100 and over, and an average admission of 25c.

"Of the 15,000 existing theatres, 160 are reported as leasing pictures to run one a week; 2,500 lease for one-half week; and the remainder change their program daily. The length of run in the larger theatres is increasing and it is estimated by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Distributing Department that by the end of the year there will be 200 theatres in the week's run class and 3,000 theatres changing their programs twice weekly."

Admission prices for 1919 were 25% higher than in the previous year, says the report, which continues:

"The rate of increase in film rentals charged the exhibitor, using the theatre year of 1916-1917 as a basis, or 100%, has been as follows: 1916-17, 100%; 1917-18, 200%; 1918-19, 250%; 1919-20, 375%.

"The following table shows the box-office receipts of eight theatres during indicated periods and the percentage increase in their receipts during the same periods a year later:

"Rialto (N. Y.)—June-August, 1916; receipts, $103,600; June-August, 1917; receipts, $157,900; percentage of increase, 52.4. Rialto (N. Y.)—June-August, 1917; receipts, $157,900; June-August, 1918; receipts, $160,800; percentage of increase, 18.4. Rialto (N. Y.)—June-August, 1918; receipts, $160,800; June-August, 1919; receipts, $195,300; percentage of increase, 21.5.

"Rivoli (N. Y.)—June-August, 1918; receipts, $155,900; June-August, 1919; receipts, $185,100; percentage of increase, 18.7.

"Stillman (Cleveland)—June-August, 1918; receipts, $76,100; June-August, 1919; receipts, $93,100; percentage of increase, 22.3.

"Flatbush—April-May, 1918; receipts, $28,600; April-May, 1919; receipts, $31,100; percentage of increase, 8.7.

"Hamilton—April-May, 1918; receipts, $35,500; April-May, 1919; receipts, $39,100; percentage of increase, 10.1.

"Jefferson—April-May, 1918; receipts, $32,200; April-May, 1919; receipts, $42,600; percentage of increase, 32.3.

"Regent—April-May, 1918; receipts, $28,000; April-May, 1919; receipts, $34,200; percentage of increase, 22.1.

"Prospect—April-May, 1918; receipts, $14,100 x; April-May, 1919; receipts, $22,900; percentage of increase, 62.4.

"(x) Closed last five days of May."

The Flatbush, Hamilton, Jefferson, Regent, and Prospect theatres referred to are located in New York City.

On the subject of the size of theatres in relation to their profit-making, the report says:

"There is no doubt as to the financial advantage of the theatre with a large seating capacity over a small one. An examination of the cost of operating theatres shows that with the same standard of exhibition, the only increase in operating cost in the case of the large houses occurs in the comparatively low-priced items, such as ushers and cleaners. The big items—management, film rental and orchestra—remain the same.

"There are differences of opinion as to the most efficient size varies of course according to size of theatres that should be constructed.

Big Plans for N. Y. State Convention

All Exhibitor State Presidents, and Number of Public Men, Invited to Meeting

ALL the presidents of exhibitor state units throughout the country have been invited to attend the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, to be held at Syracuse, June 19, 20, 21.

Advices to New York State headquarters, where President Charles L. O'Reilly and Secretary S. I. Berman are busy on convention plans, indicate that the meeting will be the largest and most important in the annals of the organization. An elaborate program has been prepared and it will be featured by the appearance of a group of men prominent in state and nation.

Among those invited are: Senator James J. Walker, Majority Leader of the New York Senate; United States Senator Royal S. Copeland; Will H. Hays; Governor Alfred E. Smith; Lieutenant-Governor George Lunn; United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., and Peter J. Brady, of the Federation of Labor.

Senator Walker will deliver one of the chief speeches. Mayor Walrath of Syracuse will make the address of welcome.

The annual dinner of the organization will be held Wednesday evening, June 20, in the Onondaga Hotel, which will also be convention headquarters.

A large committee of Syracuse exhibitors is actively at work on local arrangements, and they report that reservations for hotel accommodations are pouring in from all over the State. The Syracuse committee consists of: Francis P. Martin, James H. Roe, Albert Robbins, Edgar L. Weill, John Griswold, Earl Crabb, Morris Fitzer, Mitchell Fitzer, Ben Fitzer, David Harrison, Harry Gilbert, Frank Sardino, George Smith, R. P. Merriam, Frank Becker, James J. Burns, A. A. Van Auken, and Robert Metzger. The committee has established temporary headquarters at 401 Robbins-Eckel Bldg., Syracuse.

DeMille Wins Suit to Get Back Film Rights to Plays

Cecil B. De Mille has won a suit in the New York County Supreme Court before Justice Wagner, by which the film rights of thirteen plays revert back to him and the other plaintiffs, the De Mille Company and Beatrice M. De Mille.

The suit was against Pat J. Casey, the Protective Amusement Company and the Biograph Company, by which the De Milles sought to rescind a contract made ten years ago licensing Casey to make films of the plays owned by the plaintiffs.

Justice Wagner ordered the contract cancelled, directed the Biograph to transfer to the plaintiffs the copyrights on three pictures which it had copyrighted, and directed Biograph and the Protective Amusement Company to account to the plaintiffs for money received after February, 1916, on the sales of five uncopyrighted photoplays. Casey was directed to account for all his dealings on the copyrighted plays. All prints are to be returned to the plaintiffs.

Among the plays involved are: "The Royal Mounted" (which was not filmed), "Beverley of Graustark," "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," "Lord Chumley," "The Road to Yesterday," "The Stampede" and "Men and Women."

Fox Denies Rumor that N. Y. Studios Will Close

IN a statement issued by Fox Film Corporation complete denial is made of the rumor current in the columns of numerous publications which points to the closing down of the New York Studios of the producer at Tenth Avenue and Fifty-fifth street as soon as the recently announced buildings near Los Angeles are finished.

At the present time three feature pictures are in the course of production in New York, namely, "Six Cylinder Love," "No Mother to Guide Her" and "The Governor's Lady." The future picture program decided upon by the Fox organization will require all the space which the new western and the present eastern studios can furnish.

Florida Censorship Measure Appears Doomed

It is not believed that the censorship measure which was introduced in the Florida House of Representatives by Rev. Dr. Taylor will meet with much success. Dr. Taylor is a Methodist minister, but a large majority of those of the cloth in Florida seem to oppose state censorship and several ministers were in the delegation of opponents of the measure when a hearing was recently granted the theatre owners on the bill.

Others who appeared in behalf of the theatres were Turner Jones, of Atlanta, of Southern Enterprises; Mayor John Alsop, of Jacksonville, Florida; W. L. Whitehead, of the Republic theatre, Jacksonville; and C. E. Daffin, of Tallahassee.

As a result of the favorable impression made upon the lawmakers, the bill was placed at the bottom of the calendar with an unfavorable report attached to it.

Plucky Girl Ushers Avert Theatre Panic

WHEN a film flashed in the projection booth of the Washington theatre, Boston, during a matinee last week when more than 700 persons were in the house, the quick thinking alone of two girl ushers averted a serious panic. As the thick smoke poured down into the auditorium from the lens windows they realized what the trouble was and each stood at the head of the two main aisles, quieting the crowds that started out.

"There are no flames," they assured the audience. "There is a small fire in the film, that's all. All the doors are being opened and you can all leave quietly."

The girls were Catherine Manchester and Bessie Dreyfus, and Miss Manchester broke the ice on her side of the house when she said: "If there was any danger I would beat you all out." This started a laugh and the tension broke. Those who know her, know it was a white lie, but it turned the trick.

Assistant Manager Edward Stillman had all emergency doors thrown open and the house was quickly cleared. Firemen arrived to finish putting out the blaze with chemicals. Charles Cifree, the operator, had leaped back as the film flashed, escaped injury, and had the fire nearly out by his own efforts. The show was resumed in half an hour with the two heroines again on the job.

Film Exports for March Total $648,360

Film exports for March totaled $648,360, divided as follows: 13,804,918 linear feet of positive, with a value of $334,473; 618,959 feet of negatives, valued at $61,972, and 2,445,599 feet of unexposed film, with a value of $51,915. These figures have just been made public by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The important markets were: Raw stock to England, 951,179 feet, valued at $23,369; Japan, 709,605 feet, with a value of $16,373; negatives to England, 311,214 feet, valued at $39,812; positives to Australia, 2,202,900 feet, with a value of $86,437; Argentina, 2,091,938 feet, with a value of $76,366.

Hays Invited to Speak in North Carolina

Will H. Hays will be requested to make a public address to the people of Wilmington and Wrightsville Beach, N. C., if he attends the North Carolina M. P. T. O. convention at Wrightsville Beach, June 28, and 29. Plans for the convention are progressing nicely and a large attendance is looked for.

South Carolina and Virginia exhibitors have been requested to meet with the Tar Heel organizations.

Chicago Film Board Great Arbitration Aid

Working in conjunction with the Joint Board of Arbitration, the Chicago Film Board of Trade is rapidly coming to the fore as a factor in fostering a more amicable relationship between exchanges and theatre-owners. Since its inception, the Film Board, which consists of local exchange heads, has played a prominent part in arbitrating differences between exchanges and theatres and has satisfactorily adjusted hundreds of cases.

Concrete evidence of the service that is being rendered by the Film Board is seen in the mass of testimonial letters from exhibitors that is reaching the board's headquarters every day.

Argentine Public Is Strong for U. S. Productions

Assistant Trade Commissioner Clarence C. Brooks of Buenos Aires, says "American films predominate in the Argentine market, where they have secured a firm hold on the local public. German, French and Italian feature picture are occasionally exhibited but these countries do not enjoy a steady trade in this commodity. Local production is negligible and of a very inferior type."

Michigan and Minnesota Quit M. P. T. O. A.

Withdraw from National Organization and Surrender Charters; Aftermath of Chicago Convention

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan and Minnesota have withdrawn from the national organization and surrendered their state charters.

Both states took this action by unanimous vote of their Boards of Directors at meetings held in Detroit June 6 and Minneapolis June 5, respectively.

Michigan's secession was officially communicated to President Sydney S. Cohen in a telegram from W. S. McLaren, President of the Wolverine State organization. Mr. McLaren also sent a wire to MOTION PICTURE NEWS outlining the reasons for Michigan's action. It follows:

"Conviction on the part of the Michigan organization of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America that the present national organization is not working along lines conducive to the successful solution of the problems of the theatre owners, and feeling that Michigan could not therefore give its wholehearted moral and financial support to the national body, Michigan has decided to withdraw therefrom.

"Michigan has for the past three years been allied with the national organization, but we are convinced by the utter failure of the national organization to function in a business-like manner, that constructive work is not possible under the present plan of operation.

"In accordance with a resolution passed unanimously at the regular meeting today, the following wire was forwarded to Sydney S. Cohen, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America:

"Mr. Sydney S. Cohen, President Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, New York City: At a regular monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, held at Wolverine, Detroit, Wednesday, June 6th, it was unanimously decided to withdraw from the national organization and charter is being returned by registered mail.

"Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan.

"W. S. McLAREN, President.

"Realizing the vital necessity for national organization, Michigan looks forward to the time when politics will cease to dominate to the exclusion of constructive work and when an exhibitors' organization will get down to the work next to the heart of the exhibitor, at which time Michigan will support such an organization with the same zeal as in the past."

Michigan's action, like Minnesota's is a direct result of the Chicago Convention, where Michigan declined to present the name of James C. Ritter for President after it became clear that Mr. Cohen would be nominated and elected.

The Michigan organization has been commonly regarded as one of the strongest state units, if not the strongest, in the country.

Three of the leading state bodies are now out of the national organization. The first break in the ranks came after the Washington Convention last year, when the New York State M. P. T. O. seceded following the Cohen-Walker controversy.

Announcement of the withdrawal and surrender of the state charter was made in a telegram addressed by Clyde H. Hitchcock, secretary of the Minnesota organization, to President Sydney S. Cohen, of the M. P. T. O. A.

Mr. Hitchcock also advised MOTION PICTURE NEWS by wire of the step that had been taken, as follows:

"The following telegram to Sydney S. Cohen is self-explanatory: 'At a regularly called meeting of the Board of Directors of the Minnesota M. P. T. O. held today it was unanimously voted to surrender our charter and sever affiliation with the national organization. Please accept this as official notice of our action. Charter being returned by registered mail.'

(Signed) "Minnesota Division, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Clyde H. Hitchcock, Secretary."

It will be recalled that W. A. Steffes, Minnesota President, was an active candidate at Chicago for head of the national body. His name was presented to the convention and then withdrawn after Mr. Cohen had been nominated. Theodore L. Hays, who placed Mr. Steffes in nomination, charged that the latter had been "doublecrossed" in that Mr. Cohen had stated on many occasions that he would not stand for re-election.

After the convention was over, Mr. Steffes issued a statement in which he said he personally was "through" with the national organization; and on the same day A. A. Kaplan, member of the Minnesota Board, indicated that his State would stick with Steffes. The action taken this week bears out predictions made by those in close touch with the internal situation in the M. P. T. O. A.

In connection with Minnesota's withdrawal the following statement was issued by President Cohen's office:

"We have been advised at National Headquarters of the withdrawal of the Minnesota State Organization from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. This move is no surprise and in reality occurred some time ago, as we have had little or no co-operation from Minnesota during the past year.

"The situation in Minnesota is perfectly plain to every thinking theatre owner who has given it special consideration. The organization in that territory has been dominated largely by First National interests. Mr. Theodore Hays, the general manager of Ruben and Finklestein, regional directors of First National, has been the outstanding and commanding figure in the Minnesota Organization.

"It was Mr. Hays who aided in shaping and formulating Mr. Steffes' campaign for the presidency of the National Organization.

"It was Mr. Hays who presented Mr. Steffes' name in Chicago to the National Convention for that office.

"It was Mr. Hays who later on withdrew Mr. Steffes' name from the consideration of the convention in an ill-timed speech which betrayed considerable animosity.

"Therefore, the action of the Minnesota Organization under Mr. Hays' direction is perfectly plain. Our National Headquarters has been in receipt of various letters and other communications from independent exhibitors in Minnesota, asking if something could not be done to give the independent theatre owner there an opportunity to defend his interests.

"We have no fault to find with the First National interests for taking care of their business in Minnesota. We do believe, however, that the independent exhibitors of the State of Minnesota should receive more consideration than has been given them because of the domination of the State Body there by Mr. Hays and the interests he represents.

"At the Illinois State Convention on April 19th, 1923, Mr. Hays appeared and announced the candidacy of Mr. Steffes for National President. He stated at that time that the Minnesota organization was always loyal to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and that no matter what might happen at the Chicago convention, the Minnesota body would remain loyal.

"Notwithstanding this statement of Mr. Hays, it was very plain to everyone, even at that time, that unless Minnesota could handle the National Organization and make that subservient to the interests he represented, they would not remain within the fold.

"The independent theatre owners of Minnesota, however, may rest assured that in every way possible, their interests will be cared for by the National Organization and that everything will be done to protect their interests in any way that they may determine best.

"It is pleasing to state now that in Indiana, Ohio, Massachusetts and other states, the theatre owners have entered upon intensive campaigns to perfect and strengthen the organizations there and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America now have under way the institution of a Service Station in Atlanta, Georgia, to care for the welfare of the Theatre Owners in the entire South. Service Stations will also be established elsewhere to handle in an effective way the business of the Theatre Owners and protect their interests all over the Nation. We are now perfecting our plans to effect the repeal of the Admission and Seat Taxes at the coming sessions of Congress and this can only be done through compact National Organization."

Famous Players Renews Lease on Missouri Theatre

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of New York will pay the Missouri Theatre Company of St. Louis, a rental of $72,000 a year for two years and $122,000 a year thereafter during the seventeen and a half years it has the theatre leased.

The lease was recorded in St. Louis on May 24, and is a step toward completing the financial details incident to erecting a 12-story office building in conjunction with the theatre. The rent paid will serve to amortize a loan of $1,250,000 made by the theatre company.

Cases Against Cleveland Exhibitors Annulled

Three Cleveland exhibitors and three promoters of children stunt night performances in picture theatres, were discharged in Police Court last week, and the cases against them were annulled upon a promise from both theatre owners and promoters that henceforth they would employ children only over fourteen.

M. H. Schrief, of the Marquis theatre; Julius Schwartz, of the Homestead theatre, and S. Klinger, of the Carlyon theatre, were the exhibitors charged by the Ohio State Industrial Commission with exploiting, in picture theatres, children under fourteen years of age, which is a violation of a state code.

First Congress of Motion Picture Arts Held

Five Hundred Authors, Educators, Editors, Producers and Others Attend Meeting in New York

WITH 500 of the leading writers, dramatists, educators, editors, motion picture producers, directors and leaders of thought of America, and representatives of the British and French Societies of Authors in attendance, the first International Congress on Motion Picture Arts opened Thursday morning, June 7, at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York. Sessions continue on Friday, June 8.

The general program was divided into six parts, with morning, luncheon and afternoon sessions Thursday and morning and luncheon sessions Friday. On Friday afternoon there is an informal inspection of the delegates of the Paramount studio at Long Island City, and the gathering is being brought to a close with a banquet.

The congress is being held under the auspices of the Authors' League of America, with the co-operation of Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky, of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

One of the most important features of the congress, it was stated Thursday morning by Ellis Parker Butler, president of the Authors' League, who opened the first session, was the appointment of a committee on resolutions which will consider the variety of suggestions presented by men and women from all parts of the world, and out of them try to formulate a series of recommendations that will aid in defining good motion pictures, help their artistic advancement, bring about greater co-operation between authors and picture producers, advance the study of motion picture problems in universities and develop a new school of writers who will produce their works directly for the screen. The committee is to report at the closing banquet.

The congress was called to order Thursday morning by Ellis Parker Butler, president of the league, at 10.30 o'clock. Adolph Zukor welcomed the delegates in a short address. The general topics for discussion were "The Place of the Motion Picture in American Life and Culture" and "The International Scope of Motion Pictures." The speakers were Hon. Henry W. Taft, honorary chairman; Julien Jacques Champenois, representing the National Universities of France, and W. B. Maxwell, vice-president and delegate of the British Society of Authors.

At the luncheon session which followed the presiding officer was George Barr Baker and the speakers were Father John B. Kelly, Arthur Brisbane and Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews.

The question, "What Are the Undeveloped Possibilities of the Motion Picture?" is on the program for Friday afternoon. This session begins at 2.30 o'clock. The topic had been divided into three sections: "Literature Which Has Not Yet Reached the Screen," Clayton Hamilton; "General Training for Motion Picture Production," Dr. Rowland Rogers, of Columbia University; "What Writers Can Do for the Screen," Allan Dwan, producer of a number of well-known pictures.

Following a general discussion on "Phases of Life Which Have Not Yet Reached the Screen," Robert T. Kane, general production manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, conducted an open forum in which Collective Insurance Planned by Kansas M.P.T.O.

COLLECTIVE insurance, the booking of film and parcel postage of film are three means by which the M. P. T. O. of Kansas hopes to add materially to its treasury this summer. By the merging of several insurance companies, or, a single company, for that matter, the Kansas body hopes to be able to save from 25 to 30 per cent in the cost of the insurance to its members. The balance will go into the treasury.

The booking of films also presents a method by which funds can be kept coming in. An exchange will be requested to name its price for a certain film for a period of several weeks, receiving the assurance that the picture will be well advertised and obtain the prestige of being sanctioned by the state organization. The M. P. T. O. of Kansas in turn will then act as the distributor of the picture during the period for which it has been rented, and the difference in rent paid by the exhibitors and that paid by the M. P. T. O. Kansas will represent the amount available for the treasury.

The parcel postage of film will be taken up by the Kansas office next week with Balis Steele, Kansas City postmaster.

he answered questions regarding the technical side of picture making.

At the morning session Friday Henry W. Taft is presiding. Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is the first speaker, followed by a discussion of the subject, "What Tendency Should Be Developed in Motion Picture Production?" and the speakers are Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and Prof. Herbert Adams Gibbons, of Princeton.

"Writing Directly for the Screen" is being presented by Jack Cunningham, who adapted "The Covered Wagon" to the screen; Elmer Rice, dramatist; Mrs. Frances Taylor Patterson, instructor at Columbia University in photoplay composition.

Four points of view are brought to the discussion of the topic, "What Are the Tests of a Good Motion Picture?" with James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay; Philip Troup, editor of the New Haven Union; Irvin Wheeler, exhibitor of pictures in small communities, and Robert E. Sherwood, critic, are the speakers.

At the luncheon session Irvin S. Cobb is the toastmaster, and the speakers are Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reissner, Fannie Hurst, novelist; Peter J. Brady, chairman of the education committee of the New York State Federation of Labor, and Valentin Mandelstamm, representing the French authors.

The afternoon reception at the Paramount studio is at 3 o'clock. Otto H. Kahn is toastmaster at the banquet in the evening, and the speakers are Alice Duer Miller, Matthew Woll, Ellis Parker Butler, W. B. Maxwell and Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton.

Rex Beach is chairman of the general committee and Eric Schuler is secretary. The committee on arrangements is headed by Clarence S. Thompson. The other members are Samuel Hopkins Adams, George Barr Baker, Edwin Bjorkman, Ellis Parker Butler, Irvin S. Cobb, George Creel, C. B. Falls, Charles Dana Gibson, John Golden, Clayton Hamilton, Rupert Hughes, Edward Hungerford, Will Irwin, Orson Lowell, George Barr McCutcheon, George Middleton, Harvey O'Higgins, Floyd W. Parsons, Luther Reed, Tony Sarg, Leroy Scott, William G. Shepherd, William Allen White, Alice Duer Miller, Fred G. Melcher, James Wright Brown, Gertrude Lane, Russell Doubleday, Louis Wiley and Arthur T. Vance.

Prior to the opening of the congress the Authors' League announced the award of prizes in two contests conducted under the League's auspices. One was open to the students in photoplay production and photoplay composition at Columbia University and called for the submission of the best idea for new literature in motion pictures. Miss Elizabeth Perkins, of Sewell's Bridge, York Village, Me., was awarded the first prize of $35, and Miss Helen Lawrence, of 57 West 88th Street, New York City, was the winner of the second prize of $15. Both young ladies are members of the class in motion picture composition, in charge of Mrs. Frances Taylor Patterson.

The other contest was open to High School students in Greater New York, who were given their choice of four subjects. The first prize of $25 was awarded to Miss Celia Antopolsky, a student of Girls' Commercial High School of Brooklyn, who wrote on "The Place of Motion Pictures in American Life and Culture." The second prize of $15 and the third prize of $5 were awarded respectively to John P. McGrath and William Dragunas, both students at the Eastern District High School of Brooklyn, both of whom chose the subject, "What Kind of Motion Pictures Should Producers Make?" The fourth prize of $5 was won by Miss Eva Richter, of Bay Ridge High School, who wrote on the subject, "What Are the Tests of a Good Motion Picture?" The winners of the first prizes in the two contests were invited to attend all the business and social sessions of the congress. The following were the judges of the contests: Rex Beach, Samuel Hopkins Adams, Ellis Parker Butler, Irvin S. Cobb, Charles Dana Gibson, Clayton Hamilton, George Barr McCutcheon, Harvey J. O'Higgins, Floyd W. Parsons, Eric Schuler, Gertrude Lane and Clarence S. Thompson.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given Wednesday at 12.30 o'clock at the Martinique by the council of the Authors' League. Among the other guests were William B. Maxwell, vice-president of the British Society of Authors, and Jules Jacques Champenois, representing the National Universities of France.

Ellis Parker Butler, president of the League, presided at the luncheon. In addition to the members of the council of League, members of four of its guilds were present. These are the American Dramatists, the Authors' Guild, the Guild of Free Lance Artists and the Screen Writers' Guild.

Brandt for New Exhibitor Organization Plan

Zone, Not the State, Should Be Foundation, He Declares; Outlines Views in Detail

WILLIAM BRANDT, founder of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York City, has given MOTION PICTURE NEWS a statement heartily endorsing the spirit of William A. Johnston's editorial in last week's issue, entitled "Build It Right."

"You have absolutely hit the nail on the head," Mr. Brandt said. "National exhibitor organization is geared all wrong. You are correct when you say that the present plan is built 'down from the roof instead of up from the foundation.' And that's why we have no cohesive national organization today."

"We shall never get anywhere so long as the organization is geared up to a President elected once a year at a national convention which resolves itself into a political mass-meeting—and practically nothing more."

"Let it be clearly understood that I am indulging in no personalities. Even the officers of the present national organization know how unworkable it is—and nobody knows it better than Sydney Cohen, who has had to take $25,000 or $30,000 out of his own pocket to keep it going. What would happen to the organization if, by some chance, a poor man should be elected?"

"You will agree with me that mere criticism of what exists, without suggesting a better plan, is worthless. Therefore, I am going to suggest what I have long believed to be a solid, workable plan of national organization—a plan that will enable the exhibitor actually to protect his investment through organization, without putting a financial hardship on him."

"The present national organization is built on political subdivisions—on the states themselves. But the film industry doesn't operate that way. It operates on business subdivisions—territories, film zones, about twenty-six in number."

"The first step toward getting national exhibitor organization geared right is to take it off the state basis and put it on the zone basis."

"Let me explain what I mean by that: the foundation should be the strong, local unit—one in each film shipping zone. That's where the real power should reside; that's where the exhibitor buys his film; that's where he comes into contact with the distributor; that's where his business dealings are; that's the logical point of origin for exhibitor organization."

"Call them Chambers of Commerce, if you like. Let every exhibitor in the zone be a member—as an individual. If he has one theatre, he would have one vote. If he were the head of a circuit he would still have one vote. Every member would be on the same footing. The big fellow could not dominate. The plan would work—because that is exactly the idea upon which the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce is built—and it works."

"Marcus Loew, William Fox and the Keith circuit are members, but they have no more to say than the exhibitor with one or two theatres."

"And the T. O. C. C. means something to its members because they pay good, hard money for the privilege of belonging to it. It is most emphatically not a paper organization, with only a few men bearing the financial burden. The initiation fee is $100 and the yearly dues are $100—and everybody pays the same amount."

"I cannot understand why the exhibitors of this country should not be willing to pay for the protection of their own investments. The smallest theatre represents a substantial outlay for the man who owns it. In the aggregate, the picture theatres of this country represent an investment of hundreds of millions of dollars. For their own protection—for common sense business reasons and their own welfare—the exhibitors of the United States should get together."

"Let's grant that the zone plan is right, and say that the twenty-six strong, local units have been formed. What's the next step toward creating an honest-to-God National organization?"

"Simply this: let each zone unit name a delegate to serve on a National Committee of Twenty-Six, which will thus get its authority from the only place where there is real authority—the exhibitors themselves, organized in their own local, zone units."

"The National Committee would be a co-operative body. It would not, and could not, interfere in local matters. It would work on big, national problems, such as the repeal of the Admission Tax, the Music Tax question—and others that are crying for solution."

"This National Committee would be the roof, but you notice we would not put the roof on until we had first laid the foundation and built the structure all the way up. That's logic. That's common sense."

"And then get this: The National Committee would hire a paid secretary. He would not be a politician. He would give his attention to business problems, under the direction of the National Committee. Abolish the office of President. Cut out the politics."

"Suppose, for example, the National Committee should appropriate a budget of $100,000 for the year. Where would the money come from? Naturally from the zone units, who would be assessed on the percentage ratings of their respective territories. I mean the territorial percentages which are in common use in the industry. The New York zone is a 14 per cent. territory. New York would pay about $14,000—and so on, all through the list."

"And the individual exhibitor would pay his dues to his local organization. He could not be assessed direct by the National Committee. He would pay only once, and he would know that his zone unit would be contributing for national purposes only what it was able to pay, and what it should pay."

"It would be the duty of the paid National Secretary to collect the money from the zones, and the machinery for this would be very simple: the zone assessment would be sent by paid Secretaries of the local units to the National organization."

"You can't sustain a functioning National organization without money. That has been shown to everybody's satisfaction. It can't be done by having the exhibitor run advertising slides in return for membership in a National body. He must be willing to pay a fair amount, regularly and consistently. When he does that, his interest in the organization is maintained, and he lives up to its rules. That has been our experience in the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce."

"I have gone into the details of this new plan of organization at considerable length, because I wanted to show that the groundwork must be laid properly before any of the exhibitors' pressing problems can be solved."

"Let's bring one of the big points right home: I am an exhibitor with eight theatres. I pay yearly to the Government about $50,000 in admission taxes, and when I say I pay the tax I mean exactly that. Our theatres have to absorb it—and the same thing is true of 95 per cent of the exhibitors of this country whose admission charge is twenty-five cents."

"Fifty thousand dollars that might be used for theatre expansion or the improvement of existing properties! And I will continue to pay, and you exhibitors will continue to pay this huge tax unless and until we get a real National organization that can convince Congress that the tax ought to be taken off."

"That would be the National Committee's job. It can be done by a careful, systematic campaign put over under the direction of the National Secretary, working with the Secretaries of the 26 zone units."

"The same thing is true of the Music Tax. There will be no relief there except through legislation. A concerted campaign is necessary. We have never had it, but we can have it under the organization plan I have outlined."

"Suppose we did get the Admission Tax removed. Don't you know that you, as an exhibitor, would be in a far better financial situation—that you would actually make more money?"

"This is a pressing problem. But it will not be solved except through the right kind of National organization."

"Other businesses have got rid of the so-called nuisance taxes. The soda-water people did. How? Through organization."

"As for organization itself, does the exhibitor realize that he alone in the industry is not properly organized? Every other branch is. Why, even the operator in your theatre belongs to a union; the doormen and ushers, in many sections, have their organization, and recently, here in New York, the scrubwomen have followed suit."

"The objection may be raised that the zone plan breaks down State lines, thus jeopardizing legislative campaigns. It may be argued, for instance, that exhibitors from one state will not concern themselves with legislative matters in an adjoining state."

"The argument looks formidable, but let's analyze it by citing an example: The Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce recently helped exhibitors of a nearby state in a fight on Sunday closing legislation. The T. O. C. C. is composed of exhibitors from New York mostly; but it backed up its members from the other state in their battle against this piece of adverse legislation."

"It is true that under the zone plan you would have overlapping membership. But instead of being an evil this will prove a blessing, because it will knit exhibitors closer together by making them realize the importance of helping their associates in an adjoining state, thereby stopping the contagion of adverse legislation. The reformers know no state lines. Why should we?"

Several Penn. Measures to Die in Committee

A NUMBER of bills before the Pennsylvania Legislature aimed at the motion picture industry will probably die in committee, according to those familiar with the situation.

Those measures include a one per cent tax on theatre receipts; two bills providing for taxation of billboard space; the equal rights bill which would give colored persons the same rights in theatres and other public places as those enjoyed by whites; several so-called anti-scalping measures which would require the theatre admission price to be printed on all tickets; and a bill preventing theatres from charging higher admissions on Saturdays and holidays than on other days.

Motion picture theatres over
50% interest	172	94
Motion picture theatres 50% or less interest	87	54
Total	259	148
Legitimate and vaudeville . .	24	16
Grand total	283	164

As to the 94 motion picture theatres which are over 50 per cent owned, leased or operated:

13 are in the 50 largest cities in the United States.

39 are in other cities of over 25,000 population.

42 are in cities of less than 25,000 population.

Of the 54 motion picture theatres which are 50 per cent or less either owned, leased or operated:

16 are in the 50 largest cities in the United States.

25 are in other cities of over 25,000 population.

13 are in cities of less than 25,000 population.

In addition to the foregoing schedules, the following interests should be noted:

This company owned a 30 per cent interest in an enterprise known as the Stillman theatre at Cleveland. The company operating the Stillman theatre became part of a group known as Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation received for its interest in the Stillman theatre 7,125 shares of common stock and 524 shares of preferred stock out of a total issue of 70,000 shares of common and 11,360 shares of preferred stock of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc. It has no representation on the directorate and no voice in the management of the Loew Company's affairs.

Southern Enterprises, Inc., a subsidiary of this company, owns 40 per cent of the stock of the Saenger Amusement Company, but neither this company nor any subsidiary has representation on the directorate or voice in the management of the Saenger Company's affairs.

Famous Players own the common stock and part of the preferred stock of Charles Frohman, Inc., but that company is engaged in the legitimate theatrical business, and is not engaged in the exhibition of motion pictures.

This company has a small interest in the Valentine theatre at Toledo, Ohio, estimated at 8 per cent, which it received as payment of overdue film rentals. We have never had any representation or voice in the management of the company.

On August 31, 1921, the date referred to in the subpoena calling for this list, Famous Players had a 75 per cent interest in a circuit of 18 airdromes, theatres and neighborhood houses in St. Louis, Mo. It has disposed of its interest in 17 of these houses, and now owns 100 per cent of a single, newly constructed house, the Missouri Theatres, St. Louis.

It was originally intended that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation would have a 50 per cent interest in four theatres in San Francisco—the Imperial California, Portela and Coliseum, and a new one, the Granada, erected since August 31, 1921—but upon a subsequent adjustment of interests with our associates in that enterprise it was agreed that Famous Players would only retain a 25 per cent interest, which it now has.

One of Famous Players subsidiaries has a lease of the Majestic theatre, Detroit, but the theatre is sublet to a party who is running a dramatic company therein.

This company owns 650 shares out of 2,000 of common stock (but none of the preferred stock, aggregating $350,000) of the Indiana Theatre Company, owning the Indiana theatre at Terre Haute, Ind.

At the particular date specified in the subpoena (August 31, 1921) one of the Famous Players' subsidiaries leased the Wizard theatre in Baltimore, but the lease expired in 1922 and was not renewed. Likewise at said date one of its subsidiaries owned the Criterion theatre, Buffalo, but sold the same in the fall of 1921. Another subsidiary leased a theatre in Brooklyn known as the Rivera, but never opened same as a picture house, as it was decided to lease it for vaudeville.

Kansas To Fight Summer Slump

M.P.T.O. Business Manager Will Tour State to Aid Exhibitors in Showmanship

TO combat the annual slump in Summer business, a conservative, concrete plan will be put into effect by the M. P. T. O. of Kansas next week, it has been announced.

The plan, as outlined by C. E. Cook, business manager of the organization, is based upon sound business principles. It consists merely of a personal supervision in aiding the exhibitors of the state to operate their houses so that the greatest ends may be obtained from the least means. This, after all, always has been the key to successful showmanship, Mr. Cook firmly believes. Mr. Cook's tour over the state will last several weeks.

"It is surprising how comparatively small factors in operating a theatre can be magnified at the box office," Mr. Cook said. "In a certain town in Kansas I know of an exhibitor who literally is keeping patronage away from his theatres by the absence of about $3 worth of paint on the front of his house. Another theatre owner, right here in Kansas City, virtually is doing the same thing by failing to have the white linen slips on the backs of his chairs laundered, while still another allows dirt to accumulate in his theatre. All these things are noticed more closely in the Summer than in Winter. When competition is not so great and when it is necessary for people to be indoors.

"A black and white front, the paint to cost about $3, would do wonders for a certain suburban house I have in mind. It is just such apparently small things that stand between success. To combat these smaller evils if they can be termed that, will be my mission in a trip over the state next week. The M. P. T. O. of Kansas owes it to every one of its members to protect them against Summer slumps, while exhibitors owe it to their state association to co-operate in every manner to make effective this campaign against closed houses for this Summer.

"In my recent trip over the state I met an exhibitor who actually didn't know what his overhead expenses were. His income was what he had left at the end of the month, as he termed it. That exhibitor now is a member of the state organization, and he is going to have a much different system, as well as a different appearing theatre before we get through with him. Another exhibitor recently had suffered a slight loss by fire in his theatre. The front was blackened by smoke. The house is being operated today, but the front never has been painted. What an inviting appearance for the public to see the front of a house blackened by smoke, which would strike fear of fire into the heart of any ordinary person."

ing to the neighborhood in which the theatres are to be built. In the theatre districts of the larger cities many of the present managers give 3,000 to 3,500 seats as the maximum."

The growth in theatre attendance, which was very marked in 1919, "appears to be permanent," the report goes on, adding: "There is no indication that the growth of the business is unsound and it seems possible to materially increase both the theatre attendance and the percentage of theatre profits by building larger theatres, which are more economical to operate and by increasing the attractiveness of the amusement. The latter can be done by exhibiting the better class of film and by providing good orchestral music.

"Of course, in time the point of saturation for this form of amusement will be reached and then it will be a case of the survival of the fittest. As the matter stands today, however, it is our most democratic, most convenient and cheapest form of amusement and until someone provides amusement that is more convenient and lower in cost to the public or until all the producers make uninteresting pictures, the motion picture business in America will continue to grow."

Under the heading "The Star Controversy," the report declares: "There has been considerable criticism both on the part of the public and some manufacturers regarding the salaries paid stars and directors and the amount paid for dramatic material. Investigation shows that there is never a large reservoir of dramatic material of the type the American public demands that can be adapted for use on the screen. For instance, at the present time the public is not interested in stories with a sad ending, in war stories or in costume plays, but a short time ago there was a large demand for war stories.

"In regard to directors, here again it is a question of supply and demand. The directors who are willing to consider the cost of production and at the same time are able to make a successful picture are not very plentiful.

"The records show that plays produced with experienced stars, working with a good director, cost less than the picture made with inexperienced and cheaper people. The policy of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, since its inception, has been to get the best stories, stars and directors for their pictures, and they claim that their success has resulted from following this policy. As a matter of course, they have tried to purchase the best material and to pay no more than the laws of supply and demand require. In 1918 they spent over $800,000 for stories, of which only $8,000 was paid for material unsuitable for production.

"For the six months ending June 30, 1919,

Selznick-American Releasing Transfer Completed

THE absorption and transfer of the American Releasing Corporation by the Selznick Distributing Corporation has been completed and an extensive sales drive has started for the combined product throughout the country.

All existing exhibitor contracts made by the American Releasing will be executed by the Selznick Distributing Corporation.

Robert S. Bendell, formerly manager for American in Albany, has been retained by Selznick Distributing Corporation in the same capacity at that exchange.

David R. Blyth, Director of Sales for Selznick Distributing Corporation has retained many of the exchange and field forces of American Releasing and they are now employed in the Selznick exchanges.

the amounts paid to stars and directors, with their staffs, were $558,249 and $202,130, respectively, out of a total of $13,089,211. It would require a very substantial reduction in salaries of stars and directors to be effective in increasing the profits of the corporation.

"There is a considerable effort being made by many producing managers to get away from the star system, but it is not believed that they have carefully analyzed their coats or rate of production, or taken into consideration the drawing value to the box office of the personality of the stars. Analysis leads to the belief that the star system is sound and will continue to be used by the most successful producers."

Brandt For New Exhibitor Organization

"What's the first thing an exhibitor does when he opens a theatre? You know what it is. He rushes to get all kinds of insurance on his house—fire, burglary, storm, etc.—but the most important kind of insurance he doesn't get at all—the protection of his whole investment through a strong, National exhibitor organization.

"The answer, as I see it, is to start with the zones; then form your National Committee as above outlined; abolish the elective office of President; hire paid Secretaries for the zone units and a paid Secretary for the National Committee—business men in both instances; and tackle the job in a big way like men.

"I do not say my plan is perfect. Probably it can be improved upon. But this I do know: I am not looking for any honors, medals or badges. I am sincerely and vitally interested in seeing the right kind of National exhibitor organization brought into being. It is necessary to the protection of my investment—and the investment of every single exhibitor in this country."

M.P.T.O. of Connecticut Meets June 27

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut will hold their annual convention at Double Beach, Conn., on Wednesday, June 27.

Double Beach is just outside of New Haven and the meeting will be in the form of a field day.

Flint Added to Selznick Board of Directors

COINCIDENT with the absorption of the entire product of the American Releasing Corporation by the Selznick Distributing Corporation comes the announcement of the addition of Motley H. Flint to the Board of Directors of the latter named Company. In his capacity as Vice President of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, Mr. Flint has become largely identified in assisting with the production end of the motion picture business and is generally recognized as one of the leading factors in the furtherance of better pictures.

The Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Bank is interested in three special productions scheduled for early release by the Selznick Distributing Corporation, "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Common Law," and "Modern Matrimony" and Mr. Flint's recent trip east was made partially to close final details for the distribution of these pictures.

Film Golf Tournament is Great Success

Record Attendance of Executives and Others Marks Fourth Semi-Annual Event

THE Fourth Semi-Annual Film Golf Tournament, held June 5, under the auspices of The Film Daily, at the Belle-laure Golf Club, Bayside, L. I., was a big success.

There were more than 150 golfers, observers and humorists, real and near, on hand. The attendance list was a blue book of the industry in New York and vicinity. The day was ideal—even if it was a little warm—and everybody was thoroughly convinced that the party was a wonder in every respect.

Here are the winners:

Low net (Reuben Samuels, Inc., Trophy): Rudy Cameron, net score 75.

Low net runner-up (Pathe Exchange, Inc., Trophy): Felix Feist, net score 78.

Low gross (Warner Brothers Trophy): Oscar Morgan, net score 82.

Low gross runner-up (MOTION PICTURE NEWS Trophy): E. Kendall Gillette, net score 82.

Winner of Jules Mastbaum Trophy for lowest score by exhibitor player, Tom Moore, net score 83.

Winner of Jack Alicote Duffer Cup, Harold Rodner, with a score of 355.

Winner of leg on the Film Daily Trophy: Rudy Cameron, net score 75.

In the morning the qualifying round of nine holes was played and in the afternoon eighteen were added. After which, the crowd adjourned to the clubhouse for dinner, the big event of the day. The fun was fast and furious, especially when the special prizes were passed around. Here they are: a live canary in a bird cage; a pup; still another pup; a goldfish and twenty "bobby irons" donated by Exhibitors Herald.

The Film Golf Tournament always brings out a big representation from all branches of the industry, but the attendance this year was a record-breaker. Many who were unable to go out early in the day appeared at the dinner. Ben Blumenthal, A. H. Giannini, J. Robert Rubin and Al Feinman sent best wishes by radio from the Majestic en route to Europe.

Copyright Suit in Supreme Court

Important Decision Awaited in Alleged Plagiarism of "Mr. Barnes of New York"

THE dispute between Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and the Howell Sales Company regarding the alleged plagiarism of the story of "Mr. Barnes of New York" by the picture "Vendetta" is now before the United States Supreme Court in the form of an application by the Goldwyn company for a writ of certiorari. If the writ is granted it will have the effect of vacating the decree in favor of the Howell Company granted by the United States Court of Appeals for the Second District and will be followed by a trial of the issue in the Supreme Court.

It will be recalled that while the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation was producing the picture "Mr. Barnes of New York" at its California studios, having purchased the exclusive rights for screen purposes from John F. Stephens, owner of the copyright of the novel, the Howell company imported a German picture called "Vendetta," which was undeniably a screen version of the same novel. The question at issue is whether the purchaser of screen rights has any protection in the interval between such purchase and the arrival of the picture at copyright stage as such. The lower court took the position that the copyright law does not cover this interval and even went so far as to deny the right of the owner of the original book copyright to intervene in order to assist the purchaser of the screen rights. The Goldwyn counsel point out that if the law is really in this status a serious handicap is laid upon the producer and the publisher, and the picture industry has not a leg to stand upon, as practically all picturizing rights are by assignment from the owner of the general copyright.

The present copyright case is held to differ from the Fox case, decided some time ago, in that while in the latter case the assigned copyright privilege covered general dramatization rights the Goldwyn right to "Mr. Barnes of New York" was limited to the moving picture dramatization.

Lichtman Secures Services of Paul Swift

Paul J. Swift, until recently general manager of the Associated Booking Corporation, has resigned from that post in order to become special representative for the Al. Lichtman Corporation. Mr. Swift, like Ed. Grossman and George S. Jeffrey, Preferred's other two representatives, was associated with Mr. Lichtman at Famous Players.

Swift was sales supervisor of the New York territory for Paramount for five years, and left there in order to accept the offer from A. B. C., which was tendered him by unanimous vote of the board of directors. Mr. Swift's first assignment for Lichtman sends him to Washington, where he will study trade conditions for a while.

Filming Outdoor Scenes for "Red Robe"

Director Alan Crosland and the company of Cosmopolitan players making "Under the Red Robe," the picturization of Stanley Weyman's story of the same play, left for Stamford, Conn., this week to film the spectacular riding scenes which will be one of the features of the film. These scenes will be filmed at Aladdin's Rock Farm, where the tournament scenes for "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies, were filmed last summer.

Robert B. Mantell, John Charles Thomas and Alma Rubens are featured in "Under the Red Robe."

"Skid Proof" Next Charles Jones Feature

Charles Jones has just started a new feature picture at the William Fox West Coast studios. It is called "Skid Proof" and was written by Byron Morgan who was responsible for many of the late Wallace Reid's automobile stories. The picture is being directed by Scott Dunlap, and Carmel Meyers, Peggy Shaw, and Jacqueline Gadsden are members of the cast.

Barry Feature Under Way at Warners

"The Printer's Devil," starring Wesley Barry, has been started at Warner Brothers Coast studios under the direction of William Beaudine. Katherine McGuire, beauty contest winner, is cast in the feminine lead. Others in prominent roles are Harry Myers, George Pearce, Louis King, Ray Cannon, Mary Halter and Harry Rottenberg. Julian Josephson is responsible for the story.

Beacon Acquires Another Boston House

The Beacon Theatre Co., Jacob Lourie, general manager, has added another house to its string of greater Boston theatres, by the acquisition on May 14 of the Allston theatre, one of the most popular neighborhood houses in the city.

Paramount Abandoned Name of "Accessories"

BELIEVING that the word "accessories" gives exhibitors the wrong attitude toward advertising material, Paramount has changed the name of its department handling this matter to "Ad Sales Department."

Mel A. Shauer, Manager, has announced hereafter all posters, heralds, insert cards, stills, mats, and cuts will be designated as "advertising" and the department in the exchange vending them will be known as the "Advertising Department." The former accessories managers will be known as "advertising managers."

This change was decided upon at the recent Paramount regional conventions where it was believed exhibitors have suffered by regarding advertising simply as a side-line instead of as an integral part of the exhibition.

"Thundergate" Cast Is Named by de Grasse

A new First National unit will be busy within a week's time at the United Studios, when "Thundergate" will be put into production. It is a picturization of Sidney Hershel Small's novel, "The Lord of Thundergate." The cast has practically been completed by Joseph de Grasse, who will direct the picture for First National.

Owen Moore has been cast in the leading male role. Virginia Brown Faire and Sylvia Breamer will fill important roles. Tully Marshall, Edwin Booth Tilton, and Robert McKim complete the cast.

In this First National picture Moore will portray a young American engineer, whose resemblance to a Chinese lord precipitates him in a series of adventurous, exciting and romantic situations and finally wins him a white wife, who was forced on him when, through circumstances, he was compelled to take the place of the real lord.

"Governor's Lady" Is Next Millarde Feature

"The Governor's Lady," a Belasco stage success which is being put into film form at the William Fox New York studios, is the next picture to be directed by Harry Millarde. The Belasco drama was written by Alice Bradley. Jane Grey and Robert T. Haines have the two leading roles in moving pictures. Anthony Paul Kelly made the scenario.

F. B. O. Announces Purchase of "Woman Accused"

The Film Booking Offices announce the purchase this week of "Woman Accused," written by Roy Vickers, of London. This story appeared as a serial in the McClure's Magazine, beginning December, 1922, and running through until April, 1923.

Tom Mix Busy with "Lone Star Ranger"

Tom Mix is now busy on a screen version of Zane Grey's novel, "Lone Star Ranger," at the William Fox West Coast studios. Lambert Hillyer made the scenario and will also direct the picture. Billie Dove has the character of the girl who runs away with the hero's heart.

Fox Takes Over Barbee's Loop, Chicago

A DEAL was completed last week by which Fox Film Corporation interests have taken over Barbee's Loop theatre, Monroe and Dearborn Streets, Chicago, and will take possession August 1st. The lease is for a term of years and will establish Fox interests in the City of Chicago.

C. B. Easter, representing Oliver & Company, handled the negotiations between Mr. William Fox and the Adeitte, owner of the Monroe Street house. The name of the theatre will be changed to the Monroe when the new management takes effect. The show policy will be changed to conform with the standard established by Mr. Fox in his own circuit of theatres in New York City, New England and other parts of the United States. When the Monroe theatre opens on September 1st it will offer first-run presentations of high class photoplays for indeterminate engagements, among which will be: "If Winter Comes," "Six Cylinder Love," "Cameo Kirby," "Eleventh Hour," "Monna Vanna," "This Freedom," "Gentle Julia," and other attractions of high rank.

It was announced at the William Fox offices in New York that approximately $100,000 will be spent this summer in remodeling the Monroe in preparation for its official opening.

Associated Authors Will Make Kyne Story

Thompson Buchanan of the Associated Authors trio is adapting Peter B. Kyne's "Harbor Bar," for the screen. The film version of Kyne's story will go into production as soon as work on "Richard, the Lion-Hearted," the initial release of the Authors trio is completed for distribution by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation.

Woodward S. Van Dyke has been engaged to direct "Harbor Bar." Mr. Buchanan will supervise the production and be assisted in this by his associates, Messrs. Woods and Elmer Harris.

Jeanne Balzac May Assist with "Magic Skin"

Negotiations are now under way by Achievement Films, Inc., which is producing Honore De Balzac's novel, "The Magic Skin," to take Mlle. Jeanne Balzac, great-granddaughter of the author, to the Goldwyn studios to act as technical adviser.

Mlle. Balzac has just recently come to this country from Paris where she spent most of her girlhood. She is visiting friends in New York, and is delighted at the prospect of visiting the film capital and is especially anxious to lend her aid to the filming of this favorite story of her great-grandfather.

Julanne Johnston Selected for Doug's Cast

To Julanne Johnston, one of the most promising young screen players, goes the honor of being the first player selected by Douglas Fairbanks for the cast of his new picture, "The Thief of Bagdad," which he is now preparing to put into production at a very early date.

Miss Johnston's knowledge of classic dancing had much to do with her selection.

Thomas H. Ince presents Douglas MacLean in "A Man of Action," a First National attraction from which these stills were taken.

F.B.O. Announces Fourteen Releases Will Distribute That Number of Thirty Announced, During First Six Weeks of Fall

FOLLOWING an announcement last week of a program of thirty pictures for the coming season of 1923-1924, the Film Booking Offices this week announce that fourteen of that number will be released the first six months of the season starting in the Fall.

In addition to the two specials named in last week's story, "Daytime Wives" and "Blow Your Own Horn," there will be released "Lights Out," a photo-drama adapted from the stage play that had a long Broadway run, written by Mann Page and Paul Diekey. The adaptation was made by Rex Taylor, and carries a cast headed by Ruth Stonehouse. Others in the cast are Walter McGrail, Marie Astaire, Theodore Von Eltz, Hank Mann, Fred Kelsey, Ben Hewlett, Mabel Van Buren, Harry Fenwick and Ben Deeley.

"Alimony," adapted from an original story by A. T. Locke, will follow "Lights Out." The picture is now in the course of construction at the Powers studio, and is being directed by Chantard. The cast will consist of Grace Darmond, Ruby Miller, Warner Baxter, Jackie Saunders and Ralph Lewis.

"A Knight For a Day" will be the next picture released. The story is a western comedy-drama from the pen of William Wallace Cook, with Eddie Hearn as the featured player.

A Chester Bennett production, entitled "Rock of Ages," and featuring Jane Novak will follow.

"Born of a Cyclone" is a story written by Marion Burton, Charles Behan and Charles Silson. The plot is laid in the Louisiana bayou country with Derelys Perdne selected for the featured role.

The eighth picture on the list is "Druscilla With a Million." The story is an adaptation from Elizabeth Cooper's book of the same title.

"Not For Publication," an original society drama, follows the "Druscilla" production.

"Flaming Souls" is a society drama by Marene Thompson. The story deals with a girl who loves a penniless youth who in turn loves another.

"Life, Liberty and—" is a prize fight western written by Wyndham Martin with George O'Hara listed for the featured role. This story originally appeared in Everybody's Magazine.

"Passionate Youth" is an adaptation from the Munsey magazine story, "Judith of Bohemia," and written by Coralie Stanton and Heath Hasken.

"Flaming Waters" is an original story written by Lloyd Sheldon and based on the oil fields of the West.

"The Legacy Lady" is a society drama story that appeared in the People's Home Journal and was written by Mabel Brown.

Grainger, general manager of sales for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, is making another one of his periodic swings about the country visiting the branch exchanges, the first run exhibitors in the key cities and the studios. Mr. Grainger will visit the following cities en route to Los Angeles—Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and El Paso. On the return trip he will make stops in San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Winnipeg, Minneapolis, Detroit, and Cleveland.

Metro Salesmen Convene at Astor

Formulate Campaign Plans For Handling Important Product For Coming Season

THE annual convention of the sales organization of Metro Pictures Corporation opened at the Hotel Astor Wednesday, June 6th. Salesmen from Metro branches throughout the country, branch managers, district managers and Home Office officials went into a busy four days' session.

The convention was opened by William E. Atkinson, General Manager of Metro Pictures Corporation and was addressed by Marcus Loew.

The first day's session was taken up in the main with a resumé of the business of the past year. General Manager Atkinson gave a comparative analysis of the growth of the Metro organization since its inception and the constant rounds of applause with which his speech was received attested to a very successful passing Metro season.

The entertainment program was one of the most elaborate that has ever been planned in connection with a motion pictures sales convention. On Wednesday evening, following a strenuous day's order of business in the convention room, the visiting managers and Home Office executives were the guests of Louis B. Mayer on an outing at Coney Island. Thursday evening there was a stag dinner at the Astor, given by the Metro Home Office, and on Friday evening the convention delegates and their wives were the guests of Tiffany Productions at a theatre-party which was followed by an after-theatre supper.

The convention will close Saturday night and the officials and salesmen will leave immediately for their offices. The early closing is necessitated by the fact that the Metro sales organization is right now in the midst of a vigorous campaign and the presence of every salesman and branch manager as well as other executives is imperative in their territories. In addition there are several Metro productions recently completed in the west coast studios which are scheduled for summer distribution and sales plans for these go into immediate effect.

The next season's Metro program was announced to the convention Thursday night at the stag banquet at the Astor Hotel. In a prepared summary upon which he elaborated in detail, Mr. Atkinson outlined a series of productions for the Fall season which will eclipse in number and calibre the productions of any program hitherto completed by Metro. In the list are stories that have already been bought and some that are now in the course of actual production. These stories are either from famous books or stage plays of the past several years. In accordance with the policy of the organization, Metro has obtained the best possible directors as well as casts for its forthcoming picture. Mr. Atkinson also declared that in addition to the production at the Metro studios there will be a full Fall release of big independent productions principally among which will be Fred Niblo and Reginald Barker productions through Louis B. Mayer, and the product of several other producers.

Jackie Coogan is now at work on his first Metro production, "Long Live the King" and Rex Ingram is at work on "Searanouche." Among the stars now at work in the Metro studios are Viola Dana and Buster Keaton. Mae Murray has just completed "The French Doll" and has already completed arrangements with Metro officials for two further pictures.

One of the most important announcements in regard to production connection which Mr. Atkinson made to the convention is the consummation of the contract with Joseph Schenck whereby Metro Pictures Corporation will begin distributing in September the new series of Buster Keaton super-special comedies. The first will be called "The Three Ages," which Mr. Atkinson characterized as burlesque on modern civilization. The Keaton comedies will be five reels.

Agnes Ayres and Mahlon Hamilton in "The Heart Raider," on the Paramount schedule.

Schulberg Making Ready for "Maytime"

Production plans are being completed by B. P. Schulberg for the filming of "Maytime," Rida Johnson Young's play, which is now in its seventh successful year on the stage and which was a recent purchase of Schulberg's from the Messrs. Shubert. It will be one of fifteen stories to be released in the near future by Preferred Pictures through the Al Lichtman Corporation. Gaston Glass and Ethel Shannon will play the two principal roles.

Louis Gasnier has been assigned to direct. Preferred Pictures' screen version of "The Boomerang," David Belasco's famous stage production, is scheduled to be started in the near future, according to an announcement by B. P. Schulberg. Eve Unsell is preparing the script from the manuscript by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes.

Mr. Schulberg will begin immediate production on Owen Wister's novel, "The Virginian."

The screen adaptation is now being prepared by Waldemar Young. The story will be directed by Tom Forman.

The name part has been given to Kenneth Harlan. Florence Vidor has been chosen for the feminine lead with Russell Simpson as the Sheriff; Pat O'Malley as "Steve," and Raymond Hatton as "Shorty."

"The Restless Age" to Be Burr Production

"The Rapids," an Ernest Shipman production, appears on the W. W. Hodkinson releasing schedule. The scenes above are taken from this subject.

"Brass Bottle" Will Be Six-Reel Release

M. C. LEVEE, producer, and Director Maurice Tourneur, have definitely decided to release "The Brass Bottle" in six reels in accordance with the demand of many exhibitors for high class shorter pictures.

The forthcoming First National release is now complete in eight reels and could be released in its present form as an outstanding attraction, but Mr. Levee in the effort to live up to his original announcement to keep this picture down to an absolute minimum length has started to rearrange the film. Mr. Tourneur and his staff promise to have it in its final form as a six reel attraction within two weeks, at which time it will be delivered to First National for distribution.

Metro Acquires Keaton Five-Reelers

Signs With Joseph Schenck for Distribution of Series by Popular Comedian

AN important development was made known this week with the announcement from Metro Pictures Corporation that Metro has secured a series of five-reel Buster Keaton productions which will be included in the 1923-1924 program of Metro Pictures Corporation as officially announced at the annual Metro sales convention in progress at the Hotel Astor this week.

Negotiations between Metro and Joseph M. Schenck, producer of the Keaton comedies, have been pending for several weeks, but as several other big distributing corporations were also bidding for the Keaton pictures it was not definitely known that Metro would secure the series until the announcement was made late this week.

The first Keaton comedy is called "The Three Ages." The comedian recently completed this on the west coast under the direction of Eddie Cline. It is characterized as a burlesque on civilization.

Keaton's steady climb to the top of the popular fun makers of the screen has been consistent throughout his career. Joseph M. Schenck, his producer, has already gone on record that he will get the best stories obtainable for Keaton's peculiar genius in comedy and the same goes for production. This has been borne out in the pictures which Keaton has made under Mr. Schenck's banner.

Special emphasis will be laid in the distribution of the Keaton five reelers. In several of the territories the sales force will be increased and it is not unlikely that they may form a special unit in the exchanges, under special consideration. Also it is planned to give each separate Keaton product a rapid and exhaustive distribution and to this end a greater allotment of prints than is usual even with productions of the first class will be distributed among the Metro branches.

The meeting was presided over by General Manager of Distribution, F. M. Brockell, and District Manager, Ralph H. Clark, assisted by S. W. Hatch and Jay Gove. In the evening there was a dinner at the Astor for the visiting executives and salesmen.

Immediately following the close of the New York meeting, Mr. Brockell and Mr. Clark left for Cleveland where the Central District conference was conducted on Sunday under the direction of N. A. Bandy, Central District Manager. R. C. Seery, Mid-Western District Manager, was also present.

From Cleveland Mr. Brockell, Mr. Clark and Mr. Bandy left for Chicago for the Mid-Western District conference which was held on June 4th. Mr. Seery presided. Principal Company Leaves for Arizona

Other stories in the Wright series that will be produced are: "That Printer of Udell's," "The Unerowned King," "Their Yesterdays," "The Shepherd of the Hills," and "The Calling of Dan Matthews."

"Smashing Barriers" Cut to Six-Reeler

A six-reel version of "Smashing Barriers" edited from the thirty-reel serial of the Vitagraph star will soon be ready for distribution, according to announcement by Vitagraph. It is said this is not merely a re-edited picture, but the condensation has been made with full action retained and a consequent speeding of the film. The story has been cut from thirty thousand feet to about six thousand.

"Queen of Sin" Improved with Editing

THE Viennese importation, "The Queen of Sin," which was presented under the auspices of Export & Import, Inc., is now distributed by Selznick. The picture which was altogether too long in its original shape has been extensively edited—and it now appears with a complete set of new titles and with a footage of not more than five thousand feet. The spectacle is now more compact, the action is heightened and the scenes are more properly dovetailed together.

Since the ancient story of the fall of Sodom and Gomorrah is its excuse for picturization—and since it took up five reels in the original, one can plainly see that the majority of modern scenes have been eliminated in order to emphasize the value of the spectacular episodes. "The Queen of Sin" is vastly improved in its new shape and ranks as acceptable entertainment.—L. M. R.

International policies, the comparison of foreign and domestic distribution and exhibition, exploitation and booking of Paramount pictures will be discussed from every angle possible."

George Fitzmaurice, who sailed recently for Rome, Italy, where he will film "The Eternal City" for First National, will be in London at the time of the convention and together with Hall Caine, author of "The Eternal City" will have the opportunity of meeting the men who will present this production to the English public. First National Releases For June

"Penrod and Sam," "Children of Dust" and "Man of Action" Included in Schedule

THREE screen entertainments are offered by Associated First National during the month of June.

Human interest comedy is represented by "Penrod and Sam," Booth Tarkington's story of American boyhood, which is presented by J. K. McDonald through Associated First National. William Beaudine directed, and Ben Alexander, grown from the toddling youngster of "Hearts of the World" to a typical tough and ready American boy of twelve, enacts the principal role.

"Penrod and Sam" is a sequel to "Penrod," by the same author, in which Wesley Barry appeared. Comedy predominates in this picture, although many of the mock-dramatic climaxes of childhood—which change to humor with the perspective of years—add plentiful of heart interest. The cast includes, in addition to Ben Alexander, Gladys Brockwell, Rockliffe Fellows, Buddy Messinger, Gareth Hughes, Mary Philbin, William V. Mong, Newton Hall, Gertrude Messinger and Joe Butterworth, who plays the belligerent and devoted Sam, Penrod's chum. Mr. McDonald, seeking to keep footage of the picture down to the length requested by many exhibitors, announces that it will be released in six reels.

"Children of Dust," presented by Arthur S. Jacobs and directed by Frank Borzage, is a dramatic romance which finds a place on the First National June schedule. The story is by Tristram Tupper and was published under the title of "Terwilliger" in the Metropolitan Magazine and later as a newspaper serial. New York City of 1908 and 1919 is the scene of the story, which traces the history of two boys and a girl from the days of childhood through the climax of early man and womanhood. The cast includes Johnnie Walker, Pauline Garon, Lloyd Hughes, Bert Woodruff, Frankie Lee, Josephine Adair and Newton Hall.

Thomas H. Ince's mystery comedy, "A Man of Action," is a third June release. The story was written directly for the screen by Bradley King. It is directed by James W. Horne and Douglas MacLean has the featured role. He is supported by Marguerite de la Motte, William Courtright, Raymond Hatton and Arthur Steward Hull.

Dustin Farnum Starts Work on "Man Who Won"

Under the direction of William Wellman, Dustin Farnum and his company have been at work on "The Man Who Won." Among those appearing in support of the William Fox star in this picture is baby Muriel McCormac, who scored a decided hit with her performance as one of the twins in "Poor Men's Wives."

Booking Is Corrected for "Human Wreckage"

Mrs. Wallace Reid's anti-narcotic photoplay, "Human Wreckage," will not play at Sid Grauman's Hollywood theatre, which is known as the Egyptian theatre and at which "The Covered Wagon" is now playing and will play for the entire summer. The house that has booked the Mrs. Reid picture is Grauman's Million Dollar theatre in Los Angeles. The error was of a stenographic nature.

"Modern Matrimony," Early Selznick Release

"Modern Matrimony," Owen Moore's last picture for Selznick, has been announced for early release by the Selznick Distributing Corporation. It was written and directed by Victor Heerman.

The supporting cast includes Alice Lake, Mayme Kelso, Frank Campeau, Kate Lester, Victor Potel and Snitz Edwards.

Premiere of "Spider and Rose" at Grauman's, L. A.

Though Irving M. Lesser has decided to hold all of the Super Five Series of the Principal Pictures Corporation for fall release, he arranged a world premier of the first of the series, "The Spider and the Rose," at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles, where it is now playing to capacity houses.

Sid Grauman postponed his trip East in order that he might personally stage the prologue which he had conceived for this production.

Headed by Alice Lake and Gaston Glass, the cast includes Robert McKim, Noah Beery, Alec Francis, Louise Fazenda, Joseph Dowling, Frank Campeau, Otis Harlan, and little Richard Headrick.

"Judgment of Storm" Is Palmer Production

"Judgment of the Storm" will be the first production made by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation. The producers say the story will be somewhat unique because of the comparative scarcity of sub-titles. They contend the action is such and the story so concisely told, that but few sub-titles will be required.

Frank Tilley, of London, to Visit America

Frank Tilley, editor of the Kinematograph Weekly (London), and one of the best known figures in the British film world, is coming to America next month. He will go to the West Coast to study American production methods.

Short-Subject Market Ready for Summer Test

Survey Shows Abundance of Screen Material for Assembling of Diversified Program

A SURVEY of the Short Subject market as represented by its releases between April 1 and the closing days of August shows an abundance of subjects for the exhibitor to draw from in assembling diversified programs for the summer season. In point of release, the short subject product booked for hot weather presentation will considerably antedate April 1, of course, but, judging the market by the releases made available between the dates just cited, exhibitors face no dearth of attractive short subject material for the sultry months.

The survey covered the product being circulated by such leading distributors of short subject and serial productions as Educational Film Exchanges, Pathe Exchanges, Inc.; Universal Pictures Corporation, Vitagraph, Fox Film Corporation, W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, Film Booking Offices of America, Metro Pictures Corporation, Arrow Film Corporation, C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, Grand and Asher, and Tri-Stone Pictures Inc. The survey, including in its scope, as already stated, short subjects and serials released as late as April 1 and scheduled up to the latter part of August, disclosed even for that interval alone over 200 one and two reelers, comedy subjects largely predominating. In addition, there were found to be six serial productions of recent or forthcoming release and the regular periodical issues of such topical and screen magazine numbers as Pathe's "Topics of the Day," "Pathe Review," and "Screen Snapshots"; Universal's "The Mirror," Hodkinson's "Fun from the Press," and F. B. O.'s "Starland Revue." The four news reels are also to be included as very important contributory sources to the diversified programs of motion picture houses during the summer season.

Glancing over the Pathe schedule, we find seven brands of short length comedies. Of these the "Our Gang" group head the list with "Boys to Board," with the kids romping in a boarding school setting, released April 8; "Giants vs. Yanks," in which the youngsters demonstrate in amusing style the national pastime, made available May 13; "Back Stage," a riot of ingenuity and mischief, released June 3, and "Dogs of War," set for July 1. Among the two-reel Westerns, with Leo Maloney, are "Hyde and Zeke," a story with some amusing complications, set for June 10; "Tom, Dick and Harry," scheduled for June 24, and "Steel Shod Evidence," announced for July 8. Of the Hal Roach comedy group we would mention "Under Two Jags," with Stan Laurel, an entertaining travesty on Ouida's famous novel, "Under Two Flags," released June 3; "Piek and Shovel," with the same star on a coal mine location, set for June 17; "For Guests Only," a one-reel Paul Parrott subject, announced for July 22, and the two-reel "Courtship of Miles Sandwich," with Snub Pollard, to be released June 24. Mack Sennett's first comedy to be released by Pathe will be made available July 8, with Ben Turpin in "Where's My Wandering Boy This Evening?"; "The Watch Dog," the second of Hal Roach's "Dippy Doo Dads" series, and one of the most clever all-animal subjects we have seen, is set for June 10. Of the "Aesop's Fables" group we would mention "Spooks" with special emphasis. This number, released June 3, tells the very laughable

Short Subjects and Advertising to Whip Heat

THE season when the Short Subject truly becomes the "spice of the program" is here sooner than we expected. The weather may have jumped from spring to summer in the brief space of a week, but for all its lightning-change it has not caught the short-subject and serial market napping. The accompanying article, presenting a survey of the short-subject market, discloses abundant screen material already on hand to meet the sudden demand for hot-weather programs of diversified attractions.

But has the unexpected advent of sultry days caught the exhibitor equally well-prepared for the proper exploitation of his summer attractions? The presence on a theatre's program of a variety of well-balanced, appropriately chosen, and timely short-length attractions undoubtedly possesses a strong appeal for the picture fan adverse to the idea of sitting through a heavy, lengthy dramatic feature while the cooler temperatures of outdoor pastimes summon him elsewhere for his entertainment.

The diversified program becomes a selling point of the most potent kind for any picture theatre during the summer season. The variety of entertainment on your program at this time bids more strongly for business perhaps than any other single factor, excepting good ventilation.

Why not make this variety the selling point in your advertising! Feature your short subjects in all your displays. Let 'em know that you have the snap, the spice, the variety in your programs that their restless, heat-weary faculties are seeking.—E. F. S.

experiences of Farmer Alfalfa in the spirit world. In the serial field Ruth Roland's "Haunted Valley" is just getting under way, while Pearl White in "Plunder," a March release, is still getting wide showing.

On Educational Film Exchange's schedule for the April to August period we find a wealth of short subject material. The Mermaid Comedies group for this interval number five releases, the Christie Comedies two-reelers, also five offerings; the Lloyd Hamilton group, two; Cameo Comedies, eight one-reelers; Wilderness Tales, four; Lyman H. Howe's Hodge Podge series, also four, and the Earl Hurd comedies, two. Besides, there are two specials—"Golf as Played by Gene Sarazen," a rare treat for golf enthusiasts, released June 3, and Warren A. Newcombe's artistic screen creation, "Sea of Dreams" (reviewed on Page 2,880 of the present issue), set for June 10. Of the Mermaid group we would mention with special emphasis "Cold Chills," released April 29 and featuring Louise Fazenda in a very funny melocomedy, and "Backfire," with Liege Conley, a comedy of unusual calibre. In the Christie group put down as comedy offerings of above the average type, "Roll Along" (May 20 release), a blackface fun film laid in Southern settings; "Plumb Crazy," (released June 3), in which Bobby Vernon tries his hand at plumbing with highly amusing, even though disastrous, results, and "Back to the Woods," made against the background of a real lumber camp, and set for June 17 release. Lloyd Hamilton's "F. O. B.," set for May 13, embodies a generous share of laughable "gags." In the Wilderness Tales group, "From the Windows of My House," released May 20, is a veritable poem in scenic photography, while "Mixed Trails," set for June 17, accomplishes the highly difficult task of telling a story without the intrusion of a sub-title. "Speed Demons," of the Hodge Podge group, released April 29, and "Their Love Grew Cold," of the Earl Hurd Comedies, made available June 3, are highlight entertainment offerings in their respective groups.

The Universal Pictures Corporation schedule abounds in short subject dramatic material. In the groups appearing on the Universal program are such series as "The Third Leather Pushers," based on H. C. Witwer's stories of the prize ring and starring Reginald Denny; the Yorke Norroy series of two-reelers, adapted from stories by George Bronson Howard and starring Roy Stewart; the Lumber Jack series, also with Stewart in the leading role; the Fish Patrol series, based on Jack London's stories, with Jack Mulhall in the stellar part; the "Tales of the Old West," featuring Roy Stewart, and a group of one-reel comedies, fifteen in all, from April 2 to July 9 release, in which Neely Edwards, Lewis Sargent, Bert Roach and Walter Forde appear in the featured roles of the individual subjects. Another important group of comedy releases being distributed by Universal Pictures Corporation are the Century Comedies. Of this group we would place particular emphasis on "The Kid Reporter" (for May release), in which Baby Peggy enacts the role of a detective-reporter; "Carmen, Jr." (set for August), in which Baby Peggy again assumes the make-up and mannerisms of the famed senorita; "Don't Get Fresh," a June release, featuring Buddy Messinger as a bashful boy amid embarrassing but very amusing circumstances; "Why Dogs Leave Home" and "The Imperfect Lover," featuring "Brownie," the clever Century dog, and "Fare Enough" (for June release), a fast-action comedy featuring Jack Cooper. The Universal serial productions recently released and to be released during the summer season include "The Phantom Fortune," with William Desmond, the first episode of which was released March 19; "The Oregon Trail," with Art Acord, also a March release; "The Eagle's Talons," featuring Fred Thomson and Ann Little and released April 30; "In the Days of Daniel Boone," with Jack Mower and Eileen Sedgwick, to be released June 25, and "The

Fine Art Studios Leased for Educational's Units

E. H. Allen, Educational's production manager with the Mermaid, Hamilton and Cameo Comedy units, has leased extensive space in the Fine Arts Studios, Los Angeles, where the 1923-24 series of Mermaid Comedies, Jack White Specials, Lloyd Hamilton Specials and Cameo Comedies will be made.

The combination of production for Educational under one roof and in one large studio is directly in line with the policy of minimizing overhead expense so that more can be spent in actual production.

The Educational comedies produced in the Fine Arts Studio will include a series of twelve Mermaid Comedies and three Jack White Specials, both under the supervision of Jack White; six Hamilton Comedies; and a series of single reel Cameo Comedies.

The Fine Arts Studio is one of the best-known on the Pacific Coast. It was here that Griffith produced "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

The "Gang" in their current Pathe release, titled "Back Stage," run a bus and then try to run a show. They operate the bus with highly satisfactory though very amusing results, but when they get behind the scenes in a vaudeville performance their antics end in a riot of fun and mischief.

How Little Drops of Rain Turn Wheels of Industry

An interesting short-subject number is the current Urban Popular Classic on the Vitagraph schedule, titled, "The Power of the Clouds." The transformation of a drop of rain into electric energy is shown from the time that the gathering clouds above the mountain peaks precipitate a rain fall until the great torrents pouring towards the lower altitudes are harnessed by dams and made to drive the massive turbines that generate electricity for use in the home and business.

Shall Serial Also Be Shortened?

Demand for 10-Episode Production Is Shown in Places; Pathe Plans Survey

THE proper length for a feature production is not to be the only subject for discussion among those in the trade interested in the matter of longer or shorter footages in screen subjects. What is the proper length for a serial? This question has taken its place alongside of the problem, How long should a feature picture run? Already there has been registered a strong and definite demand for a cut in feature lengths, and a tendency has also been manifested in various quarters in favor of fewer episodes in chapter productions.

It is notable in this respect that in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS announcement was made of the coming production of a twelve-episode serial, "The Steel Trail," by Universal Pictures Corporation. This week comes further indications of a cut in the length of serial pictures in the announcement from the Pathe home office that its new serial production, "Her Dangerous Path," featuring Edna Murphy, will be made in ten chapters.

In order to determine on a national scale whether a cut in the number of episodes in each serial would prove popular or not, Pathe Exchanges, Inc., has launched a survey having for its object the gathering of data from exhibitors all over the country which will lead, it is hoped, to a conclusive answer to the question of the most practical length for serial productions.

The standard length for Pathe chapter-picture heretofore has been fifteen episodes. Its next serial, "Her Dangerous Path," featuring Edna Murphy, as already stated, will contain only ten episodes. Pathe officials expect that the release of the ten-episode serial immediately following the public showing of the final episode of the current fifteen-episode serial, "Haunted Valley," will enable exhibitors to make a ready comparison as to the reactions of their audiences to both the ten- and fifteen-episode forms of the serial picture.

In asking exhibitors playing "Her Dangerous Path" to express their preferences regarding serial length, as between the ten- and the fifteen-episode form, Pathe states that a large and important class of theatre owners has recently declared that the latter was better suited to all of their booking and exploitation requirements. Such testimony gathered previously, between two and three years ago, seemed to warrant the continuance of fifteen episodes as the standardized serial length. Since that time, it is explained, the enormously increased circulation of this type of product has included the bookings of a class of exhibitors—operating mainly in the larger cities—who have gone on record as favoring a somewhat shorter length, in some instances suggesting ten episodes as better meeting their program and advance booking requirements.

The suggestion is also made that a ten-episode serial would more nearly conform to the usual magazine serial length. In noteworthy instances these run from eight to ten weekly installments. It is said that both exhibitors and patrons are coming more and more to take into consideration this magazine parallel, and to wonder whether fifteen weeks is not rather a long time to look forward to the denouement of a picture serial.

Langdon in Los Angeles to Start Principal's Series

Harry Langdon, well-known vaudeville player, has arrived in Los Angeles to start work in the first of his series of comedies to be made at the Principal Pictures Corporation's studios in Hollywood. The comedies will be made in two-reel lengths.

Short-Subject Market Ready for Summer

Steel Trail," a railroad adventure serial with William Duncan and Edith Johnson in the leading roles, which is scheduled for August 27 release.

The W. W. Hodkinson offers on its summer schedule a variety of short length attractions. Its All-Star Comedies produced by C. C. Burr include such fun films as "The Pill Pounder," released April 22; "So This Is Hamlet," released May 20; "Helpful Hogan," set for June 17, and "The Wild and Wicked," scheduled for July. In each of these Charles Murray carries the featured role. Among the other releases on the Hodkinson program are the "Rod and Gun" series of sportsmanhood subjects, released at the rate of one a month; the Urban Official Movie Chats, released weekly; the Great Authors series, based on the lives of great authors; Tri-Art series, taken from famous paintings, and the Bray Romances and one-reel comedies. In the last-named group are thirteen new subjects, featuring the animated cartoon character, "Colonel Heeza Liar." In addition, there are the weekly issues of "Fun from the Press" and the two-reel special recently released, titled "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile."

Vitagraph enters the summer season with an attractive array of short subject releases. Heading its schedule are the Larry Semon comedies such as "No Wedding Bells," "The Barnyard" and "The Midnight Cabaret." The first two won marked approval on the occasion of their first-run showings. "The Midnight Cabaret," which is a Broadway "girl" show transferred to the screen, has been scheduled for release late in June. Other Vitagraph comedies of merit recently released are "Forward March" and "The Detective." In both these subjects Jimmy Aubrey plays the featured roles. In addition to its comedy releases Vitagraph also offers a weekly attraction in its series of single-reel Urban Popular Classics. This group contains 52 highly informative and at the same time entertaining subjects covering a wide variety of themes. Science, history, humor, scenic beauty, action and romance find a place in these interesting one-reel subjects that will assist materially in rounding out a well-balanced diversified program for the summer showings.

On F. B. O. short subject schedule three brands of attractions appear. The "Fighting Blood" series contains nine subjects for release between April and August. Of these, "Some Punches and Judy," released April 15; "The Knight That Failed," made available May 13, and "A Grim Fairy Tale," reviewed in this issue on Page 2880, are especially noteworthy. Among the four Carter de Haven comedies released within the interval already specified, "Borrowed Trouble," made available May 13, deserves special emphasis. Four of the "Pop Tuttle" series of comedies also appear in this interval, and of these "Pop Tuttle's Russian Humor," released May 20, and "Pop Tuttle's One-Horse Play," set for June 17, are especially worthy of mention.

The April to August short subject schedule of the Fox Film Corporation offers Al St. John in "The Author," released April 29, and in "A Tropical Romeo," for June release. The Sunshine Comedies group for this period contains "Three-Gun Man," released April 15; "Where There's a Will," made available April 29; "Roaring Lions on a Steamship," issued May 13, and "Apple Sauce" and "Circus Pals," both set for June. On Fox's Educational program for this period appear "School Days in Japan," "An Alaskan Honeymoon," "Algeria," "Crystal Jewels," "Sentinels of the Sea," "Wild Waters" and "The Land of Tutankhamen."

Metro Pictures comes to the aid of the diversified program with three Bull Montana comedies of recent release. They are "Snowed Under," released April 16; "High Society," set for June 4, and "One Wild Day," scheduled for June 25. Metro's Stan Laurel comedies still widely booking include as the last of the series for Metro, "When Knights Were Cold" and "The Handy Man."

Five comedies and two serials appear on the Arrow Film short subject schedule. The two serials are "The Fighting Skipper," starring Peggy O'Day, with Jack Perrin and Francis Ford in support, already released, and "The Santa Fe Trail," a story of the old West, starring Neva Gerber, which is now in production and scheduled for early release. The comedy offerings include "For the Love of Tut" and "Captain Applesauce," of the Eddie Lyons series; "Poor But Honest," "Our Alley" and "Oh Shoot," Mirthquake Comedies, starring Bobby Dunn.

The Hallroom Boys comedies on the C. B. C. schedule include "Only a Husband," "Tin Knights in a Hallroom," "Hams and Yeggs," "Monkeying Around" and "Seaside Simps." These subjects are two reels in length and are released twice a month.

Another company lining up short length comedy attractions is the Grand and Asher Distributing Company. Sid Smith in twelve two-reel comedies, Monty Banks also in twelve two-reel fun films and Joe Rock in another dozen two-reel comedy subjects are among the attractions on the Grand and Asher schedule.

In addition to the short subject material already mentioned is the New Edition Keystone Comedies, which are being handled by the Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc. These old-time popular attractions, re-edited, will again bring before the public some of the present-day established stars in some of their earliest short subject successes. The schedule includes Charley Chaplin in re-issues of his "Dough and Dynamite," "Caught in a Cabaret" and "His Trysting Places."—E. F. SUPPLE.

Story for Third Century Follies Girls Ready

The third story for the Century Follies Girls comedy is in readiness for production. It is the joint product of Archie Mayo and Abe Stern. Mayo will direct it. The story was written especially with an elaborate girlie revue in mind. The tentative title will be "Swells."

Neely Edwards in some amusing situations from Universal's current comedy release titled "Should William Tell?" Bert Roach is seen in support.

Semon Will Do Four More Comedies for Vitagraph

THE announcement in last week's trade press of Larry Semon's decision to go into feature comedy production may have conveyed the impression that his work in the short-subject field for Vitagraph is terminated. This is not so, as Semon will produce four two-reel comedy subjects for Vitagraph to be released during the coming 1923-1924 season. These four comedies will round out the comedian's contract with Vitagraph, which has extended over a period of several years. The four comedies of the new series, on which Semon has started work, will be released in September and November of this year and in January and March of 1924. An announcement to this effect was issued late last week from the office of Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph.

The first of the four is now in production at Vitagraph's Hollywood studios, and work will continue steadily on the rest of the series over a period of several months until the remaining numbers of the group are completed. As in all his recent productions, Semon will direct the subjects as well as playing the leading role.

Vitagraph has scheduled Semon's comedy "The Midnight Cabaret" for showing the latter part of this month. Elaborate sets are said to be a feature of this subject. Kathlyn Meyers appears opposite the star.

"Colonel Heeza Liar" Seen in Jungle Comedy

"Colonel Heeza Liar in the African Jungle" is announced by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation as the next release featuring this cartoon character produced by the Bray Productions, Inc., for release through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Following upon the heels of the interest and success gained by other wild animal pictures in which hunting and trailing of the big game in Africa have been pictured for the benefit of the motion picture public, "Colonel Heeza Liar in the African Jungle" is declared by Hodkinson officials to be particularly timely and opportune.

Jack Mower and Eileen Sedgwick as they appear in the Universal serial "In the Days of Daniel Boone"

Charles Murray stages some comedy in the atmosphere of "Injun" feathers, tomahawks, log cabins, etc., in "The Wild and Wicked," a coming C. C. Burr attraction to be distributed by W. W. Hodkinson.

To Launch Baby Peggy Contests in European Cities

Plans have been decided upon by Otto Kominiek, head of the foreign publicity and service departments of Universal, to invade entire Europe with contests to find the "doubles" of Baby Peggy, four-year-old starlet of Century Comedies.

This is in line with contests now being staged in over fifteen of the large cities in the United States. The foreign countries Mr. Kominiek has in mind to introduce this contest plan take in Germany, Austria, France, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Belgium, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Hungary and Jugoslavia.

Atmospheric Prologue for "Roll Along" at Granada

When the Christie comedy, "Roll Along," goes on at the Granada theatre, San Francisco, under the direction of J. A. Partington, this blackface offering will be presented with a prologue containing appropriate "Down in Dixie" atmosphere, with dancing on the levee and the blackface buck-and-wing artists similar to those in the picture. Mr. Partington, who is managing all of the Rothschild group of theatres in the Bay City, was at the Christie studio during the production of this picture and then laid plans for an atmospheric presentation of the subject.

David J. Chatkin, just appointed Acting Domestic Sales Manager of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

George O'Hara Signed for New F. B. O. Series

George O'Hara has again been signed by F. B. O. to star in another series of twelve pictures adapted from a new group of the H. C. Witwer "Fighting Blood" series and is working in his first vehicle, "So This Is Hollywood."

Mr. O'Hara will be supported by only two members of the former cast, Albert Cooke, who plays his manager, and "Kit" Guard, his trainer, while among the additional cast members are Mary Beth Milford and Louise Lorraine who have begun their work. Mal St. Clair is directing, assisting by Sky Moreno. Lee Garmes and St. Elmo Boyce are at the cameras.

Attractive "Film Fables" Display at N. Y. Strand

"The Mouse Catcher," one of the Aesop's Film Fables series, was made a feature of the lobby display arranged this week by the Mark Strand theatre management, New York. The single column newspaper comic cut drawn by Cartoonist Paul Terry was made the basis of the one-sheet replica prepared by Jay Weaver, house artist.

The Strand one-sheet enlargement for its lobby showing Farmer Al Falfa towed behind Henry Cat's speeding auto at the end of a string attached to his aching tooth attracted many to the comic verse story printed beneath it descriptive of the action of "The Mouse Catcher."

Al St. John in Role of Correspondence-School Sleuth

Al St. John's next comedy production for release by the Fox Film Corporation will bear the title "Clues." In this the comedian will appear in the amazing role of a "correspondence-school detective." Al St. John is credited with the authorship of the scenario in the preparation of which he is said to have the assistance of a Los Angeles detective. It is expected that "Clues" will be an early fall release.

Unusual Shots of Etna in Eruption in Pathe News

It will be one of the functions of the short Subject Department to award special mention to outstanding features appearing from time to time in the various news reels. Pathe News No. 45 contains such a feature this week in its exclusive views of Mount Etna in eruption.

The recent activity of the volcano, which assumed menacing proportions for the first time in ten years, was made the occasion for some risky camera work by the Pathe News representative. The camera party are first shown climbing the snow-covered slopes of Etna and then entering the disturbed area in the upper reaches where the smoke filters through from hundreds of recesses among the rocks. The close-up views of the belching crater showering lava in all directions and hurling the molten masses right into the face of the camera lens are spectacular in force.—E. F. S.

Domestic Sales Manager of Educational Appointed

David J. Chatkin, for the last year a special field representative for Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has been appointed Acting Domestic Sales Manager for organization, according to an announcement made this week by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational.

It was just exactly a year from the time of Mr. Chatkin's appointment as Special Field Representative to Mr. Hammons' announcement that he would assume charge of the Domestic Sales Department.

Entering the motion picture industry in the days when all films were short subjects, Mr. Chatkin has been associated during his entire career with the handling of this type of production. A native of Pittsburgh, Mr. Chatkin was educated in that city, where he attended the Western University of Pennsylvania, after which he went to Chicago, where, in 1907, he entered motion picture work as a salesman for the old Globe Film Company.

Since then Mr. Chatkin has been associated with the Warner's Features, United Film Service, Universal, and the Consolidated Film Exchanges of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Series of Comedies for Vitagraph Under Way

Work is progressing rapidly on the Sam Hellman comedies, which are being produced by the Chester International Pictures Company for release by Vitagraph. There will be eight of these comedies, the first release being, "A Twosome at Tuara," the story of a golf fiend who is wrecked at sea and washed ashore on one of the South Sea Islands where he teaches the savage king to play golf.

The Sam Hellman stories are being published in the Saturday Evening Post.

First of the Earle-Engle Series Is Completed

"Golfmania," the first of the Jack Earle-Billy Engle series for Century Film Corporation, has been completed by Al Herman.

This picture is the opening "shot" of a series of twelve comedies to be made for regular monthly release.

Jean Laverty, Henry Murdock, Fred Spencer and "Spec" O'Donnell, who was "borrowed" from Warner Brothers for this comedy, make up the support of "Golfmania."

BLACK SHADOWS

A Feature

The biggest selling book on travel in many years, dealing with the islands of the South Seas, says that the "brown skinned" girls of Tahiti, the Marquesas and Samoa are as beautiful as any women anywhere; and that this Polynesian race is one of the finest in the world.

You see these dusky beauties in "Black Shadows;" you also see the grotesque and strange belles of the Solomon Islands, as black as coal, the world's champion Marathon dancers!

Contrast! Novelty! Interest! Excitement!

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

PRESIDENT CARL LAEMMLE of Universal has been vacationing in Chicago and Oshkosh for the last ten days and returned to his New York headquarters this week. Mr. Laemmle expects to sail for Europe some time in July.

John M. Howland is leading the mid-west district and is fifth among the 124 salesmen entered in the national contest for the $10,000 prize offered by First National. Chicago is proud of its record as it has six salesmen working out of the local exchange who are among the first ten in the district and the lowest salesman in the national contest ranks forty-one.

Maurice Hellman is in Indianapolis this week, looking over matters at the Indianapolis branch of his Reelcraft exchange. Maurice, who has been regarded as one of the confirmed bachelors of Film Row, is understood to have at last capitulated to cupid and will be married at an early date. He has been kept busy receiving the congratulations of his many friends for the last few days.

The Film Baseball League recently organized by representatives of different exchanges on Film Row, started its summer schedule on June 2nd, and F. B. O. is at the top. Only one game was completed as rain forced the calling of the other contest before the end of the fifth inning.

Manager L. A. Rozelle and District Manager Shirley were attending the Metro's sales convention in New York this week.

First National held an important district meeting in Chicago this week with home office representatives and managers, salesmen and bookers from Minneapolis, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Chicago present. Selling plans were thoroughly discussed and the sales force was enthused over the list of twenty-nine pictures which comprise the 1923-24 First National product. It was pointed out that this is the first time the complete list of releases was known definitely at such an early date and that this information will enable the force to start the open market sales campaign for fall and winter at once. Among those present were Floyd Brockell, of New York, manager of distribution; District Manager Seery, of Chicago; District Manager Bondy, Cleveland, of the central district; District Manager Clark, New York, of the eastern district. A banquet at the College Inn brought the sessions, which were held at the Sherman, to a close.

Herman Stern and Louis Laemmle spent part of the week in St. Louis in conference with the manager of that exchange.

W. W. Brumberg, country sales manager of First National, is leaving next week for his vacation and will visit Tulsa, Okla., and other points before returning to Chicago. For the first time in two years, First National is allowing its senior salesmen vacations and J. M. Howland, Jack Schwartz, Tom R. Gillan and Phil Dunas are in line for a rest on company money.

New Orleans Manager Bryant, who is in charge of First National and Metro product in the Crescent City, stopped off in Chicago en route to the Metro convention in New York City.

The first time a motion picture has been shown in Hoopston on Decoration Day, was this year, when the Lorraine theatre made a tie up with the American Legion and played "Skin Deep" to big business.

The summer season is having a dampening effect on the activities of the speaking stage and Cohan's Grand has decided to abandon mid-week matinees for the summer. Other houses will shortly follow suit, it is understood. The Cort recently had a severe lesson as to interest of Chicago crowds in summer theatres, when there were not enough people seeking admission to "The Voice" on Wednesday matinee to justify a performance. It is reported that only thirty-one ticket holders were present and they were given their money back and sent away. The first hot spell of the season slowed up business materially in many Chicago movie houses, but a number of those having specially good attractions, reported business good despite the rise in temperature.

Despite the opposition voiced generally in the Chicago press to the proposed bill which prohibits daylight saving in Chicago, the measure passed the State Senate by a vote of twenty-eight to fifteen and is now waiting action in the house. Motion picture men, who were interested in the bill, are fearful that owing to it being introduced so late in the session, it may not reach a vote in the lower house, which has a great mass of belated legislation waiting its attention. The act as passed in the senate, invalidates any ordinance passed by any city or village authorizing the community to save an hour of sunshine daily, and in addition to the moving picture interests, has the backing of Chicago wholesalers, Chicago Federation of Labor, stockyard employees, post office workers and many rural communities throughout the state.

The Fulco Sales Company at 24 E. Eighth Street, have completed work of remodelling and refurnishing their projection room, and this enterprising firm now has a miniature theatre with a seating capacity of eighth, which is a credit to Film Row. The equipment includes a Da-Lite Screen, a set of velvet draw curtains, a handsomely painted drop curtain, fine leather upholstered chairs and a battery of the latest model Power's Projectors. An unusual feature of the projection room is a fine Kimball pipe organ with drums and numerous up-to-date attachments, which has been installed so that adequate musical setting can be given pictures shown on the Fulco Sales projection room screen.

Hal Opperman, of Pontiac, Illinois, is planning the erection of a one thousand seat modern theatre on a site he has recently acquired at the northwest corner of West Madison and Plum streets, that city. Mr. Opperman is the owner of the Crescent and Bond theatres in Pontiac.

D. J. Chrissis, owner of the New Regent and Charm theatres, is scheduled to become a benedict on Sunday, June 10th, when his marriage to a charming Grand Rapids girl will be solemnized with elaborate ceremonies, at the Sherman Hotel. Following the marriage Mr. Chrissis will be host to two hundred of his friends at a banquet at which Bill Sweeney was to be master of ceremonies, which assures the success of the party.

"H. A. Snow's Hunting Big Game in Africa With Gun and Camera," closed its long run at the Randolph on June 2nd after six weeks of remarkable business and will now be released throughout the territory. Another picture which has enjoyed a very successful run is "Enemies Of Women," which is having its final week at the Roosevelt, having been shown for seven weeks. "The Covered Wagon" is in its fifth week at the Woods and promises to last for some time to come. Another big picture, which is just getting started on what looks like a long engagement, is "Safety Last," which is in its second week at Orchestra Hall.

Milton Simon, former manager of F. B. O.'s St. Louis exchange, and well known on Chicago's Film Row, is now manager of Warner Brothers offices in Washington, D. C.

Lou Bent is moving from St. Louis to Chicago, in both of which cities he has a wide acquaintance among motion picture men. Mr.

Bent has accepted a position as secretary and treasurer of the Midwest Amusement Company, Saul's Circus and Carnival combination and will be located in our city for the summer.

The Grand theatre at Sparta, Illinois, has been taken over by Bob Cluster, of Johnson City.

Ralph Lewis, Chicago's famous film star, was called here last week by the fatal illness of his father, Captain E. R. Lewis, well known in Grand Army circles and superintendent of records of burial places of soldiers and sailors of Illinois. Captain Lewis passed away at his residence, 7458 Normal Avenue, a few hours after his son arrived from Los Angeles, and was buried at Rosehill Cemetery on Monday. One of his notable accomplishments was the record compiled by him of all the soldiers and sailors buried in cemeteries of Cook County, who fought in all the wars in which America has been engaged. Ralph Lewis' latest success, "Westbound Limited," opened for a week's engagement at the State-Lake theatre, Monday, and his two most recent successes previous to this were scored in the Emery Johnson Productions in "The Third Alarm," and "In the Name Of the Law." He was born and brought up in Englewood, graduated from Evanston High School and attended Northwestern University, and has a host of Chicago friends.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer hope to complete the remodelling of the Orpheum theatre early in July. During the process of bringing the house up to date, however, there will be no interruption in the usual continuous program at this theatre, but when alterations are finished, the Orpheum will become the home of long runs. George H. Moore, who has managed the Orpheum for fifteen years, will continue to do so. At the Rialto a change in policy for the summer months has been instituted. A feature picture, in addition to the vaudeville acts, being on the regular program, with a change every Monday.

It is reported that A. L. Hainline, of the Illinois theatre, Macomb, will take over the Tokoyo and Grand theatres, which have been operated by V. F. Grubb.

Harry Thornton, of the Gaiety and Princess theatres, Springfield, Illinois, stopped over in Chicago this week, en route to New York, where he will visit First National headquarters, and then proceed to Washington for the big Shrine convention. Window display on "The Flirt," giving the picture good prominence, arranged by Manager Jean Finley of the Old Mill, Dallas

"Nanook of the North" Given Support of Club Women

St. Louis, Mo.—The run of "Nanook of the North" at the Pershing theatre was opened with a concentrated campaign, planned by Pathe Branch Manager Frank Harris, St. Louis, and having the whole-hearted co-operation of the St. Louis Motion Picture Council, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish churches and executives and private schools, etc.

"Nanook of the North" was screened before representatives of twelve women's clubs and betterment organizations, one of which became keenly interested in the offering. When an opportunity arose for the women of this organization to affiliate themselves with a National movement for the endorsement of motion pictures, now known as the St. Louis Motion Picture Council, they immediately started to promote a showing of "Nanook."

The Council is composed of one representative from practically every women's society of consequence in St. Louis. Mr. Harris con-

"Souls for Sale" Heavily Billed in Campaign

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—John W. Hawkins, general manager of the Capitol theatre, and Goldwynner Buddy Stuart, gave "Souls for Sale" an unusually heavy campaign for a city of this size.

The billboard posting consisted of five 24-sheets, two 6-sheets, four 3-sheets and 250 one-sheets. In addition to this 5,000 heralds, 1,000 hangers, 1,000 soles and 2,000 stickers were used. These small accessories were distributed from house to house, done up in packages from grocery and other stores, placed on counters of many additional stores and mailed out to a selected list of patrons.

The New Bedford Times ran the same full page ad that was used in the New York Sunday Telegram in connection with the showing of the film at the Capitol theatre there. It was run, however, without the names of the players whose pictures appeared. Prizes were offered for those who guessed correctly the greatest number of names of the players. This contest was new in New Bedford, and it proved of special advantage.

centrated on this organization, and through it arranged for "Nanook of the North" to be used as the central point around which the Post-Dispatch would raise its "Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund." The Post-Dispatch's co-operation having been secured, little difficulty was experienced in selling two private individuals the idea of putting on "Nanook."

At this stage the Council had no difficulty in obtaining influential letters of approval of the "Nanook" enterprise.

The "Nanook" benefit engagement opened at the Pershing on May 26. The next day (Sunday) an announcement was made from every Catholic church pulpit in St. Louis, to be repeated every Sunday during the engagement.

A commendatory article was arranged to appear in the Church Bulletin, a Protestant publication, distributed through the Protestant churches of the city. The leading lights of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths have joined hands and are pushing "Nanook" to the utmost. Mayor Kiel was the guest of honor on the opening night, and addressed the audience in the interest of the Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund and "Nanook of the North."

"Strangers' Banquet" Appeal Made to Railroad Men

Springfield, Mo.—When "The Strangers' Banquet" was shown at Landers Orpheum theatre, Keaton Franklin, advertising manager of the theatre, and Goldwynner Homer Gill made a special play for the many union railroad men in Springfield. There are many union men in Springfield, and the railroad offices are just organizing. A special herald playing on the capital and labor aspect of the film and carrying a cut of the labor agitator in the picture was printed and distributed at all union headquarters and at the railroad shops. This resulted in an unusually heavy attendance from union workers at the theatre.

Special card invitations to attend "The Strangers' Banquet" were placed in four of the most popular cafes. The wife of the theatre publicity manager spent a day and a half at the telephone giving special invitations to the women of Springfield to attend the picture. A window tie-up flash was obtained with a store handling foodstuffs. The store was in a good location and the banquet idea was carried out in decorations as well as the display of foodstuffs. It attracted much attention.

A shadow box was made from the one-sheet poster and placed in the lobby of the Colonial Hotel. An invitation card to the showing of the picture was attached to the shadow box.

Oil Field Angle Worked to Aid "Back Home and Broke"

Fort Worth, Texas.—An especially appropriate angle was used to exploit "Back Home and Broke" by Manager Barry Burke, of the Palace theatre.

Fort Worth is located in the heart of the oil district of Texas, and since its population is made up largely of people seeking their fortune in oil, Mr. Burke decided to capitalize upon this angle in all his advertising. In the lobby of the theatre was built in miniature an oil field showing several small oil derricks in operation. These derricks were made to operate by motors concealed behind beaver board frames. Small cut-outs of Thomas Meighan and other characters in the picture helped to connect the oil field scene with the picture on the screen.

Several windows were loaned Mr. Burke in the downtown district for displays, in which he carried out the same oil derrick idea by using toy "destruetos," putting them together to resemble a derrick in operation. These windows carried, for a background, scenery painted on beaver board. Also several announcements about the picture, the cast and the author were in prominence in the displays.

Attractive "White Flower" Lobby Made from Canes

ANNISTON, ALA.—The principal feature of exploitation used by Manager Roy Smart of the Noble theatre on "The White Flower" was the lobby display. A large quantity of long canes was obtained from a creek several miles from Anniston, where they grew in abundance. Two wagon loads of these completely transformed the Noble lobby, giving it a tropical atmosphere.

The front of the theatre and marquee were almost enclosed with these, and they were banked around the box office, leaving just enough room for traffic to pass under the marquee. Standing on end, their tops reached well above the marquee, and their long flowing foliage rustled in the breeze.

Free Tickets Given Girls in "Souls for Sale" Stunt

Easton, Pa.—The movie questionnaire tie-up on "Souls for Sale" was used by the Easton Free Press, through the efforts of Manager John Slater of the Strand theatre and Goldwynner William N. Robson.

Beginning on May 7th, a week in advance of the opening of the film, the Free Press ran a story every day, telling the girls in that city ambitious for a motion picture career how to break into the movies, running an account of Eleanor Boardman's rapid rise in the profession. Each issue also carried Robson's movie questionnaire which the girls were requested to fill in.

The movie questionnaire was varied somewhat, however, for the Easton showing. It was tied up with a page of commercial advertising, participated in by ten merchants. The first fifteen girls to take the filled questionnaire to one of the ten merchants was given a free ticket to see "Souls for Sale." The merchant was furnished with a one-sheet card for his window with a still mounted on it and lettering to the effect that the first fifteen girls bringing in the filled questionnaire would be given a free ticket.

The auto tags "This auto not for sale" was used freely in Easton and proved a valuable asset.

Effective Lobby Arranged for "Glimpses of the Moon"

Memphis, Tenn.—Manager A. B. Morrison of Loew's Palace theatre, put on an excellent campaign for "The Glimpses of the Moon," starting one week in advance and continuing up to play date, when he opened up with an elaborate lobby display.

A week in advance his foyer was dressed for the coming attraction. In one corner he placed a large full moon, about eight feet in diameter. The eyes of this moon were cut away and covered with transparent paper, electric lights were placed back of them and connected to a flasher socket, thus giving a winking effect.

Crescent moons with profiles on them were placed about the foyer in prominent places. Large stars, some bearing the title and others the names of different members of the cast, were also hung about.

For showing, all of these moons and stars were moved to the outside. The large full moon was moved and mounted on top of the marquee, while the crescents and stars were suspended underneath the marquee.

A large telescope was used inside in advance, as well as outside during playing.

Strong Book Tie-up Made with Store on "The Christian"

Youngstown, Ohio—An effective tie-up with a department store was obtained for the showing of "The Christian" at the Liberty theatre by Goldwynner H. T. Snowden and Manager C. W. Dieble of that theatre. By allowing G. M. McKelvey & Co., leading department store, to give away with each copy of the novel purchased a ticket to a matinee performance of "The Christian," the store gave an entire window to an exclusive display of the novel and the photoplay, and also gave a big display inside in the book section.

In the window display was a large oil painting, two smaller oil paintings, a special card framed, and 122 copies of the book. A card read: "A free ticket to the Liberty with each purchase of the book." The inside display consisted of a large oil painting, three smaller ones, several photographic enlargements, a special card and copies of the novel. The store also advertised the picture and the novel in its newspaper display advertising.

A display in the window of Levinson's jewelry store carried two stills of the picture, in silver frames, with a card between reading: "Levinson—Famous for Diamonds. 'The Christian'—Famous as the greatest love story ever told. At the Liberty all next week."

Plays Up Local People in "Ne'er-Do-Well" Ad

CLEVELAND, OHIO — M. A. Malaney, in charge of publicity for Loew's Ohio theatres, did some good work when he advertised "The Ne'er-Do-Well" as the coming attraction at the Stillman theatre, Cleveland. The ad stated that many prominent Cleveland people participated in the making of the picture, especially that part which was made in Bermuda. Then he went on to name at least fifty people, socially prominent in this city, all of whom appeared with Thomas Meighan in his picture. It brought the picture right home to every Clevelander, and created an unusual interest in the production.

Wedding on Stage Exploits Run of "The Go-Getter"

CENTRALIA, ILL.—In advance of the run of "The Go-Getter," Manager Elmer Brient of the Illinois theatre inserted a want ad in the local paper reading: "A go-getter who will go-get-her and tie the knot on the theatre stage. Apply to Elmer Brient, Manager."

In other words, he wanted to know were there two people in Centralia spunky enough to get married on the stage of the Illinois theatre, and two people did answer.

It seemed like a town tie-up, for every merchant agreed to give something to the couple to start them off.

Teaser Shawl Campaign for "The Bright Shawl"

SANDUSKY, Ohio—A blind exploitation campaign has been started several weeks in advance by George Schade of Schade's theatre on "The Bright Shawl."

The curious situation is explained by the fact that since seeing a pre-view of "The Bright Shawl" Schade has started a Paisley shawl craze in Sandusky. The newspapers and stores have taken it up and talk is now on about a shawl show. Schade is keeping that in reserve for the time he plays "The Bright Shawl" and will probably see that it is held right in the lobby of the theatre.

In the meantime not a word is being said about the picture and the shawl craze is gaining favor just by word-of-mouth advertising.

Human Interest Story Planted to Boost "Strongheart"

Harrisburg, Pa.—A human interest story that the Victoria theatre easily got across as straight news was used to exploit Strongheart in "Brawn of the North."

Strongheart, being a police dog of large proportions, C. Floyd Hopkins, manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg, inquired until he found some one in the city who had a dog of the same kind.

Hopkins invited Eckinger and his dog to the theatre and gave them front seats when the "Strongheart" was displayed. "Bob" showed considerable interest in the play on the screen; wagged his tail approvingly when Strongheart did something heroic, and growled threateningly when the screen dog got in a tight place.

Of course, Hopkins had tipped off the newspapers that "Bob" would be there, and the city editors saw the prospect for a corking story. They had reporters there, and it made good reading under conspicuous headlines, and the theatre, of course, got the benefit of the publicity.

Postcard Stunt is Worked in Advance of "Bavu" Run

SEATTLE, WASH.—Three days before the run of "Bavu" began at Manager R. W. Case's Clumbia theatre, Robert Bender, Universal exploiteer, had mailed from Portland, Oregon, more than five thousand postcards to a selected mailing list of Seattle residents.

The cards were printed in a style that resembled a woman's handwriting, and the addressing was done in a similar style, using the same color ink, etc., so that the entire card had the appearance of a personal message. The wording on the card was as follows:

"Dear Martha: I'd just love to tell you all about it because I am still all thrilly from the most mysterious, everlastingly exciting thing I ever saw. In fact, almost everyone in Portland is saying: 'Sh-h-h Bavu!' And it has such a perfectly marvelous cast. Wallace Beery, who was so wonderful in 'Robin Hood,' is in it, and Forrest Stanley is the handsomest thing you ever saw. I heard it starts at the Columbia theatre in Seattle on Saturday, and I thought I would just drop you a line and suggest that you see 'Bavu.' Sincerely, S."

These cards, received by Seattle residents, postmarked from Portland, occasioned quite a bit of comment. Another stunt used by Manager Case that had excellent results was the simple plan of having his doormen and girl ushers whisper "Sh-h-h Bavu" to patrons who entered the theatre and were shown to their seats at the previous week's show.

"Oliver Twist" Stunt Is Aimed at Mothers

IRONTON, OHIO—How an eight-year-old boy with a million dollar yearly income should be reared was the problem put up to mothers of Iron-ton when "Oliver Twist" played the Marlow theatre. Nick McMahon staged the Million Dollar Baby contest and the Iron-ton Register acted as umpire and published every side or the argument and, to judge the returns to the paper, there were about 2,514 best ways for bringing up Jackie Coogan as an earnest, enterprising and spirited, albeit, wealthy American citizen.

The Jackie Coogan club was formed and one of Jackie's suits provided a window display in conjunction with the rest of the exploitation campaign.

Tie-up with Wholesale Coffee House Made on "Grumpy"

Duluth, Minn.—Manager J. B. Clinton, of the Lyceum theatre, and Jack Hellman, Paramount exploiter, put over an excellent tie-up for "Grumpy."

A wholesale coffee company tied up with the theatre and furnished coffee enough to fill 5,000 bags which were furnished by the theatre with the words "This is the recent cup of coffee that Theodore Roberts couldn't get in 'Grumpy'."

The coffee was distributed by girls who by chance were canvassing for the theatre anyway, and so served the double purpose admirably.

A candy maker was induced to make a "Grumpy Bar," which he advertised by a window display. A jewelry store gave the theatre a window also taking the diamond angle, and a millinery shop chimed in with a hat window playing up on May McAvoy.

"Only a Shop Girl" Exploited With Anniversary Program

San Francisco, Cal.—Under the direction of Manager Lionel H. Keene, Loew's Warfield theatre inaugurated a week's celebration of its first anniversary, for which a special program upon the stage, screen and even roof of the building was prepared.

The roof was the scene of a big "balloon ascension" the first Monday morning. At that time and on that date 1,000 jumbo toy balloons were released from the roof of Loew's Warfield building. To each balloon was attached an envelope containing free tickets for the theatre during its first birthday week.

"The Sherwood's Pullman Party" was the stage production for the week. Bob and Gale Sherwood, who had just returned from a vacation, presented the members of their syncopating band in the act, employing altogether thirty "passengers," who appeared in the four different scenes, chief of which was the return trip of the band that was "held-up" in a Pullman car. All in the band were compelled to entertain the "hold-up," as he had his revolver hanging on his side. Instead of common printed programs, those who crowded the theatre were given programs printed as railroad tickets.

Manager Keene for the week employed a girl to enter the crowded cars of the city and when a man would give her his seat she would thank him, hand him a pass and add, I'm "Only A Shop Girl," as that was the name of the feature. That idea, together with the others, brought Keene many compliments.

Washington Film Row and Theatre Brevities

MEMORIAL DAY observances, and the early opening of the Shriners "Passing of the West" Rodeo, and allied carnivals as well as the nocturnal motor concourse of citizens and guests on Pennsylvania Avenue, and the restriction on parking and one way traffic rules on account of the Shrine conclave congestion, have hindered business at Washington theatres. The merchants have suffered slightly, but exhibitors have been hit the hardest, especially as the roof gardens and the amusement parks opened at the same time.

The Cosmos management, following the return of A. J. Brylawski, from Chicago, announced a complete change of policy as an experiment for the summer months. First-run features and short subjects will be run all week, from midnight Sunday, June 3, the midnight shows being in vogue at Polis, Cosmos, Gayety and the other playhouses and film houses during the Conclave. With the opening of the fall season the vaudeville and picture policy will be resumed until the new Cosmopolitan is completed. The cooling ventilation system has been tuned up and is ready for the heat. A. J. Brylawski has been in New York the latter part of the week.

Sig Newman, orchestra leader, is to figure in the summer program at the Strand.

Harry Crandall in showing the Barthelme-Gish-Hergesheimer picture, "The Bright Shawl," has not only held the picture over for a second (Shrine) week, but has gone so far as to get Miss Gish to send him the shawl presented her by the Republic of Cuba, and has placed it on exhibition at the nearby shop of Frank R. Jellef, 1215 F Street. Local insurance men refuse to tell the premium charged for the window in which the $25,000 shawl and thousands of dollars in other articles are displayed.

Dorothy Davenport returned to New York, following her engagement in the Washington Photoplay unit here that produced "A Girl's Decision," and "Sterling." The unit is resting pending "location" on the next picture to be shot.

Special sales representative Rogers of the Fox offices, New York, visited Manager George Roberts here during the week.

Despite spotty conditions in the city and in the Carolinas, C. R. Cullingworth from the Vitagraph home office, 1400 Locust Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. C., who has been here the past ten days, filling in as sales representative in the Carolinas for the Washington manager, Charles Spoehr, concurs with Mr. Spoehr in reporting conditions as good in the Washington territory, especially the Virginia cities and Eastern Virginia key towns. "Unusually good for late spring and early summer," says Charlie.

Mr. Cullingworth seemed cheered even with the results of his Carolina tour. Spoehr and J. "Vic" Norton, his Virginia salesman, have been touring the state, the manager in the Tidewater section and Norton in the "Climax Valley" of the Virginias where an extensive tour has brought in the play and pay dates.

C. L. Kendall, Division Manager for Vitagraph, spent a day or so in the territory, departing for New York City Friday evening.

Visitors who were here during the week to see the new projection room in the Vitagraph studio and to meet Messrs. Kendall, Cullingworth and Spoehr, included: General Manager Otto Wells, of the Jake Wells Enterprises, Nor-

Walter Price, manager for the Goldwyn interests here, is missing the valuable services of his private secretary, Miss Landreau, who has been given a signal promotion to the Chicago district manager's office of George Hickey, former district manager for the branches at Boston, Washington, Buffalo and Philadelphia. Miss Landreau is one of the young women who learned the film business in the theatres and the general offices of Marcus Loew, Inc., and has been well received in local film circles. Relieving her, is Miss Temple, formerly special representative of the Will Hays organization at the Minneapolis film center.

A recent Film Row man to take the Mystic Shrine obligation was C. B. Nuckols, Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, here, he being one of the final 44 who took auditor for the brief ceremonial last week.

Cardinal Martinelli has been made Eastern representative for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, it is learned here.

The recent moonlight river trip of the Paramount club was enjoyed by the bulk of the membership. Among those present were the chief inspector, Miss Hannan, and her assistants, as follows: Misses Ruby Balderson, Ruby Mathers, Catherine Bussink, Eva Henderson, Mildred Cahill and Gloria Greenley, who has served the Lasky concern for over two years, and is planning to take her vacation leave first, going to Atlantic City. The others will get their leaves in rotation. Miss Marguerite Dunham and Miss Hannan will no doubt follow Miss Greenley. The Crandall organization as well as his hosts of friends were shocked last week to learn of the death of Celestino Mens, for many years solo cellist at the Metropolitan theatre. Mr. Mens was stricken with pneumonia April 28, and following a seemingly quick recovery he suffered a relapse that developed into pleurisy in both lungs. The end came on Saturday and funeral services were held Tuesday.

Daniel Breeskin and augmented Savoy theatre symphony is giving a series of concerts nightly in the Savoy al fresco garden. The Apollo garden also opened a week ago.

Stanley W. Rhodes, concert organist, who has attained wide popularity by the versatility of his playing at Crandall's Apollo theatre, has transferred his activities to Crandall's Avenue Grand Theatre, where he will dedicate the new $30,000 Wurlitzer orchestra-unit pipe organ that has just been installed. This is said to be the largest instrument south of New York and embodies every modern attachment essential to theatre use.

Work has so far progressed on Crandall's new Ambassador theatre at Eighteenth street and Columbia Road that the handsome new playhouse is completely under roof and the definite announcement made that it will be ready for formal opening not later than August 15, and perhaps as early as July 15. It will have an approximate seating capacity of 2,000 and will be the handsomest theatre in Washington and one of the most beautiful in the country.

Johnny Upperman's Apollo team in the Crandall Baseball League surprised the talent recently by leaping from last place to first in the club standings.

Booker Palmer of the Beaver-Lichtman office here announced the closing at the Strand of a Preferred picture and the booking under the new Cosmos policy of the latest Preferred picture there for next week, Monday, June 4.

Protests of humane societies, club women and church folk against Sunday shows at the Rodeo, and against bull-dogging, et al., are approved by local film men. The press is full of such protests. All for the poor animals. Even the idea of a carnival is opposed. Maybe the picture interests are not pleased?

Albany Notes and Eastern New York Briefs

HERE he is with a broad smile, but who could blame him? His name is H. S. Vineberg. He hails from Albany and has just been named as house manager for the Mark Strand theatre in that city. While

H. S. Vineberg

Mr. Vineberg has made many a change during the last few years, he has the satisfaction that practically every one of these has meant an advancement.

To begin with, Mr. Vineberg was associated with the old Colonial theatre in Albany, back in 1913, when it was handled by Oscar Perrin and Ollie Stacey, and when it showed the first feature, which, by the way, was "Oliver Twist," in that section of the state. After two years with the Colonial, Mr. Vineberg was next heard of at Proctor's Grand, and then later on with Uly Hill in the box office at Harmanus-Bleecker Hall. After that Mr. Vineberg entered the employ of the state, being with the Department of Public Works, and then joining the colors in 1918. After returning to civilian life, he worked for a time in a pawnshop, then got married, started in selling film for Merit, went with Pathe last summer, and then joined up with the new State theatre in Schenectady, and was later on associated with the Troy, in Troy.

Everyone around central New York knows Mr. Vineberg, and the best part of that is that everyone who knows him likes him.

Lew Fischer, who runs three houses at Ticonderoga, Fort Edward and Port Henry, while in Albany last week, said that he would close the Ticonderoga and Fort Edward houses for three days a week from the last of June on. If business warrants, the one at Port Henry will be run all summer.

Work is going along in a satisfactory way on Bill Benton's new house in Whitehall, and the opening will probably occur along about October 1. The house will seat 1,000.

Lew Fischer is talking of building a new house at Fort Edward next year, and in the meantime, may take over the Star, in Mineville.

If there is one woman who is always a welcomed visitor along Film Row, it is Mrs. D. S. Regan, of the Star, in Greenwich. She was in town last week, but her visits will probably be less frequent after June 15, when the house will close for remodeling.

Nearly all of the theatres in this part of the state reported poor business on Decoration Day. The reason is too many automobiles and too fine weather.

Charles Sesonske, who has been handling the Avon in Watertown for the last two years, has returned to Johnstown, where he will handle his own theatre, the Grand, which he has owned for the last year or so.

Vic Bendell, manager for F. B. O., in Albany, is endeavoring to get an audience with Governor Smith for a private screening of Mrs. Wallace Reid's picture on drug addiction. If successful, Mrs. Reid will also attend.

"What do you mean by summer prices?" inquired Vic Bendell, the other day, of H. C. McNamara, who runs the motion picture theatre at Valatie, and who works for Uncle Sam in the postoffice, as well. "I mean B. V. D. prices," replied Mr. McNamara, as he continued his attempts to get one of F. B. O.'s features at a lower price.

Rusk and Andrews, of Haines Falls, who cater to a large summer patronage, have reopened their house which is called "The Wauwaunda."

Speaking of daylight saving, and its effects upon the theatres, H. C. McNamara claims that it is costing him a whole lot of money these days in Valatie, a mill town. The same condition of affairs prevails in Philmont. Last summer business got so poor through daylight saving that Mr. McNamara operated his house only one night a week.

Around Seattle's Photoplay Trade Circles

A VERDICT for $700 against City Councilman E. L. Blaine, his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. L. Gellerman was returned in Seattle recently by a jury in Superior Court. E. B. Bachellor, 62, and Mrs. Rachael D. Bachellor, his wife, were the plaintiffs. The complaint asserted that the defendants offered Puritan Theatre Company stock to the plaintiffs for $700, promising to give Mr. Bachellor a job as janitor in the theatre and also promising to repurchase the stock if for any reason Mr. Bachellor was discharged. It also charged that when Mr. Bachellor was discharged the defendants refused to repurchase the stock. The Puritan company formerly owned and operated the College Inn theatre and built the Neptune theatre, which was later purchased by the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit and is now operated by the latter organization.

R. W. Case, manager of the Columbia theatre, has severed his connections with that organization and has left the city for Kansas City, where he will spend a few weeks' vacation before proceeding to the Eastern coast. He has been succeeded at the Columbia by Harold V. Ornstom, an exhibitor well known in Pacific coast theatre circles, who came to this post from Grauman's theatre in Los Angeles.

THE Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, through its building inspection department, has issued an order that the new Coliseum, recently built in Harrisburg, by Peter Magaro, proprietor of the New Regent picture theatre, may be used only for dances and public gatherings, and not for theatrical exhibitions or occasions requiring the use of a stage. The order sets forth that the Coliseum is a second story auditorium which, it is held, does not conform with the provisions of the law, as to exits and so forth, applying to theatres. The Coliseum is not to be confused with the Magaro theatre property which is quite a distinct building.

Magaro has issued a statement saying that he had no intention of using the Coliseum for anything but as a dance hall and convention hall, and that, moreover, he obtained the approval of one bureau of the State Department of Labor and Industry to the plans for the building before it was erected.

Lee has planned many of the Chamberlain theatres. Mr. Chamberlain recently entered upon theatrical ventures in Lansford and Danville, in addition to those in which he already was interested.

Theatre and Exchange Briefs from Canada

THE extent to which Marcus Loew of New York is now interested in Loew's Ottawa theatre, Limited, Ottawa, Ontario, was indicated in a formal statement issued by the Ottawa company on June 1 when intimation was given that Mr. Loew only derived a booking fee from the theatre, this fee being designated as "reasonable." It was also stated that Mr. Loew held a block of common stock in the company but that he did not derive any benefit from this until all charges were paid, including depreciation and dividends on preferred shares.

The announcement was made following the transfer of the office of the Ottawa theatre company from Montreal, Quebec, to Ottawa, and it is significant that the statement came following the news that the Loew house at Montreal had been taken over by the Famous Players' Canadian Corporation. It was pointed out that the bulk of the Ottawa theatre stock and notes were held in Ottawa and that shareholders were now represented on the board by T. C. Bate of Ottawa, president, and E. McMahon, Ottawa, vice-president, with a third Ottawa director to be elected. An Ottawa secretary-treasurer is being appointed and a weekly audit of receipts and accounts is now to be made by W. Y. Denison of Ottawa, chartered accountant.

The management of Loew's Ottawa theatre continues to be vested in Capt. F. W. Goodale who went to Ottawa from Cleveland over one year ago. It is conceded that his management had much to do with the increased success of the house. Receipts for the first four months of the present calendar year were far in excess of those for the corresponding period of 1922, it was announced.

After spending eight weeks and two days in bed with blindness, Harry Brouse, the prominent exhibitor of Ottawa, Ontario, is once more getting around and the decision of the specialists who attended him is that he will enjoy partial sight but that it is very unlikely that he will be able to read again. He is able to get around without assistance, however. A few days after getting out of bed, Mr. Brouse resumed big business dealings by purchasing the $60,000 stock of Castle, Limited, a large local wholesale grocery firm. Mr. Brouse has varied interests in Ottawa, including theatres, hotel, a factory, retail stores and much real estate.

The situation among the moving picture theatres of Winnipeg, Manitoba, is noteworthy. Not one of the 33 local houses have closed down during the past year in spite of the fact that Winnipeg is generally regarded as being "overscattered." Business has varied with the large theatres and it is interesting to note that the smaller houses have enjoyed steady patronage.

The flow of large English productions to Canada continues to be extensive and first run engagements are being secured in various leading theatres. The latest English picture to make its appearance is G. B. Samuelson's "Tilly of Bloomsbury," which had its first Canadian run at the Allen theatre, Toronto, the home house of the Allen theatre chain, during the week of June 4.

The Imperial theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, gives an example of timely booking in its programme for the week of July 2, this being the first week of the school holidays. The feature secured for that week is "Toby Tyler," starring Jackie Coogan, and "The Kid Reporter," a comedy in which Baby Peggy is starred.

Walter Golding, proprietor of the Imperial theatre, St. John, N. B., assisted materially in making the large party of settlers from the Hebrides, which landed recently in St. John, feel at home in the new country. Mr. Golding invited the Scotsmen to attend a performance at the theatre as his guests during a delay in transit which was caused by a hold-up of trains due to floods. The Hebrideans readily accepted the invitation and paraded to the Imperial, the procession being headed by their own pipers.

Theatre and Film Row Items from Cleveland

THIS is Norman Moray, whose associates of the Indianapolis exchange presented him with a beautiful bronze desk set when he left the management of the exchange to become manager of the Cleveland Pathe exchange. Moray has already made a place for himself at the head of the procession although he has been in Cleveland only a week. He demonstrated his hustling ability when he arrived in Cleveland last Saturday, with his family; spent Sunday locating a home; moved in on Monday and by the middle of the week, knew half the exhibitors of Cleveland by name. Following the old adage that you get what you give, Moray's going to get a lot of appreciation out of Cleveland, because he's already given Cleveland a lot.

Norman Moray.

Christie Deibel, manager of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, has a new and novel way of buying pictures for his house. He buys 'em on the golf links, and he buys 'em by the hole. Eddie Fontaine, manager of the Cleveland Famous Players-Lasky exchange, says he had to walk 36 holes in order to sell Deibel a block of 50 Paramount pictures. A disinterested bystander wondered whether Deibel signed up for the 50 because he wanted 'em, or whether he did it so he wouldn't have to play around the course again.

Art Himmelein, manager of the Plaza theatre, Sandusky, had the scare of his young life a short time back. One night, Himmelein looked out over a field not far from the main section of the town, and saw a big wooden cross in flames. He thought it was a K. K. K. exhibition, and that something serious was afoot. He was rather peeved and had to take a lot of kidding when it was discovered that the fiery cross was an exploitation stunt of a competitive exhibitor.

F. J. Georgopole, of the Grand theatre, Elyria, is only just now recovering from a siege of pleuro-pneumonia, which has kept him from active participation in the management of his house, most all winter. He paid the local exchanges a visit last week, and although considerably reduced in weight, is still very much in the fight.

Manager Reuben of the Strand theatre, Newton Falls, has been sold on the idea that pictures should be properly exploited even in a town of 2,000, like Newton Falls. So he's going after the big pictures now, and going after them in a big way, with plenty of noise and stunts and advertising.

John J. Murray, owner of the Opera House and Hippodrome, Warren, has purchased complete new equipment for both of these houses. The equipment is being furnished by the Theatre Supply Company of Cleveland, and includes new Powers 6B improved type projection machines with G. E. high intensity arcs, G. E. generators, new screens and all new seats.

Herbert Ochs, manager of local Associated Exhibitors exchange, was in New York for a few days last week, consulting with the powers in the home office.

Have you heard about Clif Almy? Almy's manager of the local Metro exchange, you know. Has been for the past five consecutive years. That's quite a record in the film business. Well, he's gone and got himself married. Yep. It happened last Thursday. Her name was Miss Margaret Beynon of Cleveland. The happy couple left for the East where all good wishes of Mr. and Mrs. Almy's many friends are following them.

H. A. Bandy, central district manager for First National, is just back from a swing around the exchanges under his jurisdiction.

There's a weighty question waiting to be settled up in the First National exchange. It's this. Did George Erdmann, exchange manager, buy his new maroon Cadillac to match the maroon band on his straw lid, or did he buy the lid to match the Cadillac? Anyone solving this question will be treated to a ride in the new bus.

James Sheldon, First National auditor from New York, spent the week as a guest of the local First National exchange.

Robert Cotton, Fox exchange manager, went out in the territory last week to see that no exhibitors escaped without playing up the season's Fox pictures. Cotton is trying to establish a record of having every Fox picture play in every town in the territory.

J. A. Koerpel, Goldwyn district manager, doesn't confine his talents to selling motion pictures. He knows a thing or two about golf, too. Just listen to this, fellows. The other day he turned in a card of 78 on the Highland Course, with a par of 72. It wasn't an accident, either. Just to prove that this is his regular pace, Koerpel has issued a challenge to the winner of the Movie Golf Championship to play 36 holes, eighteen holes to be played in Cleveland, and the other eighteen to be played wherever his adversary says.

Virginia Dare, secretary to Metro Manager Clifford Almy, has an important engagement for next Monday, which will keep her away from the office. The engagement is with George Munk. And it's to be followed by a wedding. After a week's honeymooning somewhere, Mrs. Munk will continue in her present occupation.

Miles Goldberg, former dramatic critic for a leading Buffalo newspaper, has been appointed to take charge of publicity of the Warner feature productions in Ohio, released by the Skirboll brothers of the Ohio Educational exchange. Goldberg has made quite a record for himself in the manner of his handling exploitation on "Brass" in this territory. He got front page stories in the principal newspapers of Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Toledo, Canton, Akron, Springfield, and Lima. He has screened the picture privately in each of these towns before the Court of Domestic Relations, and secured from the judges letters of personal approbation recommending the picture as possessing both moral and entertainment value.

Bill Skirboll, who handles Warner distribution out here, announces that "Main Street," "Luck" and "The Little Church Around the Corner" will be held over for autumn release.

Film Flashes From the Florida Territory

JACK FROST, manager of the Strand and Grand theatres, Tampa, and Jno. B. Carroll, manager of the Victory, left Sunday night for Atlanta, where they will spend several days booking attractions for their houses.

C. C. Klutts, of Moore Haven, was a visitor in Tampa last week. Mr. Klutts operates the Grades theatre in that city by the big water, Lake Okeechobee, and now he is going to open a second house there. The new house will be for the exclusive patronage of colored folks.

F. L. Zeigler, who is an old timer, is now holding down a position with the big lumber company of Venice, but Mr. Zeigler can't dodge the longing for the show shop and so is making arrangements to open a theatre for the benefit of the man employees of the company.

The Strand, Tampa, had a burglar scare. Monday morning when Treasurer McLaughlin opened the office, the first thing he saw, in the middle of the floor, was the dial of the safe. Mac says his heart missed three beats; his eyes flew to the safe, which was minus the handle, as well as the dial. Upon examination he found a rat-tail file had been broken off in the tumblers, and this was responsible, it is believed, for the crooks' failure to open the strong box. Like the Strand, the safe is a good one, and she held onto the receipts. An expert was called in and succeeded in opening the safe and Mac got back his missing heart beats when he saw the bags of lucre.

Buffalo Briefs and Western New York Notes

ALLAN S. MORITZ who came to Buffalo from Washington three years ago to assume the management of the local Paramount exchange has been called to the home office in New York to do special work. It is rumored that his successor is Mr. McManus who has been at the St. Louis exchange. The end of Mr. Moritz's regime at the Buffalo exchange came as a distinct shock to exchange men and exhibitors alike for he was one of the most popular men in the business in this territory.

Allan S. Moritz

It was only recently that the office force put on a special Moritz Week in honor of their chief's third anniversary as well as his birthday and it was on this occasion that the Paramount salesmen rolled up a huge total in new business. Mr. Moritz has been president of the Film Board of Trade as well as the old Film Club.

A large time was had by all! That was the verdict of all those in attendance at the installation ceremonies and banquet held by the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo at Stein's Hotel, Orchard Park, N. Y., on May 28. A bountiful repast was served. It only cost six smackers. Not bad for a little fodder, eh what? The exhibitorial end of the business was represented by J. H. Michael, chairman of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Inc., and manager of the Regent; Charles Hayman, president of the Cataract theatre of Niagara Falls, George Honny of the South Park Amusement company, Buffalo, and James Wallingford, director general of the Border Amusement company, Buffalo. George E. Williams, manager of the Olympic theatre, Buffalo, started the distribution this week of 12,000 folders. They all went to homes on the east side. They will be sent out each week. The folders give the program for the week as well as the coming attractions.

Someone stole George Faulkner's car. The Hodgkinson manager was informed that it had been located in the wilds of Indiana. Must be some car at that! Mr. Faulkner has appointed Mell R. Edwards as a salesman. C. B. Blake is in town from the home office installing a new billing system. Hodgkinson has placed "Down to the Sea in Ships," for four week runs at the Eastman, Rochester; Shea's Hipp, Buffalo; Alhambra Utica and Strand, Syracuse, all for the week of June 17.

E. Bromley. Lester has been a Paramount salesman for 10, these many moons. He has been connected with various and divers Buffalo exchanges during a period that stretches way back to old General Film days. Lester has stamped the western New York wilds until he has worn a path to almost every town hereabouts. His promotion from the sales to the managerial ranks is a welcome one to his many friends.

Lester Wolfe

CIRCUIT Judge George E. Mix, members of the jury, the parties interested and attorneys in the damage suit of Miss Theresa Dudenhoeffer against the Famous Players Missouri Corporation for $7,500 damages for injuries alleged to have been suffered in a fall in the balcony of the Missouri theatre on February 9, 1922, visited the theatre on May 23 to get first hand information concerning lighting conditions in the balcony.

The theatre company contended that Miss Dudenhoeffer's injury was due to her own negligence, while she claimed there was not sufficient light in the balcony. When the judge and jurors called at the theatre a picture which gave virtually the same light as that being shown when Miss Dudenhoeffer was hurt was on the screen. Later the party returned to the courthouse and the trial was resumed. A verdict in favor of the theatre company was returned shortly after the case went to the jury.

Newsy Notes from Des Moines and Vicinity

FIRE which burned out three blocks of business section in Prescott, Ia., two weeks ago destroyed the picture theatre, U. S., which was owned by Park Hamon. Charlie Chapman, who has operated the theatre at different times in the past, has offered to manage the new theatre and to make a proposition to the Masonic Lodge by which all members of the lodge shall be admitted to the theatre free of charge.

Louie Jacobs of the Palace Theatre at Burlington stopped in Des Moines on his way to the west coast for a vacation and business trip of all summer.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Back to the Woods"

(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is a Christie Comedy with the typical environs of a lumber camp as the background. It represents another attempt on the part of the Christie organization to inject novel backgrounds into their fun films such as was seen in the Southern locale of their recent comedy, "Roll Along." In this particular, "Back to the Woods" stands quite above the average comedy offering.

However, it is equally true that the subject, in the early part of the footage, is decidedly weak considered from the angle of laugh-provoking qualities. The spectator is made thoroughly acquainted with the atmosphere and principal operations of an active logging center, the comedy touches being confined to the sub-titles. However, once the introduction to the logging camp is disposed of the real action gets situated with Neal Burns, Vera Steadman and Babe London in the principal roles.

The story is concerned with a plot to deprive John Walkerton, the lumber king, of his privilege to exercise an option on valuable timber tracts adjoining his property. Jack (played by Burns) heads a counterplot to foil the conspirators, his reward for success being the hand of Miss Walkerton (played by Vera Steadman). Over forest roads in bouncing motor cars, through and around falling trees, out over floating logs flee the plotters pursued by Jack, Miss Walkerton and their friends. There is a real thrill when a falling timber crashes down on an auto conveying Jack and Miss Walkerton, completely wrecking the car and narrowly missing the couple to all appearances. Another highlight is the pursuit over the floating logs with buxom Babe London as a factor in the chase. At the close Jack and his girl, after receiving pa's blessing, are whizzed up into space atop a load of planks being hoisted for shipment.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Sea of Dreams"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is a romantic fantasy, produced by Warren A. Newcomb, in which beautiful pastels serve as the backgrounds. Hazel Lindsay appears as the heroine.

"Sea of Dreams" belongs deservedly in that rare category of screen productions embodying "something out of the ordinary." The romance itself is a simple dream narrative of a lover's doubt as related by the heroine to her beloved. The heroine recounts how yielding to suspicion she was seized by the "Spectre Doubt" and he'd captive in the "Castle of Doubt" until the hero bearing the magic "Sword of True Belief," vanquished "Doubt" and completed her rescue. This imaginative tale moves amid the fanciful settings of a subjective world. In effect, these beautiful pastel backgrounds become quite as much a part of the action as the two principals and by their beauty of conception and admirable execution brand the reel as a distinct achievement. The blending of the two principals into these pastel settings during the progress of the action is skillfully accomplished.

Here, the imagery of the poet, the artistry of the painter, and the expertness of the cameraman mingle to produce a screen subject of distinctive quality. If your audience will thrill to a creation of visual beauty and the subtle appeal of a screen poem artistically staged then don't let this one pass by.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Mixed Trails"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of Robert C. Bruce's "Wilderness Tales" series. The subject is introduced as: "A Tale of the West, told without the aid of a pair of hair pants or a sub-title. And only a wee bit of shooting." The production lives up to its foreword in every particular. The story moves against a background of sand dunes, steep cliffs, and rocky promontories. It is the tale of a fugitive who takes to the wilderness after a fatal shooting affray. Sympathy is established for the fugitive by presenting him as slaying in self-defense after being attacked from ambush. How the first fugitive meets a second fugitive in the wilderness, thwarts his pursuers by swapping boots with his new-found companion and then makes good the escape of both by cleverly getting possession of the sheriff's boots, is entertainingly told without the intrusion of a title. Of course, as in other numbers of this series, the scenery plays a large part. The production represents another of those ambitious efforts to cleave new trails in picture entertainment; and while the scenes lack that quality of visual beauty so often a part of Bruce's panoramas there is a subtle connection between the bleak background and the spirit of the titleless story that marks the subject as a distinct novelty. If your audiences like the subtle touch in their picture entertainment and seek something off the beaten path, "Mixed Trails," in our opinion, will supply the demand.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Rice and Old Shoes"

(F. B. O.—Two Reels)

JUST a story of a newly married couple whose repeated efforts to be alone are defeated by a series of accidents and unfavorable circumstances. Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven appear as the newly-weds. At the beginning the action is staged aboard a train where a fainting woman, a motherless boy, and an inconsiderate train bandit serve to keep the couple continually apart. At one place De Haven sits on the observation platform while passing through a tunnel. The rising dust sticks to the upper part of his face giving the appearance of a mask. So disguised he enters the car at a time when the talk of a train band is uppermost in the minds of the passengers. When he passes down the aisle he is surprised to find his cap made the receptacle for all sorts of trinkets and jewelry passed over to him by the frightened passengers. This "gag" has been used before but it is probably good for a laugh here. Later there is another laugh when the real bandit enters and is promptly set upon by the passengers who believe he is simply another jokesmith.

After leaving the train the couple buy a "bungalow automobile" and after motoring to the center of a great field are just congratulating themselves on being alone at last when they are brusquely ordered off what turns out to be the drill grounds of a regiment of soldiers. At last in the middle of a desert, guarded from intrusion by a conspicuously displayed "Smallpox" sign, they are left to themselves and their home on wheels. While there is nothing particularly original in this one, the story keeps moving in interesting fashion and has its share of laughable incident and amusing situations.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"A Grim Fairy Tale"

(F. B. O.—Two Reels)

THIS is the "Ninth Round" of the "Fighting Blood" Series adapted from H. C. Witwer's stories of the prize-ring. George O'Hara and Clara Horton appear in the leading roles, supported by the talent seen heretofore in this series.

The early part of the action revolves around an amateur theatrical performance staged by a fashionable country club for a charity benefit fund. O'Hara in the role of Gale Galen is given the part of the leading man while his sweetheart plays the heroine. The comedy incident is built up largely around the ludicrous mishaps that take place in most non-professional theatricals. The "over-acting" and stilted acting of the amateurs, the false whiskers that refuse to stay put, the props that fall down at the crucial moment—are all employed to provoke some fun. Finally, a lamp is overturned and when the flimsy settings take fire Gale plunges into the flames and rescues the "villain" whom he actually "k. o.'ed." for too strenuous love-making to his best girl.

In the second part, Gale enters the ring with blistered hands from the effects of the fire. The bout is to decide the championship between him and Gunner Slade. And what a fight this is! We recently witnessed a motion picture record of a professional bout and will say without hesitation that we saw more real ring action in the brief footage of this "Fighting Blood" number than in all the rounds of the professional match. Of course, in view of the fact that Gale believes his right to the hand of the girl he loves depends upon his winning the match, he eventually floors Gunner Slade for the count, the blistered hands notwithstanding. If your audience delights in seeing fast and earnest action inside the roped circle, give them a chance to see Gale and Gunner Slade mixing it in this "Round."—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Pick and Shovel"

(Pathe—One Reel)

SOME of the comedy producing comedies have been going in lately for "Location comedies." Here's one the action of which transpires in a coal mine with the result that oft tried "gags" appear again with a note of freshness derived from their strange settings. Outside of the location the subject offers nothing original in the way of comedy except perhaps for the closing sequence in which the hero and the heroine are seen seated on top of a half-submerged coal car while the donkey pulling the car is to all appearances fully submerged with his ears alone showing above the surface of the water. The action for the most part takes place in the mine shaft where the hoist is used to promote considerable rough-and-tumble antics on the part of Stan Laurel and the mine foreman, and in the narrow passage-ways where Laurel's careless handling of his coal pick works disaster on the feelings and persons of his co-laborers. There is a thrill element injected by the presence in the mine of a car-load of dynamite which Laurel toys with in all sorts of hazardous ways. The flooding of the mine with Laurel vainly trying to stay the onrush of the waters also adds an amusing touch.—E. F. SUPPLE.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"Divorce"

F. B. O.—Six Reels

(Reviewed by E. F. Supple)

"DIVORCE" is not a "problem drama" in the sense that it argues directly for or against the practice of untying the nuptial knot by due process of law, as might be inferred from the title. There is a problem involved but it consists in showing how a faithful wife, to whom the idea of divorce is abhorrent from the start, manages to avoid what looks to be an inevitable culmination of her romance in a court of domestic relations.

The story is a highly conventional one both as to theme and development. In the early years of married life with common difficulties to be faced and success as yet unassured true love reigns supreme. Success comes at last and with it a weakening of the marital bonds. Next enters the intriguing "other woman," and man and wife stand faced with the grim reality they laughingly scoffed at in their younger, happier days—the spectre of Divorce.

Were the solution of the problem rendered more difficult of attainment a conflict of really great power might have been at this point evolved. Success has been responsible for the husband's defection; accordingly, he must be deprived of success to bring him to his senses and restore him once more to the embrace of his family. As Wife's father is the head of the company in which Husband has won his success it simply devolves upon Wife to persuade papa to discharge Husband. Deprived of position and its powers, the husband is quickly abandoned by his false friends. Disillusionment follows and then reconciliation with the menace of divorce safely passed.

Aside from the conventional formula of the plot, the story is excellently staged with richly appointed interiors especially in the later sequences. The acting is also unusually well done. Jane Novak in the role of the demure wife, resolved at all costs to save her husband and herself from the humiliation of a divorce court, gives a most impressive performance. John Bowers as the husband also does creditably. The support is adequate, with little Philippe de Lacy in the role of the baby-boy proving quite appealing in certain dramatic moments. Director Chester Bennett has done a good job with the rather threadbare plot and by the injection of little sympathetic touches has saved the subject from becoming intolerably tiresome.

"The Heart Raider"

Paramount—5400 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A BIT of overheard conversation between two women spectators of this picture—who remarked that it served in passing the time away on a hot day without exacting any thought—that it was light and quite novel, just about stamps this number for what it is—a hot weather recipe. It is just what these feminine patrons described it. There is nothing about the idea or execution of it which will inspire perspiration from too much thought. It is a frolicsome number—which is too long for regulation length, carrying more the dimensions of a polite two-reel comedy. However, the director has extended the high jinks to fill up the necessary footage. And most of these are amusing without being exciting.

The picture is weakest in its characterization. Agnes Ayres plays a typically Bebe Daniels role—and since she hasn't the abundant energy of Bebe her work seems forced. Hers is not a nature—judging from her previous screen expression—that is best suited for hoydenish caprices. With Miss Daniels in the part the picture would have carried more sparkle.

The idea is based upon the Taming of the Shrew formula—with a parent unable to cope with his unmanageable daughter. Therefore he is forced to take out an insurance policy for any damages she might incur—in order to protect himself. The humor is established in the efforts of the insurance officer to save his company from being ruined. Therefore he dispatches a youth to get himself married to the girl. And she, on the other hand, is chasing a wealthy young man who is unable to rid himself of her.

The action presents pursuit scenes with Miss Ayres swimming to catch up with the hero's yacht and shaming him by appearing at his table in a bathing suit. When he is unable to withstand her pep and personality he marries her and the insurance man is selected as best man. A slight note of novelty in this feature—which hasn't been taken very seriously by the sponsors and will be accepted lightly by the spectators. The best performance is contributed by Charles Ruggles as the insurance man. He clowns considerably and succeeds in lending an individual touch to his work.

The Cast

Muriel Grey.....Agnes Ayres
John Dennis.....Mahlon Hamilton
Gaspard MacMacon.....Charles Ruggles
Reginald Grey.....Frazer Coulter
Mrs. Dennie (John's Aunt).....Marie Burke
Jeremiah Wiggins.....Charles Riegal
By H. R. Durant and Julie Herne. Scenario by Jack Cunningham. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Photographed by Charles Schoenbaum. Produced by Famous Players.

She sets her heart upon winning a young man who is a volunteer censor of her conduct. The insurance company finding itself becoming financially embarrassed sends one of its men to win the heart of the girl. She finally captures the rich youth and the insurance broker is the best man at the wedding.

Classification—Comedy-romance treating of caprices of wilful girl.

"The Exciters"

Paramount—5400 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is Bebe Daniels in a typically Bebe Daniels role—that of a peppery maid who craves excitement and gets it regardless of the consequences, until such time as it is deemed wise and proper for her to submit to the suppressions of matrimony. The idea is a variation of a tried and true formula and is founded upon the young heiress who must be married within a specified time or lose her inheritance. The plot is usually worked out with a youth in the background and giving it to a maid serves to establish a note of novelty. Certainly Miss Daniels is endowed by nature to play the role. It fits her like the w. k. proverbial glove. If we must criticize her it is in those moments when she gesticulates too wildly in making her role convincing.

The picture is finely balanced with thrills and humor and should be accepted as good summer entertainment. It doesn't tax the imagination. Everything works out in customary fashion with the interest being held through the star's breezy performance and the assortment of thrills, which include a mad auto ride, a surf-board dash through the waves behind a motorboat—and a zippy ride in an airplane. It is while she is dashing through the ozone that the accident takes place. When she recovers consciousness she suddenly remembers that she should get married that day. So it conveniently happens that the burglar who rescued her is the only available man. The idea suits him and the plot is off on another tangent.

It develops that he is in reality a Secret Service agent working to collect evidence against the gang of thieves with whom he is operating. They would blackmail his bride, but he punishes the culprits, and the girl, somewhat disillusioned to discover that her excitement is over, is, nevertheless, willing to settle down and keep quiet. There are several crisp fights. It is an actionful picture, which keeps moving all the time without a stop. The settings and exteriors are satisfying to the eye—and it has been well photographed.

"Railroaded"

Universal—5390 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture started out with the best intentions of being a highly interesting exposition of crook melodrama, but after a few introductory sequences it falters and never regains its sparkle. The title sort of gives it away—since the spectator is forced to anticipate that the protagonist has been railroaded to prison for a crime of which he is innocent. Yet as the scenes unfold no play is given to the crime for which he is being punished. The opening shot shows the crook promising to avenge the wife of his convict friend, both of the crooks being framed by another. He escapes and returns to his father, a judge—who promptly disowns him.

So the motive which guides him is to exact his vengeance. However, the love interest, which is shortly introduced, eliminates the melodramatic touches and the force of the story is lost. Scenes are given up showing the judge placing his son on probation in a friend's home to work out his jail sentence. And the girl of the house takes an immediate interest in him. The action discloses the crook in conflict with his keeper, who punishes him for the least violation of rules. He has to hoe the garden or do some menial work of some kind—which puts a burden upon the heroine to sustain the romantic interest.

Meanwhile no scene is shown of what is taking place with the framer or the other characters. They simply drop out of sight until the climax when the hero escapes from the house to keep an appointment with the woman whose convict husband was framed. The girl follows and forces the other woman to acknowledge the power of love. She releases the vengeful hero from his promise. No explanation is made whether the other crook is sent to prison—or the nature of the crime.

Too much is left to the imagination and there isn't any suspense because the story is haphazardly constructed. The hero-crook does admit his guilt to the girl—that he is a thief, but his father allows him to sail to South Africa to begin life anew. There is no return to the prison, nor any explanation made of why Scotland Yard failed to act in the case. Herbert Rawlinson is more at ease here, but when he has a chance to appear melodramatic he overacts. Mike Donlin, the old Giant ballplayer, makes his screen debut as the framer and manages to be in character, although his acting moments are few. A number of subtitles judiciously placed would clarify the atmosphere here. As it is, there are too many unexplained situations.

"The Mark of the Beast"

Dixon-Hodkinson—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH all the hue and cry being raised concerning the usual distortion of an author's story during its development on the screen, and the superfluous length of the average photoplay, Thomas Dixon, who wrote "The Birth of a Nation," has been prompted to write, adapt, direct and edit his own picture, "The Mark of the Beast," the theme of which deals with the sub-conscious mind in controlling thought and action. The author deserves commendation in his treatment of the story—which will appeal to the intelligentsia even if he often loses contact with his theme.

A tale based upon the idea of psycho-analysis cannot be expected to be clearly defined. It's a subject which has no limitations. Confining to terms of action show up its shortcomings. Where the praise enters it should be given for the compact scenes which carry not a single detail of superfluous footage—and the exceptionally good acting. Whether the picture will stimulate a desire on the part of the picturegoers to see it is problematical. There isn't so much entertainment in it judging it purely upon its theme.

A psycho-analyst discovers psychic powers in his sweetheart and she is driven by her sub-conscious mind to love a crook. They marry and find refuge in an isolated cabin in the mountains—where the husband proves himself a beast. The shortcomings of the plot become discernible at this point, for the woman who occupies the cabin with her husband is none other than the crook's mother. Certainly her sub-conscious mind would tell her that the youth bore some relationship to her. Yet she doesn't recognize him, though he has only been out of her life for ten or twelve years. It is inexplicable just why he would want to give her money to find her son, when he is right there before her. Consequently she stabs him during his sleep and an operation by the doctor fails to save his life.

The actions of the characters are given psycho-analytical explanations in the captions—which, while brief and to the point, nevertheless, are incapable of fully expressing the idea behind them. Errors of omission and commission must be expected in any treatment of such a subject. Mr. Dixon is much better in his dramatic execution of it since it is built like a play and sweeps forward with a real crescendo of events which culminate in a tense climax. The characters are sharply drawn. The scenes carry much suspense. And it is compact with interesting sequences. The spectator will not learn much of psycho-analysis from it. And he won't have any sympathy for the mother who stabs her own son. Nevertheless, he will follow the idea and execution of it with the strictest attention.

The Cast

Dr. David Hale.....Robert Ellis
Ann Page.....Madelyn Clare
Donald Duncan.....Warner Richmond
John Hunter.....Gustave Von Seyffertitz
Jane Hunter.....Helen Ware
By Thomas Dixon. Scenario by Thomas Dixon. Directed by Thomas Dixon.

The Story—Treats of psycho-analysis and the subconscious mind in directing action. Doctor learns that his fiancée has strong psychic power. She comes under influence of crook and marries him. He finds refuge at mother's cabin in mountains and attempts to punish his wife when she learns his true character. That night while he is sleeping his mother, not knowing his identity stabs him to get his stolen jewels. An operation by the doctor is unsuccessful in and he dies. His wife finds happiness with the doctor.

Classification—Melodrama worked out along lines of psycho-analysis.

Production Highlights—The fine work by cast. The even continuity. The lack of any superfluous footage. The good titling.

Exploitation Angles—The title.

Drawing Power—For intelligent audiences.

"The Ragged Edge"

Distinctive-Goldwyn—6500 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THROUGH a weak motivation which taxes credulity and a poor interpretation this picture must be catalogued as below the standard. It is burdened with false heroics and aside from its atmospheric background doesn't offer much in the way of entertainment. Alfred Lunt, who plays the leading character, over-acts. One can almost hear the director shouting at him since there is no spontaneity in his work. We see him pictured as on the "ragged edge"—though no explanation is given whether his ill health is due to dope or drink.

The scene is Canton—and a studio setting shows him being assaulted by Chinese thugs. He returns to his hotel in bad shape and straightway the heroine enters his life as nurse—prompted to do so by a sympathetic understanding. There is much valuable footage used up for his convalescence, during which he marries the girl. Yet despite her advances and desires for affection he remains cold because of a shadow in his life. This shadow is what taxes credulity. We cannot imagine a red-blooded youth refusing to proffer his love because he stole money which belonged to him, for which his stepfather is hounding him over the face of the earth to punish him. Incidentally, this important character never appears in the picture except through a subtitle.

The young couple go to a neighboring isle in the South Seas—the husband to work in a trader's store. The chief highlight on the island is their scrubbing of a little dog. A crude scene shows a beach comber attempting to intrude in the wife's life (she had been reared in a South Sea retreat by her missionary father—hence the appearance of the beach comber) and when he is thwarted he rows to the island from Canton. This little touch also taxes credulity inasmuch as it would be some row from the Chinese city to the island. And the customary fight takes place between the hero and the heavy—with the hero successful after a brief tussle. Then comes the young man's aunt accompanied by a detective, the latter being the cause of the youth fleeing from Canton. He merely wanted to tell the young man that his stepfather is dead. And since he saw him in the Chinese city, he could of told him there. But such treatment would have taken away the mystery element which the director was so careful to establish. And that's all there is to it.

The false heroics of the youth rob him of any sympathy for his inexplicable conduct. Real men will make love and ask forgiveness every time. Mimi Palmeri, making her screen debut, is slightly awkward and self-conscious. She shows possibilities. The best features of the picture are the settings and atmosphere.

The Cast

Howard Spurlock.....Alfred Lunt
Ruth Endicott.....Mimi Palmeri
Ah Cum.....Charles Fang
The Doctor.....Wallace Erskine
McClintock.....George MacQuarrie
O'Higgins.....Charles Slattery
The Wastrel.....Christian Frank
Prudence Jedson.....Grace Griswold
Angelina Jedson.....Alice May Hotel Manager.....Percy Carr
The Aunt.....Marie Day
By Harold MacGrath. Scenario by Forest Halsey. Directed by Harmon Weight. Produced

The Story—Features a youth who is hiding in Canton for crime of which he is innocent. Is on "ragged edge" of ill health and is nursed back to health by girl who takes a big interest in him. They marry and go to island in South Seas. Later his innocence is proved and all ends happily.

Classification—Romantic drama.

Production Highlights—The exteriors, settings and atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Presents opportunities to tie up with wearing apparel shops. Offers prologue in its South Sea atmosphere.

Drawing Power—Good for summer trade in most any type of house.

Norma Talmadge; Joseph M. Schenck, head of Schenck Productions, and Constance Talmadge

Schenck Discusses Plans for Coming Season

"MY plans for 1923, I think the most interesting and ambitious of my many years in the motion picture field," declared Joseph M. Schenck in a statement this week. "Norma and Constance will each make three pictures instead of four to six each as formerly. The additional time, interest and artistic effort which will be put into the making of fewer pictures, will enable us to produce the kind of stories that heretofore were out of the question, when we could not afford to give three or four months to a single production."

"In 'Purple Pride,' formerly called 'Ashes of Vengeance,' a dashing romance of old France by H. B. Somerville, on which Norma is now at work, Norma has put everything she has to give of herself in her art, and I have spared nothing in the way of costumes, settings, excellent cast, or authenticity and elaborateness as to details of the period. Also, I have been fortunate in securing the able directorship of Frank Lloyd."

"The sets of 'Purple Pride' are exact replicas of the Renaissance period of architecture in France. The Louvre ball-room set is 328 feet long. Three hundred expert professional dancers are being instructed in the dances of the period by Theodore Kosloff and 1,000 extras will also take part. In the street scenes for the Huguenot massacre on St. Bartholmew's Eve, the streets are each 400 feet long. Those streets contain the most picturesque French houses, inns and public buildings of the period of Charles IX, all designed and executed by Architect Stephen Goosson. Six hundred extras and 400 horses are used in these massacre scenes."

"The music of this picture will also be a special feature, following faithfully the time of Charles IX or his predecessors."

"Norma will follow 'Purple Pride' with 'Secrets,' the delightful romantic drama by Rudolph Besier and May Edginton, now playing at the Fulton theatre with Margaret Lawrence in the leading role. This play has all the poetic, spiritual and picturesque qualities of 'Smilin' Through,' and in the role of Lady Mary Carleton, Norma will bring to the screen one of the noblest and most beautiful souls in dramatic literature."

"The future Norma Talmadge productions will be 'The Mirage,' by Edgar Selwyn, and 'Dust of Desire,' by Margaret Peterson."

"In 'Dulcy,' the brilliant and ingenious comedy by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, which had a sensational New York run and is still playing around the country. Constance will bring to the screen a new type of comedienne, a satirical and amusing 'bromide lady,' based on the 'Dulcinea' familiar to all readers of Franklin P. Adams' column in the New York Tribune—a young meddling wife who chatters incessantly, and who, in her eagerness to help her husband in his business difficulties, almost ruins him. As Heywood Brown said of this play, it is a new kind of comedy, found chiefly between the ribs."

"'Dulcy' is being directed by Sidney Franklin, and has an excellent supporting cast, including Jack Mulhall, Johnnie Harron, brother of the late Bobbie Harron, Gilbert Douglas, Claude Gillingwater, Ann Wilson, Ann Cornwall, Andre de Beranger and Milla Davenport."

"Following 'Dulcy,' Constance will appear in 'Madame Pompadour,' an adaptation of a great Continental success made by John Emerson and Anita Loos. The principal figure in this unusual story is a fascinating woman ideally suited to the personality of the young star. 'The Dangerous Maid,' founded on the novel, 'Barbara Winslow, Rebel' by Elizabeth Ellis is next on the schedule. This story, which will afford Constance an opportunity for more serious and emotional work than most of her former pictures, will be directed by Victor Herman, who will also direct 'Madame Pompadour.'"

Samuel Goldwyn Outlines Production Policy

"If a man who had built ten huts had concentrated on one edifice, he would have accomplished at least, an imposing structure.

"There you have in one sentence my chief reason for returning to the film producing field via the independent field," said Samuel Goldwyn, discussing his production plans.

"There is the opportunity to devote to a few pictures a year, the energy, attention, care, forcefulness formerly scattered over many and varied efforts.

"When production beckoned me back, the obstacle confronting me was the choice of directors.

"Then came the availability of George Fitzmaurice and nothing was left to be desired.

"Combining artistic genius with dramatic constructiveness, being a potent force with both exhibitor and distributor, Mr. Fitzmaurice stood out as the foremost among the commercially successful, as well as artistically resourceful directors—and when it was possible to secure him, my decision was made for me.

"There were to be no calendars or clocks to act as metronomes, no impulsive selections of players or stories, no hurried preparations of story, sets or scenario. There will, instead, be calculated choice of every minute detail, even to the preliminary exploitation which is to be handled from my own office and in co-operation with my distributor.

"Independence of thought, action, achievement in a field where temperamental emergencies arise, is even more beneficial than the surface shows. It permits of radical effort to improve one's self as well as one's competitor. It grants one a license to make departures that he would fear to make were he obligated to others for approval and the fact that he is responsible entirely for each and every accomplishment makes him that much more jealous of success.

"For four years I wished to transfer to the screen 'Potash and Perlmutter.' For more than eight years it has been a powerful fiction and stage triumph. It remained for me to make it my first independent move. In its production I have Barney Bernard, Alexander Carr, Vera Gordon, Ben Lyons, Martha Mansfield, Hope Sutherland, Edward Durand, De Sacia Mooers and other noted players—a cast heretofore undreamed of.

"In the first Fitzmaurice production I have Lionel Barrymore, Barbara La Marr, Richard Bennett, David Powell and Montagu Love, not to mention other lesser personalities.

"If independence of action results in films of the character of those outlined above, then, Associated First National is what has long been claimed for it—the acme of possibilities for bigger and better screen things."

George Fitzmaurice and Samuel Goldwyn.

TO inaugurate his return to active production effort the achievements of which will be distributed through the channels of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., Samuel Goldwyn is demonstrating his firm belief in the combination of time of freedom of action to be the best mediums of successful commercial artistry in screen work. The concrete examples of blending of histrionic, directorial and productional traditions are demonstrated in the two Samuel Goldwyn units now busily engaged.

George Fitzmaurice is en route to Rome, where upon the arrival of the principal players two weeks hence, work begins on Hall Caine's

"The Eternal City." Lionel Barrymore, Barbara La Marr, Bert Lytell, Richard Bennett and Montagu Love constitute the principal acting element in "The Eternal City." Each one is supported by traditions of screen and stage successes.

Cameraman Miller is responsible for many of the unusual effects in recent George Fitzmaurice productions. Ouida Bergere has devoted months to the translation of "The Eternal City" from fictional to screen form. All of this talent is to be under the direction of George Fitzmaurice, whose "On With the Dance," "To Have and To Hold" and "Bella Donna" are milestones on the road of artistic endeavor in filmdom.

Mr. Fitzmaurice has been given every possible human facility by Mr. Goldwyn. Months have been spent in assembling players, choosing sites, and building the drama, and as Mr. Fitzmaurice said when sailing on the Aquitania last Tuesday, he couldn't find a flaw in Mr. Goldwyn's co-operation with a magnifying glass.

In the matter of "Potash and Perlmutter," Mr. Goldwyn went even further in his blending of theatrical and screen personalities with productional and literary minds. "Potash and Perlmutter" for seven years has been the vogue both in fiction and on the legitimate stage. It was the most popular series of stories the Saturday Evening Post ever published. As a play, the three productions launched by A. H. Woods each had a full year's run in New York City and engagements throughout America.

Mr. Goldwyn arranged with A. H. Woods, the producer, who had constantly refused to dispose of the screen rights, having decided to eventually produce it himself, to grant him the screen rights. Montague Glass, the author and originator of the characters, was next prevailed upon to abandon his literary efforts long enough to co-operate with Frances Marion on the scenario.

Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr, both of whom have appeared in all of the "Potash and Perlmutter" productions in the name parts, were next induced to play their original roles on the screen, and Vera Gordon was secured to play the star part of Mrs. Potash.

To offset these three characters and to balance the production Martha Mansfield, Hope Sutherland, ingenue, Ben Lyon, juvenile and at present playing the leading role in "Mary the Third" at the Thirty-ninth Street theatre, and De Sacia Mooers, blonde vampire type, complete the younger element.

Clarence Badger was placed in charge of the direction and Edward Durand, Adolph Miller and Barlow Borland complete the cast of the principals. Madame Francis, modiste, is costuming the picture in an elegant manner.

Big Specials Planned by Thomas H. Ince

THOMAS H. INCE is carrying out elaborate plans for the forthcoming season.

One of Mr. Ince's new specials will be a screen version of "Anna Christie," Eugene O'Neill's famous stage success. Mr. Ince is said to have paid $100,000 for the screen rights to this play, and he intends producing it with that dramatic power which has been termed "the Ince punch." But "Anna Christie" is only one of the big specials which Mr. Ince will produce. Among others are "Country Lanes and City Pavements," from the story by John Fleming Wilson; "Her Reputation," a story of newspaper life, with May McAvoy as the star, and "The Just and the Unjust," from the popular novel by Vaughan Kester.

In the making of one of these specials Mr. Ince will wield the megaphone for the first time since he directed "Civilization."

Recently, in writing for the screen, he outlined his own production policy in the following language:

"In the moving picture we have a medium which is adequate to the fullest reproduction of any story that can be conceived by the mind anybody unless through it there is told a story which grips our interest and holds it. And the only kind of a story which can do that is a story which deals with the struggles and triumphs and hopes and fears of human beings. Be real. And do not be too solemn. Remember that everybody likes to laugh."

Mr. Ince supervises every production turned out under his name. He insists that the directors and players show life as it is and not as it is imagined to be. And above all, he insists upon big dramatic situations. It is making of these situations that the famous "Ince punch" is brought into being, it is pointed out, with a resultant box-office appeal that has become standard in the picture theatres of the country.

In the signed statement, which appears elsewhere on this page, Mr. Ince defines his picture policy for the new season and calls attention to his belief that "originality is the keynote" in the making of successful productions. Among the Ince specials, released by First National, are:

"Skin Deep," with Milton Sills. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. "The Hottentot," with Douglas MacLean and Madge Bellamy. Adapted from William Collier's stage success. "Bell-boy 13," with Douglas MacLean. "What a Wife Learned," an American drama of a woman's conflict between a great love and a career. "Scars of Jealousy," the story of a strange hill people and the regeneration of a rich ne'er-do-well. "The Sunshine Trail," with Douglas MacLean. A story of love and smiles. "A Man of Action," a mystery comedy. Douglas MacLean, Marguerite de la Motte and Raymond Hatton head the cast. This is being made into a speaking production which will be shown on Broadway next season.

Part of Mr. Ince's elaborate programme for the forthcoming season consists in producing plays from the pen of Talbot Mundy, the novelist. Mr. Mundy now is at Culver City and has finished work on his first story for screen use, "Her Reputation," in book form before the release of the picture, and will conduct an elaborate campaign in exploiting it, so that the screen story will be looked forward to by those who read the book.

"The Just and the Unjust," from Vaughan Kester's popular novel of the same name, will also be an Ince special. The story deals with a ne'er-do-well who is arrested on the charge of murder on the day he is leaving for the West to "make good." A unique character is introduced into this story in the person of Bill Shrimplin, an insignificant little lamp-lighter, whose garrulous tales of imaginary adventures have transformed him into a mighty hero in the eyes of his son.

The product of the Thomas H. Ince studios in the past is evidence of the quality of what the 1923-24 pictures will be. The directors and players secured for the productions named all have international reputations and have been carefully selected for their roles.

With Mr. Ince supervising each the forthcoming features seem assured of instant recognition by both the trade and the public.

Originality the Keynote Declares Ince

IN motion pictures we have reached an era in which originality is demanded for the screen. The public wants original themes, original situations and, above all, original dramatic strength. "The play's the thing" not the star.

More than a decade ago a similar turnover took place in American literature and George Ade, George Barr McCutcheon, Booth Tarkington, Theodore Dreiser, Stephen Crane, O. Henry were acclaimed for their originality. And today we of the Silent Drama must give the picture-going public what it requires—something new and powerful—not sensational, but amazing in its originality of theme and presentation.

It is with just pride that I promise for the forthcoming season productions that will mark a new era in screen drama; that will be remarkable for their originality of theme and presentation. Such productions must necessarily have great box office value, because they will be what the public demands in screen entertainment pictures.

For the ensuing years my policy will be, as it always has been, to think in terms of the exhibitor, for I realize that when I fulfill the demands of the exhibitor I fulfill the demands of the public. My studios owe a large share of their success to exhibitor co-operation and I believe the exhibitor extends that co-operation with enthusiasm when the producer earnestly endeavors to supply him with pictures that spell success.

Elaborate Plans for Barthelmess Pictures

ONE of the outstanding results of a recent survey of high school students throughout the country made by the Committee for Better Films, the Russel Sage Foundation, and Associated First National Pictures, was the vote registered by Richard Barthelmess. It proved that with the young women of America he is a reigning favorite.

Returns from this questionnaire, sent to high schools throughout the land, left no shadows of doubt about the preeminence of Dick Barthelmess with a large body of theatregoers.

Barthelmess is the rare type of actor that appeals alike to men and women, although several of his most successful pictures have been notably strong in feminine appeal. He possesses to a high degree what is termed the artistic temperament and is able to reflect on the screen an unusually kindly and sympathetic nature.

From the memorable night he rose to fame through his wonderful performance in "Broken Blossoms," when that picture was given its New York premiere, up to the present day that finds him the star of a well organized producing company, Barthelmess has been particularly fortunate in surrounding himself with co-workers who realized how best to cultivate a rare talent, fortunate in his selections of stories and fortunate in the choice of players for his supporting company.

Charles H. Duell, president of Inspiration Pictures, and his associates, realized several years ago that a star's popularity must be developed through the quality of his pictures and not through quantity, and that the only way to assure quality is by giving the most careful thought to every detail of the production in hand without regard to the tick of a studio time-clock. Since Barthelmess became a star at the head of his own company each picture has been produced with as much care as is expended on a stage play.

"Tol'able David," awarded the gold medal as the finest motion picture achievement during 1921, is now being accepted abroad as America's outstanding contribution to the art of the screen," said a statement from Inspiration this week. "It is being hailed by critics in England as a masterpiece of characterization and is placing Barthelmess on the same high level that he has attained in this country. 'Fury' is still fresh in the minds of the public, and 'The Bright Shawl,' now making the rounds of the first run theatres, is being acclaimed everywhere as a worthy successor to the earlier productions.

"During the coming season he will make at least three and possibly four pictures for release through First National, and each one will be distinctive and individual, affording ample acting opportunity for the star, but not star pictures in the sense that they lack other qualities essential to a well-balanced photoplay. Barthelmess has always insisted first on having the best possible story and next on securing the most distinguished players obtainable for his support. Joseph Hergesheimer, Porter Emerson Browne, Edmund Goulding and George V. Hobart, have been responsible for his earlier plays, and to this number is added the name of Beulah Marie Dix, author of 'The Fighting Blade,' now in production for the first of the Barthelmess releases next season.

"Equally distinguished are the players supporting the star in Inspiration Pictures. To mention only a few in the list of familiar names, there are Dorothy Gish, Dorothy Mackaill, Pauline Garon, Ernest Torrence, Mary Alden, Louise Huff, Mary Astor, and Tyrone Power, all sharing honors with Barthelmess who is primarily concerned with the success of his pictures in their entirety, rather than with personal glory.

"Much credit also belongs to John S. Robertson, the director, who was so successful with earlier Barthelmess pictures that he was chosen to direct 'The Fighting Blade,' glamorous story of the days of knighthood, rich in love and romance, and thrillingly alive with dramatic action. In this picture admirers of Barthelmess will find their hero in a new type of role and one to which he is superbly suited; likewise they will find an altogether delightful heroine in the person of Dorothy Mackaill, who will be remembered for her beautiful performance in 'Mighty Lak' A Rose.' Others in the cast are: Allyn King, Marcia Harris, Fred Burton, Lee Baker, Stuart Sage, Bradley Barker, Morgan Wallace, Philip Tead."

Several stories are now being considered for the remaining subjects on this year's program.

Is there any standard of acting in motion pictures? Will the screen evolve a technique of its own? Are the producers more concerned with the exploitation of types and personalities than they are with developing the genuine dramatic talent in their own studios? Are the movie players fixed stars or are they comets and sky-rockets, on!- destined for a short fling of glory?

These were some of the questions put to John S. Robertson who is directing Richard Barthelmess in Inspiration Pictures. As a director, Mr. Robertson believes that good acting is more important than big spectacular scenes and that the public remembers the individual performances of the players long after it has forgotten how many tons of scenery were destroyed for the Big Thrill.

"There is a standard of acting in motion pictures now," says Mr. Robertson, "and it is a very high one, but it is only sustained by a few players and a few directors. It has not yet become a general standard for all players and all studios. It has not yet become a part of the general training for the average motion picture player nor part of the requirements for the new-comer who wants to go into the movies."

Canada Critics Praise "One Exciting Night"

"D. W. Griffith has waded in among the seventeen different kinds of movie wives, juvenile wonders and costume period stuff, and come out with something new, which is as beautiful as only a Griffith can make it, hilarious with real comedy, packed with thrills and altogether refreshing," said the reviewer for the London, Ontario, Free Press in writing of "One Exciting Night," when this United Artists release was being shown at the Grand theatre, that city.

"The storm scene climax in 'One Exciting Night' is an epoch in pictures," said the critic for the Evening Tribune when this Griffith feature was shown at the Starland theatre, Winnipeg, and added; "You will see all the furies of Nature as if plucked from the skies and transferred to the screen."

"Unknown Purple" Cast Is Completed

With the actual starting of production on "The Unknown Purple," Roland West's New York stage success, the announcement of the completed cast has been made. Within the past few days James Morrison and little Jackie Lee have been cast in important roles. Others include Henry B. Walthall, Alice Lake, Helen Ferguson, Rosemary Theby, Ethel Grey Terry, Stuart Holmes, Brinsley Shaw and Richard Wayne.

"The Unknown Purple" will be franchised by the Truett Film Corporation of which Mr. Hoffman is Vice President and General Manager, upon the independent market, a number of territories have already been subscribed, among them being the New York, Chicago and New England franchises. It is being produced by the Carlos Productions and directed by Roland West, the author of the play.

"Trifling with Honor" Pleases

McNutt Story of National Pastime Wins Approval of N. Y. Reviewers

"TRIFLING WITH HONOR," Universal's Jewel picture, written by William Slavens McNutt around the great American game, baseball, and featuring such popular players as Rockliffe Fellowes, Fritz Ridgeway, Buddy Messenger and Hayden Stevenson, has hit the ball on the nose, according to reports from the Universal home office, based on the picture's pre-release showings. Harry Pollard, the director, is the man who made "The Leather Pushers" series for Universal.

"Trifling With Honor" had its New York premiere at the B. S. Moss Broadway theatre last week. The results of that run were so promising that the Moss-Keith-Proctor combine booked it for the entire circuit. It is playing this week in theatres throughout New York's five boroughs.

Although it is not scheduled for release until July, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, instructed his sales force to book it pre-release as soon as it was ready for the market.

Harriette Underhill, of the New York Tribune, reviewed the picture in part as follows:

"When we were out in California we were invited one day while visiting the Universal studios to go in and see a baseball picture with Rockliffe Fellowes as the hero.

"When we heard that 'Trifling

With Honor' was going to be shown at the Broadway theatre this week, we went over again to see it, and we advise all bad directors and everybody else who enjoys a good picture to go to see it."

The reviewer of the New York Evening Journal was equally enthusiastic. "This film does something more than entertain," he wrote. "It makes capital melodrama out of the great national game, a feat that hitherto has proved rather elusive. Universal, which is going in for sports in its features, has a mighty good story in William Slavens McNutt's yarn, and treated it wisely and effectively."

The New York Times reviewer also spoke exceptionally well of "Trifling With Honor."

"It is manifest in 'Trifling With Honor,' the film feature this week at the Broadway, that the author's ideas have been accepted by both the director and the scenario writer, and therefore the production is all the better for this. Here and there the director has his fun with a few feet of hokum, but he had not permitted this to interfere with the smooth running of the story."

"'Trifling With Honor,' we think, is quite the best of the first runs on Broadway this week," was the view of P. W. Gallico, motion picture critic of the New York Daily News.

Omaha Shriners Select "Masters of Men"

Tangier Temple of the Order of Shriners, Omaha, Neb., selected as the picture for its annual show at which the expenses of the members of the Temple patrol and band on the annual trip to the National Shriners' Convention are raised, "Masters of Men," Vitagraph's picturization of Morgan Robertson's great sea story. Sixty members of the Shrine acted as a committee and for six months this committee had viewed pre-release showing of pictures submitted for this profitable tie-up.

"Masters of Men" played one week at the Sun theatre, Omaha, under the auspices of Tangier Temple. This tie-up resulted in all the big local advertisers carrying announcements of "Masters of Men," and the play date at the Sun. The Shriners used their share of the receipts to attend the conclave at Washington on June 4, 5 and 6.

Sells Principal Series for Indiana

Irving M. Lesser, Vice President and General Manager of Distribution of Principal Pictures Corporation, has sold the Super Five Series and "Mind Over Motor" to H. Lieber Co., of Indianapolis, for the state of Indiana. Floyd Brown, General Manager of the latter company, personally made the trip to New York to preview and sign up for these productions.

Speaking of the transaction, Mr. Lesser said, "There is no 'ad' so potent as a satisfied customer; the Lieber Co. has used all of our former product and they always come back for more." The Super Five includes "The Spider and the Rose," "Bright Lights of Broadway," "Temporary Marriage," "East Side, West Side" and "The Man From Ten Strike."

U.S. Aids Picture Train Robbery

Post Office Authorities Lend Assistance in Scene for "Loyal Lives"

AN attempted robbery was staged under the supervision of the United States Post Office Department, last week. Colonel Paul Henderson, Assistant Postmaster General, and Major James A. Buchanan, chief of the Bureau of Information, provided the means by which to stage the mail robbery, it is claimed. They were cooperating with Whitman Bennett, producer of "Loyal Lives," a thrilling romance of the unsung heroes who protect the United States mail—the postman and the railway mail clerk. The officials were represented at South Amboy by Roger P. Williams, Assistant Superintendent of the Second Division of Railway Mail Service at New York, and Edgar C. Barabrant, Chief Clerk of the Division Superintendent's office. With the permission of the Department Casper Thomas, of Plainfield, N. J., and William J. Ronufs, of Hoboken, N. J., two railway mail clerks, volunteered to act in the picture.

Charles Giblyn, the director, needed several hundred passengers for the train. His assistants gathered in the residents of the township of Parlin as they were returning from church. They were hustled into the special train and taken to South River where the robbery was to be staged. It was easy to procure volunteers but the stay-at-homes in Parlin were greatly worried when their sons and daughters did not return until nightfall. The screen beginners had had no time to send word home.

"Loyal Lives" has been planned by Whitman Bennett not only as an exceptionally romantic and thrilling human interest story, but with a view of providing for a tremendous nation-wide exploitation campaign. It will be released by Vitagraph and is the first of the six super-specials to be produced by Whitman Bennett and released under the Vitagraph banner.

Goldwyn Program for Princeton Week

DURING commencement week at Princeton University, which begins June 11th, an all-Goldwyn picture program will be given at the Garden theatre, the only representative theatre in Princeton.

The South Sea romance, "Lost and Found," Rupert Hughes' "Look Your Best" and Hugo Ballin's picturization of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," starring Mabel Ballin, will be shown.

Orphans Entertained by Metro Picture

Seven hundred and fifty children from various orphan asylums were entertained last week at the National Capital, Washington, by a special presentation of the new Metro picture, "Soul of the Beast." The theatre party was arranged by Manager Beatus of Loew's Palace and Mark Gates of the Columbia cooperating with one of the Washington papers. The party was a great success, and the children were uproarious over the antics of Oscar, the elephant, and fell in love with Madge Bellamy, the little star of "Soul of the Beast."

As each child filed into the theatre he was presented with a large box of chocolates and bon bons, and as they came out they received a floral souvenir to take back with them.

The children were carried to the theatres by automobiles, and after the theatre party they were taken sight seeing in Washington and for a ride in the country before going back to the asylums.

The children entertained comprised boys and girls from St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Bruen Home, Washington City Orphanage, St. John's, Central Union Mission Children's Home, the German Orphanage in Anascostia, St. Joseph's and the Hebrew Free Home.

"Soul of the Beast" is a Thomas H. Ince production, released by Metro Pictures Corporation.

Suggests Safety Plan for "Safety Last"

At the end of the fourth week of the extended run of "Safety Last," at the Strand theatre, San Francisco, Manager W. S. Kinback was so impressed with the tremendous business being done by the Lloyd comedy feature that he wrote a letter to Producer Hal Roach suggesting that his useful experiences be transmitted for the benefit of all other exhibitors. The letter is quoted as follows:

"Would suggest that you get out a little card informing the managers of houses booking Harold Lloyd in 'Safety Last,' that they will not need their orchestra to play during the picture, as it will not be heard on account of the roars of laughter from the audience."

"Advise them to have all chairs securely fastened to the floor, and place mattresses in the aisles so people that fall out of their seats laughing will not hurt themselves."

"Enemies of Women" Popular

Cosmopolitan Feature Is Continuing an Indefinite Run on Broadway

"ENEMIES OF WOMEN," Cosmopolitan's picturization of Vicente Blasco Ibañez's novel, featuring Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens, is proving one of the biggest money-makers of the season, it is claimed.

After six weeks on Broadway, it is continuing its New York run indefinitely at the Cameo theatre, where it was transferred on Sunday of this week.

The picture opened at the Central theatre, at advanced prices, and remained there for three weeks. It was then put in the Rivoli theatre, where it played to such big business that it was continued for a second week. Its second week's receipts were so large that it was then moved to the Rialto theatre. Its appeal still far from being exhausted, as the business proved, it was then booked for an indefinite run at the Cameo. The engagement at the latter theatre means that "Enemies of Women" will have to its credit one of the longest New York runs that any motion picture has had.

The photoplay is also having extended runs in other big cities throughout the country. Last week was its sixth week at the Roosevelt theatre in Chicago; also its sixth week at Grauman's Rialto in Los Angeles. The picture is having a run at the Imperial in San Francisco and ran for two weeks at the Garden in Milwaukee. It opened an engagement at the Adams in Detroit last week. On June 10th it will open an engagement at the Rialto theatre in Washington, D. C., and on June 11 begins an indefinite run at the Stanley in Philadelphia.

Eileen Percy Is Signed by C.B.C.

Will Play Leading Role in First of Feature Series of Columbia Pictures

EILEEN PERCY has been signed by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation this week for a leading role in "Yesterday's Wife." This feature, from the novel by Evelyn Campbell, to which C. B. C. has purchased the screen rights, will be the first of the series of Columbia pictures which that company will distribute.

The C. B. C. feature product is being planned to guarantee the distribution of "A Feature a Month" during the entire 1923-24 season, starting with September 1. This product will be divided under two producing banners—one, a series of big special productions which shall be called Columbia Pictures, and the other a continuation of the big C. B. C. series.

Joe Brandt, president of C. B. C., who is now at the West Coast production studios of C. B. C., announces that plans have been almost completed for the production of "Yesterday's Wife," and that a cast of imposing strength in addition to Miss Percy, will be announced shortly.

Miss Percy's personality and talents are wonderfully suited to the part she has been given in "Yesterday's Wife," it is claimed.

The casts of all the C. B. C. features will contain players who have not only "names," but who have a real following, it is said. The Columbia Pictures will be all big human-interest stories of the calibre of "Yesterday's Wife," it is announced.

Tourneur For Shorter Features

Contents Different Plot Construction Needed, with Six-Reel Limit

SUPPLANTING the time-worn phrase of "bigger and better pictures" comes Maurice Tourneur with the urge for shorter and different pictures.

That the industry needs pictures of not more than six reels in length and that these pictures should offer different plot construction and handling of situations, is the contention of Mr. Tourneur, who in association with M. C. Levee, has adopted a producing policy along these lines for their First National productions.

"We have heard much of the cry for 'bigger and better pictures' during the past few years but what the industry needs today more than anything else are shorter and different pictures," said Mr. Tourneur.

"Many in the producing world have placed a wrong interpretation upon the word 'bigger.' They have indeed made bigger pictures—in size of sets, in footage and in production costs. In short, they have applied the word in a sense of physical size. It requires more than bigness to make for success in pictures. This rush for physically big films has made many forget the all-important items of story values, of logical plot construction and of the general fundamentals which go to make successful screen entertainment.

"This trend of big productions has also brought about a sameness of screen entertainment that must be overcome. What we need are those stories which may be indeed considered 'different'; novel treatment of such stories and productions not more than six reels.

"The Brass Bottle' I consider a different type of story, yet it ran eight reels. It will be six reels before I release it and this will be possible without losing any punch in the story. Although a perfect picture in eight reels I realize the importance of the demand of theatre owners to keep feature productions within the six-reel length."

"Unknown Purple" Is in Production

"THE UNKNOWN PURPLE" which is now being made on the coast by the A. Carlos Productions for the Tru-art has a subject which will be rich with advertising and exploitation possibilities for the exhibitor, it is claimed.

The story deals with the activities of a man who has discovered a secret chemical formula which when applied to his body makes it invisible.

The cast of this production was completed lastweek and the work started under the direction of Roland West, whom it will be remembered wrote and produced the stage version of "The Unknown Purple" in New York where it ran for two years.

Re-Edited "Americano" Is Approved

Final approval was given this week by Oscar C. Price, President, and W. E. Aitken, Vice-president, to the work of John Emerson and Anita Loos on the retitling and re-editing of "TheAmericano," the first of the New Edition Triangle Features to be re-issued by Tri-Stone. Douglas Fairbanks is starred in the production, and in the supporting cast are Alma Rubens, Carl Stockdale, Charles Stevens, Lillian Langdon, Tom Wilson and Tote Du Crow.

This production was made while D. W. Griffith was actually supervising the Triangle Features, had its premier at the Rialto theatre in New York, and some months later was chosen as the feature to open the Capitol theatre in the same city.

Tri-Stone has prepared an entirely new line of posters and accessories for the release of the New Edition of "TheAmericano." F. Luis Mora, one of the most noted poster artists in the world, designed the one and six sheets.

Urges Metro Animal Film for School

When Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's Metro picture, "Trailing African Wild Animals" was exhibited to various authorities, critics and audiences it became early evident that this picture was highly suited for educational use in the schools of the country as well as possessing entertaining and thrilling qualities. Shortly after, while "Trailing African Wild Animals" was enjoying popular runs at leading theatres in various cities it was chosen by educational authorities for presentation at schools. This was in line with the endorsement of the picture by The American Museum of Natural History.

As a specific example is the request made by Mr. J. C. Stiers, Superintendent of Schools of Washington, Pa., to all school teachers under his jurisdiction that they bring "Trailing African Wild Animals" to the attention of their pupils and urge their attendance at the showing of the picture at a local movie house.

"Purple Pride" Is New Release Title

"PURPLE PRIDE" will be the release title of "Ashes of Vengeance," the production of sixteen century France which Joseph M. Schenck is making with Norma Talmadge as the star. Frank Lloyd, who is directing, has already passed the half way mark in production and the picture will be one of First National's big fall releases.

"Purple Pride" was published as a novel in England under the title of "Ashes of Vengeance" and will shortly reach the American reading public, illustrated by scenes from the picture.

Mammoth Cosmopolitan Set Near Completion

Covering an entire city block, including "shooting" space, a motion picture set is now nearing completion for the Cosmopolitan Corporation's picturization of Stanley Weyman's romance, "Under the Red Robe," in which Robert B. Mantell, John Charles Thomas and Alma Rubens are featured.

This set, a replica of the Louvre when it was used as a fortress in the early part of the seventeenth century, has been five weeks in the making and will be completed in a week. It runs from 126th to 127th streets and from the Harlem River to within a short distance of Second Avenue, New York City. The scene, when filmed, will depict the palace of Louis XIII, including a moat surrounded by a circular wall thirty feet high, two huge towers and a huge steel drawbridge.

Behind the walls are two columns, seventy-five feet high and a number of small French houses are being constructed to serve as a background. The set entails a cost of $63,000, it is said. Hundreds of extras and a score of horses will appear in the scene, the total cost of which is expected to reach $125,000. Joseph Urban did the designing and it entailed months of research work.

James Horne Producing "Alimony" for F. B. O.

James Horne has been hurriedly placed in charge of the production of the Film Booking Offices' coming special, "Alimony," now in the course of construction at the Powers studios at Hollywood. Horne succeeds director Emile Chautard, who was forced to give up the production when stricken with a severe cold.

This picture marks the initial appearance in America of Ruby Miller, the celebrated English actress. In addition to the announced changes in direction, revisions have also been made in the cast.

The picture is from the pen of A. T. Locke with adaptation made by Wyndham Gittens and Magnus Ingletton. The cast of "Alimony" contains such names as Warner Baxter, Ralph Lewis, Grace Darmond, Lila Leslie, Jackie Saunders, Clyde Fillmore and William Carroll.

Editorial On Metro Animal Film

N. Y. Daily News Gives Valuable Space to "Trailing African Wild Animals"

AS a climax to the columns of praise of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's Metro picture, "Trailing African Wild Animals" that have been published in newspapers throughout the country, is the editorial published in the New York Daily News issue of Friday, May 25th. This is one of the very rare occasions when a big Metropolitan paper has devoted editorial space to the praise of a motion picture.

Preceding the "News" editorial the New York daily had published an enthusiastic tribute of "Trailing African Wild Animals" concurrent with its engagement at the Capitol theatre during the week of May 20th.

The "News" particularly mentions the fact that Mrs. Johnson partook with her husband equally of the danger of the two years' journey in the African hinterland. This fact was generally commented on everywhere, as the presence of a woman lends greater excitement and interest to a film whose entire right to existence is already the measure of excitement and interest it affords in presenting the little known wild beasts and wild jungle life.

The "News" also took occasion to comment upon the fact that Mrs. Johnson had recently declared that she found she was far safer in the jungle with thirty or forty natives than when at home on Broadway. The paper considered this sad but true commentary on our present day civilization.

"Trailing African Wild Animals" is distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation.

Syndicate Jackie's Life Story

Widespread Publicity Will Enhance Value of Young Star's Pictures

A FAR-REACHING publicity proposition that should have tremendous propaganda value for all exhibitors showing any of Jackie Coogan's films, may be seen in a recent announcement of the McNaught Syndicate. This organization is one of the most important in the field of selling material to newspapers throughout the country. It handles the work of Irvin S. Cobb, Will Rogers, Thomas L. Masson, Rube Goldberg, Fontaine Fox, and other celebrities. The Coogan announcement tells of the life story of Jackie as narrated by his mother to Zoe Beckley, a prominent Feature writer on one of the New York dailies.

Some of the leading papers, which have already contracted to run the Coogan series, include the New York Evening Mail, Boston Post, Chicago Daily News, Saint Louis Times, Baltimore Sun, Buffalo Enquirer, Toronto Star Weekly, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, Oakland, California, Tribune, and the Syracuse Herald. The circulation that these stories will attain runs into many millions of readers, and the series will be conducted for about three months, daily.

Arrangements for the syndication of "The Life of Jackie Coogan" were completed by Jack Coogan, Senior, and George Landy, publicity director, during their visit to New York early this year.

This syndication will help not only those exhibitors who are showing Jackie's remaining First National pictures, but will also be of great value to theatres playing his forthcoming Metro productions, of which the first, "Long Live the King," is now in the making at the Metro studios in Hollywood. Victor Schertzinger is directing from Eve Unsell's adaptation of Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel, and Jackie's supporting cast includes Rosemary Theby, Ruth Renick, Vera Lewis, Alan Hale, Alan Forrest, Walt Whitman, Robert Brower and Don Franklin.

Arrow Closes Important Sales

Complete Big Deal During Convention For Northern Illinois and Indiana

ONE of the important sales announced in the Independent field was consummated by W. E. Shallenberger and W. Ray Johnston, respectively president and vice-president of the Arrow Film Corporation, during their sojourn in Chicago on the occasion of the M. P. T. O. A. Convention.

This contract, which embraces seven features, two serials, and thirty-eight comedies, was closed with Frank Zambreno, President of Progress Pictures Company for Northern Illinois and Indiana, and officials of the Arrow Film Corporation are particularly gratified over the contract's being negotiated at this time, as they point out that it is a verification of their contention that hot weather does not bother real attractions.

The pictures included in the deal are: "The Rip Tide," "The Little Red Schoolhouse," "The Broken Violin," "None So Blind," "High-Speed Lee," "Man and Wife," "Jacqueline, or Blazing Barriers," "The Fighting Skipper," a serial starring Peggy O'Day, Jack Perrin and Francis Ford, and the new Arrow serial, "The Santa Fe Trail," which is now in course of production in Hollywood under the direction of Robert Dillon, starring Neva Gerber and Jack Perrin; the twelve new Eddie Lyons Comedy Specials and fourteen new Mirthquake Comedies, and the Tom and Jerry series.

Two Metro Pictures on Selected List

TWO METRO pictures are included in the month's seven best photoplays as listed by Lewis F. Levenson, motion picture critic of Movie Weekly. These are Fred Niblo's production of "The Famous Mrs. Fair" and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's "Trailing African Wild Animals." Movie Weekly publishes such a list each month.

In speaking of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," Levenson says, "It is a perfect example of a famous play transferred to the screen without loss of interest or reality." Likewise in commenting upon "Trailing African Wild Animals," this critic says, "It is as good as a visit to the Bronx Zoo."

"The Famous Mrs. Fair" is a Fred Niblo production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces. This picture as also "Trailing African Wild Animals" is distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation.

Mimi Palmeri Hailed as a Find

Mimi Palmeri, a newcomer, who made her screen debut at New York's Capitol theatre on June 3 in "The Ragged Edge," was hailed as a "find" by New York papers. The same papers give a hearty welcome to Alfred Lunt for the work he does in his second film. "The Ragged Edge" was produced by Distinctive Pictures Corporation from Harold MacGrath's novel. It is distributed by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

Here is the press comment:

Evening Mail: "In addition to her unusual beauty, she (Miss Palmeri) has the ability to act with such admirable restraint and poise as to make one eager to see her again."

Evening Journal: "Mimi Palmeri, a beauty of the Latin type, makes her debut. . . . Her work gives promise of gaining for her an enviable professional career."

Evening Telegram: "Miss Palmeri is a fortunate find; she is beautiful to look upon."

Evening Sun and Globe: "Miss Palmeri has an eye with a melting softness which makes a gazelle seem like a hard-boiled egg."

Morning Telegraph: "The picture is one of the best constructed we have seen in some time."

Mary, Doug Give Prizes for Roundup

The committee in charge of the Calgary Celebration Week, Calgary, Alta., announces that Mary Pickford has given a trophy to be awarded to the champion bucking horse rider and that Douglas Fairbanks has given another, to be presented to the winner of the Roman standing race. It is also announced that Charlie Chaplin has agreed to go to Calgary for three days during the round-up and celebration, which is set for July 9th to 14th, inclusive.

United Studios to Extend Activities

M. C. LEVEE, president of the United studios and producer of Maurice Tourneur Pictures, returned to Los Angeles from New York last week after completing arrangements for increased producing activities.

It is said the new producing plan will involve further additions to the United studios which are now being completely rebuilt.

While in New York Mr. Levee conferred with executives of Associated First National Pictures on the distribution and exploitation of Maurice Tourneur's "The Brass Bottle," just finished. Arrangements for a special national premiere of this film July 17 at the Balaban & Katz theatre in Chicago, were made by Mr. Levee.

Selznick Will Release "Monkey's Paw"

One of the contestants in the New York Drama League's Little Theatre Tournament held at the Nora Bayes theatre during the week of May 7 was "The Monkey's Paw," enacted by the Montclair Players. This was a one-act playlet adapted from the story by W. W. Jacobs, which is being released as a picture by the Selznick Distributing Corporation.

The tournament consisted of the presentation of one-act playlets, several each night, by amateur players, three prizes being awarded at the conclusion of the contest. "The Monkey's Paw" seemed destined to win one of these prizes, but was finally disqualified due to the fact that it was presented in three scenes, which was held to be a violation of a condition in the contest rule, which limited each play to a single scene.

The Selznick company reports unusual interest generally on the part of exhibitors as to this picture, which is promised as offering something very much out of the ordinary in plot material.

"Lost in a Big City" Liked in Boston

The Arrow Film Corporation is in receipt of advice from Independent Films, Inc., of Boston, Mass., that the engagement of "Lost in a Big City," the Blazed Trail special at the Park Theatre, which was concluded on Sunday, was entirely successful.

Added features of the show at the Park Theatre were the personal appearances of Miss Jane Thomas who has the leading role, supporting John Lowell in this production, and the first of the new Eddie Lyons Comedy Specials, "For the Love of Tut." This comedy is said to be one of the best that this clever comedian has ever made and was given a most cordial reception by the capacity audiences which crowded the Park Theatre during the engagement.

"A Man of Action" Commended

Critics Praise Ince Production For Its Laughs, Thrills and Mystery

"A MAN OF ACTION" featuring Douglas MacLean and Marguerite de la Motte, a Thomas H. Ince production released by First National, opened to crowded houses at the New York Mark Strand Theatre on June 3rd. Most of the New York newspaper critics praised the play as being one filled with love, mystery and excitement. Following is what they had to say:

R. G. Welsh in the Evening Telegram—"Full of action, it accomplishes a novelty by dispensing straight movie comedy with a broad dash of mystery. There is probably nothing to rival 'A Man of Action' in its admixture of the vital elements of entertainment, with the possible exception of the stage play, 'Officer 666.'"

Bon Allen in the Evening World—"Let's pause awhile and consider 'A Man of Action,' now splurging past on the Strand screen this week. Any film with Douglas MacLean as its star must be praised. Remember him in 'The Hottentot'? Well, in 'A Man of Action,' he goes himself one better. There's so much to the story that is just has to go by with the swiftness of a tornado and it leaves one weak from laughter and gasping for breath when 'The End' is finally flashed on the screen. If you crave excitement and feel like laughing go to the Strand, you'll find both commodities right here."

Robert E. Sherwood in the Herald—"Avery Hopwood might have written it in collaboration with Willard Mack and in the hands of the distinguished pair of collaborators it might run for an entire season at the Eltinge Theatre—and net a goodly sum for its authors and for Mr. Al. H. Woods.

New York American—"A mystery comedy with clutched, gloved hands, sliding doors, secret panels, diamonds, blackjacks and explosions is the explanation for 'A Man of Action' at the Strand theatre.

L. S. In the World—"The picture is freely recommended for the film-goer who is fed up. It has a distinctively humorous, engaging slant."

City to Aid "Human Wreckage"

S. F. Officials Proclaim "Narcotic Week" In Campaign Against Use of Drugs

MRS. WALLACE REID'S her photo-dramatic memorial to her husband entitled "Human Wreckage" and distributed by the Film Booking Offices opens next week at Ackerman-Harris Century theatre, San Francisco and at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles some time later in the month.

Never before in the history of San Francisco has the town turned its united efforts to aid the presentation of a picture such as is being done in advance on Mrs. Reid's anti-narcotic film. The Golden Gate city is handling the exploitation on the production as is would a political campaign. Over the signature of Mrs. Reid thousands of personal letters have been mailed to prominent clergymen, lawyers, physicians and other prominent men and women in public life. The acting Mayor of the city has proclaimed a Narcotic Educational Week beginning June ninth on which date the picture opens for its premier run. City and civic officials have got behind the campaign against drugs with the assistance of unusual newspaper support.

At the urgent request of the San Francisco Center Club, an organization of 2,400 professional and Club women, Mrs. Reid left Los Angeles Thursday night for San Francisco to launch her National crusade against narcotics. A number of Los Angeles dramatic critics and persons prominent in the industry went with her.

Acting Mayor Ralph McLaren and a committee of club women met Mrs. Reid at San Francisco Friday morning and escorted her to her headquarters in San Francisco. During the four weeks run of "Human Wreckage" at the Century Theatre, James Kirkwood, George Hackathorne, Claire McDowell, Robert McKim and others prominent in the noteworthy cast of the picture will make personal appearances at the theatre.

On the opening day of the picture arrangements have been made for a public burning of drugs that have been confiscated by the civil authorities which will be held under the supervision of Louis Zeh, of the Bureau of Pharmacy. Boy and Girl Scouts have made plans for a public demonstration while the Parent and Teachers Organization, the Salvation Army and the Rotary Club have given their public endorsement of the film with a promise of active support.

At Los Angeles plans have been made to make the premier showing of the picture an event of State. Mayor George E. Cryer and a number of high city and state officials attended a private showing of the film last week and acclaimed it as not only a true revelation of the evils of dope, but a story holding real heart interest.

Burr Closes Contracts for Indiana

Floyd Brown of the H. Lieber Company of Indianapolis, has closed contracts with C. C. Burr for the territorial rights on "You Are Guilty," in which James Kirkwood, Doris Kenyon, Robert Edeson, Mary Carr, Edmund Breese and little Russell Griffin are featured. The territory contracted for is the entire state of Indiana.

Principal Disposes of Series Rights

IRVING M. LESSER, Vice-President and General Manager of Distribution of Principal Pictures Corporation, has sold the entire New England territorial rights for his Super Five Series to Pioneer Film Corp., of which Harry Segal is General Manager. This group consists of "The Spider and the Rose," "Bright Lights of Broadway," "Temporary Marriage," "East Side, West Side" and "The Man From Ten Strike."

Architects Guests of Norma Talmadge

About 200 architects, members of the Los Angeles, the Southern California and the American Institute of Architects, were guests of Norma Talmadge recently on a trip through United Studios to inspect the architectural efforts of "Purple Pride" formerly "Ashes of Vengeance," the French historical drama she is making under Frank Lloyd's direction for First National release.

The architectural effects were described by Pidgeon Smith, a member of Joseph M. Schenck's art staff. The party of architects was conducted by Clifford A. Truesdell, Jr., President of the Architectural Club of Los Angeles.

"Yesterday's Wife" for C. B. C. Production

"YESTERDAY'S WIFE" is to be filmed by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. Announcement is made that this organization has bought the screen rights to this story by Evelyn Campbell.

In line with its announced plan of lining up big authors, strong stories, and excellent casts for their Fall schedule, C. B. C. has contracted with Miss Campbell to write for motion picture production two original stories besides "Yesterday's Wife." It is said that she will probably leave shortly for the Coast to study film conditions there and go over various ideas for pictures which she, Joe Brandt and Jack and Harry Cohn of C. B. C. have in mind.

Barker Company Again on Location

With eight weeks of location work already to his credit in the making of "The Master of Woman," for Louis B. Mayer-Metro release, Reginald Barker has again started for the great outdoors to film exterior scenes for the production. Big Bear Lake is his destination this time, and while his stay will not be as long as his trips to Alberta, Canada, and the Feather River country, it will be fully as exciting if he achieves half of the spectacular thrills prescribed by the scenario, it is said.

Among the stars accompanying Mr. Barker on the Big Bear expedition are Pat O'Malley, Earle Williams and Renee Adoree.

"The Master of Woman" is an adaptation by Monte M. Katterjohn of the G. B. Lancaster novel, "The Law-Bringers." Among the other stars in the cast are: Barbara La Marr, Wallace Beery, Josef Swickard, Pat Harmon, Anders Randolph, George Kuwa, Robert Anderson and Ed. J. Brady.

"What a Wife Learned" at L. A. Kinema

"What A Wife Learned," a Thomas H. Ince production released by First National, was seen at the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles, last week. The Los Angeles critics were liberal in their praise of the production. Grace Kingsley said in The Times:

"It is a pip of a picture, to my way of thinking, and anybody who says that real characterization and psychological analysis cannot be put on the screen should go and see this one. A great many people did see it yesterday, the house being packed all afternoon and evening. Which proves either that a lot of people were just dying to find out what it was a wife learned or else that Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowers are the prime drawing cards or perhaps both.

"What A Wife Learned" is logical, penetratingly human, full of real human beings."

"Man Next Door" Is Commended

Vitagraph Picture Praised by New York Reviewers at Cameo Showing

NEW YORK CITY newspaper critics who witnessed "The Man Next Door," adapted from Emerson Hough's novel of that name, generally praised the production as one of the most beautiful and among the best of the season. Excerpts from the daily press follow:

P. W. Gallico, in the Daily News, said: "The Vitagraph company which in the past few months has been making consistently good pictures has another excellent film at the Cameo this week. 'The Man Next Door,' by Emerson Hough. The story is rather novel and nearly always amusing, but the chief merit of the picture, we think, lies in the performances turned in by a very good cast."

Under the heading: "'The Man Next Door' is a splendid Picture," Robert Welsh said in the Evening Telegram: "It is a big jump from cowpuncher on the Western plains to a debutante in New York society, but Miss Alice Calhoun did it with ease and grace last night in the new picture by Emerson Hough, entitled 'The Man Next Door,' which will run only this week at the Cameo theatre in West 42d Street. It is a Vitagraph production and one of the best of the season."

Don Allen, in the Evening World, said: "It is a corking good story of the East and West and goes right on to prove that Kipling was right. The company presenting the film is an excellent one. To Victor Schertzinger, the director, must go a great deal of credit for the real finish of the picture and Vitagraph has given it as fine a production as could be desired. Those who do not see it will, in our opinion, miss a whole lot."

The New York American said: "It is an entertaining story with an interesting presentation and effective acting."

The Evening Sun said: "Emerson Hough is represented again this week at the Cameo theatre in 'The Man Next Door,' a story of the West. Alice Calhoun, James Morrison, David Torrence and Frank Sheridan are well up at the finish of this well done Vitagraph picture."

Truart Showing Fast Progress

Extensive Activities Make Program An Ambitious One For Coming Year

TRUART Film Corporation is making gigantic strides toward the front among the independent producer-distributor organizations. Their activities are voluminous and their program a most ambitious one. Recently they signed Larry Semon to a $3,000,000 contract to make feature comedies.

Elaine Hammerstein will be starred in four additional productions following the completion of "Broadway Gold." Three more special features are to be made by Carlos Productions in addition to "The Unknown Purple," which is now in process of filming. In addition there is to be a series by Arthur Maude to be based upon famous paintings. W. M. Hoffman, vice-president of Truart, is also negotiating with two or three more units.

All of the Truart product will be disposed of on a co-operative franchise plan which, it is claimed, will give more than an even break to those handling the product. But one release has been made to date, that of Elaine Hammerstein in "Broadway Gold," and it is said territory is being disposed of rapidly. Among the franchises already said to have been contracted for are, New York, Buffalo, Chicago, New England and Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hoffman promises even bigger things in the near future. He is said to be negotiating with some of the biggest stars and directors in the industry and expects to assemble them under the Truart banner by the end of the present year.

Truart, it is said, will not enter into any production activities unless assured that the attractions to be made will measure up to the highest standard of motion picture entertainment and unless there is some direct, obvious feature in the production, be it star, director, or story value which will give it sales value to the exchange which handles it.

There has also been set a minimum to be expended upon every picture, sufficiently large so that there can be no question of the artistic value of the picture.

Selznick Revival Is Grauman Feature

"The Heart of Wetona" a Selznick revival, starring Norma Talmadge and Thomas Meighan, was the feature of Sid Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre for the week of May 28th. This is said to be the first revival ever played in that theatre.

Mr. Grauman used a full page of advertising in each of the Sunday Los Angeles papers, exploiting "The Covered Wagon," "Enemies of Women" and "The Heart of Wetona," the page being equally divided among the three.

David R. Blythe, Director of Sales for the Selznick Company reports that this is but one of the representative first run accounts that have booked "The Heart of Wetona," which is the first of the Selznick Sixteen Super Revivals, being issued by this Company.

Lesser Sells Series in New England

IRVING M. LESSER, vice president and general manager of distribution of Principal Pictures Corporation, has sold the entire New England territorial rights for his Super Five Series to Pioneer Film Corp., of which Harry Segal is general manager. This group consists of "The Spider and the Rose," "Bright Lights of Broadway," "Temporary Marriage," "East Side, West Side" and "The Man From Ten Strike."

Leading Modistes Lend Models for Picture

Four fall openings of four of New York's leading modistes were concentrated into one enterprise last Saturday at the Samuel Goldwyn Studio, Fort Lee, when Madame Frances, Tappe, Harry Collins and Mme Faulconer sent fifty of the most beautiful mannikins, each showing two of next season's finest gowns, wraps, furs and lingerie creations, and all for the show room scene in Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Potash and Perlmutter."

Harry Collins sent four prominent mannikins, each with two or more complete attires and the other celebrated designers supplied noted wearers with fall fashions, which will be seen for the first time in the film when the fall openings occur as a rule during September and "Potash and Perlmutter" will be released through First National during the early part of that month.

In all the fashion scenes, Barney Bernard as Abe Potash, Alexander Carr as Morris Perlmutter and Vera Gordon as Mrs. Potash dominate. Others who worked in these scenes were Martha Mansfield, Hope Sutherland, Dacia Mooers, Ben Lyons, Elsie Lawson, Lee Kohlmars and Leo Donnelly.

Borzage Starts Work on "Dust in Doorway"

Frank Borzage, whose initial First National attraction, "Children of Dust," will shortly be released, has already started work on the second production which Arthur S. Jacobs will also present through Associated First National.

This new Borzage picture, tentatively titled, "Dust in the Doorway," is said to be a dramatic story of mother love from the pen of Dixie Wilson. The screen version has been prepared by Mary O'Hara and practically the entire cast has been selected.

William (Buster) Collier, Jr., has arrived in California to play the leading juvenile role. Joseph Swickard has been engaged by Borzage to enact one of the prominent roles. Myrtle Stedman is the latest addition to the all-star cast. Other players are Frederick Truesdall and J. Farrell MacDonald.

Little Frankie Lee will also be seen in "Dust in the Doorway." Other youngsters who will appear are Baby Bruce Guerin, Turner Savage and "Red" Ruben.

"Huntress" Exteriors in High Sierras

EXTERIOR scenes of "The Huntress," a First National picture, which Lynn Reynolds is directing with Colleen Moore in the leading role, are being taken this week in the Mammoth Lake section of the High Sierras.

The location for the filming of this romantic comedy of the Indian country is one of the most picturesque sections ever chosen for a motion picture setting, it is claimed. The site is within a few miles of the territory where Mark Twain localized his famous stories of the early gold-seeking days.

The company, it is expected, will be "on location," for about two weeks. The remainder of the interiors will be then taken at the United Studios.

Chicago Mayor Shoots "Safety First"

The Chicago Journal of May 19 reproduces in three-column space a photograph of Mayor Dever personally shooting scenes for his "Safety First" propaganda picture in which Orchestral Hall's display announcement of Harold Lloyd's comedy, "Safety Last," is the most conspicuous object.

The film, "Safety First," is made under the auspices of Mayor Dever's special safety committee and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. It is to be shown at the Palace of Progress to be held at the Coliseum, and afterwards throughout the country. The Mayor's enthusiasm for the enterprise was demonstrated with special force upon occasions when he functioned as cameraman.

In the scene referred to, the Mayor is pictured photographing a pertinent "Safety First" traffic example, which he evidently considered would carry even greater significance from the circumstance of the "Safety Last" announcement figuring so prominently in it.

"Penrod and Sam" His Best, Says Tarkington

"Penrod and Sam," which J. K. McDonald produced for First National, is the best film ever made from a Booth Tarkington story, according to this famous author, who declares, in a letter to the producer, that he was still laughing over the picture the day after he saw it on the screen.

The author witnessed the showing of "Penrod and Sam," at a recent preview of the picture at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, one of the houses of Robert Lieber, president of First National.

He expressed his appreciation of the "kid" play, in the following letter to Mr. McDonald:

"I wish to thank you for the pleasure your production of 'Penrod and Sam' gave to Mrs. Tarkington, my sister-in-law and myself. I believe that I can say I liked and enjoyed this film better than anything else produced of my own writing that I have seen on the screen. Now this is not because you have kept closer to my own story than other films may have done, for I am too old to be delighted with my own viewpoint getting reproduced, but it is simply because your film told a truthful human story of children, and grown folks, in a humorous and pathetic way—with the humor rightfully more in evidence than the pathos, which was nevertheless very true and moving."

"Daughters of Rich" Has Publisher's Tie-up

The Al Lichtman Corporation has arranged a special publisher's tie-up with Brentano for the Preferred Picture, "Daughters of the Rich," a Gasnier production adapted from the well known novel by Edgar Saltus.

Jackets illustrated with stills from the film version are now being prepared, and the Lichtman offices feel assured that the photoplay edition will be of great assistance to exhibitors in arranging window displays and creating additional interest in the picture.

Charter Special Trains for Climax Scenes

Special locomotives, freight and passenger trains were chartered, it is claimed, to make the big scenes in the climax of "Bright Lights of Broadway," which is one of the Super Five Series produced by B. F. Zeidman, under the supervision of Irving M. Lesser, for Principal Pictures Corporation. The railroad scenes were made at Margaretsville, N. Y.

Anderson Engaged for "Master of Woman"

Robert Anderson, the creator of the role of M'Sieu Cuckoo in D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World," has been engaged by Reginald Barker to play a similar role in the latter's picture of "The Master of Woman," which is now in course of production at the Louis B. Mayer studios and is scheduled for release by Metro Pictures Corporation.

Press Book Issued for "Daughters of Rich"

AS the first step in the Al Lichtman Corporation's new policy of concentrating on special advertising and exploitation accessories to aid the exhibitor in selling Preferred Pictures, an elaborate press book will be issued on "Daughters of the Rich," the next Lichtman release.

Unusual care is said to have been given to the preparation of a set of particularly effective posters. A twenty-four sheet playing up the French atmosphere and a window card along the same lines offer something new in attention-arresting paper, it is claimed.

Mae Marsh, star in "The White Rose," a new Griffith production.

Elks Lodges Will Sponsor "Eleventh Hour"

Because "The Eleventh Hour," the title of a new Fox picture in which Charles Jones and Shirley Mason play the leading roles, is symbolic of their ritual, many lodges of the Elks national organization will sponsor the premier showing of the picture in their respective communities, it is said. The screen production, which is an adaptation of Lincoln J. Carter's melodrama, was directed by Bernard Durning. It is the eleventh picture Mr. Durning has filmed under the William Fox Banner.

Lunt Praised for Work in "Backbone"

"Backbone," the Distinctive Pictures film of Clarence Buddington Kelland's Saturday Evening Post story, was recently shown at New York's Capitol. Critics found much to praise in the screen debut of Alfred Lunt, who has been called the handsomest man on the stage.

The New York Sun's reviewer described Lunt as the successor of the late Wally Reid. Other reviewers commended the actor's restraint and his prowess in the duel and in the rough and tumble fight in the picture. Critics generally agreed in calling "Backbone" an exciting, red-blooded picture of life in the open spaces.

Strong Praise Extended "Masters of Men"

The St. Louis Globe Democrat, in its review on "Masters of Men," picturized from Morgan Robertson's sea story, and produced by Vitagraph, said:

"'Masters of Men,' which was shown at the Delmonte theatre last night, is one of the finest pictures this city has ever seen. Not only is the atmosphere of the sea realistically caught and maintained, but the selection of the players, from the four principal ones to the least important extra, has been accomplished with fine discrimination. It is clean and wholesome, a real story of a real American boy."

"Silas Marner" Shown for Church Fund

Released in April, 1922, the Associated Exhibitors feature, "Silas Marner," continues a popular attraction, in heavy demand not only in theatres but for showings in schools, churches and other non-theatrical institutions.

"Silas Marner" had a two-day showing in Auburn, N. Y., recently, performing there the three-fold function of supplying entertainment to the general public, acting as an educational aid, and bringing financial benefit to a church. The Auburn Citizen said of it:

"Last evening at the First Baptist Church, the motion picture of George Eliot's masterpiece of the pen, 'Silas Marner,' was put on the silver screen before a most appreciative audience. The story is used in several English classes in the High School, and a number of students were on hand to witness the showing. The character of Silas is acted in a very finished manner, and the whole picture shows the work of a master director."

Pastor Highly Praises "Enemies of Women"

What is one of the greatest tributes ever paid a photoplay by a clergyman is that tendered "Enemies of Women" by the Rev. R. Keene Ryan, Pastor of the Garfield Boulevard Presbyterian Church, Chicago, who after seeing Cosmopolitan's picturization of the Ibanez novel at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, this week, likened it in moral tone to the great Bible tragedies and urged all pastors to view the picture and make it a basis for talks to followers. The Rev. Ryan said in part:

"I strongly recommend to every clergyman that they witness this fascinating and awesome film."

"I would further recommend that after seeing it they commend it from their pulpits and urge their congregations to witness it."

"It is just such plays as this that will redeem the moving picture in the eyes of all ministers and remove the last vestige of fear or resentment that might be harbored against the modern theatre and the modern moving picture film."

Goodman Selects Title for Next Special

DURING the past three weeks, while he has been cutting and editing his next Special production to be released by Equity Pictures Corporation, Daniel Carson Goodman has been concentrating upon a suitable title for his picture and altho "The Daring Years" has been given to it as a temporary title, Dr. Goodman realized that it was not of sufficient scope and lacked the punch.

The final choice has been made, now, and the title will be "Dancers in the Dark." It is a unique title and covers the action in the picture completely, it is said. The story is based upon a youth who is seeking happiness and contentment in life, only to find that he has been groping in the dark.

The cast contains such stars as Mary Carr, Tyrone Power, Mildred Harris, Clara Bow, Chas. Emmet Mack (thru the courtesy of D. W. Griffith), "Skeets" Gallagher, Sam Sidman, Helen Rowland and Joseph Depew.

Mayor Aids Drive for "Front Page Story"

A drive of the Cleveland Vitagraph Exchange on "A Front Page Story" was one of the most successful any picture has enjoyed in the Ohio metropolis, it is claimed. This Jess Robbins production deals with a feud between the Mayor of a small city and the editor of the local daily newspaper.

"A Front Page Story" was screened for Mayor Kohler and members of his administration at the City Hall, Cleveland. After the showing Mayor Kohler expressed his appreciation of this splendid comedy drama and gave permission to the Vitagraph manager to use the phrase, "The truth about the Mayor" in a teaser campaign.

The picture was booked for a simultaneous showing in twenty theatres in Cleveland and its suburbs, and display advertisements were given to the Cleveland daily newspapers incorporating the names of twenty theatres which played "A Front Page Story."

Pastor Makes Sermon on "Covered Wagon"

The Rev. John Haynes Holmes, of the Community Church of New York, devoted practically his entire sermon on Sunday, May 27, to James Cruze's Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon." He spoke extemporaneously, without even notes, but after his sermon he summed up his impression of the picture in these words:

"'The Covered Wagon' is incomparably the finest picture that I have ever seen. It is so beautiful as a work of art and so impressive as a document of history that one is ready, for its sake, to forgive the abomination of the average movie theatre. Don't fail to see this picture!"

Laemmle Tells Value of Serial

Universal Chief Proclaims Chapter Play Best Tonic for the Summer

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, which recently reorganized its serial department and projected a year's supply of "super-serials," has just come out with a forceful statement on behalf of serial entertainment, including criticism of those who knock chapter pictures, and a warning to those exhibitors who are reluctant to inaugurate serial programs as a summer booster.

"I want to take a crack at the wise birds who are forever knocking screen serials," he said. "I mean those in the industry, not out of it. I want to make them eat their words—and like it."

"I know of no better way to make them change their minds about serials than to call attention to past performances of chaptered screen entertainment. I could spend days quoting incidents where houses have been saved from the sheriff by the installation of a jam-up Serial Night."

"Serials, as many of them are made today, really are a high-class product. I can point to chapter pictures which are good enough for any house in the United States, whether it be on Broadway or not. We are not living in the past. The serial has progressed from the days when it was a 'dime novel' in screen form."

"Many persons will be astounded when I tell them that the first chapter alone of 'In the Days of Daniel Boone' cost Universal more than $30,000.

"The answer is that the chapter picture is coming into its own. It has its place on every program. When Universal started its celebrated series of 'thrills from history' serials, many people scoffed when we promised that they would be 'first-run' serials. Yet, our records show that they have opened a new field for chaptered entertainment. 'Winners of the West,' then 'In the Days of Buffalo Bill,' and more recently 'The Oregon Trail,' all have proven that a super-serial is just as remarkable as a super-picture. 'In the Days of Daniel Boone,' the next on our super-serial schedule, will meet with even greater success and will find itself on the screens of even more first-run houses, mark my word."

"That's why Universal has projected an entire year's supply of 'super-serials.' That's why no expense is being spared to enable such serial wizards as William Duncan to do the best that can be done in his series of chaptered pictures, beginning with 'The Steel Trail,' now in work. And that is why Fred Thomson is getting the best support that the industry can offer for his series of thrill-serials, which began with 'The Eagle's Talons,' now a proven success."

Philly Reviewers Praise "Luck"

Johnny Hines' Latest Melocomedy Is Commended After Victoria Showing

NEWSPAPER reviews on "Luck," the latest of the Johnny Hines' melocomedies, coming in from cities where the various territorial premiers are held, all shower praise on the C. C. Burr feature, it is said.

The latest criticisms are from Philadelphia where "Luck" enjoyed a successful engagement last week at the Victoria theatre. The critic of the Philadelphia Inquirer had this to say:

"Treated in an original manner it has every appearance of being right up to the minute. There's a lot of fun and good entertainment to Hines' work in the picture."

The Philadelphia Record praised the picture in this fashion: "The theme is melo-dramatic, but the picture is played like a comedy in many episodes and the spectators especially enjoyed the burlesque prize fight into which the hero was forced by circumstances."

The North American critic wrote as follows: "Johnny Hines provides ample entertainment in characteristic stunts in 'Luck,' which is the photoplay feature of the Victoria. The star has apparently limitless energy and a compelling way, so that his romantic progress in the role he portrays in this picture is entirely plausible and is worked out with considerable realism of detail. It would be hard to find a more attractive leading woman than Violet Mersereau. Robert Edeson and Edmund Breese are veterans who can always be counted upon to do good work."

The Public Ledger of Philadelphia published the following review: "'Luck' is a comedy of the adventures of a young man in earning ten thousand dollars in a year's time, beginning with no money in his pockets, in fact without pockets, for he starts clad only in flimsy running togs. Interspersed with all this is a romance that culminates in the rescue by the hero of the heroine from a mine which caves in and traps her."

First National Releases on Selected List

Two of the seven pictures listed by the reviewer of Movie Weekly as the best of the past month are First National releases, both of which were reviewed at the New York Strand, where they had their premiere in the New York territory.

They are Richard Barthelmess' picture, "The Bright Shawl," described as "a highly artistic romance of an American, a Spanish dancer and some Cuban revolutionists with Dorothy Gish and Dick Barthelmess," and Norma Talmadge's "Within the Law," a screen version of the famous crook drama by Bayard Veiller.

Song Campaign Based on "Backbone"

HARMS, Inc., are making a national campaign to popularize "Yvonne," a song based on the story of "Backbone," the Distinctive Pictures Corporation's feature now being distributed by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan. Yvonne is the name of the heroine, the part taken by Edith Roberts. Lewis Gensler wrote the music and Irving Caesar wrote the words to this fox trot which has as its theme a century-old French hunting song which plays an important part in the unfolding of the mystery. Cooperating with Goldwyn, Harms is following the playing of "Backbone" around the country, featuring the piece in all local music stores for several weeks prior to the showing of the picture.

Pastor Bases Sermons on Picture Stills

The use of illustrated slides in the church and as a means of popular entertainment is by no means new, but it has remained for a Brooklyn pastor to utilize stereopticon slides, made up from motion picture stills, as the basis of illustrating regular Sunday sermons and lectures on religious topics in Y. M. C. A.'s and other similar institutions.

Dr. A. R. Heaps, pastor of the Lewis Avenue Congregational Church of Brooklyn, has conceived the idea of securing his Sunday night themes from motion picture stories, and utilizing attractively colored slides, made up from still pictures, as a means of illustrating his sermon and driving home his points.

A week ago Dr. Heaps preached a sermon based on the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation production, "The Critical Age," which later he repeated at the Adams (Mass.) Congregational Church, and which will be given at the Central Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn on Tuesday of next week. In the near future Dr. Heaps will deliver similar illustrated sermons on "The Kingdom Within," "Down to the Sea in Ships," "Michael O'Halloran" and other Hodkinson features, the stories of which provide character material upon which to base a semi-religious topic.

Mary Pickford Nears End of "Street Singer"

The end is in sight on the work of making Mary Pickford's newest United Artists attraction, "The Street Singer," on which she has been working since early in March.

Ernest Lubitsch, the director, now believes that the last scene will be shot in a few days. More than 2,000 players have appeared before the camera during the process of production, and forty-six sets have been built.

Following "The Street Singer" Miss Pickford plans to plunge immediately into the making of another picture, probably "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," the scenario for which is now ready for the camera.

How Ventilation Helps Summer Business

Owners Find Effective Installations Permit Successful Operation Throughout this Season

THERE is no real necessity for closing theatres during the summer months. Theatres can be made to pay profitable returns during that part of the year. This fact is becoming generally known. The whole keynote of successful summer business is ventilation. Ventilation can make the theatre a cool and comfortable place, attractive not only by its various forms of amusement but equally, or even more attractive, as an inviting locality to forget the torment of disagreeable, hot weather.

Once a theatre has established the reputation of being the coolest place in any given locality, then there is every likelihood that the attendance during the summer may exceed that of the other seasons. There are theatres today who, having given particular attention to ventilation, are experiencing this reverse of the commonly accepted theory concerning the show business during the summer months.

Which all goes to emphasize the importance of the physical characteristics of the theatre to popular appeal.

As ventilation is rapidly being universally accepted as an essential part of every theatre, the problem confronts many exhibitors of selecting and installing proper apparatus for this purpose.

Many Systems of Ventilation Applicable to Theatres

There are many systems of ventilation which can be installed in theatres. It is a recommendable procedure to cooperate heating and ventilating, as ventilation has two functions, one to furnish air and the other to heat.

Possibly a simple system which is used by many exhibitors for summer cooling only will serve many theatres where the cost of the installation of the more complex systems for both heating and ventilating is prohibitive.

This system for summer cooling incorporates fans which usually blow air in from the front of the auditorium and exhaust it through openings such as doors, windows, etc., at the rear of the theatre. It is found necessary to use fans of large capacity in order that every section of the theatre will receive sufficient ventilation. Where a great volume of air is not correctly employed in this particular system of ventilation numerous dead spots, i. e., sections where the air fails to circulate, will be found.

One good authority states that the velocity of the air being blown through the theatre in this system of ventilation should be at least one mile per hour, and in many instances will be found advantageous to increase this speed to two miles per hour.

Upper—Sketch illustrating the position of the centrifugal fans and the direction of the circulation of the air in the down draft ventilating system

Lower—This view shows the centrifugal intake with a disk exhaust fan on the roof

It is necessary to permit the air easy exhaust through the openings such as doors, windows, etc., at all times for if these exhausts are closed the system will prove ineffective. While it is conceded that this system of ventilation does not incorporate all the advantages of the more complex systems, if properly installed and operated will prove an excellent asset for securing good summer business.

A advisable to Consider Heating Along With Ventilation

If an exhibitor is contemplating installing a ventilating system as stated above, it is also advisable to consider the installation of auxiliary equipment needed for an effective heating system.

The theatre can be heated by warming the air which is blown in by the fans. This requires the installation of special apparatus. If such a system is considered, it is well to install a limited amount of radiator service in the auditorium as a precaution in the event of trouble with the ventilating system as well as to save in the expense of operating the house. It is proved that a limited fan ventilating system which permits the warming of the air in winter for heating purposes can be installed in most houses as inexpensively as a complete radiator system, the former system naturally having decided advantages over the last.

Systems Which Give Greatest Cooling Effect

There are two systems which permit the maximum degree of cooling the air in the summer. One is by employing air washers and the other is by the use of the more recent innovation of refrigeration.

Through the use of air washers it is possible to reduce the temperature of the air from that of the exterior on an extremely hot day as much as 10 degrees. However, in the case where the exterior temperature of the air is relatively low and the humidity comparatively high, the lowering of the temperature permitted is not so great.

Air washers furthermore remove dust and dirt from the incoming air and tend to preserve expensive draperies and the interior furnishings of the theatre. By means of this system air may also be recirculated through the theatre when the heating system is used, thus permitting a more economic operation. This recirculated air, it is claimed, is as pure as that drawn from outdoors.

By employing the refrigeration system the regulation of the temperature is permitted. It is possible in this case to control the heating and the ventilating of the theatre through thermostats which automatically open and close, regulating dampers or steam valves.

A few of the salient points to be considered when provisions are being made for heating and ventilating systems are:

Fans supplying and furnishing air (cooled or warmed, depending upon the season).

Sufficient open area for the intake and exhaust.

An even balance between the exhaust and the intake fans.

The proper location of these fans. For instance, the exhaust and intake openings should be at the opposite points, i. e., if the supply is through the floor, the exhaust should be through the ceiling, or if the supply is through the front of the auditorium, the exhaust should be in the rear.

Too much stress cannot be given to the ventilation of the theatre. The Technical Department of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be glad to make recommendations or put exhibitors in touch with the various manufacturers who make a specialty of theatre ventilation.

Two New Houses for Kansas City, Making Five Within a Month

PROPOSED construction of two more motion picture theatres in Kansas City, making the fifth within a month, was announced this week. The new houses, the Troostwood and the Rockhill, will be located at 5429 Troost Avenue and Forty-seventh and Troost Avenue, respectively. The Rockhill theatre will be a duplication in name of the new motion picture house now in course of construction at Fortieth and Main Streets.

The Troostwood theatre will be a two-story building, with shops on the first floor frontage. The theatre will be operated by Frank Reber, a contractor, and his three sons, Clarence, John and Glenn Reber. The house will be 60x123 feet with a seating capacity of 1,000, and will be constructed that a balcony seating 300 persons can be added. The estimated cost of the building is $50,000. Plans provide for the front of the structure to be divided into three 20-foot compartments, those on the north and south to be occupied by shops while that in the center will form a street entrance and hallway leading to the lobby of the theatre behind the stores. On the second floor in the front of the building will be a lounge and theatre office. Wilson &

Crans, 608 Interstate Building, Kansas City, Mo., are the architects.

The Rockhill theatre will form the right wing of a $400,000 building to be erected by the Watson-Roth Building and Investment Company, of which Jack Roth, manager of the Isis theatre, is president. The building also will include a market and store rooms, having a 250-foot frontage, while the theatre will be 80x150 feet and have a seating capacity of 1,920. The company headed by Mr. Roth recently obtained a 99-year lease on the site, reviving and enlarging a theatre building project which the original lessee failed to carry through. Work of construction will start next month, Mr. Roth said. The building, of Spanish renaissance design, will be fireproof, the front being of chrome terra cotta with a red tile roof. The theatre stage will be large enough to accommodate any sort of prologue or special number, equipped with rigging lofts, fly galleries, switchboards and every other appliance necessary, according to Mr. Roth. The new house will be open late this fall or early winter. Boller Brothers, 508 Ridge Building, Kansas City, Mo., are the architects.—True

Strand, Tampa, Pulls New Stunt

Mr. Frost has added another very attractive stunt in the lobby of the Strand to work up interest in his coming attractions. On each side of the box office he has had large enclosed frames built. On the face of each frame is space for a one-sheet, four of the 10 by 12 photos and the theatre announcement of the dates the pictures will be shown. Inside the enclosed part of the frame are several electric lights, so arranged that at night, when the lights are on, the light is reflected through the posters and photos. The effect is really beautiful, as the beauty of the colored posters and photos is made so attractive with the light shining through them. If exhibitors do not know just how to prepare the photos and posters to get this effect, they can address Mr. Frost at the Strand theatre, Tampa, who will be glad to furnish them details.—Leslie.

Twice the light on the screen with the same current consumption

The G-E High Intensity Projection Arc gives twice the illumination on the screen that can be obtained by use of the older styles of low intensity lamps, with no increase in current consumption. Also the quality of the light is almost the same as daylight lessening eye-strain and giving, in the case of colored films, full color values. After the arc is struck, operation is automatic, there being only two hand adjustments (for regulating size of spot). The focus is fixed; no adjustments are necessary during operation.

All these features are embodied in this lamp which is offered to motion picture exhibitors only after two and a half years of successful operation in actual service. You get the finest films for your theatre—show them to best advantage.

SIMPLIFIED ELECTRICITY for PROJECTIONISTS

Direct Current Machinery

LESSON VI—PART III

Armature Reaction

WHEN the field coils of a direct current generator are excited and the armature is rotated by applying mechanical force to it, current will flow through the armature coils. The direction of this current flow can be determined by Fleming's three-finger right-hand rule. It is understood of course that the external circuit connected to the generator, forming its load, is closed as otherwise open circuit voltage would exist across the brushes.

Now the current so induced in the armature winding sets up, in turn, its own magnetic field in a manner already described in detail in Lesson II Part I. Naturally this magnetic field must have some effect on that set up by the field coils themselves and this gives rise to what is known as the reaction of the armature field on the primary field, or more simply, Armature reaction. To put it briefly, the net effect of armature reaction is to cause a decrease in the effect of the primary field. This, naturally, is a harmful effect since more turns must be provided on the field coils in order to compensate for this loss. The theory of armature reaction can best be explained by a series of diagrams showing in detail the action of the individual fields and the effect obtained when they are combined.

In Fig. 62 is shown the magnetic field created by the field winding of a generator. The direction in which the generator is revolving is indicated by the curved arrow. This, however, has no bearing whatever on the subject. The armature core is marked A and is shown without the conductors. That is, just the bare soft iron core alone, stripped of its conductors.

Now it was pointed out some time ago under the chapter on magnetism that soft iron offers a much easier path to the flow of magnetic lines of force than does air. To use the technical expression, the reluctance of an iron path is much lower than that of an air path. This being the case, obviously, the lines of force leaving the north pole will take the shortest possible path to the armature core and then flow straight over until the next air gap is reached when they will again cross the air directly to the South pole. This then represents the magnetic field set up by the field winding of the generator.

Now the field created by armature coils when they are carrying current will appear as shown in Fig. 63. This of course might be expected after what was said in Lesson II Part I concerning the magnetic field set up by coils of wire. It will be noticed that there are apparently two separate fields set up by the armature coils. The one on the left being formed by current flowing out of the wire. That is, coming toward the reader, while the one, the right being formed by the same current on the opposite side of the coil flowing in the wire. The net result of these two fields is that the lines of force flow up through the armature core and down on the outsides of the core. This motion, of course, is directly across that of the lines of force from the field winding. In fact the two fields are right angles (90) to each other. For this reason the field of the armature coils is said to have a cross-magnetizing effect on the primary field.

The effect shown in Fig. 63 is that of the armature field alone. In order for this field to exist, however, current must be flowing in the conductors and this current, in turn, is dependent upon the existence of the primary. In other words these two fields can only exist together and not alone. This being the case, they must exert some effect on each other. The resultant field is shown in Fig. 64. This shows the effect of combining the both fields.

It will be noticed from this figure that on the side of the north pole, near the top, the field is weak while on the same side near the bottom it is strong. This is due to the fact that on top the two fields mentioned are moving in opposite directions and so are bucking each other while on the bottom the two fields are moving in the same and hence their effects are added. The same is true for the south pole side of the armature.

It will also be seen from Fig. 64 that if the brushes are shifted in the direction of rotation, in order to improve commutation, they would be placed in the weakest part of the field as indicated by the dotted line. This, of course, would have a bad effect on commutation since the commutating field must be comparatively strong in order to function properly. To overcome this the distance between pole faces and armature core is increased in order to increase the reluctance of the magnetic path and so decrease the strength of the cross-magnetizing field. This, of course, has the same effect on the primary field so more turns must be added to the field winding to offset this loss.

The effect of brush shifting on the armature field alone is shown in Fig. 65. It will be seen that the entire field is shifted in the same direction. The main direction of the armature field is no longer at right angles (90) with the primary field but at some smaller angle a. The armature field, when so placed can be split up into two parts; that is, it can be resolved into a horizontal component and a vertical component. These two components have the same effect as the one main field and are shown by arrows H and V Fig. 65. The main field is represented by arrow M. The vertical component is called the cross-magnetizing effect as stated before and the horizontal component is called the demagnetizing effect. It is so called because it directly bucks the primary field.

These two components of the armature field can also be represented by so many turns of wire on the armature necessary to create them. Thus as shown in Fig. 66.

Plans for Supply Dealers' Annual Convention

"The Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers, Eastern Zone, held a very interesting meeting last evening, which was called for the purpose of having President M. G. Felder and National Organizer, Joe Hornstein, report on the the preparations under way for holding the Second National Convention of Supply Dealers in Chicago, July 9-10-11.

Messrs. Felder & Hornstein reported having attended the 4th Annual Convention of Theatre Owners in Chicago. During their visit they conferred with National President, Leo Dwyer of Cleveland, and many other dealers from different parts of the country. Indications are that all members are going to the National Convention full of enthusiasm as having launched at Indianapolis last year a movement that will lead to a quick acting, progressive organization, comprising every Supply Company in the business.

National Organizer, Hornstein announced that membership is now 109 with only about 30 more eligibles; that National President Dwyer was desirous of having every company represented at the Convention as there would no doubt be appointed a Business Executive for directing the affairs of the organization. There is considerable sentiment in favor of Charles B. Hoy, head of the Hoy Reporting Services, N. Y. C., being selected for this position.

Judging from the discussion "Better Projection and Service" seems to be the slogan of the Members of the Association.

A lively time in Chicago is assured with good attendance as all of the prominent manufacturers have signified their intention of being represented.

New Photographers Society Formed

A new organization has been formed of Motion Picture Photographers, which is composed of all the first class studio photographers in the East. An open meeting was held recently, at the Simplex Projection Rooms, 220 West 42nd Street, and an interesting program was given in the way of entertainment. A heart to heart talk with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson after a review of the Johnson's wonderful animal picture taken in Africa was given. A discourse on tropical photography with long focus lens was very entertaining and instructive. Following Johnson's, a foreign picture with some remarkable lighting and snow scenes was also shown. Mr. Max Mayer of the Wohl Company gave quite a talk on the modern use of artificial lighting.

Explanation of Smooth Movement of Motion Pictures

Motion pictures are flat and lacking in any real quality of depth or any qualities that will give convergence or disparity. Then how is it that, nevertheless, the observer, receives the impression of depth from this representation which is in a single plane? In answering this we shall be initiated still deeper into the almost mysterious processes of integration that are accomplished by the nervous system.

At the outset it is evident that we are certain of our perception of the third dimension in the photoplay. The actors not only walk from right to left, but enter and exit through a door at the rear just as they would on a real, three-dimensional stage. Then we see the screen troopers gallop away and out of sight into the distant hills. There is no denying the fact that we receive the impression of depth; and there is no denying the fact that, as an objective quality, depth is lacking in the motion picture.

While the most accurate and predominant factors in the perception of depth are the physiological ones of disparity and convergence, there are still a large number of so-called secondary factors which assist materially in building up these perceptions. It is more fitting that these factors be termed psychological rather than secondary, and of late this has come to be the common practice.

What we have long known as perspective is perhaps the most important psychological factor. Distant objects are smaller than near objects; the lines in the visual field converge toward a vanishing point. Perspective is significant in normal, binocular perception of the three-dimensional world; it is ultra-significant in the flat world of the motion picture, and even painting, for that matter. It is largely this factor which gives apparent depth to flat representations. Artists have long made conscious use of this in their painting; the Japanese and Chinese still create pictures in which the perspective is omitted. This results in a characteristic flatness and unreality in appearance.

Again in this perspective we find the integrating activities of the nervous system prominent. Although distant objects cast a smaller image on the retina than near objects, the former are still interpreted, not as small more remote.

The motion pictures utilize all these psychological factors to give the spectators the impression of depth. In addition they take advantage of certain common illusions by having the action take place in the background rather than in the foreground; through this procedure the impression of depth is increased. Sometimes the action in the background is provided by the sea or by a breeze waving the trees. It does not need to be human action to produce the illusion.

The scenic arrangements of the photoplay are selected not alone for their artistic features but, as well, for their depth producing qualities when projected on to the screen. Although this objective screen presentation is flat and without depth, it is possible to take advantage of these psychological factors and thus produce screen dramas as full of depth and plasticity as they are of action and human interest.

Panoramic walls in the screen settings are popular with directors since these enhance the perspective of lines; round tables are discarded in favor of long, rectangular ones for the same reason. The rooms used in filming the various scenes are enormously exaggerated as to depth, not primarily to produce an appearance of lavishness, but that the factor of depth may be made to stand out clearer in the projected, flat picture.

What can the scientist predict as to the future development of the technique of the photo-play? In the first place, there are hindrances to any great future development in the elimination of flicker due to the rather large individual differences in the retinal lags. It is necessary for the projection to meet the requirements of the great majority of the spectators, and there will always be some who, through physiological idiosyncrasies, do not receive the continuity of impression and clearness at its maximum. It would not be impossible for those who can afford the luxury to have their eyes tested for the factors involved in motion picture projection and have a projection built to meet their individual requirements just the same as glasses are ground to order.

Daylight projection is not impossible, but will remain a dream for many years. Certain features of the flicker phenomena are a serious handicap in achieving this end. The fusion phenomena takes place with the slowest speed and with the weakest illumination when the general illumination is at its weakest. As the general illumination is increased it becomes necessary for the speed of interruption, or the illumination of the screen, or both, to be increased greatly in order to overcome flicker and retain fusion. Mechanical difficulties at present are not such as to make projection of motion with a bright illumination of the theatre out of the question.

Another handicap in the production of fusion is in the fact that apparent motion appears on the screen. This complicates the fusion and in cases of jerky or sudden motion tends to produce flicker of itself. The basis for this is demonstrated in the laboratory where simply moving the hand between the eyes and the revolving sectors which are fusing immediately brings about an occurrence of flicker. One observes this from time to time in the commercial motion picture, especially in the news reviews where football action is portrayed. The government war films of marching soldiers afford a good example of this where fusion takes place from the trunks of the soldiers up, but where flicker is seen in the same picture where the movements of the legs complicate the projection.

Colored projection will always be hampered not only by the expense and great mechanical difficulties involved, but also by the fact that the lag varies with the colors and it is impossible to get the smoothness that is obtained with black and white. Negative after-images of the colors which are projected with a light stronger than is usual in daily life also contribute to the difficulty of successful colored projection.

The effect of depth will always suffer so long as it is necessary for the photo-play spectators to view the pictures at distances and from angles at which they were not photo-

Announcing the New CINEPHOR CONDENSING SYSTEM

EVERY theater owner should be interested in the new Bausch & Lomb Cinephor Condensing System, which makes possible an increase in illumination up to 25% without additional current expense, or the same illumination with reduced current expense. Furthermore, the light over the entire screen is even and of maximum intensity without any dark spot in the center of the field.

Greater latitude in fluctuation of the arc without showing discoloration on the margins of the picture is possible, as the condenser operates with a slightly larger spot on the aperture plate.

The Bausch & Lomb Cinephor Condensing System consists of a parabolic condenser, as the front element, and a plano convex condenser, the rear element. Although these two elements can be purchased separately, they should be used together to insure the best results.

The development of this corrected condensing system enables us to offer a complete "Cinephor" optical system of the highest quality—Cinephor Projection Lenses and Cinephor Condensing Systems.

graphed. The maximum effect of depth is obtained when one is at the same position in relation to the scene at which it was photographed. This is one reason why extreme side seats are undesirable. And at the same time no position in the auditorium is perfect in this respect for the various scenes are photographed from different angles and distances.

The photoplay is rapidly becoming an art unto itself and is receiving the merited attention of students of art and aesthetics. Fundamentally, however, it is a triumph of applied science and is only one of the many examples of the rapid progress which has been made in this field in the more recent decades.

Phonofilms Progressing

Interest of motion picture fans abroad in the Lee DeForest Phonofilm is reflected by the applications of foreign distributors for exclusive rights.

Since the Phonofilm had its premiere at the Rivoli theatre a few weeks ago such applications have been received from Japan, China, Sweden, Canada, the Argentine, Chile, New Zealand and Porto Rico in addition to the European Continental countries.

Dr. DeForest is now abroad and will treat direct with French and English offers.

Production is going ahead steadily at the studios in East 48th Street.

Complete programs will be ready by Autumn, it is announced.

The first Phonofilms for general distribution will consist of short concert numbers, vaudeville skits and comedies.

The entire action, audible as well as pictorial, is contained on the Phonofilm.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

With an emphatically long scale of gradation it carries through to the screen the entire range of tones from highest light to deepest shadow that the cameraman has secured in the negative.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now obtainable in thousand foot lengths, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

THE TWO ESSENTIALS

PRODUCERS want just two things from a film laboratory. They want prints expressing accurately and adequately the story as it has been told before the camera; and they want prompt, dependable service. These are the two essentials. The expression of the story must conform to the tempo of the play. The director's and the cinematographer's conception of the drama must be carried out in the photography as well as in the sets, the lighting, and the action. Each print must be made with particular attention to the kind of story that is being told. The foremost producers of the West have found STANDARD daily service and STANDARD PRINTS the answer to these requirements.

EXHIBITORS want just two things from a laboratory. They want release prints that show properly all the producer has put into the picture and all that has been advertised to the public. They want release prints that stand up under the hard usage given prints of every popular photoplay. The increasing number of prominent producers whose work reaches the screen through STANDARD PRINTS is the best evidence of the satisfaction these prints are giving exhibitors.

"HOLLYWOOD"

MEMO—TO EXHIBITORS

YOU can't do justice to "Hollywood," unless you see it yourself. The screen has never had a greater entertainment in its history than this picture. Your people will come 5 and 6 times to see it. Your newspapers will rave about its humor. Your fans will go wild about its plot and stars and when the scene of Lem's dream of Hollywood is shown you'll hear 'em laughing 10 blocks away. Make no mistake, here is A picture—one that demands a long, long run and all the enthusiasm you can give it. Get up a special showing for your newspaper folks and officials. You'll have 'em shouting "Hollywood" all over town. Every person that sees it will bring 4 others back the next night. Get the press sheet. Get all the ad stuff you can possibly absorb and go to it! But above all—look at the picture first! It took eight months to make it but prints will be ready soon.

150 SUMMER HITS!

"How, for one thing, about the good pictures of the season just ending—the ones that get kicked out of the way by the fast processes of distribution? Millions of people have missed them. Why not some effort here—for the smaller houses; and for the bigger ones. Who will dig down in his treasure chest?"

"Who will come forward?"

FROM A SMALL TOWN EXHIBITOR

A theatre that runs specials and passes up this one is missing something it shouldn't miss. This picture has more "stuff" than any of the other specials of the season. Forget the costume fear.

It packs enough story to make all the rest of this season's specials look like program pictures. It isn't a program picture that happens to draw well, as most of them are, but a picture into which has been put real money, energy, brains and work.

It is not a "highbrow" picture alone, because of its intense action and absorbing story. It is not "lowbrow" alone because it is the most elaborate picture Famous Players-Lasky ever put into a can. It's everything! It's a special that draws the second day and the third—and that's very rare these days. We saw tags on cars parked in front of our theatre from eight different towns.

We've had a good many pictures that kept the cashier busy, but this one drew more American dollars than any other picture we have run since "Way Down East." — FRED HINDS, CRESCO THEATRE, CRESCO, IOWA.

Another great RALPH CONNOR success "The Man from Glengarry"

Produced by OTTAWA FILM PRODUCTIONS LTD.

M. P. NEWS: Through a splendid treatment of its salient points, coupled with a first rate production and a capital interpretation, "The Critical Age" will prove entertaining to every audience that sees it. The sponsors deserve credit for telling it in five reels, thus heightening the action and making the scenes compact.

It is thoroughly pleasing and capably conceived and executed in every department.

M. P. WORLD: Pauline Garon is a type that is immensely popular right now and proves in this picture that she is well qualified to act.

It is an interesting picture because it is in some ways apart from the stereotyped and is wholesome and youthful.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: It is a delightful little Canadian tale of romance at the "puppy-love" stage, and easily holds the interest. It is an outdoor picture and includes many lovely scenes of natural beauty.

"The Critical Age" should be satisfactory entertainment for any audience.

FILM DAILY: . . . is handled in the right way, given a good production and played by a company that is well suited and capable, as well as being carefully directed.

Pleasing offering that is short and can fit on any program.

Pauline Garon, the latest screen flapper and a very busy one judging from all the pictures she has appeared in recently, will be well liked in the role of Margie Baird and will gain more friends for her work in this.

This is pleasant entertainment that should satisfy almost any audience. It is a short picture and should satisfy the demands of exhibitors crying for features that do not run into seven and eight reels. With this one they can use a good program of short reels and with the feature offering a good entertainment, it should give their patrons a nice bill.

MORNING TELEGRAPH: A charming little thing touched lightly and skilfully and making a delightful entertainment.

Pauline Garon is delightful as the girl.

It is a good picture, light and agreeable, and should meet with success.

"Aimed Straight at Your Heart--

Five Reviewers were sent by 'The Exhibitor's Trade Review' and this is what they say:

"The plain fact of the matter is that Mr. Griffith has given the screen an extremely good picture—good in the sense that it is able to move thousands of spectators to alternate tears and laughter; and to send them home feeling that they have been well entertained and received the full worth of their money, with something over. In trade circles, a 'good' picture is one that proves a winning box office attraction, makes a successful bid for popularity, and enables theatre owners to hang out the S. R. O. sign. What more can an exhibitor want?"

—George T. Pardy.

"You may say it is a woman's picture because it always holds the spotlight upon one phase of life that is woman's chief dominion. But it is a man's picture just as much. For the picture as a whole, it is dramatic at times and interesting always."

—George Blaisdell.

"'The White Rose' has extraordinary emotional appeal. Indeed a work which so sways the emotion of the spectators is rare among the works of the stage or screen. It attacks the spectator's emotions with the violence of a tornado; and Mae Marsh's portrait—it cannot be called a performance—is one of the most moving spectacles ever developed on the screen. For an emotion stirring play and characterization, it hardly seems 'The White Rose' can be 'oversold.'" —Tom Kennedy.

"'The White Rose' is a love story of tremendous appeal. It is beautifully told and will not fail to reach the heart. The scenes in the Bayou Teche country, for scenic beauty have seldom if ever been equalled for beauty. The production will stand as another work of art for Mr. Griffith's credit."

—James M. Davis.

"It is a box office attraction. It has the suspense and the pathos, the tugs at heartstrings and the power to relieve those tugs with flushes of joy. The many millions who knew Mae Marsh in the other days will relish her work in this picture."

—Howard McLellan.

This is the only picture of the season for which the public actually paid $3.30 a seat, and they did pay it again and again as a certificate of the box office records show.

(Don Allen in N. Y. Evening World).

"It easily ranks with the most important pictures made in America. The acting is magnificent; as fine as the screen can boast"—(N. Y. Sun)

"Try as you will to resist its appeal, it will make you smile, weep and laugh . . . We think it is the best picture Mr. Griffith has made since 'The Birth of a Nation'"—(N. Y. Journal).

"Boldly tearing away the old dual standards of morality, The White Rose is one of the finest things D. W. Griffith has ever made. It is inspiring and moving"—(Quinn Martin in N.Y. World).

"A singularly fine picture, the treatment of the big dramatic moments is superb. It is beautified and exalted by the presence of that exquisite creature, Mae Marsh, the divinely inspired"—(Robert Sherwood in N.Y. Herald)

"'The White Rose' has brought a great joy to me, as it will bring, I am sure, to innumerable other people."
—(Jane Cowl, "The Juliet of the century" and foremost actress).

"Griffith is a great poet with 'The White Rose'."
—(Max Reinhardt, the most famous European producer for the stage).

"This latest Griffith production should prove an attractive box office attraction, specially pleasing to those who have a penchant for pictures which bring a lump to the throat and a tear to the eye."—(Exhibitors Herald).

"This picture is a sermon, poem and great love drama, all in one, with laughter full of tears. It sends one home with something unforgettable, with a heart hunger for a better humanity."

"The Sunshine Trail"

Douglas MacLean Splendidly Cast in Bright Comedy-Drama by First National Reviewed by Mary Kelly

"The Sunshine Trail" is a good attraction that should be diverting to any class of patrons. It affords Douglas MacLean an engaging role that is unusually well suited to him and brings out his most popular qualities. Where light comedy-drama with plenty of action goes well, this picture would be a wise selection.

The story is a refreshing example of what can be done with material that is not especially remarkable, by applying a vivid imagination. There is just enough newness in the treatment here to make it constantly snappy. The sequence is excellent. One dilemma piles upon another in true farcical style, only that the general mood is not farcical. There is too much suspense for that. There is everything that makes well-balanced entertainment from a bank robbery for thrills to a kidnapped youngster for heart interest. Muriel Frances Dana plays this role delightfully. She attaches herself to the hero early in the story and her presence is the cause of most of the trouble which comes his way—and that is a good deal.

MacLean's performance is fine entertainment. His genial impersonation of the character who persists in "scattering sunshine" no matter what the costs will surely please a great majority. The comedy throughout is appealing. Edith Roberts plays the boy's sweetheart vivaciously and the whole cast is more than satisfactory. Thomas H. Ince has given splendid supervision to a picture which does him credit from beginning to end.

A Good Move

THE International Congress of Authors and Picture Producers, sponsored by the Famous Players Lasky organization and held last week in New York, was a creditable and constructive affair.

A concrete success could not possibly be expected of it. It was the initial meeting of two groups, each, we will say, equally uninformed as to the other's wants. But there was a good deal of candid criticism of shortcomings of each side, a good deal of honest striving after a solution—some solution; and to an observer on the side lines it seemed as if a solid step had been taken toward further progress out of which considerable good cannot help but come.

Basil King characterized the enterprise as a bid for publicity. The criticism struck us at the time as obviously funny. Mr. King did not request of the many reporters present that his presence there and his own remarks be kept from the public prints.

As a matter of fact a lot of good publicity did result; and it was good simply in that it showed plainly enough that the producer in this business does aspire to do better things and is sincerely in earnest about it.

In an interview given abroad and noted in this publication some time ago, Mr. Zukor stated that films had gone 'way ahead in physical excellence but dragged lamentably in originality of theme. And this Congress was called with the very serious purpose—a weighty business purpose, if you please—of correcting a weakness of large consequence.

We have often criticized the producer for his shortcomings—in particular his divergence from good taste, but always with trepidation since we have an immense respect for the art of making public entertainment, especially of the sure-fire order.

But we are inclined to criticize the author group a great deal more for their utter ignorance of the motion picture industry—of the machine that carries their wares to market, and in particular of their childish impatience when this machinery doesn't function nicely to their complete satisfaction. We don't say that the machinery is right by any means; but if any author will study it somewhat, by actual contact with it, that author will come forth more ready to cooperate than criticize. Otherwise, we feel pretty sure, there is something wrong with the author.

The author evidently blames the producer entirely for what seems to be the mistreatment of his story. He doesn't know that the producer is bearing upon his shoulders the heavy dictates of the distributor, and that the latter is in turn trying to pass on the dictates of the exhibitor. Some exhibitors know what the public preference is or should be; but the great majority simply gauge it by the last picture they made money on.

We are perfectly willing to agree with Fannie Hurst that she is better equipped to create successfully than the average picture director; on the other hand, we should like to see Fannie Hurst deal with a salesmen's convention or a convention of exhibitors.

Then there's the matter of advertising the pictures. Advertising is more than half the effort of the picture industry. Advertising influences production to a marked degree and advertising often makes a failure or success of the exhibitor and of the picture.

We mention these industrial forces because rightly or wrongly they control. This is a hybrid business. It is half art and the other half economics. One necessarily has to do with the other.

The author cannot reorder this huge industry to suit his own ends. He must take the main structure as he finds it. Which means that he must, with patience and understanding, help it to help him in the better expression of his ideas, ideals and characterizations.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

ONE regrettable note came forth from the Authors Congress — about the only one we were aware of—and that is the statement that morons make up the majority of motion picture audiences. The newspapers took it up—naturally; and by now it is pretty well broadcasted as the motion picture maker's idea of the public.

There was never a more ridiculous statement made and it is about time to put a question on this silly rot.

It is our business to sit in with a good many picture theatre audiences and we have yet to find one—anywhere—with moron proclivities. On the contrary we always leave a theatre with the fervent wish that the average motion picture director might be there and get some lessons in good judgment and good taste—in particular that the director might witness the ready “razzing” that greets overdone and underdone situations, presumptuous subtitles, obvious tricks and all the insincerity that stamps the cheap and makeshift effort. It has always been our experience that the man who creates entertainment—books, plays, pictures, music—has a deep and abiding respect for the public judgment. The trouble with too many directors is that their sole public is a very small, too often flippant and not over-intelligent section of Hollywood—themselves and their friends and satellites in other words.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON'S editorial in the June 2nd issue of the NEWS in reference to big pictures, has drawn some comment from Harry Rapf. And this is what he says: “From my observation everyone is doing the same thing and everyone is striving to make big pictures, but the result will be, I am afraid, too much dessert which everybody cannot eat. The cost of production today is so much higher than it has been, and the demand for lower rentals greater than it has been bring the extremes to a dangerous point. Where are they going to meet?”

“Producers are seeking big plays, stories, titles and paying enormous prices to get them and the natural rebound for all of this must come to the exhibitor. He must pay the price if these pictures continue to cost what they are. This is surely going to happen and somebody is going to get burnt next season.”

BILL YEARSLEY is going to have company in his jaunts among the vast, open spaces. Vacation time has rolled around for Pat Parsons of Pathe and he will join Bill in casting the fly in some fish-studded lake and otherwise taking things easy under the open canopy.

C. GARDNER SULLIVAN, who recently was appointed head of the scenario department of both the Norma and Constance Talmadge Film Companies, has returned to the Coast after completing a brief stay in New York. Mr. Sullivan came East to talk “shop” with Joe Schenck and incidentally to find suitable material for the Talmadges. It is his belief that Constance has ability to portray emotional roles and serious drama quite as successfully as her comedy roles.

Gardner Sullivan is one of the most gifted scenarists of the screen. Remember those sterling documents which he penned for Kay Bee? His stories are invariably rich in action and incident, and, furthermore, he knows how to write subtitles. We anticipate some rattling good pictures coming from the Schenck foundry with Sullivan in there to pick 'em and write 'em.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

THE twenty-sixth of August has been set as the date for Colleen Moore's marriage to John McCormick, First National's coast representative. The actress is wearing an engagement ring of two tiny shamrocks in emeralds to hold the diamond, for Colleen, true to her name, says emeralds bring her luck and the shamrock is her favorite flower.

VALENTIN MANDE-
STAMM of Paris, France, who came over to the States to attend the Congress of Authors, will leave shortly for the Coast where he will study pictures in the making.

AN enthusiastic home-coming was accorded last week to Carl Laemmle, when he visited Milwaukee and Oshkosh, Wis., the towns in which he grew up. Met by committees of prominent citizens, led by a brass band, dined with honor at the Milwaukee Press Club, and given the key of the city were some of the experiences of the Universal chieftain.

Mr. Laemmle went to Milwaukee primarily to inspect the new exchange. When he left the train he found himself face to face with a brass band, news cameramen, newspaper reporters, and a group of well known citizens of the Wisconsin city, among whom were a number of prominent exhibitors. The assemblage paraded in autos up Grand avenue, headed by the band, to the Universal exchange.

Following an inspection of the exchange, of which George Levine is the head, Mr. Laemmle was the guest of his lifelong friend, Judge John C. Karel of Milwaukee County, at a luncheon in the Milwaukee Press Club. Prominent in this party was ex-Governor E. L. Phillips. Among the others were leading newspaper men and the following exhibitors: George Fischer, of the New Milwaukee theatre, O. L. Meister, of the Whitehouse theatre, Tom Saxe, president of the Same Amusement Enterprises, and several exchange heads.

From Milwaukee, Mr. Laemmle went to Oshkosh, where he formerly managed a clothing store. His advent in Oshkosh was a signal for all his old-time friends to shower him with greetings. In his interviews in both places he called attention to the need of instigating courses in motion picture science and art in schools and colleges, and told of the scenario contest through which he will distribute $4,000 this fall to college students.

THIS is what the Hudson, N. Y. Register has to say concerning the picture theatre in the small town: The motion picture theatre has brought another distinct advantage to many small towns and villages. It has given them a pleasant and usually safe auditorium for many public entertainments. This is a welcome change from the upper story or barnlike audience rooms formerly used in such places for public entertainments. The motion theatre proprietors have lent their theatres freely for performances for local schools, charitable and fraternity occasions that are very helpful to the communities in many ways.

One of the distinct advantages of the "movies" that the rural audiences appreciate is the moving scenes in the great wide world that are presented to their eyes with a graphic truthfulness never known to art or photography. The humblest inhabitant of a country neighborhood, at trifling trouble and expense, can see the great events of the world as clearly portrayed and even to better advantage than those who travel over the world to see them. In this respect, the motion picture is entirely without rival by any other invention of man. It brings the whole world into knowledge of its various communities and features with a vividness and truthfulness never known before. Even the scenic settings of the motion picture dramas are wonderful revealers of the knowledge of strange lands and distant peoples and customs.

WELL, well here is an item which will interest the boys! Stage and Screen Golf and Country Club of Quaker Ridge, New Rochelle—up in Westchester—announces through a leaflet that it is ready to talk "shop" with golfers of the amusement world. After dwelling upon the high spots of the location it waxes enthusiastic over its two courses, one of championship calibre above 6500 yards in length, the other over 6000 yards. A separate provision is made for practise with wood and iron clubs and for putting greens. The club house will be built and furnished and one 18 hole golf course ready for play on May 15th, 1924. Phone or write Harry L. Boughton and Frank Meehan, Suite 1603, Pershing Square Building, New York, for further particulars. The phone is Vanderbilt 1686. Free advertisement.

WITH a print of his latest production, "Broken Hearts of Broadway" under his arm, Irving Cummings, actor-producer, has left Los Angeles for New York to arrange for distribution of the film.

JOHN BRUNTON, brother of the late Robert Brunton, is stopping at the Astor, New York, getting plans ready to start production activities upon a story "Mortgaged Wives" by Bonny Melbourne Bush, which will be directed by T. Hayes Hunter. The continuity will be prepared by Anthony Paul Kelly. Part of the picture will be made in Gotham and part in Miami, Fla.

A HUMOROUS story is going the rounds concerning a recent exploitation stunt.

A young actor was engaged to impersonate the central character of the story, Prince Tagor Khan, an East Indian potentate, who abandoned the faith of his fathers for Christianity. This actor, Ramon Gonzalo, who has wide experience on the stage and screen, was properly outfitted and costumed in New York and thoroughly rehearsed in his part. He journeyed to Boston in costume and registered at the Copley Plaza Hotel, where, in a mysterious way known to publicity men, he was "accidentally" brought to the attention of the newspaper reporters. During the many interviews which followed the Prince maintained his character perfectly and told them the story of the picture.

Columns of this material appeared in the various papers, together with pictures of "His Highness," but herein comes the laugh. So good was he that someone in the interests of another company "fell" for the Prince, secured an introduction to the Governor and an invitation to him to attend the premiere of the rival picture as the guest of the Governor, which he did in the full regalia of the Prince Tagor Khan, and they even went so far as to ask "His Highness" for an endorsement of this picture which he most graciously gave.

This is probably the first time on record that an exploitation stunt has been so successfully put over as to fool the press agent of a competitive show, and, incidentally is a tribute to the ability of the young actor who was able to fool all the newspaper men and even the Governor of the state. Needless to say both pictures profited by this stunt.

Cohen Asks Hearing from Michigan

Wolverine State Board of Directors Replies It Will Consider His Request

SYDNEY S. COHEN, president of the M. P. T. O. A., has requested a hearing before the board of directors of the Michigan M. P. T. O., which last week withdrew from the National organization. In response to wires sent by him to each officer and board member of the Michigan organization, he was advised that his request would be considered by the board.

Following is the text of the Cohen wire:

"Much surprised at receipt of telegram from President McLaren advising of action of Michigan board withdrawing state organization from national body. Regret that cordial and helpful relationship which existed between Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Michigan Theatre Owners for nearly three years should be so abruptly terminated. There must be considerable merit associated with such a union of forces covering such a long period and meeting so successfully so many varying situations, and I believe that the interests of the theatre owners will be placed in real jeopardy through the severance of these helpful relations. With a view only to conserving the welfare of the theatre owners of Michigan and the rest of the country, I request that your board of directors call a special meeting of the Motion Picture theatre Owners of Michigan the latter part of next week and give myself and other national officers a hearing in this matter so that we can at least endeavor to reconcile our differences in a calm, deliberate way and then come to such conclusions as the situation warrants. Kindly wire reply."

The Michigan reply, dated Detroit, June 8, and addressed to Mr. Cohen, follows:

"After considering your request that special meeting be called feel that this is matter that we cannot decide as individuals, but should be considered by board of directors as a unit, to whom we believe your communication should have been directed. Next meeting of board will be held in two weeks, at which time your request will be given careful consideration, and you will be advised accordingly.

"Signed: W. S. McLaren, H. T. Hall, James C. Ritter, Phil Gleichman, Fred De Lodder, John Niebes."

"Social Nights" Supplant Stunts in Cleveland

The sequel to the children stunt night performances in motion picture theatres here, which were stopped by mutual consent of the exhibitors and the judge of the Police Court, is the appearance of "social night" in the theatres.

Professional stunt night performances were stopped by the State Industrial Commission, which enforced the law stating that children under fourteen years of age may not appear in connection with a motion picture exhibition. The "social nights" have been inaugurated in several neighborhood houses which formerly had special children stunt nights, but the great majority of local exhibitors are content to drop that form of entertainment, at least for the time being.

Famous Players Acquire Control of All Assets of Allen Theatres, Limited, Toronto

THE assets of the Allen Theatres, Limited, Toronto, comprising title or lease and control of 35 moving picture theatres practically from Coast to Coast in Canada, have been acquired by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, according to an announcement made June 7. The Famous Players Canadian Corporation already had upwards of 30 theatres in the Dominion so that the chain of theatres controlled by the one company is now approximately 65.

The purchase price was $650,000, it is announced, and the initial cash payment was $50,000. In a number of instances, the Allens had only the lease of a theatre and, therefore, the total amount involved is comparatively small. Tentative allowance is made for the Allen theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, which has been the subject of litigation in recent weeks. It is stated that if the control of the Winnipeg Allen is not obtainable, a specified deduction is to be made in the purchase price.

The deal has been ratified by the court at Toronto, it has been reported, and the sale was made with the approval of G. T. Clarkson, authorized trustee, Toronto, under whose direction the Allen theatres have been operated for some time past, following the granting of a winding-up order by the courts.

It was well over a year ago that announcement was first made that N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, had made an offer for all physical assets held by Jules and J. J. Allen. The reported sum then was slightly over $1,000,000. Some subsequent changes in the Allen circuit resulted, it was pointed out, in the withdrawal of this offer and the submission of a lower bid. Still other offers were later made by Mr. Nathanson, including one which was presented before the judge in bankruptcy at Toronto some weeks ago.

Cohen on Stand at Federal Trade Hearing

S. R. Kent Also Important Witness—Sessions Resumed After Two Weeks' Recess

SYDNEY S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, resumed his testimony Wednesday, June 13, at the hearing on the Federal Trade Commission charges against the Famous Players-Lasky group.

He was subpoenaed May 11, and was on the stand for a short time on May 15, extended examination being deferred until his return from the Chicago convention. Mr. Cohen stated that most of the documents called for in the Government subpoena had been sent to Chicago for use by the National Board of Directors, but that he would produce them upon his return.

When he took the stand on Wednesday of this week, Mr. Cohen identified a number of letters and other papers. These included correspondence that had passed between himself and Adolph Zukor, Al Lichtman, Eugene Zukor, S. R. Kent and others, during 1920, 1921 and part of 1922.

Under examination by W. H. Fuller, Government chief counsel, he said he was not able to produce all the documents at the moment, but that most of them were being made ready. He thought they would probably be available Thursday. It was finally agreed that Mr. Fuller and the witness would go over the documents, preparatory to further examination of Mr. Cohen, and that the latter would resume the stand Friday, June 15.

"You have been back from Chicago two weeks," said Mr. Fuller. "And you have known for a month that you were to be called. Why is it that you have not been able to produce these papers?"

Mr. Cohen explained that some of the documents had arrived the end of last week from Chicago, and others still later, and that because of the mass of papers involved, he had not been able to get them all together.

Whereupon Mr. Fuller announced that sessions would be continued in New York until the testimony of Mr. Cohen was finished. It had been planned to start hearings in Philadelphia Monday, June 18.

With reference to minutes of the Cleveland convention, the witness stated he believed no stenographic record had been made. He thought rough minutes were taken, and these he was attempting to locate. Minutes of the Minneapolis convention were identified. A stenographic record was made, he stated, of Mr. Zukor's remarks to the M. P. T. O. A. Executive Committee at Minneapolis in 1921.

When the hearing started again on June 11, after a two weeks' recess, the first witness was Hyman Rachmil, who said he was interested in five theatres in Brooklyn. He had run Paramount second-run after Loew for two seasons, but in the present theatrical year (1922-1923), Rachmil testified he was not playing Paramount.

Loew had always had first-run over him, he said, during the time he booked F. P. L. pictures. If he could get first-runs he would now book Paramount in some of his theatres, the witness added.

On cross-examination, Rachmil said he ran 300 to 350 pictures in all his theatres in the course of a year, booking from practically all the distributors except Paramount. Robert T. Swain, Paramount chief counsel, brought out from the witness that the Paramount method of selling in star series was no differ-

Salesmen Banned from N. Carolina Convention

FILM salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence from the annual convention of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. when that organization convenes at Wrightsville Beach June 28. At a recent meeting of the Charlotte Film Managers' Association it was decided not to have any of the salesmen at the convention.

Reservations, however, are reported coming in fast to convention headquarters. Many will attend from Virginia, Harry Bernstein promising a strong delegation from Richmond and Norfolk and other Virginia points. South Carolina theatre owners have been invited to sit with the Tar Heels in their sessions and many will undoubtedly attend.

Hon. Will H. Hays is expected to deliver a public address to which everyone will be invited. Al Hicks, connected with Colonel Henry B. Varner's large theatrical enterprises, will deliver a talk on "Exploitation" and Frank Rembusch will come down from Shelbyville, Indiana to talk on "Projection."

ent from that of any other company. "I regard Paramount pictures as good, clean pictures," Rachmil summed up. "The treatment I got was no worse than the treatment from other distributors. I have no serious complaint about the transactions I have had with Famous Players."

R. W. Saunders, comptroller of Famous Players-Lasky, then took the stand and was subjected to a long examination regarding the methods of accounting and bookkeeping used in his department. Mr. Fuller cited the $12,500 loan made by Famous Players to Phil Gleichman, of Detroit, in 1919, and Mr. Saunders said transactions of that sort were recorded in the Famous Players ledger system. Extensions of credit for film rentals, and such matters, were recorded in the various exchange offices, only the totals being sent to the home office, he explained.

Details of real estate transactions, the witness declared, were recorded on the books of the subsidiary corporation concerned and not on the Famous Players-Lasky books themselves. In the case of the sale of a theatre no detailed entry was made on the F. P. L. books, he went on, but a system of reports was maintained between the F. P. L. theatre department, headed by Harold B. Franklin, and the separate theatre corporations.

Pressed by Mr. Fuller to state specifically the method of recovering theatre real estate transactions, Mr. Saunders again explained that they would be found on the books of the various subsidiaries. Finally, Mr. Swain broke in with the remark that the witness could have no knowledge of all these details, and that the corporation would produce the records if the Government wanted them.

"This witness has explained half a dozen times that the subsidiaries have their own accounting system, just like any other big corporation," said Mr. Swain.

David Weinstock, first witness at the Monday afternoon session, testified that he had booked the "41" and the "39" for his City Hall theatre, New York, although he would have preferred to select from the two groups rather than buy them all. This theatre, he said, played the "39" second-run to Fox's Academy, and Loew's Delancey, which had 8 to 15 days' protection, and the "41" second-run to Loew and a U. B. O. house in his neighborhood.

The result was, he explained, that he ran Paramount films about two months after their Broadway showing. On the "39" he was required to give dates on all pictures when he booked them, but not on the other group.

Weinstock complained that rearrangement in bookings by the circuits forced him several times to rearrange all his play dates, causing confusion in his program. As to the cost of pictures, he said the price asked on the "39" was higher than that on the "41." In some instances, he had attempted to run the same picture two days, in order to make up for the higher rental, but, according to the witness, this policy proved a failure.

His Freeman theatre in the Bronx, also in competition with Loew and the U. B. O., played the "41" second-run, he stated, but he had not booked the "39" because the price asked was about 400 per cent greater than the rental paid for the preceding group of Paramounts.

Asked about the quality of some of the Paramount pictures, the witness named "Pink Gods" and "The Mysteries of India" as only fair, and testified that he had played a reissue in preference to running "Mistress of the World."

He booked the "41" prior to the opening of the Freeman, the witness went on, on a promise from Paul Swift, then with Paramount, that if some of the pictures were too old by the time the theatre opened, an adjustment would be made. When he took this matter up with Harry H. Buxbaum, of the New York Paramount exchange, the latter, he said, agreed to sell some of the old pictures to another theatre, provided Weinstock would agree to pay the difference between the price he had agreed to pay and the rental paid by the other theatre. This Weinstock said he did, with a cost to him of $200.

"It is very hard for the independent exhibitor to maintain himself against the circuits with their big buying power," said Weinstock. "A group of independents got together and organized the Associated Booking Corporation, but the corporation has been unable to get pictures for first runs from the big distributors, and is practically ready to disband."

When Marvin Farrington, of Government counsel, questioned Weinstock concerning a conversation he had had with Marcus Loew recently, Mr. Swain objected vigorously on the ground that "no connection had been shown between Loew and these respondents," and the proper foundation had not been laid for the introduction of such testimony.

Examiner Alvord ruled that it was true no connection had been shown, but added: "Government counsel says he will." He permitted the witness to answer the question, with the proviso that the testimony might be stricken out later if it was irrelevant.

Weinstock then said he had met Mr. Loew on a train going out to the M. P. T. O. A. convention at Chicago and quoted Loew as having said to him: "The cost of production is steadily going up, and the exhibitor will have to pay more for his pictures next season. We exhibitors will have to raise admission prices in order to exist."

As to Realart, the witness declared that he didn't know it was formed as a subsidiary of Famous Players, but booked the Realart pictures, believing the company to be an independent. "I switched from Famous Players pictures to Realart," he added, "because I wanted to favor the small man."

On cross-examination by Mr. Swain, Mr. Weinstock admitted that he played about 350 pictures a year, less than a fourth of which were Paramount. "I have no more trouble with F. P.-L. than with any of the other distributors," the witness went on. "I have no grievance against Famous. I'm here because I've been subpoenaed."

Referring to the alleged promised adjustment on the "41" for the Freeman, the witness denied that Messrs. Buxbaum and Hammill had told him they would live up to the agreement he said Swift had made with him, if he would get a letter from Swift to that effect. Mr. Swain brought out that Mr. Swift had entered the employ of the A. B. C., of which the Freeman was a member.

The subject of the competition of the circuits came up again, and in reply to questions Mr. Weinstock admitted that "it was easier for a distributor to sell Loew, because of the large number of theatres he had."

"In other words, it's good business practice to sell in quantity. Practically every other distributor sells to Loew," Swain commented, and the witness agreed to both statements.

Weinstock denied that he had seen an article in Variety or The Film Daily, or any trade paper, to the effect that Realart was a Famous Players subsidiary at the time Realart was organized.

Rudolph Sanders, Brooklyn exhibitor, testified he had played Paramount, mostly second-run, one hundred per cent in 1917-1918, and one or two Paramounts since then.

"I remember one," Sanders volunteered. "It was that wonderful picture, 'The Miracle Man.' I paid $250 or $300 for it, and lost money. I quit booking Paramount because I couldn't get together with them on price and besides they wanted me to book all of them."

"Make good on my losses on 'The Miracle Man' and I'll book Paramount," Sanders told the New York exchange people, according to his testimony.

His competitor "across the street" booked Paramount, said Sanders, who added that he didn't want to take the pictures away from this competing theatre.

After he stopped playing the F. P.-L. pictures, postal cards were sent to some of his patrons, he said. These read: "Ask Sanders why the Marathon (Sanders' theatre) doesn't show Paramount pictures."

The witness declared he answered this by telling his audience why he didn't. "I ran slides, saying: 'The Marathon doesn't show Paramount pictures because the price is too high and we can't play them and continue to charge the same admission prices as now,'" Sanders explained.

He, too, thought Realart was an independent company at the time of its formation. Mr. Farrington showed the witness the Variety story, previously referred to, and asked him to look at it and state whether it was an interview with an officer of F. P.-L.

"I submit this witness doesn't know the difference between an interview and other kinds of articles," Swain interposed.

"Well, he can read, can't he?" Farrington answered.

Famous, Vitagraph Patch Up Differences

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the Vitagraph Company have agreed to forget their past misunderstandings and Adolph Zukor and Albert E. Smith, the presidents of the respective companies, have joined hands with the other producers who are members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in an effort toward constructive work for the benefit of the entire industry.

It is understood that the agreement to forget old scores was brought about through the intervention and good offices of Will H. Hays.

After argument between the lawyers, Mr. Swain said: "Oh, we'll concede it's not an interview."

"Then you never saw any signed story from an officer of F. P.-L. that F. P.-L. owned Realart, did you?" Mr. Farrington asked the witness, and the latter said "No."

"What attitude would you have taken toward Realart if you had known it was a subsidiary of Famous Players?" the Government counsel queried.

"It wouldn't have been quite so sweet if I had known it," Sanders answered. This provoked a laugh which was the forerunner of a large amount of merriment during the cross-examination of the witness.

"You were very altruistic in your attitude toward your competitor across the street," Mr. Swain began. "What arrangement did you have with him?"

"The same arrangement you have with the people on the sixteenth floor," Sanders shot back. Asked what he meant by that, it was finally brought out that he referred to Metro.

He summed up his attitude toward Famous Players thus: "I want to keep my shirt and my coat on my back, and I always lay off any company that tries to take them. If all exhibitors were as wise as this little boy (pointing to himself), Famous Players wouldn't get away with anything."

"No," Mr. Swain replied, "they'd probably be out of business."

"But they can't load a gun with me to shoot somebody else," Sanders declared.

"Famous Players has no trade secrets," Swain told the witness.

"Ah, Mr. Swain, you're only an attorney," Sanders came back, and the courtroom shook with laughter. "Yes," the Famous Players counsel replied. "I know it, but don't rub it in."

With reference to Sanders' statement that it wouldn't have been so "sweet" if he had known Famous Players owned Realart, the witness declared: "All Zukor needed to do was to get a few more companies together, get about 150 pictures and then we exhibitors would have to sing any song he wrote for us."

Sanders said he had bet a Paramount salesman a suit of clothes he couldn't persuade Sanders' competitor to raise admission prices.

"Did you win the suit of clothes?" Mr. Swain queried.

"No, I didn't," replied the witness. "But we compromised on a hat. His brother was selling hats."

Asked how he was getting along without Paramount pictures, the witness grinned and said: "Very well, thank you. And I have a balance in the bank."

The chief witness on Tuesday was S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution for Famous Players-Lasky, whose testimony occupied the whole afternoon.

Mr. Fuller, Government chief counsel, asked Mr. Kent a number of questions regarding the present form of film contract. With regard to the paragraphs which provide that no "cuts" can be made by the exhibitor except by the distributor's consent, or through local censorship; and that the exhibitor must use the advertising matter furnished by the distributor, Mr. Kent pointed out that the exhibitor was at liberty to prepare additional advertising copy of his own, if he wished.

"As a matter of fact, the large theatres have their own publicity departments, and get up their own ads," he explained. "It is generally the smaller theatres which use the matter prepared by us. Where they do use our material they must use it in the form in which we issue it. But the provision requiring the exhibitor to buy all his advertising matter from the distributor is not generally enforced."

Jerome Beatty, former director of advertising and publicity for F. P.-L., had described earlier in the day the method of preparing advertising material in vogue while he was connected with the company, explaining that Mr. Kent had had the final O. K.

He testified, in particular, that the so-called "Glendale ads" which appeared in several newspapers during 1921 received Mr. Kent's approval. This was the ad series which figured in the controversy between the M. P. T. O. A. and Famous Players. The Government put in evidence part of two pages from the Exhibitors' Trade Review, issue of June 25, 1921, containing reproductions of these advertisements.

"Mr. Beatty's testimony concerning my responsibility for these advertisements was substantially correct," said Mr. Kent.

The national sale of accessories by F. P.-L. to the exhibitor would average yearly about a million dollars, the witness told Mr. Fuller.

Copies of letters sent out by the Toronto and New Orleans division managers "to stimulate interest in Paramount pictures" were put in evidence. Mr. Kent described them as a campaign direct to the people, and said they were issued with his knowledge.

Mr. Farrington then took up the questioning of Mr. Kent, and turned at once to the booking of Paramount pictures by the Loew circuit. Negotiations were invariably carried on between himself, representing F. P.-L., and Nicholas Schenck, Loew general manager, said Mr. Kent.

"How many Loew theatres got the '41' and the '39'?" the witness was asked.

"Thirty-five theatres in New York got fifty per cent of the '41' and all but one or two of the '39'; two theatres in Boston booked all except five of these two groups; two Loew houses in Washington got seventy-five per cent of the pictures; one theatre in Dayton took eight pictures; in Buffalo, Shea's two theatres and vaudeville house got the pick and Loew split the rest with a third house; one Loew theatre in Toledo was served. It got seven out of the two groups of pictures," Mr. Kent declared.

Old customers of long-standing in Toledo, one of which was the Princess theatre, were "protected," he went on. Declaring that the Loew theatres in the South only got a few F. P.-L. pictures, the witness summed up by saying that the number of Loew theatres throughout the United States which got the present season's Paramount product would not amount to more than forty-five all told.

In Ohio, the Libson circuit of twelve or fourteen theatres was "protected," he explained; in Washington Tom Moore got "ten

Ritter Gives Views on Exhibitor Organization

Cut Out Politics and Personalities, He Urges, Outlining Comprehensive Program

FOLLOWING the publication of William A. Johnston's editorial, called "Build It Right," MOTION PICTURE NEWS has received an article from James C. Ritter, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan and one of the most prominent figures in exhibitor organization.

Mr. Ritter outlines in detail what he believes should be the structure of organization, national and state, if results are to be obtained. His article follows:

"Remove from national organization petty politics and personalities, quit talking about what a gigantic task it is to organize and what 'gigantic' things have been accomplished, and get down to doing them—eliminate the mystery that makes every exhibitor feel there is something going on inside the lines that he is not capable of knowing about or deciding, select one definite objective and work on that until it is finished, spend the time of the association in uniting the forces of the exhibitor before trying to make an example of something or somebody and then you will have the national exhibitor organization headed in the right direction.

"There is a big difference between the skeleton of an organization and the foundation of an organization. Let's remove the situation that now exists, of being all front and no back. We have been spending too much time on exploitation and too little time on building our program to exploit.

"We cannot expect to have an organization when the entire time of a budding association is spent developing public service departments, etc., to the exclusion of the real organization work that is waiting to be done. Let's improve our own situation first before we become philanthropic. All have their place in a functioning organization, but let's have an organization first, before we attempt to render any service to anyone.

"Many situations that have come up would have been solved had we had our forces united. Jack Dempsey doesn't have to go around with his coat off. He has strength and everyone knows it. We haven't, and the only ones who don't know it are those who are content to go along as we have, hoping that some morning they will wake up and find themselves impregnable.

"The awkward squad is the foundation of a successful army. How far do you think the United States Government would have gotten had it taken a few thousand men, given them guns and uniforms, showed them the enemy and sent them out to enter battle and do the great work that was to be done?

"By the same token you can't give a state organization a title and a charter, elect officers and call it an organization and an integral part of a national body.

"If the history of other successful associations is consulted, it will be found that the foundation of them was one or two really functioning organizations, who reached out and took in a few more until finally their combined strength enabled them to become national in scope.

"The national organization of theatre owners is not ready for a comprehensive program of activities, but it is overdue on a comprehensive program of organization. What has been done in three years by the national organization to get states organized? Where is

Salesmen of Des Moines Organize Club

SALESMEN connected with all the distributing companies out of Des Moines have formed a Salesmen's Club for the pleasure derived from the general get-together meetings which they intend to have from time to time. This club is in no way a salesmen's union. The officers are as follows: Nick Amos of Pathe, president; Charles M. Davis of Universal, vice-president; and Hugh Bennett, of Universal, secretary and treasurer.

our national organizer and our national organization machinery? Where is the state with a functioning organization that has been made possible through the assistance of national organization?

"Therefore, I believe the first thing necessary to efficient national organization is to direct the efforts of the national body toward the very purpose of its formation—organization.

"To do this a definite and carefully worked out plan of organization, made by a thinking board of directors and not by any one individual, must be decided upon. A business plan that will attract business men to assist in putting it over. At the present time, and I am convinced because of the situation that exists, we have as many, or more, of the biggest exhibitors, outside of the organization, when they should and can be brought into the organization. By that I do not mean biggest in the point of theatres, but in brain power.

"I think a distinct line must be drawn between the administrative end of the organization and the organization end of the association.

"We should have a national organizer. Not a friend of someone else, not a pension proposition, but a man who by his past record in some other organization has proven his ability to whip into shape a national organization. As I have said before, this man could not be an exhibitor, for where is there an exhibitor big enough for this job, who is not making too much, or has too much invested, to turn his back on his business and devote his entire time to this work?

"Other successful organizations have secured men whose business is organization, and who have developed successful organizations, and who, after learning the exhibitors' problems, can go out and amalgamate our forces in a business manner.

"Into such hands the national board of directors should lay the definite organization plan they decide upon. This man would not go about the country attending conventions and giving everyone the glad hand, but would earnestly work in states not organized until that state was functioning, and could in turn assist some other state not so fortunate.

"What has he to sell? For the business of selling organization is purely a buy and sell proposition. He can sell the benefits of organization in a general sense, he can sell the theatre owner fire insurance at a thirty or forty per cent savings, he can sell him 'Movie Chats,' which, although it isn't now, can be made a real asset to the exhibitor, he can sell him real information service, which will have to be developed, and later as the organization spreads its scope, other definite benefits that will return him more money than it will be necessary for him to pay into the organization, and that way make the organization a real cash asset and not a cash liability.

"How, then, can we get started? I am going to give now some figures which are very conservative, but, nevertheless, which may seem in some states a little high. They are only submitted with the idea of giving the theatre owner something to think about, and I am confident in many instances can be doubled or trebled.

"I maintain that twenty men, representative exhibitors, sold on the vital necessity of state and national organization, can perfect, with the assistance of a national organizer, a functioning state organization. It probably will be necessary the first year to have these men underwrite the proposition to enable them to get down to a business basis, hire a business manager and outline the organization program. This would probably mean about $7,500.

"Here are some other sources of revenue that will come up:

"Insurance. The exhibitor, through organization, can be saved 45 per cent on fire and compensation and public liability insurance. Give the exhibitor a 30 per cent savings, and have him assign the 15 per cent to the organization for making the 30 per cent savings possible. These companies will send men into your state to assist in selling the insurance idea. This one proposition at the end of the first year should net $3,000.

"Slide propositions and reel advertising can be secured that will net at least another $3,000.

"With a business manager working in the state, an additional $2,500 should be secured very easily, once the exhibitors of the state see the possibilities of, and the vital necessity of, organization, and that you have a real business plan. Once operating you will see how ridiculously small this item has been placed.

"By making the poorest kind of a showing on 'Movie Chats,' for grossing $150 a week, which means 75 bookings at $2 a week, the state's share would be $500. A total of these items shows $16,500 income the first year. Take off $5,000 of the money the 20 paid to get started and you have $11,500 to function on, out of which a creditable amount could be paid into the national organization. A state organization with a membership of 100 exhibitors can easily make the above showing.

"It may be found, and I think it will be in some instances, that sectional organizations may have to be formed, in states too large for a single state organization, or in states too small to support a functioning state organization. These are matters to be decided by the board of directors.

"It may be necessary in some states to inject some new blood into the organization, and if any man having the interest of the organization at heart finds that he is not get-

Stick with M. P. T. O., Says Rhode

Also Declares National Organization Should Get Admission Tax Enforcement Modified

IN a letter to MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week, Joseph G. Rhode, former president of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin and prominent in exhibitor organization councils, urges theatre owners to stick with the National organization, despite the fact that the Washington and Chicago conventions were failures. Mr. Rhode writes:

"The National Association's annual convention, held at Washington last year, was a failure. This year's meeting at Chicago was the same. Very little of a constructive nature was done at either place. Yet in face of these discouraging conditions, real progress for national organization has been made. Anyone at all acquainted with organization work will admit that the present M. P. T. O. is the biggest and most effective organization the exhibitors have had. It is three years old—a short time to build a 100 per cent national association. Rome was not built in a day. It certainly would be poor policy to do anything that would in any way tend to destroy the tremendous conscientious work of the last three years. On the contrary, thinking exhibitors who are big enough and broadminded enough to be good sportsmen will get behind the present National organization, keep it going and back it up in every possible way.

"Every pioneering movement has its discouraging times. Exhibitors should shoulder the responsibilities and not shirk them if they want to get a good, big, efficient working organization. Exhibitors should be willing to keep on playing ball even if they don't make a home run in the first few games.

"There is great need for immediate assistance in a national way to correct some evils that are costing the exhibitors thousands of dollars.

"One of the most exasperating, irritating, very expensive and unjust problems that the exhibitor has to contend with is the admission tax law. Little is published of fines assessed against the exhibitor, justly or unjustly, on account of the violation of this law. The government rarely broadcasts such information and the exhibitor who is fined generally thinks it policy to keep quiet and consequently shuts up.

"Intelligent exhibitors may read the law pertaining to admission taxes; they may think that they understand its provisions, may be absolutely honest in their effort to carry out the law to the letter, yet learn from some over zealous tax collector, inspector or agent that his tickets are improperly printed—that the numbering has not been consecutive since 1918—he slipped some time in 1920—a number of days—and each day a separate count.

"Here is an opportunity for the National association to get busy immediately, in securing a modification of the enforcement provisions of said law, also a word from the proper department to the tax men to use some discretion.

"Then the National organization should begin now to put in a plea for the repeal of said law just as soon as Congress convenes again.

"Inasmuch as the government or the exhibitor rarely broadcasts the fines assessed I believe it would be a very good idea, in order to get at the matter intelligently, to ask exhibitors from every section of the country, who have been fined for trivial offences, to send in an account of same to the M. P. T. O. at 132 West 43rd street, New York City.

"This in behalf of the honest exhibitor only. The dishonest exhibitor has no consideration coming and should get his just deserts. Here is a chance for service."

Loew Adds Three Houses To Circuit

Three houses have been added to the Loew circuit. Two of these are in New York and one in Omaha. The Lexington Opera House has been purchased outright and will be reopened in the fall with a straight picture policy. The Borough Park in Brooklyn has also been purchased and will continue as a straight pictures house. The third house is the Empress, Omaha.

British Film Editor Guest of Honor at Luncheon

ALUNCHEON was given at the Astor on Wednesday of this week in honor of Frank Tilley, editor of The Kinematograph Weekly ("Kine") of London. It was arranged by Bert Adler, who is New York correspondent for the publication.

Harry Reichenbach acted as toastmaster. Brief talks were made by several of those present, including John Flinn, J. Stuart Blackton, Nathan Burkan, Abe Berman and others.

English exhibitors are somewhat behind Americans in presentations, Mr. Tilley stated, but he doubted whether the Broadway type of presentation would ever be popular in England.

Ritter's Views on Exhibitor Organization

ting the results he knows should be secured, he should readily get someone else interested, give him the same effort that he would put forth were he leading, and you can't stop such a combination.

"The personnel of the national organization should consist, I believe, of a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, board of directors, paid organizer and business manager, with competent office help. The president, organizer and business manager, with the office help, should be paid a salary and to them the exhibitors of the country should then look for results. We must get away from this joke of having people donate their time to do our business. What would you think if you had a theatre manager who wanted to donate his time to the management of your theatre?

"An executive board should be formed with the presidents of the various state or sectional units as members, and to them should be referred any national problem before it is decided by the board of directors.

"The board of directors should meet at least every two months and the board members should have their expenses paid to these meetings, which, I feel, it would be advisable to hold in various parts of the country. Exhibitors in the vicinity of the meeting should be welcomed to these meetings.

"A financial statement of the condition of the organization, together with the income and expenditures, should be issued every two months and placed in the hands of every state president. The administration of an organization, made up of many units, is a matter that should be watched very carefully—because of the confidence that must be established. Let's have everything on top of the table. I was treasurer two years ago and did not have the financial report until after the Washington convention closed, and I did not hear either statement read at Chicago or Washington.

"If a member of the board of directors, or the administrative personnel does not function, provision should be made for his removal and the election of a successor, not by the board itself, but by the executive committee.

"The business of organization is the application of the same business foresight and judgment that you give to your own theatre business. Let's apply it to national organization, and then watch for results. Remember, successful state or national organization is not the result of accident, but of honesty, hard work and horse sense."

Minnesota Issues Reply to Statement by Sydney S. Cohen

A STATEMENT issued by the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Minnesota June 12, and telegraphed to the trade papers, makes reply to the statement given out last week by Sydney S. Cohen with regard to Minnesota's withdrawal from the national organization.

"Minnesota has withdrawn from the national organization, choosing to go its own way in protecting the interests of its members," the telegram says in part. "Minnesota withdrew from the national organization only after it had satisfied itself that no longer could it look to the national organization with any hope for the protection to which members of a national association of this kind are entitled."

Mr. Cohen's claim that "First National controls the Minnesota organization" is denounced in the strongest terms as untrue.

The statement continues: "So far as Sydney Cohen threatening to invade Minnesota to establish another paper unit to affiliate itself with his monarchy, we in Minnesota accept this challenge gladly and will welcome Sydney Cohen or any of his henchmen to come into our territory at any time, either for the purpose of trying to disrupt one of the strongest exhibitor organizations ever formed in the United States, or for the purpose, as above stated, of creating another paper unit. We have confidence in our members and they likewise have confidence in our officers."

The statement is signed by J. B. Clinton, Duluth; Joseph Friedman, St. Paul; George Carisch, Minneapolis; A. A. Kaplan, Minneapolis; W. L. Nicholas, Fairmont; Jay Dundas, Sioux Falls, So. Dakota; V. B. Valleau, Bismarck, No. Dakota; Harvey Buchanan, Superior; H. B. Johnson, Rush City, and C. H. Hitchcock, Minneapolis.

Exhibitors Attack Shubert-Erlanger Combine

Houses Will Be Devoted Exclusively to Showing of Most Artistic Pictures

A. L. ERLANGER has confirmed the statement that he, with Lee and J. J. Shubert, will form a chain of theatres, which, under their booking management, will be exclusively devoted to the presentation of motion picture spectacles of the highest class. The statement of Mr. Erlanger follows in part:

"After a careful survey of the field we have come to the conclusion that the time is ripe for the organization of a new chain of theatres throughout the country, to be devoted exclusively to the artistic presentation of those great motion picture stories that are developed occasionally to a point which warrants this special attention.

"Since the success of such super-productions as 'The Birth of a Nation' and 'Way Down East,' both the Messrs. Shubert and myself have been approached from time to time with the plan to give over a certain number of the theatres in the two booking exchanges under our separate managements and to weld these into a chain wherein could be laid out continuous routes for these motion picture spectacles and special productions. Heretofore the thing which prevented the scheme from reaching a working stage was the lack of assurance that there were forthcoming enough pictures to keep such a chain of theatres occupied for an entire theatrical season.

"After an exhaustive study of the situation we are convinced that the required supply of big picture specials is now in the making, and that at least one theatre in each big city and town of importance in the United States and Canada can be kept occupied the year round with motion picture productions worthy of the highly artistic rating which will be required before time can be set aside for such presentations. Wherever it is necessary an additional theatre will be built or leased.

"The plans which have been or are now being laid out for the road tours of 'The Covered Wagon' are the forerunners of this scheme, and the unusual success of the early ventures with this newest addition to the galaxy of really big picture productions proves that the new arrangement can be effected without in any way interfering with the regular bookings in first-class theatres of the recognized stars and dramatic and musical offerings which furnish the supply of theatrical entertainment for the country.

"The new circuit will also fill a new-felt need in supplying an outlet for these big motion picture productions which will make it possible for their producers to take on the very heavy expense entailed and still have an opportunity to show a profit commensurate with their outlay for the production before it reaches the public. Under the old method of booking motion picture super-specials the producer has reached his limit and he can no longer continue the making of pictures which cost between $750,000 and $1,000,000. Unless he can go to the first-class theatres with his picture he faces a loss, because under the prevailing system of leasing or selling to motion picture theatres he cannot gross enough to meet his initial outlay plus any adequate profit."

As a result of the Erlanger-Shubert combine, Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the M.

Trade Commission Makes Ruling on Reissues

A N order was issued by the Federal Trade Commission in Washington June 13 to the Fox Film Corporation concerning the releasing of reissues. The order specified that reissues must bear the original titles of the photoplays both on the film and in advertising matter sent out by the corporation.

In case the distributor wished to give the picture a new title, he must, according to the order, also give the old title, so that the picture could be identified by the exhibitor and the public.

P. T. O. of New York, issued the following statement:

"The announcement of the formation of the Shubert-Erlanger circuit of legitimate theatres for the showing of special pictures to take the place of legitimate stage attractions is merely an attempt to gouge the public by making it pay exorbitantly high prices to see pictures.

"This is the very thing that the motion picture theatre owners have been fighting against stubbornly for years. The theatre owners are determined to maintain a fair standard admission price and to present to the public the finest attractions at the regular box office scale.

"If the Shubert-Erlanger scheme is put into effect successfully the public will be forced to pay legitimate-show prices to see the pictures. These prices may be anywhere from $2 to $5. The class of films which the Shubert-Erlanger combine proposes to show at this exorbitant scale has hitherto been shown generally throughout the country at customary theatre prices. The whole plan is nothing more than an attempt to make the theatre-going public pay the losses which the combine has suffered, over a period of years, because the road showing of legitimate stage attractions is not as profitable as it once was.

"The interests of the public and the motion picture theatre owners in this matter are identical and we shall make it our business to see that the public is fully informed of the real situation."

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, issued this statement:

"The announced purpose of the Erlanger-Shubert combination to 'road show' so-called super-specials and other big motion picture features, is distinctly prejudicial to the rights of every independent theatre owner in the United States and opposed to the interests of the theatre-going public.

"The motion picture theatre is the amusement place of the masses where millions of people attend every day to be amused, edified and instructed. They are entitled to this line of amusement at such prices as to bring the same with their abilities to pay, and this 'road showing' proposition entails admission prices greatly in excess of present prices being charged the Motion Picture Public.

"It is manifestly unfair that theatre owners all over the country who have invested so much of their own money in the building of wonderful theatres and who, aided and assisted by their public, have done so much to advance this great industry, should be denied the opportunity of first playing every picture of merit in their theatres at their prevailing admission prices.

"The screens of America should be used in a campaign of information relative to the real facts involved in this gigantic move, and it is my belief that the response from the public will be one of co-operation with the theatre owners of the country in protecting their investments and their public.

"The contemplated road-showing move, if carried out, is one destructive to the interests of the independent motion picture theatre owner, and to thwart this move of certain interests in the production and distribution branches of our industry, concerted and unified action from the theatre owners of the country is required, and I believe same will be forthcoming to prevent this flank attack on their investments.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are opposed to the road-showing of pictures for the reasons indicated. We do not believe the American people will stand for any such increase in prices where there is absolutely no business reason for the same, and when the best pictures have been produced up to the present and have always been shown in the motion picture theatres of the country and made available for the people, and this move is definitely one to extort from them prices entirely out of proportion to the entertainment value of any motion picture."

McComas, Famed Artist, Joins De Mille Productions

Francis McComas has become a member of the art department of Cecil B. de Mille productions. McComas is considered among the world's greatest artists in water colors. He has been awarded many important water color prizes in America including the Dana Gold medal.

Mr. McComas has been assigned to design a rugged set representing the encampment of the Children of Israel before Mt. Sinai. He was chosen by Mr. de Mille particularly because of his aptitude in this direction. Mr. McComas has been given a free hand and the entire resources of Paul Iribe, art director, in his plans for the setting which will utilize 1,500 players. This set will equal in size the tremendous city of Rameses II. which Mr. de Mille has built at Guadalupe, California, also for the Biblical prologue to the modern story Jeanie Macpherson has evolved around "The Ten Commandments."

Change London Opening for "Enemies of Women"

"Enemies of Women," Cosmopolitan's picturization of the Ibanez novel, now in its eighth week on Broadway, will open in London on June 15 at the Empire theatre instead of the Scala theatre, as had been announced previously. The film will play a three weeks' engagement at the Empire and will be followed on July 9 by "Little Old New York."

The latter picture will have its first showing in New York at the new Cosmopolitan theatre some time in August.

Zukor Makes $10,000 Prize Offer

Tells Motion Picture Arts Congress Award Will Be Annual One for Best Story

AN annual prize of $10,000 to the author writing the best motion picture story was offered by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, at a dinner at the Waldorf which brought to a close the two-day sessions of the First International Congress on Motion Picture Arts last Friday night.

The offer of the prize was read in the form of a letter to Ellis Parker Butler, president of the Authors' League of America, which, acting in co-operation with Mr. Zukor, conducted the congress. The announcement was received with enthusiasm by more than 500 authors, dramatists and educators.

Mr. Zukor's offer was made without restrictions, but with the suggestion that with the full approval of the Authors' League a jury should be appointed to choose the winner, its members to include the president of the league, a newspaper editor, a novelist, a dramatist and a producer actively engaged in the production of motion pictures.

The letter to Mr. Butler from Mr. Zukor was read following addresses by Matthew Woll, president of the International Photo Engravers' Union; Alice Duer Miller, Ellis Parker Butler, Capt. William Babington Maxwell, representative of the British Society of Authors at the congress, and Dr. Henry van Dyke of Princeton University.

Much good was undoubtedly accomplished at the congress and if suggestions made and ideas furnished are carried out there will undoubtedly be a considerable improvement in pictures as a result. At the opening session Thursday a committee on resolutions was appointed at the suggestion of Ellis Parker Butler, president of the Authors' League to consider the variety of suggestion presented by men and women from all parts of the world and out of them to formulate recommendations for the good of pictures. In its survey, this committee says:

"In reporting the various suggestions, opinions and addresses which have been presented to your congress, your committee feels impelled to state that while a great deal has been accomplished at these meetings, this good can be made permanent only if some organization is effected which will make a constant survey of the artistic development of pictures and by cooperation and encouragement assist producers and writers in carrying out the suggestions made at this congress. For instance, colleges, schools and universities should be encouraged to establish and to foster courses in motion picture composition and production; the work of bringing the author and picture producer closer together should be continued and the public should be acquainted, from time to time, with the progress that is being made in motion pictures toward carrying out the principles and recommendations that have been evolved in this congress. Therefore, your committee recommends the appointment of an authors' supervisory board, which will be the nucleus of the above-mentioned organization. We recommend that this board shall consist of the Hon. Henry W. Taft as honorary chairman, Mr. George Barr Baker as chairman, with these members: Rex Beach, Alice Duer Miller, Eric Shuler, William A. Johnston and James R. Quirk."

In its report the resolutions committee makes many suggestions. It says, among other things, the responsibility of producers includes the following:

Good Taste—The best accepted standards of taste in America should be reflected on the screen.

Fair Play—No producer or director of motion pictures should consciously give offense to any nationality or religion.

Respect for Law—Entertainment reaching so many millions must reflect a respect for all of the laws of the United States.

International Relations—In the realization that the motion picture is the only universal language, producers in all countries should have due regard to the fact, (a) that their own people will be appraised elsewhere, as their own films present them; and to the fact (b) that the citizens of other countries will assume their status abroad from the manner in which foreign producers represent them.

As the most graphic form of communication, the motion picture should maintain exact standards of accuracy in the representation of the facts of history, costume and normal human conduct.

When a motion picture is represented as the translation of an already published work of literature or a drama which has already been produced on the stage, it should maintain, so far as is possible within the limitations of the motion picture, the original spirit and structure of the story.

The motion picture producer should encourage the writers of the spoken drama and of novels to cooperate actively in the studio in the screen production of their works.

The producer should encourage by active support the work of authors writing directly for the screen.

Kansas Organizations Mixed in Controversy

A real controversy is on between the M. P. T. O. Kansas and the Kansas Board of Motion Picture Censorship—the exhibitors vigorously opposing the board's approval of a picture.

After having been harried for more than five years, "The Birth of a Nation" is to be permitted to come into Kansas, according to information from Topeka, the state capital. The film will be shown before the Kansas Censorship Board in a few days.

The Kansas organization has protested to Governor Davis against the state censor board giving permission for the presentation of the picture on the ground that permission at this late day on the part of the censor board will have the appearance of the injection of politics into the motion picture industry, especially since two governors and many citizens have objected to the production being shown. C. W. Stater of Oklahoma City, Okla., has exclusive rights of the picture in Kansas and Oklahoma.

Nominating Committee Is Named by A.M.P.A.

The nominating committee of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, who will select the list of candidates to be voted upon at the annual election of officers to be held in September, was named at the luncheon last week. On the committee are the following: Charles Barrell, chairman; Howard Deitz, Paul Gulick, Fred E. Baer, Herbert Crooker, Paul Lazarus and Lynde Denig.

Judge John J. Freschi was the guest of honor and principal speaker at the weekly luncheon. C. Gordon Sullivan, scenarioist and short story writer, and Jerry Beatty, recently back from Los Angeles to join the Al Lightman forces as advertising director, were other speakers.

Free Picture Shows for Parks in Dallas

Free motion picture shows will be opened in nine of the Dallas, Texas, parks during the coming week and free movies at the parks will continue throughout the summer.

Only high-grade pictures are to be shown, the Park Board having decided that the Dallas park pictures must be on a par with any park attractions in the United States. A corps of twenty machine operators and assistants will be on duty to operate the machines.

Stage All Set For Convention of New York State Exhibitors

A RECORD attendance is expected at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State which will be held in Syracuse June 19-20-21. Reports to President Charles L. O'Reilly indicate that exhibitors throughout the state will be on hand in very large numbers.

Invitations have been sent to every state leader in the country, and it is understood some important exhibitor chieftains from the Middle West will be present.

Mr. O'Reilly made it clear that the convention would be a genuine business session, with politics in distinct disfavor. Senator James J. Walker will make the keynote speech, and an important address will be delivered by Will H. Hays. Senator Royal S. Copeland, Lieut. Gov. George Lunn, Former State Senator J. Henry Walters, State Senator Clayton R. Lusk, Assemblyman Jenks, and others prominent in public life have signified their intention of being present.

A large delegation from the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, of which Mr. O'Reilly is also president, will go from New York. Executive Secretary S. I. Berman, of the state organization, went to Syracuse Thursday, June 14, to perfect arrangements for the meeting in co-operation with the Syracuse exhibitors' committee.

Metro Season's Production Schedule Is Arranged

Program includes Thirty-Three Major Releases with Possible Additions Later

THIRTY-THREE major productions will mark the 1923-1924 program of Metro Pictures Corporation, according to the schedule announced by Metro officials at this company's national sales convention held in New York last week. In addition to the list of pictures already set there is the possibility that several other important productions will be added in the next several months when negotiations are completed. Included in the schedule are Rex Ingram, Fred Niblo and Reginald Barker productions, as well as independent productions by other well known producers. There are also several Jackie Coogan pictures, upon the first of which Jackie has been at work for some time. Stars under the Metro banner include Mae Murray, Viola Dana and Buster Keaton, whose coming series of five-reel feature comedies Metro will begin to distribute in September.

The opening gun will be fired in September, with Mae Murray's latest picture, "The French Doll," taken from the Paris and New York stage success of the same name. "The French Doll" was acted here last season by Irene Bordoni and Miss Murray has created the film role which Miss Bordoni played on the stage. It is based on A. E. Thomas' English adaptation of the French play, "La Jeune Fille a Marie," by Paul Armont and Marcel Gerbidon, Parisian authors. Included in the cast with Miss Murray are Orville Caldwell, Rod La Rocque, Rose Dion, Paul Casaneuve, Willard Louis, Bernard Randall and Lucien Littlefield. The adaptation and continuity for "The French Doll" was prepared by Frances Marion. It is a Robert Z. Leonard presentation through Metro and is sponsored by Tiffany Productions, of which Mr. Leonard is director-general and M. H. Hoffman general manager.

Following "The French Doll" will be Fred Niblo's production through Louis B. Mayer of another New York stage success of last season, "Captain Applejack," by the English author, Walter Hackett. Its title, however, will be changed to "Strangers of the Night." The scenario for this picture was prepared for Mr. Niblo by Bess Meredyth, and it was photographed by Alvin Wyckoff. In the cast are Enid Bennett and Matt Moore, Barbara La Marr, Adele Farrington, Emily Fitzroy, Otto Hoffman and Robert McKim. "Strangers of the Night" is a Metro super-special.

There will be a new Viola Dana picture called "Rouged Lips," from the story, "Upstage," by Rita Weiman. The adaptation was made by Thomas J. Hopkins. Harold Shaw, who directed Miss Dana, is an English director who came to this country to direct Miss Dana and was signed by Metro to direct several other productions. Included in the cast of "Rouged Lips" with Miss Dana are Tom Moore, Nela Luxford, Sidney de Grey, Arline Pretty, Francis Powers, Georgie Woodthorpe and Burwell Manrick. "Rouged Lips" was photographed by John Arnold.

The last production to be released in September will be Buster Keaton's first five-reel comedy drama feature, "The Three Ages." It was recently completed by Keaton on the West Coast under the direction of Eddie Cline.

The month of October will see five new productions released, headed by the Metro screen classic, "The Eagle's Feather," now in the making in the Metro West Coast studios, under the direction of Edward Sloman. This is from a story by Katherine Newlin Burt and was prepared for the screen by Winifred Dunn. The cast includes James Kirkwood, Mary Alden, Lester Cunco, Elinor Fair, George Seigman, Adolph Menjou, John Elliott, Charles McHugh, William Orlamond and Jim Wang. J. J. Hughes is art director and George Rizard is photographing "The Eagle's Feather."

Second is the Reginald Barker production, "The Master of Woman," adapted for Mr. Barker by Monte M. Katterjohn, from the novel, "The Law-Bringers," by G. B. Lancaster. This title may be changed later. The cast consists of Renee Adoree, Earle Williams, Barbara La Marr, Pat O'Malley, Wallace Beery, Josef Swickard, Pat Harmon, George Kuwa, Edward J. Brady, and Robert Anderson. It is being photographed by Percy Hilburn. "The Master of Woman" will be a Reginald Barker production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces.

October will be particularly memorable, as it will produce the first Jackie Coogan feature under Metro auspices. Jackie is now at work in the Metro studios under the direction of Victor Schertzinger on Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "Long Live the King." It is a colorful picturization of the adventures of the young crown prince of the mythical kingdom of Lavonia. The novel was adapted to the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan and scenarioized by Eve Unsell. These screen adapters were loaned to Metro especially for this Coogan production by Joseph M. Schenck and B. P. Schulberg respectively. J. J. Hughes is in charge of art direction, William Van Brincken in charge of all research work, and the production is being photographed by Frank Good and Robert Martin. The whole is under the personal supervision of Jack Coogan, Sr. Among the players supporting Jackie are Rosemary Theby, Ruth Renick, Vera Lewis, Alan Hale, Alan Forrest, Walt Whitman, Robert Brower and Don Franklin.

There will also be a second Metro screen classic in "Held to Answer," a Peter Clarke McFarlane story recently purchased by Metro. This will be the second of the Metro specials following "The Eagle's Feather." The producing organization for this picture has not yet been completed.

In this month also there will be released a second Viola Dana picture called "The Social Code." This is taken from Rita Weiman's story, "To Whom It May Concern." It will be Viola Dana's second starring picture for the fall season and is said to be a mystery drama. Rex Taylor is already at work on the continuity.

Four productions will be released by Metro in the month of November. The first is an Alan Holubar production called "Hearts of Happiness." The second will be a new Fred Niblo production called "Man, Woman and Temptation," produced under the auspices of the Metro-Louis B. Mayer organizations. A third will be "Mad Pleasure," scheduled as a Reginald Barker production, also under Metro-Louis B. Mayer auspices, from the novel, "The Valley of Content," by Blanche Upright. There will be a second Buster Keaton five-reeler, but the story has not yet been selected.

December will show four more Metro releases. Of these "Desire," the third screen classic of the fall program, will be the first. It is a Louis Burston presentation through Metro directed by Rowland V. Lee from an original story and continuity by John B. Clymer and Henry R. Symonds. Among the cast are Marguerite De La Motte, John Bowers, Estelle Taylor, David Butler, Walter Long, Lucille Hutton, Edward Connelly, Noah Beery, Ralph Lewis, Russell Simpson and several others.

A second is "Fashion Row," a Mae Murray picture formerly announced as "Conquest," by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgins. Miss Murray has already started production on this picture. The third December release is called "The Uninvited Guest," a Williamson-Technicolor novelty. The fourth will be "In Search of a Thrill," a third Dana Metro picture taken from the story by Kate Jordan called "The Spirit of the Road."

There will be four January releases in 1924. Rex Ingram's production, "Scaramouche," will be the first. "Scaramouche" is a romance of the French Revolution by Rafael Sabatini, and it is being produced by special arrangement with Charles L. Wagner. The scenario was prepared for Ingram by Willis Goldbeck and John F. Seitz is in charge of the camera. The cast for "Scaramouche" is headed by Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro and Lewis Stone. Others are Edith Allen, Lloyd Ingram, Otto Matieson, Julia Swayne Gordon and James Marcus.

In January also there will be another Metro-Jackie Coogan production, the story of which has not yet been selected. Still another will be "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," a Lubin-Sawyer production, based on the poem by Robert W. Service. The last January release will be called by the temporary title of "Other Men's Clothes." It is taken from the story, "The Tale of Triona," by William J. Locke.

February brings three Metro releases. The most important of these is a second Alan Holubar production called "Life's Highway," from a story by E. Lloyd Sheldon called "East of Suez." One other will be a fourth Viola Dana picture and still another will be the fifth of the season's Metro screen classics, the subject of which is also among the undetermined.

March holds four important productions and will form a banner month for Metro. No titles have been announced at this date, but they will be respectively a Fred Niblo production, a Reginald Barker production, an Ingram production and one Buster Keaton five-reeler feature comedy.

April will have the following releases: "Mademoiselle Midnight," by Edmund Goulding for Mae Murray through Metro-Tiffany Productions; "The Dog of Flanders," for Jackie Coogan's third Metro picture, by Louisa de la Rame; a fifth Viola Dana picture; the sixth Metro screen classic.

May, the last month of the season's program, will have the third Alan Holubar production, called "The Robes of Redemption."

Famous Players Case Is Resumed

or twelve this season," although he wanted fifty per cent of the product.

In Boston, Mr. Kent said Loew got all except one or two, which went to Nathan Gordon, First National franchise holder.

On the subject of protection, Mr. Kent declared with great emphasis that "all first-run exhibitors demand protection. It is no ruling of ours. The first-runs fight for protection against the second-runs, and the second-runs against the third. It is a practice which the distributor has to put up with and do the best he can."

Of the "41" and "39" groups, Mr. Kent testified that Ruben & Finkelstein took all but five pictures for their Minneapolis and St. Paul houses; the A. H. Blank circuit took fifty per cent of the product for Omaha; ninety per cent in Des Moines; in some other towns only half; and in others none.

Frank L. Newman of Kansas City took eighty per cent and Jensen and Von Herberg ninety per cent of this season's product, he declared.

As to the Stanley Circuit in Philadelphia, Mr. Kent said negotiations were carried on by W. E. Smith personally with the Stanley Company of America. The purchase was for twenty-five theatres, which took ninety to ninety-five per cent of the 1922-23 Paramount product.

"Why didn't they take it all?" asked Mr. Farrington.

"There were a few pictures they didn't want," responded Mr. Kent.

The witness denied emphatically that the Stanley Booking Company had any connection with film sales to houses outside the Stanley Circuit. "We do not recognize the booking company in our transactions with other exhibitors," declared Mr. Kent. "We fought that question out four years ago, and decided we would not book through the Stanley Booking Company."

The Southern Enterprises theatres were booked by Fred Creswell of Atlanta, dealing with Harold B. Franklin, of the F. P.-L. theatre department, and there was no contract for the present season between the distribution department and the Saenger Circuit, Mr. Kent said. That matter was handled direct in the South.

For Detroit, the sale of Paramount product was made to George W. Trendle, representing the Kunsky interests, also First National franchise holders. "They got thirty-four of the '41' and have run five of the '39,'" said the witness. "It was a percentage contract."

Regarding the playing of "The Covered Wagon" over the newly formed Shubert-Erlanger chain, Mr. Kent admitted, after considerable questioning, that the picture would run in a majority of the Shubert-Erlanger houses. He denied that there was any blanket contract.

"At what theatre in Chicago is 'The Covered Wagon' being shown?" Mr. Farrington asked the witness.

"The Woods theatre," was the answer.

"That's not a Shubert or Erlanger house, is it?" Mr. Swain queried, to which Mr. Kent answered "No."

On cross-examination, Mr. Swain brought out that F. P.-L. had "protected" three Indianapolis exhibitors against Loew in booking this season's product, and that the arrangement with Jensen and Von Herberg was on a percentage basis.

"You try to make the percentage arrangement wherever you can, don't you?" Mr. Farrington followed up.

This Mr. Kent denied, but he added: "While we are not trying to force percentage on the exhibitor, we have always felt that percentage would have to come eventually to stop all this haggling over prices between exhibitor and distributor and put the thing on a common sense basis. But nearly every time we play percentage we get the worst of it. If a man pays $10,000 flat rental for a picture he'll scramble to put it over; if he gets it for nothing he lays down and doesn't try to put the picture over. In other words, you can't contract for enthusiasm."

Enumerating the pictures actually released by Paramount over a five-year period, Mr. Kent gave the following figures: In 1922-23, seventy-eight pictures; 1921-22, ninety-four; 1920-21, one hundred and four; 1919-20, one hundred and ten; 1918-19, one hundred and twenty-five.

During the examination of Mr. Kent it was brought out that the interest of F. P.-L. in the Stanley Company of America came about through a $2,000,000 loan made by the former to the Stanley concern.

John Manheimer, Brooklyn exhibitor, also a Tuesday witness, testified that when Loew built a house in his neighborhood he was compelled to change from first-run Paramount to second run. This proved to be a losing proposition, he declared, adding that he paid about as much for second runs as he had paid for first.

For "Knighthood" he paid $1,500, the witness said. Asked why F. P.-L. didn't sell the picture to the Loew house, Mr. Manheimer replied: "I guess they were too wise. I give Marcus Loew credit for being a better showman."

Although he is now playing pictures of other distributors, the witness said he would rather have Paramount. "Goldwyn pictures are better from an artistic standpoint," he told Mr. Swain, "but what I am interested in is dollars and cents, and Paramount pictures draw better than those of any other company."

Exhibitors Watch Results of Open Air Shows

MOTION picture interests of eastern Connecticut are watching with interest the experiment at Willimantic, Conn., where Foti Brothers, former managers of the Scenic theatre in that city, are completing plans to operate an open-air house during the warm months.

Open-air houses at summer resorts have proved paying ventures, but whether such a venture will pay in a city, in competition with lake-resort playhouses within easy traveling distance, is something that is receiving consideration.

Foti Brothers have leased a Main street site, and are having it enclosed with a board wall. There will be no covering, excepting over the piano and screen.

"Matty" to Launch Picture Show at Braves' Field

S. H. Meinhold, general manager for Loew's, Inc., has been in Boston for the past week arranging final details for a huge summer motion picture and dance venture which will be launched at Braves' Field the last of this month. The opening night is announced as Monday, June 25, at which time Marcus Loew will arrive here accompanied by two score screen stars to assist Christy Mathewson at the big break; for, be it known, Christy is heavily interested.

The rather novel idea of converting the huge field into an immense motion picture theatre and amusement center was born in the brain of Mathewson and Emil Fuchs, and they received hearty encouragement from Mr. Loew. Every screen and stage star summering in New York and vicinity will be invited to be present at the opening.

Demand Seen for Original Stories

Joseph Schenck Scenario Chief Sees Opportunity for New Screen Writers

C GARDINER SULLIVAN, pioneer among photo-dramatists, arrived in New York last week from Los Angeles, where he recently signed a contract to take charge of the story and scenario end of Joseph M. Schenck's production activities.

Mr. Sullivan confesses that he is strongly prejudiced in favor of the original story. He has written around 200 scenarios, while he has adapted but ten books and stage plays to the screen.

Mr. Sullivan says there has been much to discourage the writing of original stories for the screen in late years, as a very large part of the screen output has been based on stage plays and published books, but he believes there is every reason why the writer of original stories should be encouraged now.

He blames this feeling of discouragement among those who would write for the screen largely upon the thoughtlessness of producers and scenario editors. "In the old days the scenario writer, unknown though he might be, had a very good chance," he said. "I well remember that when I was working on the New York Journal I hired a typewriter from some place down in Cortlandt street, pounded out a scenario and sent it to Thomas H. Ince. It was my first screen story and it was accepted. Flushed with my success, I knocked out another and sent it to Ince. He promptly returned it with a letter stating that it was 'a piece of cheese.' He not only condemned it, but he told me why. But nowadays, in many companies, all that the scenario writer gets with his returned scenario is a rejection slip saying 'Not suited to our needs,' which of course means that it is worse than nothing. Few take the trouble to say what is the matter even though the fundamental idea may be good. However, I happen to know that this system is again changing and the day of the original scenario is coming back. During my association with Ince, I have written ten-page letters of explanation to writers in cases where a scenario has shown promise, but was lacking in some respects. This was because I believed that the promising writer of original stories for the screen should be greatly encouraged and helped so far as possible."

"The works of most of the authors of today are not adaptable to the screen," he asserts, "and therein lies the big opportunity for the original story. The result is that the motion picture is developing an entirely new profession of letters—that of writing direct for the screen—and the next two or three years will see its ranks filled by a corps of trained experts that will insure a steady supply of the best sort of picture material."

First National Presents Forecast Survey of Conditions for Summer Brings General Note of Exhibitor Optimism

WITH another summer at hand and another summer's problems to be solved by exhibitor and distributor, Associated First National is able this week to report an interesting survey of conditions throughout the country and a forecast for the summer.

A careful analysis of the reports leads to several important conclusions: First: the entire East may expect a more prosperous summer—fewer theatres closed and more theatres operating on their regular full time per cent, than last year.

Second: There is no particular kind of "summer" pictures. The type of production most in demand for hot weather bookings varies considerably.

Third: Many exhibitors have resorted to a policy of "seeing it through," content with breaking even during the summer months. It is noticeable, however, that a spirit of passive resignation rather than active opposition to a summer slump, characterizes many showmen. While exchangemen report many bookings for the big First National releases, a tendency to book reissues and third-rate pictures for summer showings is noted.

Buffalo is one exchange which reports a big summer ahead. The campaign for play dates for First National pictures and for new business is already double that of last summer and that of the year before.

Michigan, having experienced the phenomenon of six inches of snow on May 9th, is looking hopefully forward to a cooler summer and proportionate better business.

From Pittsburgh comes a report of a steady increase in play dates for the summer, indicating that more exhibitors are planning to stay open throughout the summer.

Seattle sees no greater number of theatres open during the summer, but limits the closings to those houses in the very small towns of less than 500 population. In San Francisco, another West Coast exchange to report, a slight falling off in theatre attendance may be expected at the beginning of the vacation season. This is in San Francisco and Oakland where the change in temperature is negligible.

Certain sections of the Middle West are more sanguine than the East in their forecast of the strength of summer patronage. A great many sections of the country have enjoyed a late spring, and this proved a boon for exhibitors, many of whom have reported an unusually prosperous month of May, but months of July and August are looked forward to with apprehension.

Kansas City reports: "At the present time conditions for this summer are very good. The farmers have been blessed with considerable rainfall which is the criterion of prosperity in this territory."

St. Louis: "Roughly, 150 more play dates per week in our territory compared with last year."

Denver: "From the exhibitors' standpoint, the summer period looks black but the majority are optimistic with respect to the fall season."

Cincinnati: "If we do not have an extremely bad summer as far as weather is concerned, we believe, on account of industrial conditions having improved in a great many sections in the territory, we will have much better summer business than we had last year."

Minneapolis: "Indications are that there will not be any more theatres open this summer than last."

Chicago: "After a thorough investigation, we believe there will be more theatres remaining open this summer than last year."

Kitty McGuire Joins Warner Players

A trio of scenes from "Only 38," from one of the Broadway stage successes of last season. A Paramount picture.

Universal Sales Heads Convene

N. Y. Discussion of Plans for Year to Be Followed by Chicago Gathering

UNIVERSAL is having its annual sales convention this week at the Commodore Hotel in New York City, starting Friday. Sales executives from all points East are assembled for a three-day pow-wow. In addition to the visiting executives, all the Universal officials and home office executives are sitting in at the convention, and will supervise the formulation of sales plans for the coming year.

Similarly, a twin sales convention will be held in the Congress Hotel, Chicago, next week, at which sales heads from the Middle West will be assembled under the same conditions as the New York get-together.

The outcome of the convention is expected to be a fall policy of import. Universal is said to have under way changes in sales and distribution that will go far towards solving many of the difficulties which crop up from time to time in the marketing of film products.

The convention will be opened by Carl Laemmle, president, who will greet his assembled employees and coach them in the "live-and-let-live" policy which has distinguished Universal's exhibitor relationships through the years. The sales chiefs will learn the extent to which Universal will aggrandize its product and its world-wide distribution machine during the coming year. In turn, the assembled film men will recommend changes based upon their actual experience in the field, both in styles of pictures and in methods of marketing.

The convention also will be addressed by R. H. Cochrane, vice-president; P. D. Cochrane, secretary; E. H. Goldstein, treasurer, and Art Schmidt, general sales manager of the Universal organization. Talks also will be made by Paul Gulick, director of publicity; George Brown, director of advertising; Raymond Cavanagh, director of exploitation, and R. V. Anderson, director of sales promotion. It is expected that Joe Freidman, in charge

Complete Cast Named For "Spanish Dancer"

JESSE L. LASKY has announced the complete cast of the Herbert Brenon production, "The Spanish Dancer," in which Pola Negri is starred, with Antonio Moreno featured in the leading supporting role. The cast follows:

The role of Don Caesar de Bazan which, in the original stage play of that title by Adolphe d'Enery and P. S. T. Dumenier, was made famous by Richard Mansfield and other great stars of a former day, has been largely subordinated to that of Maritana in the screen adaptation by June Mathis and Beulah Marie Dix, with the result that Mr. Brenon predicts that the picture will afford Miss Negri a great opportunity.

Laemmle Fixes Production Program "Universal Sixty" Will Comprise Groups of Productions by Popular Stars

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, announces an ambitious production program for the 1923-1924 season. A total of sixty pictures of quality will be made and released during the twelve months beginning next September. It is planned to group the twenty Jewels with five groups of productions by Universal stars, and the entire output will be known as the "Universal Sixty."

Special emphasis is laid on the fact by Universal that the group of sixty is to include twenty Jewels. This is almost twice as many as have been put out by the company during the last twelve months. The increase in the Jewels is due to the acquisition of two new Universal stars in special productions. These stars are Reginald Denny and Mary Philbin. They will be starred in four Jewels each during the coming year.

In addition to the productions announced in the past, the sixty will include "The Signal Tower" and "The Turmoil." The latter is by Hobart Henley. Both of these will be used as starring vehicles, but no definite selection of the stars has been made.

Included in the list will be a group of eight Gladys Walton productions. Among these will be "The Untamable," by Herbert Blache; "The Near Lady," by Frank Adams; "The Aforementioned Infant," by Elizabeth Saxony Holding, and "The Thrill Girl," by Crosby George.

There will be a group of eight Jack Hoxie productions, including "Men in the Raw," "The Knight of the Range," "Wyoming," "The Texas Ranger" and others. Herbert Rawlinson also will contribute a group of eight pictures to the Universal Sixty. Among the Herbert Rawlinson productions will be "Crooked Alley," "Upside Down," "Small Town Stuff" and others.

After a two years' absence from Sennett Comedies, Mack Swain has returned to the big comedy lot, where he first became identified with pantomime and where, as he himself says, "I rightfully belong."

Mack Swain made his second bow under the Sennett banner as one of the supporting cast in "Pitfalls of a Big City," the recently completed burlesque in which Ben Turpin, zig-zagged comedy star is the featured player.

Work Proceeding Rapidly on "Twosome of Tuara"

Work is progressing rapidly on the first of the Chester-Hellman comedies, "A Twosome at Tuara," at the Chester studios at Hollywood. These comedies promise to be the most novel of any offered to the exhibitor and movie fans, it is claimed.

They will be produced from the stories by Sam Hellman, which are being published in The Saturday Evening Post. Vitagraph is said to reveal itself again as a pioneer in the production of stories that are different.

Pathe News Editor Speaks of Work Over Radio

Emmanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News, on Wednesday evening, June 13, from Station W. O. R., Newark, N. J., talked for the radio service on "The Romance of the News Reel." Editor Cohen's talk was preceded by a broadcast introduction telling about Pathe News "beats" and exclusive motion picture camera reports of outstanding world events—as the great Smyrna war conflagration, burial of the unknown soldier, finish of the transcontinental non-stop airplane flight, the recent Mount Aetna volcano eruption, etc.

In a concise, yet picturesque way, Editor Cohen told the radio the highlights of all that is involved in picturing the world's great events; the foresight necessary to have cameramen on the spot when things happen, the contempt these men have for personal risk, their devices for transmitting their precious film to headquarters by the speediest carriers, including airplanes, and the processes of development, titling, printing and rushing the completed result to the waiting screens.

Selznick Gets One-Reelers from Martin Johnson

THE acquisition and release of 14 Martin Johnson short subjects, depicting the adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson in their travels through the South Sea islands, is announced by David R. Blyth, director of sales for Selznick Distributing Corporation.

Although this series which has been titled "Martin Johnson's South Sea Adventures," was made in single reel lengths and deals in part with tropical life and travels, they cannot be classed with the usual animal pictures nor can they be termed travelogues, or educational. They are a combination of all these things with something added.

While there is nothing so novel in a man's exploring wild, unknown lands and sojourning amidst weird peoples, it is most unusual for his wife to accompany him. Mrs. Johnson has always declined to be left at home while her husband went a-wandering and her attractive personality has added greatly to the charm of the pictures.

Kiser Art Films Seen as Good Summer Subjects

A fresh awakening of exhibitor interest in the Oregon Trail Series of Kiser Studio short subjects is seen by Pathe with the oncoming summer season.

Five of these one and two-reel eye-coolers, with their adventurous action in almost inaccessible places in forests and mountains of the great Northwest, are now heavily booked by far-sighted exhibitors, and available at all Pathe branch exchanges.

Pathe's ordinary exploitation material for these subjects—consisting of attractive one-sheets and ample lobby photograph displays—is now supplemented with ingenious devices in connection with which the Kiser studio lends its hearty co-operation.

In connection with showings of "The Royal Chinook," which pictures the life history of the Oregon River salmon, upon application through Pathe the Kiser people will ship to any exhibitor three big 20-pound salmon, carefully packed, for a nominal charge. The idea is to display these at the theatre frozen in a cake of ice bearing the house announcement.

"The Price of Progress," an adventure in the great lumber industry, obviously calls for lumber yard tie-up ballyhoos, and a lobby lumber-jack, with, perhaps, a wood-chopping contest before the picture goes on.

Century Plans Bungalows for All Directors

Abe Stern, of Century Comedies, has practically completed plans for the building of what will be known as Directors' Row at the Century studios.

Full details have not been received from the Coast as to what the new row will consist of, although a recent night letter advised that bungalows will be built and maintained by Julius and Abe Stern for the directors making Century Comedies.

Each bungalow, it is understood, will have the comfort of the occupant in mind, so that he may read and write undisturbed. Each bungalow will be equipped with a shower, small library and a writing and reading table.

The idea originated with Julius Stern before he left for Europe, and was worked out by Abe Stern at the studios in Hollywood.

New Buddy Messinger Star Subject Is Started

Al Herman, having completed "Buddy at the Bat," with Buddy Messinger in the star role, has started a new Century Comedy with Buddy, the action of which is centered in and around a military school.

The story, as written by Mr. Herman and his gagman, Edward Luddy, tells of a mischievous boy, who is thrown out of every school until he reaches a very strict military academy. Here, the boy, played by Century's boy star, leads his schoolmates in sports of all kinds, hazings, class rushes and other schoolboy activities. The finish comes when Buddy, barred from appearing in any of the academy's games, wins the football game in the face of expulsion. How he is vindicated forms the interesting finish of "Present Arms," the title of the script. Abe Stern is supervising the direction of this subject.

Export and Import Plans to Make Animal Dramas

DESPITE its announcement, several months ago, that it would remain out of the producing field at present, the Export & Import Film Company will again enter that field, it is announced by L. Auerbach, with a series of two-reel wild animal pictures which will not be a serial. It is well known throughout the trade that Export & Import has made a specialty of producing animal serials in conjunction with Colonel Wm. N. Selig, who controls a large collection of wild animals.

It was decided, after numerous conferences with leading exhibitors and exchanges, that there was a demand for a series of two-reel "featurettes" with wild animals, made from famous stories and featuring well known stars. Production was accordingly started on a series of twelve two-reelers, the first of which, "A Jungle Heroine," is executed by a cast including Mitchell Lewis Hedda Nova and Pat O'Malley. Second of the series is to be an adaptation of "The Last Man" for which the cast has not yet been selected. The series is being directed by Bertram Bracken.

Script Completed for Next Fighting Blood Story

"So This Is Hollywood," the first two-reel production of the Film Booking Offices second Fighting Blood series, has been completed, and Director Mal St. Clair is busily at work planning the second picture, which is entitled "She Supes to Conquer."

The second series of Witwer's Fighting Blood two-reelers will carry a general title of Fighting Blood series number two and will carry a cast consisting of George O'Hara, Kit Guard, Mary Beth Milford, Albert Cook.

Educational has a new Cameo Comedy titled "Kinky," directed by Fred Hibbard. The views above are taken from this subject.

Stan Laurel plays the leading role in an amusing travesty on Ouida's "Under Two Flags." The comedy version bears the title of "Under Two Jags." Katherine Grant is seen in the role of "Cheroot," the daughter of the regiment." This subject is the current release on the Pathe schedule.

Short-Subject Program Presented Educational Shows What Can Be Done With Program of Short-Length Units

ON FRIDAY afternoon, June 8th, at Wurlitzer Hall, West Forty-second street, New York City, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., staged a screen program made up entirely of short-subject units and appropriate musical accompaniment. Short-subject programs have been arranged before by leading first-run theatres, but this occasion marked an innovation in that the program was staged under the auspices of a distributing company and not a theatre management. As announced by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, the program was presented "as an example of ideal summer entertainment, made up entirely of pictures of one and two reels from Educational's current short subjects."

In the course of the show were presented two two-reelers, three single-reelers and a news-reel strip, thus aggregating eight reels in all—the length in reels of the average program as shown by MOTION PICTURE NEWS' statistical survey published in the November 25th issue of last year. In assembling the units such subjects were chosen as would make for a well balanced program of light, varied entertainment. A careful selection was also made of the musical numbers so that pictures and music might blend in pleasing synthesis. In both matters of balanced program and appropriate musical setting the showing was a pronounced success.

The program opened with the current Kingograms number, in which the New York Jubilee celebration and daring feats of horsemanship of the U. S. Cavalry formed the highlights. From these action moments of the world's current activities the minds of the audience were turned to a contemplation of nature in her various moods and forms, as disclosed in Robert Bruce's Wilderness Tale, "From the Windows of My House," a veritable poem in photography, an appreciation of which will be found in the May 12th issue of the News. Then came a hodge-podge, "Speed Demons," whose lighter, novelty touches, mixing sense with nonsense, offered pleasing contrasts to the more serious theme of the preceding subject.

Next the piece de resistance of the bill made its appearance in the Christie two-reel situation comedy "Roll Along." The amusing antics of the blackface comedians against a genuine "Down in Dixie" background sustained the variety tempo of the program admirably. (This comedy was reviewed in the May 26th issue.) Then back again to the more serious vein swung the program with "Golf, as Played by Gene Sarazen," the instructive golf reel, reviewed in the June 9th issue. The program closed with a smashing action melodrama, "Backfire," which left the hard-boiled audience that witnessed the showing applauding spontaneously at its close and sent them out chuckling in high good humor.

A program that can do just that is bound to bring 'em back again for more. (A review of "Backfire" will be found in the review columns of the present issue.)

Second Arrow-Eddie Lyons Comedy Reaches East

The second of the Arrow-Eddie Lyons comedy series, titled "Captain Applesauce," has been received from the Coast and reviewed by the officials of the Arrow Film Corporation.

"Captain Applesauce" concerns the adventures of Eddie in the role of a pirate. Mr. Lyons is now at work on the third of this series, the title of which will be announced later.

Educational Renews with Cameo

Will Distribute 24 Single Reelers
During 1923-1924 Is Announcement

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., to distribute another series of twenty-four single-reel Cameo Comedies during the season of 1923-24, it is announced by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational.

A year ago Mr. Hammons made the statement that he believed there was a demand for single-reel, rough-and-tumble comedies, and the success of the first series of Cameos justified his prediction. These single-reel comedies have met with exceptional favor with exhibitors throughout the country and have received favorable comment at the hands of critics in newspapers and trade publications.

The Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald, in reviewing two of these comedies, said in its issue of March 11: "Single-reel comedies up to this year have been of only one type, the 'You-chase-me-and-I'll-chase-you' kind. Two reelers and up included some mighty good laugh makers; but the short ones looked as if they had all been run through the same coffee grinder; their action and plot were generally as similar as two films can be. Beginning with this season, however, Cameo Comedies made their appearance. Look them over. Unless they're below the standard of those we've seen, you will find it hard to believe that this is your old peeve, the one-reel comedy."

"Here is just what the exhibitors need with the long features we are getting nowadays," is the comment of Fred Holzapfel, of the Broadway theatre, Minneapolis.

"The first good one-reel comedy we have ever found," is the comment of Johnson and Hals, Shadowland theatre, Rush City, Minn.

The present series of Cameos was made under the direction and supervision of Fred

Hibbard, who will continue in charge of the new series. Cameo Comedies, as previously announced, will be made at the Fine Arts studio, Los Angeles, where the new series of Mermaid Comedies, Jack White Specials and Hamilton Comedies will be made.

"Carmen, Jr.," Is Booked Over Loew Circuit

"Carmen, Jr.," the last of the first series of six Century Comedies starring Baby Peggy, has been booked over the entire Loew circuit in New York. In all probability this booking will effect the remainder of the country on this comedy.

In this picture Baby Peggy mimics the renowned Carmen of Spain and the popular Rodolph Valentino.

The picture is not released until August, although the Loew run commences about June 28.

"Nip and Tuck" Completed by Mack Sennett

It is announced by the Mack Sennett studios that what is considered the best two-reel comedy he has produced since affiliating with Pathe has just been completed under the title of "Nip and Tuck." This new one is of the regular all-star comedy attractions, and features Billy Bevan, Harry Gribbon, Alberta Vaughn and Kewpie Morgan.

A pre-view will be given the picture as soon as it is cut and edited, preparatory to shipping it to New York.

"Seaside Simps" Said Good Summer Comedy Release

The newest Hallroom Boys comedy has been given the appropriate summer title of "Seaside Simps" by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, which is distributing these two-reelers.

They promise it as a real summer picture, and declare that a glimpse of it is as good as a whole day at the beach. The locale of the picture is down by the sea waves, but they're anything but "sad sea waves," according to the pre-release rumors that have come through from the Coast on it.

It is announced that plans are now under way for a brand new series of Hallroom Boys Comedies in the fall, upon the completion of the present series. The Hallroom Boys Comedies will shortly complete their fourth year.

With so many comedians going in for longer releases, the good two-reel comedy will be in great demand next season, is the opinion of Jack Cohn of C. B. C.

"Midnight Cabaret" Last Semon Film of Season

THE final Larry Semon comedy release of the season of 1922-23 by Vitagraph will be "The Midnight Cabaret." Under the comedian's contract four more comedies will be made by him for release in the season of 1923-24. The first of these is "The Gown Shop," which promises to be one of the best Semon ever made.

Vitagraph has set the dates for the release of these four pictures in September, 1923, November, 1923, January, 1924, and March, 1924. In "The Gown Shop" Semon has in his supporting cast Kathryn Meyers, Oliver F. Hardy, F. F. de Silva, Pete Gordon, Bill Hauber and a score of pretty girls who play models in the modiste's shop.

Charles Murray in "Helpful Hogan," one of the All-Star Comedies made by C. C. Burr for release through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

Julianne Johnston Chosen to Support Lew Brice

LEW BRICE'S leading woman in his first screen comedy, now being filmed at the William Fox western studios, will be Julianne Johnston, it is announced.

The picture is called "The Missing Link," and is being directed by Erle Kenton. Miss Johnston appeared in "The Madness of Youth" in support of John Gilbert.

Hal Roach Discusses Means of Building Thrills

Hal Roach, producer of "The Timber Queen" and now making another serial, "Her Dangerous Path," with Edna Murphy, on his recent visit to New York shed an interesting light on his methods of "getting thrills."

"The most effective of all thrills," he said, "is marked by the sensation of chill that creeps up and down the spectator's spine, accompanied by a more rapid heart action.

"This sensation is produced in all sorts of people by sudden and unexpected appeals to their sense of surprise, by dramatic climaxes that ring true, by mystery, suspense, doubt, anxiety, and by fear that is sincere. Often the reaction of an audience to these impulses is a better augury for a picture than the excitement produced by feats of physical strength and courage and the encountering of grave physical perils. The last mentioned source of the coveted thrill is, of course, essential in a serial, for that form of picture is founded on the romance of physical adventure.

"'Her Dangerous Path,' now in production, soon ready for release, diversifies its thrill values to the extent of our ability."

Short Subjects Said Summer Aid

Elmer Pearson Sees Them as Business Builders During Hot Weather Period

ELMER PEARSON, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., this week pointed out that while it was not likely that this summer would present such troublesome problems for the exhibitor or distributor as the last two, so much discussion arises at this time of year that a psychological condition is created that aggravates the difficulty. He said:

"The bigger the theatre and the bigger the exhibitor, the more helpless he seems to be in the face of bad weather. The smaller exhibitor, on the other hand, appears to weather summer the best.

"Some of these smaller exhibitors are inured to difficulties, because they have them very largely the year around, thus probably are more capable of dealing with them. However, a study of their methods might be beneficial to all of us.

"In the first place, such exhibitors invariably run continuously about two serials per week, and since they are past masters at getting an unusually large percentage of their customers out the first night of a serial, they have solidified themselves with liberal patronage for that particular night or nights of their week during the life of that serial.

"If variety gets results where it is thus imperative, surely variety will increase box office receipts during dull periods, at least in localities where, in good season, the exhibitor may not be forced to consider it necessary.

"The short subject supply offers real variety and if combined into programs in a way that affords an opportunity of exploitation as such, and according to its just deserts, will help very materially in overcoming the summer bogey."

Christie Special to Have U. S. Navy Co-operation

Despite the fact that Al Christie, supervising director, is in Europe, the Christie Comedy organization is working at a rapid rate. All of the comedy forces at the studio are at work on the first two pictures for the new series of comedies which will be released beginning in August through Educational Film Exchanges, a new contract for distribution having been signed some time ago by both parties, in fact before production of the present series was completed.

In line with the expansive policy which was started last year, the new Christie schedule will lead off with another unusual attraction which is now being filmed with Dorothy Devore in the starring role. This is a comedy being made with the co-operation of the leading warships of the Pacific Fleet, headed by the giant battleship California. No details are announced as to the story of this picture but it is assured that this will be one of the biggest two-reelers from a production point of view which has yet been launched. The comedy will be directed by Harold Beaudine, and in addition to Miss Devore, the cast will include James Harrison, as leading man, and also William Irving, Ogden Crane, and George French.

Other stories are under way to feature Jimmie Adams, Neal Burns and Bobby Vernon.

"The Jazz Bug," from which these scenes were taken is a Universal comedy starring Bert Roach.

WHAT SHOWMEN THINK OF CURRENT RELEASES

Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Sixty Cents an Hour—

A good drawing card. The attendance was good all week. (Middle West.)

Picture away below the mark. Couldn't pull any business. (East.)

The Go-Getter—

Only fair. Lacks punch somehow, despite the name. (Middle West.)

Feature furnishes good entertainment. Business good for this time of the year. (Middle West.)

The Exciters—

Bebe Daniels' always popular. One of her best. Well liked. Good crowds. (Middle West.)

A standing room business all week, due partially to the annual musical revue. (Middle West.)

Fast moving, interesting feature with Bebe Daniels well cast as flapper. Good summer entertainment. Played to big business. (Middle West.)

The Ne'er-Do-Well—

Business all that could be expected for third and last week of run. Picture previously reported as good popular entertainment. (East.)

Average picture which gets over due to star; good business.

The Rustle of Silk—

A fair picture. Patrons didn't like the ending. Business fair. (East.)

A pleasing picture but not up to the usual standard. Betty Compson always goes well here. Business just average. (West.)

Too improbable to be thoroughly interesting. Not much business. (Middle West.)

Did not set the world on fire. (East.)

Grumpy—

Theo. Roberts is great drawing card here. Popularity of stage play and Theo. Roberts as star, combined with splendid acting, made this go over good. (Middle West.)

The Tiger's Claw—

Very good Jack Holt picture. Plenty of thrills and audiences liked it. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Girl of the Golden West—

It was expected that this picture would do some fine business, but it proved disappointing. Business was just fair. Did not approach the amount estimated. (Middle West.)

Wonderful production throughout—Great business considering extreme heat. (Middle West.)

The Bright Shawl—

An excellent attraction. Drew nice audiences during week's run. (Middle West.)

An excellent picture. Went over well, considering heat. (East.)

Popular stars and well directed story put this one over big. Business above average. (Middle West.)

Scars of Jealousy—

An average picture produced in a very satisfactory manner. Cast and spectacular scenes helped put over a good run. (West.)

The Electric House—

Marvelous comedy, business immense. (Middle West.)

A Man of Action—

Good picture but didn't draw very well. (Middle West.)

Wandering Daughters—

The Woman's Side—

Capacity business. (East.)

Slander the Woman—

Dorothy Phillips does very good work in this one. Patrons liked it. Fair receipts. (Middle West.)

The Sunshine Trail—

Just a fair picture. Business bad. (East.)

GOLDWYN

Lost and Found—

A fair picture. Business fair, despite weather. (East.)
Did not set the world on fire. (East.)

Look Your Best—

Pola Negri made the picture a wonderful success, business great. (Middle West.)

FOX

Goodbye, Girls—

Very good picture, with fair business. (East.)

Shirley of the Circus—

A clever and entertaining picture. Business good. (West.)

F. B. O.

Crashing Through—

A good western, but not strong enough to get them in this hot weather. (East.)

METRO

Soul of the Beast—

Capacity business greeted this splendid film. (East.)

A decided novelty in film entertainment, well liked and doing fine business. (East.)

Her Fatal Millions—

Fair picture. Poor week. (Middle West.)

Jazzmania—

This picture did a good business when other houses in the town had small houses. A local dancer also on the bill may have had considerable to do with it, as she took well on the bill and the star, while drawing good business, has never been a phenomenal pull. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Nanook of the North—

Going into third week. Rarely has picture obtained the press comments and popular approval accorded to Nanook here. Despite hot weather attendance has held up well. (Middle West.)

Safety Last—

Second week run, but packed them in for the seven days. A-I film. (East.)

Generally considered the best comedy ever produced. Jammed them in for the first week and naturally was held over for an extended engagement. A sure bet. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Foolish Wives—

Excellent picture; went over in good shape for two weeks. (Middle West.)

What Wives Want—

Title attracts many, and has great exploitation possibilities. Went over very nicely. (Middle West.)

Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande—

A picture that will amuse anybody. Pretty good summer crowds. (Middle West.)

Trifling with Honor—

Good audience picture. Would have done better if it hadn't been so warm. Those who saw it liked it. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Masters of Men—

This picture took in a few dollars over its strongest competing house. It didn't do so much, but was adjudged a good picture in spite of the box office return. (Middle West.)

The Ninety and Nine—

Picture proved poor box office attraction. Opened good two days, then fell. (Middle West.)

James R. Grainger, general sales manager for the newly consolidated Goldwyn - Cosmopolitan Corporation, was a Chicago visitor last week. He was accompanied by Eddie Bonns, general exploitation manager, and stopped off for a conference with District Supervisor George A. Hickey, regarding coming releases. Mr. Grainger is en route to the West Coast studios of the company and will visit every key city. During his stay in Chicago he closed a deal with Balaban & Katz, whereby "The Spoilers" will open for an indefinite engagement at the Roosevelt theatre, starting early in July. Mr. Bonns assigned Walter D. Nealand, local publicity manager, to handle the publicity on "The Spoilers" for the Roosevelt theatre engagement. "In the Days of Daniel Boone," another of the Universal chapter plays, portraying the incidents from early American history, was given its first showing in Universal projection rooms on Monday, and promises to prove a strong summer month production.

Equipment Dealers to Hold Convention at Chicago, July 12-13-14

(By Wire)

Chicago, June 13

THE Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America will hold its Second Annual Convention at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, on July 12, 13 and 14, according to Vice President B. A. Benson, who is chairman of the Convention Committee.

Statements in the trade press that the Convention would be held starting July 9th were incorrect, says Mr. Benson, as all arrangements for the convention on the dates fixed by the Board of Directors at their meeting in Chicago some time ago have been made and no change in convention dates authorized.

A large attendance of equipment dealers and manufacturers is expected at this meeting which will be of great importance to the supply branch of the industry. Plans for the entertainment of delegates and their wives as well as for the business sessions have been completed by Mr. Benson.

Albe Warner and General Manager Sam Morris, of Warner Brothers, came to Chicago for the opening of "Main Street" at the Roosevelt theatre. Mr. Warner, later in the week, left for the West Coast studios of his company and Mr. Morris returned to New York. They are both pleased with the fine get-away made by "Main Street" in Chicago and word received from its New York premier was also gratifying.

Chicago Manager Meyers, of Fox Corporation, is in New York attending the annual convention of his organization and is expected back the first part of next week.

District Manager Duncan and Exchange Manager Steinson, of Vitagraph, left for New York on Wednesday, to attend a conference which will be presided over by General Manager Quinn and Assistant General Manager Nelson, at which sales plans for 1923-24 will be discussed. Messrs. Duncan and Steinson are enthusiastic over the excellent list of coming releases already submitted to them and predict a big year for Vitagraph.

Leah Baird has been booked for a week of personal appearance at the Rialto theatre, starting July 9th, when her latest feature picture, "Is Divorce A Failure?" will be shown at that house. It is understood that Associated Exhibitors is also arranging for other appearances by Miss Baird in Chicago and surrounding cities.

On June 18th Willis Hall will assume the position of stage director of the new McVicker's theatre, succeeding C. A. Niggemeyer, who is leaving for the Coast. Mr. Niggemeyer, during his service in this position, has made a splendid record and his presentations have become famous for their high quality. Mr. Hall is one of the best known stage directors in the country and has operated a stock company at the Victoria theatre for the past two seasons. He has recently been playing an important part in "Light and Beer."

Irving Mack & Company have recently arranged to handle the distribution of a film novelty, "Three O'Clock In The Morning." It includes a special orchestral "Humoresque" on this famous song, describing in music how different individuals are occupied in the early morning, accompanied by a film which explains in verse and cartoons, the story told by the orchestra. The film is synchronized with the music, the words of the poetry flashing on the screen one at a time at the proper time in the score.

Frank Knipschild, head of Ross & Company Printers, who do a large amount of business with moving picture theatres and exchanges, was drowned in Lake Zurich last Sunday and to date his body has not been recovered. Mr. Knipschild was fishing from a boat and becoming overbalanced fell into the lake.

A new eight hundred seat house will be erected in North Chicago by M. Stern, according to plans now being made. It will be an up to date and all on one floor and the cost will be approximately $25,000.

The death of Arthur Lowy on Monday of this week, removes a known figure from Film Row. Mr. Lowy, for many years, has been interested in state right exchanges and theatres, and recently had been distributing some imported, scientific pictures to the medical profession. He was for several years associated in business with Ludwig Schindler.

Curley Irwin, former proprietor of the Irwin at Bloomington, who recently purchased the Castle theatre, has taken it over and installed an orchestra. He plans to re-equip the house, putting in chairs similar to those installed in the Chicago theatre, and other high class furnishings.

Walter Spoor, of the Academy, Waukegan, is planning to install a new orchestral organ at an early date.

Milo De Haven has opened offices in the old Paramount Building, 845 S. Wabash Avenue. He is managing a Snuggle Pup Specialty, including short reel picture, which has met with considerable success in theatres in which it has been shown.

M. P. Cavanaugh, who for some months past has been assistant manager of Fox's Chicago exchange, has been transferred to the St. Louis office and will leave on June 14th for his new post. Eddie Collins, of the Fox home office, will succeed Mr. Cavanaugh as assistant manager at Chicago.

First National vacation season has opened early and Country Sales Manager Brumberg already is enjoying his annual play period of two weeks. City Sales Manager Sears leaves Saturday for St. Louis and will motor to that city. Publicity Director Sobler also is vacationing, he is in New York and is expected back on the job within the next ten days.

General Manager Henry Ginsberg of the Lichman Corporation was in the city this week making his headquarters at Celebrated and conferring on sales plans with Joe Friedman.

Manager Jack Sampson, of F. B. O., informs us that "Wonders Of The Sea" will go into McVicker's the week of June 25th, as part of a double feature bill. This picture had a successful showing in Crandall's theatre at Washington, D. C., and at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York. Another F. B. O. feature, which is going over big, is "West Bound Limited," which is being released generally this week, twenty-one prints being made.

H. H. Hurn, Western Sales Manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, with headquarters in the Chicago branch, paid a hurried visit to New York last week. Mr. Hurn has been keeping in personal touch with the exhibitors of the Central West and plans to make his headquarters in Chicago for this purpose.

Terra-derma-lax window tie-up on "Quincy Adams Sawyer," in connection with the run at the Main Street theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

"Within the Law" Campaign Is Unusually Complete

Memphis, Tenn.—Manager Harold Horne of Loew's Palace theatre put across a campaign on "Within the Law" so complete and varied that only a few of its many features can be mentioned.

Ads were so arranged as to bring out the word "within," creating the impression that Norma Talmadge was appearing in a picture called "Within." This was done to dispel the confusion resulting from a number of pictures having played Memphis in which the word "Law" was prominent.

Five stores, all in prominent locations, entered into a cooperative tie-up whereby large arrows about 12 feet long and 18 inches wide were placed under the electric signs of their stores, worded as follows: "Trade Here. You are Within the Law."

They were conspicuously lettered and pointed directly into the store entrance. They were of beaver board and fitted with sockets and lights of various colors and attached to the electric signs above. The current was furnished by the merchants, giving illuminated boards in the heart of the city at comparatively small cost. The stunt proved so satisfactory to the merchants that they made a deal to leave them up permanently, changing the

"What a Wife Learned" Is Given Timely Angle

LORAIN, OHIO—Manager Ilg of the Wonderland theatre, attempts to arrange his bookings to take advantage of timely conditions.

For example, when Lorain County was subjected to an unusual number of domestic difficulties and the divorce cases on the court calendar had mounted to a sufficient number to arouse newspaper attention, Manager Ilg sized up the situation and then booked "What a Wife Learned."

The local interest provided a good attendance. The difficulty with Manager Ilg's plan is that not all theatres can arrange their bookings at a moment's notice. In this case, however, he seems to have allowed himself sufficient leeway to take advantage of news stories when they have reached the point of feverish curiosity.

The tie-up with the High School's R. O. T. C. Field Day proved the biggest business getter of the entire campaign. Moving pictures were taken of their manouevres and an arrangement was made whereby the pictures were to be shown at the Palace if they purchased 1,000 tickets at regular rates, which they did. They gave unusual publicity in the fact that they marched down in a body carrying signs announcing the picture and the theatre. This was a ballyhoo that woke up the town. While the pictures were being taken a ballyhoo truck announced to the crowds attending that the pictures would be shown at the Palace.

The presentation of Miss Marjorie Lamkin, a local artist, playing and singing her own composition, "A Million Years," resulted in much publicity. On this basis window displays were secured, one displaying a window of Gibson banjos, the instrument used by Miss Lamkin, the other window featuring copies of the sheet music. Each dealer expressed himself as more than pleased with the results from their standpoint.

Makes Own Effect Machines on "Town That Forgot God"

Macon, Ga.—Slowing up on "stunt" advertising, George A. McDermit, city manager for Southern Enterprises, hit upon a plan of presentation for "The Town That Forgot God" at the Rialto theatre that was new to Macon.

This presentation was based upon the storm scene in the picture, and consisted of scenic effects, lightning flashes, rolling thunder and driving rain and the whistling of furious winds.

These effects were contrived in the following manner:

The wind machine was made from barrel heads and staves and a sheet of canvas over that. A bass drum with buckshot inside, rolled back and forth, gave the effect of driving rain. Lightning flashes were produced by the use of a lightning stick made with an old file with taped wooden handle and a stick of carbon, which was attached to the light plug with an arrester, the latter borrowed from an electrical supply house. An old soap box, with broken bottles inside, served for the glass crash. Some old wire netting was tacked across the top of the box to prevent the glass from scattering. For thunder a piece of galvanized iron was used as a thunder sheet. And a wood crash was made from a rotary wheel with paddles. These effects were worked off stage during the storm scene, while the orchestra and organ played up to a grand crescendo. With the coming of the dawn and the showing of the illuminated cross the house was in absolute silence for a few moments, after which a singer off stage took up the hymn: "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Stunt Campaign Used to Boost "Prodigal Daughters" Run

Gadsden, Ala.—Manager A. L. Snell, of the Imperial theatre, incorporated a number of stunts in his "Prodigal Daughters" campaign.

Advance work consisted of sending out cards over his mailing list, window cards prominently displayed inside business places (not windows) and heralds distributed to members of the Business Women's Club, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs.

He also used the telephone stunt. When party answered they were asked: "Did you call 133?" And then they were told of the picture which was coming to the Imperial.

A ballyhoo was used on the street—"Blind man," with sign on his back reading: "I would give $1,000 if I could see," etc.

The frock and gown angle was stressed by a co-operative tie-up with two ladies' wear stores, each window carrying a display of up-to-date gowns, wraps and other ladies' wearing apparel attractive to the eyes of lady prospects. Cards read: "These are duplicates of costumes worn by Gloria Swanson in 'Prodigal Daughters.'"

Free Menus in Lunch Rooms on "Village Blacksmith"

WINNIPEG, MAN. — Inexpensive exploitation was obtained for "The Village Blacksmith" when it played the Lyceum theatre.

Letters were sent to the proprietors of a large number of the city's lunch counters and restaurants offering them free menus for the week of the presentation of the picture. This was accepted by more than 25 establishments in various sections of the city, and as a result every bill of fare exhibited in these places during the run bore the following at the bottom of each page: "For an Appetizer See 'The Village Blacksmith' at the Lyceum—The Best Picture in Town."

"Hunting Big Game" Campaign Staged Despite Handicaps

London, Eng.—Despite many obstacles in the way of police restrictions, an extensive campaign was put over for "Hunting Big Game in Africa," at the London Pavilion.

The exploitation was carried out by Edwin J. Smith, managing director of the Universal-Franchise Holders' European Motion Picture, Ltd., assisted by Robb Lawson, directing at the London Pavilion, and who designed the prologue in which Zulus took part dressed in leopard skins. The Zulus incidentally gave out balloons to all the children, much to their delight, at every performance. Hundreds of advertising balloons were released during the run of the picture and were received in remote sections of London and its environs.

Exploitation suffered greatly from the police who severely barred all "stunt" advertising on account of the congested condition of the London streets and the big crowds. Only sandwichmen were allowed. A circus parade, which included elephants, camels and leopards, etc., was stopped at the stable gates, a zoo on trucks met with the same fate, and even a harmless procession of Zulus and men in hunting outfit was barred. But sniping bills were resorted to with great success and a gang of men plied the 250,000 crowd at the Cup Final, Wembley Park, with circulars advertising the picture.

Manager Fakes Sea Atmosphere for "Fury" Lobby Display

Sumter, S. C.—When Oscar White, manager of the Rex theatre, set about to prepare a nautical lobby display on "Fury," he was handicapped by the fact that there were no marine accessories in Sumter, so he was forced to resort to ingenuity.

Several automobile tires were secured and each one wrapped with white cheese cloth, resulting in a good imitation of life savers. These were hung across the front of the lobby, the center of each being filled in with a picture of Richard Barthelmess.

Ladders were constructed of rope and suspended from the ceiling of the lobby, extending to the floor.

The main lights were cut off and a light working on a flasher proved an attention getter.

Of course, the other usual lobby accessories were used, as cut-outs and stills.

Human Interest Put in "Daddy" Co-operative Advertising

Omaha, Neb.—When Manager Julius K. Johnson of the Rialto theatre played "Daddy," he injected an unusual amount of human interest into a co-operative newspaper spread.

The co-operative page idea has been used before and so has the idea of getting six boys and girls to impersonate Jackie on the stage of the theatre and offering awards ranging from a season pass to a live pig for the best impersonators.

The novelty of the page came in the effort that was taken in making it up. The Buick agency went out of the beaten paths for its advertising material, digging up a picture of Jackie in his "scooter" that was not included in "Daddy," and added that when Jackie grew up he would drive a Buick sedan. A butcher store announced that "Mildred," the cute porker of "Daddy," would make a personal appearance.

An additional talking point was provided through a tie-up with an Omaha photographer. Heyn, who offered to make a free portrait of the boy and girl who won first award in the Jackie Coogan costume.

Cigar Store Tie-up Made to Aid "Mr. Billings"

BIRMINGHAM, A L A. — Manager Thomas G. Coleman, of the Galax theatre, took excellent advantage of the tie-up possibilities in "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime" when that picture played his house.

The one-sheet showing Mr. Billings spending his dime made a wonderful tie-up for a cigar store. And on this basis a window display was secured from the Burnett Cigar Store. One-sheet showing Mr. Billings in a restaurant made a good restaurant tie-up, and a window was secured from the Twentieth Street Cafe.

A tie-up was secured with Woolworth's. A special sale of dime tickets was put on by them. And three days in advance of showing they gave continuous publicity to this sale.

Definition Contest Put on to Boost "Go-Getter"

PORTLAND, Ore.—Special exploitation methods adopted by Gus A. Metzger, managing owner of the Rivoli theatre, in connection with the showing of "The Go-Getter," a Paramount feature, cost him $50 in prize money and 50 admissions to the theatre.

Metzger arranged with a newspaper for a contest through which would be selected the best definitions of "Go-Getter." The first prize winner, awarded $25, was:

"The man with the pep, the man with the punch, the man who acts when he gets the hunch—He is the Go-Getter."

Lighthouses on Marquee as "Fury" Exploitation

ATLANTA, GA.—Special exploitation efforts were made recently by Manager Willard C. Patterson, of the Metropolitan theatre during a Kiwanis convention, and the visiting crowds had only to follow the Metropolitan's lighthouses to find an evening's entertainment.

The picture was "Fury" and over the Metropolitan's large marquee were built two large wallboard lighthouses, electrically connected, and which flashed on intermittently. One was placed on each side of the marquee, and the ideal location of the Metropolitan only accentuated the effectiveness of this little display. Being located at the junction of three downtown streets, the display drew attention from each direction.

Motor Truck Ballyhoo Boost Run of "Souls for Sale"

Chicago, Ill.—For the showing of "Souls for Sale" at the Chicago theatre, Goldwynner Walter D. Nealand arranged for one of the biggest traveling billboard ballyhoos which that city had seen. This traveling billboard was 18 feet long and 7 feet high. The cab of the motor truck on which it was sent through the city for a period of three weeks was covered with a cutout of Eleanor Boardman from the poster of the picture, with the title "Souls for Sale" in white letters, 3 feet high. The rear part of the truck carried a big lettered sign advertising the picture. The truck was routed all over the city and parked in the vicinity of the various theatres within the city limits.

Boards of the elevated railway were used for this showing. Mr. Nealand devoted special attention to newspaper publicity and obtained good feature stories and pictures in much greater quantity than the Chicago newspapers usually accord a feature picture. The newspaper advertising appropriation was also increased for the engagement.

Cashes In on Circus Parade in Exploiting "Souls for Sale"

Springfield, Mo.—Kenton Franklin, exploitation manager for the Barbour Enterprises, made good use of a circus parade in exploiting "Souls for Sale" at Landers' Orpheum theatre.

Two thousand of the "How to get into the movies" envelopes originated by Goldwyn's exploitation department were distributed among the people gathered on the streets to watch the parade. The exploitation hangers for this film were attached to all automobiles which were parked on the streets, while the parade was in progress. The "Souls for Sale" 6-sheet was mounted on a truck and used at the tail end of the parade.

The "How to get into the movies" envelopes were also used in cafes, hotels, candy stores and other shops.

Two shoe stores and two drug stores gave full window displays for the picture; fourteen other stores used Goldwyn studio streamers, while 200 window cards were used in stores and tacked on buildings and fences.

The front of the theatre carried the 24-sheet cutout, two 3-sheet cut-outs, a shadow box and a mounted 24-sheet on top of the marquee, as well as photographs and stills. The one-sheets were also posted on the carnival buildings.

Fire Department Tie-up is Made to Aid "Gimme"

ST. PAUL, MINN.—An excellent tie-up with the fire department was made by Goldwynner Charlie Raymond to exploit "Gimme" when that picture played at the Tower theatre.

The Firemen's Relief Association was to get 50 per cent. of the money they received from the selling of tickets to the Tower theatre. To make the stunt more interesting as well as more successful financially, Mr. Raymond arranged with Chief Niles to have a contest among the different fire companies and give a number of free passes to the company selling the most tickets for the benefit.

The firemen of St. Paul had just organized a drum corps and they made their first public appearance at the Tower theatre during the run of "Gimme." As they marched to the theatre, two boys carried a banner in front announcing the picture, theatre, etc. This tie-up proved very valuable in arousing the interest of the people of St. Paul in the picture.

Marine Apparatus in Lobby on "Down to the Sea in Ships"

Jacksonville, Fla.—In all of his advertising on "Down to the Sea in Ships," Manager Guy Kenimer of the Arcade theatre stressed the unusualness of this picture. A little more than the usual amount of paper was posted in advance, specially designed insert cards were placed in fifteen downtown windows and displays were made in the leading hotels. The message was put over by slides on the screen, through the newspapers and by lobby display.

An unusually attractive lobby which did not cost one penny, the entire contents being loaned by a ship chandler, was effected by the grouping of every kind of sea paraphernalia. The entire ceiling was covered with a large fish net and in the center there was an attractive grouping of life rings, anchors, life belts and a coil of rope arranged around a large frame in which the title was prominent. Crossed oars were stacked around the sides of the lobby.

The ship chandler also loaned his window for a similar display, tho in addition it was decorated with a miniature sailing vessel, diving helmets, lanterns and a couple of stuffed fish. On each side of the window a brass frame containing art cards called attention to the picture and playing dates.

Capitalizes on News Event to Exploit "Within the Law"

Sandusky, Ohio.—George Schade, proprietor of Schade's theatre, frequently utilizes timely happenings to exploit his program.

Recently John Leonard Whitfield, escaped slayer of Patrolman Dennis Griffin, of Cleveland, Ohio, and his companion, Marie Price, were detected, after Whitfield had been sought in vain for some time, in Chicago, after they had gone to a picture show. The picture was "Within the Law," and practically every newspaper that had a story about Whitfield's detection and Miss Price's subsequent capture used the story about the pair having been to see "Within the Law."

Schade was about to run the feature and capitalized this lucky break of the news. He had copies of the newspaper paragraph struck off and used it with his own sales copy about how the picture had engrossed the two. A slide of this was used in the theatre in advance of the showing.

The implication was that the picture had caught their attention to such an extent that even the risk of recognition that they were running seemed of secondary consequence and that their eventual exposure was due to their interest in the film.

"Safety Last" Put Over with Inexpensive Campaign

Washington, D. C.—The showing of "Safety Last" at Crandall's Metropolitan theatre was put over by the publicity department, under the direction of Nelson M. Bell, at a minimum of expense.

On the Friday preceding the Sunday opening a two-column ad 90 agate lines deep was run in all of the papers announcing that beginning Sunday, the Metropolitan would offer "Seven Reels of Laughs and Gasps," "Bigger and Better than 'Grandma's Boy' and 'Dr. Jack Combined.'" Next day another two-column ad 70 agate lines deep reproduced a telegram from Harold Lloyd to Harry M. Crandall (bona fide).

On Sunday the smash ad was run in all of the local papers. The design was planned and the cut made to conform to Mr. Bell's ideas of the points to bring out most forcibly. The cut attractor was taken from one of the Pathe "stills" and showed Lloyd perched astraddle of a flag pole projecting from the side of a skyscraper many stories from the street, immediately above a large clock on the corner of the building with hands pointing to a quarter to three o'clock. The type selling talk was kept sufficiently remote from the attractor to maintain the impression of height and danger. The hour designated by the hands on the clock was utilized to emphasize the need of early attendance opening day to secure a seat, by use of the following line: "Come early! There won't be a vacant seat at 2:45 today!"

Elephant used as street stunt on "The Pilgrim" and "Bellboy 13" by Manager Cunningham of the Princess, Sioux City, Iowa

Elephant Aids "Pilgrim" and "Bellboy 13"

SIoux CITY, IOWA—Despite the usual difficulty of obtaining an elephant to exploit a show in which such an animal figures, one was used throughout the A. H. Blank chain in Iowa to exploit a show that had nothing to do with pachyderms.

The street ballyhoo started at the Princess theatre, Sioux City and the booking was a combined bill of "The Pilgrim" and "Bellboy 13."

Manager Cunningham made the tie-up with the one line: "It would make an elephant laugh to see Charles Chaplin in 'The Pilgrim' and Douglas MacLean in 'Bellboy 13' at the Princess."

"The Christian" Heralds Are Distributed by Grocer

Beverly, Mass.—The first grocery store tie-up to be reported on "The Christian" was made by J. M. Whitney, manager of the Larcum theatre, assisted by Buddy Stuart of the Boston office. The Larcum & Howard Grocery and Market inserted a herald on "The Christian" in every package leaving their market for a period of one week.

Ballyhoos have seldom if ever been attempted in Beverly, but Goldwynner Stuart, abetted by Manager Whitney, used "The Christian" book ballyhoo, made up like a window card, 2½ ft. wide, 5 ft. high and 8 in. thick, with lettering on both sides. It attracted the attention of everybody.

The Nathan H. Foster Company gave a special window tie-up which included a set of 11 x 14 stills, an oil painting, two especially prepared window cards and copies of the medium priced reprint of the novel.

One thousand of the Richard Dix cards, postal card size, were mailed out to prospective patrons. One thousand of the hangers prepared by the headquarters exploitation office were hung on automobiles, door-knobs, etc.

The lobby display consisted of two special one-sheets, one of which was given over to the New York newspaper criticisms of the picture, an oil painting and several of the 22 x 28 photographic enlargements.

Merchants Voluntarily Tie Up to Showing of "Daddy"

Council Bluffs, Iowa.—A notable instance of the growing prestige of motion pictures is the opening of the Broadway theatre under the management of Walter P. Davis. At least two dozen local merchants co-operated in a big advertising spread in the Council Bluffs Sunday Nonpareil congratulating both the theatre on its auspicious beginning and Council Bluffs on the completion of such a magnificent house. The point about the advertising is that it was done voluntarily. The movement started with the merchants themselves and was brought to consummation by them, the newspaper man being called in only after the campaign had been decided upon and then only to take the orders for advertising.

The opening attraction was "Daddy." Because of both the title and nature of the picture, it afforded a line of exploitation different from the usual run on Jackie's pictures. The good will evidence by the retail merchants was something that Manager Davis was quick to take advantage of.

He arranged twenty-five window display tie-ups all concentrating upon the exploitation possibilities of "Daddy." There were "razors for Daddy's birthday," "fountain pens for Daddy to write with," "shirts for Daddy" and "watches for Daddy." There was even a window card suggestion that Daddy should consider buying a new home, taking out life insurance and start a savings account. Daddy was practically invited to spend his money with one agency in every line of business Council Bluffs possessed.

Buffalo Briefs and Western New York Notes

E. O. WEINBERG is back home. "Eddie," as he is known to hosts of exhibitors and exchange men in western New York, has been appointed manager of the Buffalo exchange of Renown Pictures Corporation.

E. O. Weinberg

Mr. Weinberg succeeds Robert T. Murphy. Eddie has just resigned as manager of the State theatre in Schenectady, N. Y., to which house he went from the Mark-Strand in Buffalo. Mr. Weinberg has been in the exhibitorial end of the business for many years. He has been manager of the Elmwood, Buffalo and other houses. He has been unusually successful at every theatre he has managed. His return to Buffalo as an exchange manager will be a big surprise, but a welcome one.

The corner of East and Elm street is a popular spot these days in Lockport, N. Y., and many hundreds pause to watch the progress being made in the construction of the new theatre being built by Lock City Theatres, Inc., a unit of Associated Theatres, Inc., of which Harold P. Dygert is the president. Especially is this so of visitors to the city, who express surprise and admiration at the proportions of the stage. The foundations have been laid and afford a clear conception of the wide entrance, spacious orchestra pit, store sites and general dimensions of the building which is to occupy the entire site of 107 feet on East avenue and 159 feet on Elm street. It will be a structure to cause civic pride on the part of Lockport. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,840. The contract for interior decorating has been given to the William H. Malby & Sons company of Corning, N. Y. The seats will be purchased from the Steel Furniture Company of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Howard Waugh, who for many years has been putting over unusual exploitation stunts in Jamestown, N. Y., where he has been employed by Peterson & Woods, has resigned from that organization and is now devoting his time to publicity work at Celeron Park on Lake Chautauqua. The new Palace in the Chautauqua city has closed for the summer. So has the Mozart. The Wintergarden will continue all season with pictures. All three are owned and operated by Peterson & Woods.

William Marsh, of the Pathe home office, is in Buffalo installing a new shipping and poster system at the local exchange. Louis Schindler, Pathe cashier, has purchased a new Ford touring car. If the home office sees this item there will be an auditor up sure, although Louis may have bought it out of his last bonus check. Manager W. A. V. Mack spent several days last week in Rochester. A. W. Smith, special representative for Pathe, was in Buffalo this week to confer with Manager Mack.

Fellow film men, meet Harry E. Thompson. Associated Exhibitors' sales manager in the Buffalo territory. Harry is now not only sales manager, but sales staff, yes, and everything else around the A. E. office in the Pathe exchange. Harry came to Buffalo a year ago after being associated with Hodkinson as supervisor of the Albany and Buffalo territories. He was at one time in the producing end of the business and like all millionaires in this country, he has his home on Long Island. Harry's mansion is at Patchogue. Just now he is putting Associated Exhibitors' products on the western New York map one hundred per cent.

Our old friend "Gus" Carrick who recently resigned as Buffalo branch manager for Hodkinson is reported to have connected up with Select as a district manager.

George Williams of the Olympic, Buffalo, has arranged a Baby Peggy double contest in co-operation with the Evening Times for the week of June 17. A child actress has been engaged for the week to edit the juvenile page of the Times and to appear at each show in stage characterizations and introduce the contestants. An eight-page section of the Times on the 17th will be devoted to a tie-up with local merchants, who will offer prizes. There will also be a full page of Baby Peggy pictures in the rotogravure section. The winners will visit all the theatres of the city as an advertising stunt for Baby Peggy. The Olympic is a Universal house.

Samuel Gallo, who has been operating the Strand theatre in Indiana, Pa., is now sleuthing about Buffalo looking over the theatre situation with a view to purchasing a house.

George Hallett has been appointed city sales representative in Buffalo for Bond Photoplays corporation. Mr. Hallett has been in Albany.

Bebe Daniels spent this week in Buffalo. She was appearing in person at the Lafayette Square theatre where she attracted overflow business every day, both afternoon and evening. No weather too warm for such an attraction as this one. Bebe put on a song and dance act, appearing in some of those startling gowns in which we see her on the screen.

Maurice Cohen, Esq., charter member of the Knights of the Leaping Tin-Types and multimillionaire, has consented to do a little work and is now connected with the Buffalo Select exchange as a sales representative. Maurice recently resigned as manager of the Warner Brothers' office in Buffalo. He has been with them all in his day.

C. C. Young, formerly manager of the Regent in Geneva, N. Y., is now in charge of all booking for Associated Theatres, Inc., of East Rochester, N. Y.

Cass Stahley, of the Rosegarden theatre, Rochester, is spending his vacation fishing at Tupper Lake, in the Adirondacks.

Associated Theatres, Inc., has commenced work on their new theatre on the site of the former national bank in Bath, N. Y.

Manager A. L. Skinner recently put on a movie star photo contest in co-operation with the West Side Shopping News. Art printed pictures of the stars in his ad. To those who pasted these photos on cardboard in the best layout with the correct names printed underneath, he offered valuable prizes. The stunt created much interest and Art received a barrel of layouts. The first prize, a season pass to the Victoria, went to Laurence King, 309 Auburn avenue.

Introducing Arthur Young, the new assistant manager at the Universal exchange in Buffalo. Art was formerly booked for Nu-Art and Bond exchanges. He has been connected with almost all of the local exchanges in his day. He is one of the real veterans of the exchange business in this neck of the woods. He was with Victor Film Service, the old "U" exchange for over eight years. Mr. Young has booked pictures so long that he does it in his sleep. Although he has been a knight of the leaping tintypes for many years, he has not yet learned how to work less than eighteen hours a day. The writer once met Art going to work at 7 A.M. But some day he'll land at the top. Mr. Young knows every exhibitor from Buffalo to Albany and from Malone to Binghamton. They'll all be glad to hear of his promotion.

Art Young

Manager Atlas has reduced prices for the summer at the Lumberg theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y. The Lumberg is an exclusive Paramount house.

Mrs. Angeline M. Hens Sheehan, widow of Jeremiah F. Sheehan and mother of Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager and vice-president of the Fox Film corporation, is dead in Buffalo. She is also survived by Clayton P. Sheehan, eastern division sales manager; Howard J. Sheehan, Pacific Coast sales manager, and Norman A. Sheehan, supervisor of the Buffalo exchange, all of the Fox company and a daughter, Estella S. Sheehan, a Buffalo school teacher. Mrs. Sheehan has resided in Buffalo for almost 70 years. She was born in Germany.

Sid Allen, of the Allen theatre, Medina, N. Y., is a vice-president, a director and chairman of the finance committee of the M. P. T. O. A. No wonder Medina is getting famous.

The city of Corning and Associated Theatres, Inc., of East Rochester, N. Y., are made defendants in the action brought by Mrs. Bertha E. Brewster of Corning to recover $5,000 for injuries alleged to have been suffered in a fall in front of the State theatre, Corning. She claims she broke her leg and that her injury is permanent.

One of the fellows who escaped the recent upheaval in Buffalo's Film Row is E. J. Hayes, manager of the First National exchange, prince of good fellows and golf player extraordinary. "Eddie" has been in the film business way back to the old General Film days. In fact, he was assistant manager of the General Film exchange in Buffalo when Joseph A. Schuchert was manager. Ed has been with First National now for many years and each year the office is getting bigger in business as well as personnel. Right now Mr. Hayes has signed up some fat contracts in Buffalo and Rochester and we wouldn't be a bit surprised if E. J. traded in his coupe-sedan for one of the new Packard straight eights.

View of the Metro Exchange in Boston

Theatre and Exchange Briefs from Canada

ON top of the acquisition of Allen theatres by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, of which N. L. Nathanson is managing director, comes the announcement that Mr. Nathanson is securing the Canadian distribution rights of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan-Distinctive releases for Regal Films, Limited, of which he is also the active head.

Regal Films, Limited, already controls the Canadian distribution of Metro, Pathe and other well-known American and English features. Regal has its head office in Toronto and branches in Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. The Regal company, in securing Goldwyn productions, has obtained a brand of releases which has been handled in the Dominion for years by Famous Players Film Service, Limited, Toronto, an Allen organization.

An interesting development in moving picture circles of the Canadian West has been the permanent installation of Pantages vaudeville in the Capitol theatre, Calgary, Alberta, the leading theatre in that city of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation. Since the Capitol was opened, several years ago, the policy of the house provided for the presentation of moving pictures exclusively, in competition with Allen's Palace and the Allen theatre, the latter being one of the first large houses to be opened by Jule and J. J. Allen. For some time past, the Calgary Capitol was managed by John Hazza, who is now the Western Canadian manager for Famous Players Canadian Corp. with headquarters in Winnipeg. James Adams was recently appointed manager of the Capitol at Calgary.

Clarence Tremblay, for many years an exhibitor at Fort William, Ontario, has gone to Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he has become manager of the Province theatre one of the large downtown moving picture theatres. Mr. Tremblay is well known among Winnipeg exhibitors, having been a member of the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors Association for years. Tremblay always made it a point to attend the annual meetings of this association, although operating a theatre in Northern Ontario, a considerable distance from Winnipeg.

Matthew Nolan has reopened the old Capitol theatre at Glace Bay, N. S., in the heart of the mining district, and has been doing a good business. Mr. Nolan formerly operated the Russell theatre which was destroyed by fire some time ago.

Basil Horsfall, formerly of Montreal, has taken over His Majesty's theatre, Sherbrooke, Quebec, and is managing the house personally. Mr. Horsfall was identified for some time with the distribution of English productions in Canada and also has managed one or two theatres in Montreal during his lengthy career. For a period recently he was manager of Magnet, Films, Limited, Montreal, handling various lines of pictures which have not been taken over by Equity Pictures Corporation, Montreal, for release in Ontario through the Canadian Exhibitors Exchange, Toronto, and in the Maritime Provinces through the Canadian Releasing Corporation.

W. E. Allen has resigned as manager of the Montreal office of the Canadian Educational Film Company, Limited, to go to New York where he has secured a appointment.

Charles A. Branham of Toronto, general supervisor of theatres for the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, and Mrs. Branham, arrived in Winnipeg, Manitoba, on June 5 to make a general survey of the moving picture theatre situation in Winnipeg, where the corporation now has four large theatres.

Walter Golding, proprietor of the Imperial theatre, St. John, N. B., and Mrs. Golding were in the party which accompanied Miss Winnifred Blair of St. John, who won the "Miss Canada" contest at Montreal last winter, on a special salmon fishing trip to Cain's River recently. The party spent eight days in camp.

The City of Calgary is now officially engaged in the moving picture theatre business, among other activities of a municipal nature. Starting June 4, the civic corporation is operating the Variety theater, the Land Department of the city being in direct control of the house, Ralph Crichton, the city land agent, having been appointed manager of the enterprise. The Variety has an exclusive picture policy, the first feature selected by Manager Crichton being Jackie Coogan's "Peek's Bad Boy." Admission prices are 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. Matinees are given daily.

Two employees of the Montreal branch of the Fox Film Corporation were the joint winners of the film stars' picture puzzle contest which has been conducted by the Montreal Standard, the fortunate pair dividing a prize of $500 between them. W. R. Mitchell, the booker, was one of the successful contestants, the other being the office stenographer. The Standard published partial portraits of film players every Saturday for 20 weeks.

Portland, Ore., Exhibitor and Exchange News

PORTLAND'S annual rose festival, a three-day intensive celebration, will pit outdoor entertainment against the screen varieties all next week in bidding for the attention of pleasure seekers who flock into Portland from all parts of the Northwest. To attract a reasonable share of such patronage the picture theatres are presenting elaborate programs and the one road show house, denied a spoken drama for the week, is offering a picture feature.

Portland will be headquarters for motion picture news cameramen on July 4 when President Harding will be in the city, en route to Alaska, and will here deliver his memorial day address. On the previous day the chief executive and the governors of five states will be at Meacham, Ore., to take part in the Old Oregon Trail pageant at Top o' Blue Mountains. International and Pathe News are sure to have cameramen at both places and Selznick's man will, in all probability, be on hand, together with Fox and several independent photographers.

Milton Hertz, organist, has been installed at the manual of the Hippodrome theatre instrument by Manager W. W. Ely.

Paul Noble, manager of the Liberty theatre, Thursday submitted his resignation as secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' league of Oregon, an organization that includes most of the exhibitors in the state. Noble is absent on vacation, but in his absence the resignation was accepted and Charles W. Koerner, manager of the Associated First National exchange, was elected to the vacancy. Noble has been secretary since the league was organized several years ago. He gave no reason for the move.

Miss Myrtle Forbes, popular secretary to C. S. Jensen, head of the firm of Jensen & Von Herberg, is missing from her office. Meanwhile she is enjoying a vacation at beach resorts.

Ralph Piclow, manager of the Portland Goldwyn exchange, returned last Friday from Atlantic City, N. J., where he attended the big Goldwyn convention. Piclow has been in charge of Goldwyn business here since May 1, having been transferred from the Seattle office, whose staff he joined after leaving Hodkinson. He was with Hodkinson in the local territory two years ago. Walter Eltris, former manager of the Portland exchange, has been assigned to the sales staff of the Seattle office, and is covering the Spokane exhibitor territory.

Robert Marsden, who owns the Noble theatre at Marshfield, Oregon's leading coast town, was in Portland this week spreading the news of the opening of his new Blue Mouse theatre in the same city and buying a fine new automobile with the money he had left over after building the Blue Mouse. The new theatre, said to be one of the finest in the state outside of Portland, and thoroughly equipped, will be opened on June 30, Marsden believes. He secured permission from John Hamrick to use the name Blue Mouse, which is copyrighted and which the Hamrick theatres in Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and Astoria bear.

Melvin G. Winstock manager of the L. B. Brin exchange, handling Warner Bros., productions in the Oregon field, is resting on his oars and the Seattle exchange is enjoying the services of the Portland territory's road salesman. Winstock reports that the Oregon territory is 90 per cent sold and that there's nothing else to do until some new pictures are released.

Several Portland lunch clubs are bidding for motion picture programs following the success of the one presented before the Portland Ad club a week ago under the direction of Melvin G. Winstock. Two minute addresses by exhibitors and exchange men marked the hour of the meeting and, in case Winstock is prevailed upon to get into action again, he will have something of an elaborate nature to offer, he says. The Portland Film Board of Trade sponsored the Ad club program and will have charge of others that may be arranged.

Portland, Ore.—What is said to have been the most expensive musical supplement ever offered in connection with a motion picture program in a Portland theatre was the Chaffferelli band concert present at the Liberty theatre Sunday noon, June 10. Chaffferelli, a noted director, had a group of 40 musicians on the stage for more than half an hour and presented a varied program which included his own "March No. 1." The concert was arranged by A. C. Raleigh, who is in charge of the Liberty in the absence of Manager Paul Noble. Henri Kcates, whose Sunday noon organ concerts have been an attractive feature at the Liberty, also is away, spending a vacation in Chicago and the band was called in substitution. Raleigh undertook an extensive advertising campaign, stressing the 11 o'clock opening of the theatre, in order to make the first show of the day pay dividends with the heavy expense attached to it by reason of the band.

Trade Jottings from Central Pennsylvania

THE fact that Harrisburg has not adopted the daylight saving time schedule this year, coupled with the remarkably cool weather during the last spring and early part of the summer, is said to have been reflected quite favorably in the box office receipts of the motion picture theatres of the city. While last year, when daylight saving was in effect in Harrisburg, several theatres closed for the summer months, there has been no announcement as yet that any Harrisburg picture house plans to close its doors during the present summer. The Orpheum theatre, a Wilmer & Vincent house which is devoted to legitimate productions and stock company performances, has been closed after a very successful season of stock by the Orpheum Players, which lasted for several months. It is understood the Orpheum will remain "dark" during the summer, as is its annual custom.

After having been operated for more than thirty years, by various interests, as a theatre for the "legit," the Grand Opera House, Wilkes-Barre, is to be devoted to motion pictures, by the Comerford Amusement Company, which has acquired control of it.

Contractors are rushing the final work on the $350,000 Victoria theatre which is being erected by the Chamberlain Amusement Company, in Mt. Carmel. It is expected to be ready for occupancy in a few weeks. A feature of the construction of this theatre is to be the placing of three boulevard light standards at three street corners in proximity to the house.

A. M. Eisner, president of the newly-formed Kansas City division of the M. P. T. O. A.

It is reported that the M. E. Comerford interests will soon begin the erection of a new picture theatre in Northumberland. The Palace theatre, recently destroyed in that city, was a Comerford house.

On May 24, Mrs. Christina Knoblauch, owner of the Family theatre, Mahanoy City, celebrated her 85th birthday anniversary. She is said to be the oldest theatre owner in the State of Pennsylvania.

Norman G. Hoffman has resigned his position as doorman of the Colonial theatre, Allentown, to accept a post with the Estey Organ Company, in Philadelphia.

Coane & Pizer, owners of the Colonial theatre, Phoenixville, have purchased the Royersford opera house from John Courduff, and will assume control on July 1.

The Strand theatre, Lancaster, hereafter will be managed by Arthur G. Snyder, who formerly managed the Scenic theatre, at York. Joseph H. Snyder, his brother, who has been managing the Hippodrome, in York, will succeed him as manager of the Scenic. The management of the Hippodrome will be assumed by Ed. R. Moore, who goes to York from the Oneonta theatre, Oneonta, N. Y. The Hippodrome was recently purchased from the Snyder & Bennethum interests by Nathan Appell, who controls several picture houses in York.

The Orpheum theatre, York, and the York Opera House, have been closed for part of the summer. They will be reopened in August.

J. B. Dugger is the new manager of the Famous Players-Lasky house at Dallas, Texas, having been transferred from Detroit, Mich., where he was local manager. He is an able Paramount man, having held the management of their house in Indianapolis, Ind., before going to Detroit. Several years ago he was with the Vitagraph people at Dallas and very popular in film circles.

In a hearing before the city council at Guthrie, Okla., May 29, petitions calling for an election to close all moving picture shows and theatres on Sunday and pool halls permanently was held to be insufficient and not in compliance with the law, and the matter was dismissed. The application with a new petition will be renewed at a later date.

Around Memphis Photoplay Trade Circles

C. A. McELRAVY, general manager of the C. Consolidated Enterprises, Inc., has returned from a week's vacation spent in New Orleans. He was accompanied by Mrs. McElravey and two daughters.

Louis Cohen of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., Atlanta, was a business visitor in Memphis during the past week.

Miss Julia Dawn, who has been playing vaudeville for the past few years and who is a soprano of no mean ability, as well as an organist, has forsaken the stage to become organist at Loew's Palace theatre. She has made several daily appearances in solo numbers at the Palace since signing her contract.

With the final concert Sunday, May 27, Loew's Palace theatre has discontinued for the summer months the Sunday symphony concerts. These concerts, which have proven highly gratifying to both the management and the patrons, have been under the supervision of Dave Love, director. The regular Palace orchestra of 18 pieces, under Mr. Love's direction, continues as heretofore.

The special children's matinees at the Majestic theatre, which have been the cause of about 600 children attending the special performances on Saturday mornings, will not be discontinued this summer. Last year the final matinees were given at the close of school, but it is intended to run the special matinee throughout the summer as an experiment.

Several Memphis theatres are complaining of the loss of negro porters during the past month. Practically every theatre in Memphis has felt the influence of labor agents who are sending negroes north. However, it is expected that 90 per cent of them will return in the fall, as was the case last year.

Work on the construction of the new Famous Players-Lasky exchange at Linden and Front streets is progressing rapidly. It is hoped to have the distributing point ready for operation early in August. This makes the third film exchange in Memphis, the others being maintained by Pathe and Universal.

Music Week, just concluded at Loew's Palace theatre, under the direction of Harold Horne, manager, proved to be a distinctive novelty. The program of the Palace was varied from day to day, and during the week a large number of local artists were presented. The lobby of the theatre was made into an exposition of musical instruments.

Booth Tarkington's "Penrod and Sam," a First National attraction, will show some real "kid" stuff.

TRADE

MARK

In and Out of the Des Moines Exchanges

INTRODUCING Dan Burgum, one of Des Moines' most popular motion picture theatre managers, you meet one of the pioneers of the picture business. Mr. Burgum, who for the past ten years has been manager of the Garden theatre in Des Moines and was associated for a year longer than that with A. H. Blank Enterprises, on the first week of June took the managership of the Rialto theatre, which is to be promoted as a first run theatre competing with the biggest theatres in the city. Considerable of Mr. Burgum's success has been ascribed to the fact that he has made friends of his patrons. He believes in being in the lobby to receive the complaints as well as the commendations of the picture fans. And he has never run a bill that he would not consider fit for his own family to see.

Dan Burgum

Jess Day, previously manager of the Palace theatre, Des Moines, assumes new responsibility this week as manager also of the Garden theatre. It is contemplated that a change of policy may be introduced at the Garden theatre. Mr. Day takes the place of Dan Burgum, who is now manager of the Rialto theatre, also a Locust Street house. The Garden and Palace, which are side by side, have always been strong competitors though running different types of pictures.

Mr. Overman, who has been manager of the Rialto theatre for the past two months, will stay with the A. H. Blank organization, but will assume the position of manager of the Garden theatre in Davenport. Mr. Overman also acted as booking manager for Blank.

It is rumored that the Capitol theatre, the new theatre in the Commonwealth building, which will be completed this summer, will open for Fair Week in Des Moines. Vaudeville and pictures will be the combination bill at this house, it is expected.

Dorothy Schlesinger, a Des Moines girl, who has been dancing with "Better Times" in New York, made quite a hit on the bill at the Strand theatre last week as the Jazzmania Jazz Doll. Her professional name is Georgie Burke.

F. L. Davie, manager of the Des Moines branch of the Universal, covered several key towns in the state and found conditions only a little below normal. Exhibitors throughout the state say that the outlook for summer business is fine.

C. T. Michener has followed Horace Greeley's advice and left the Metro office in Cleveland to come west to Des Moines, where he is now connected with the booking staff of the Universal exchange.

W. H. Strickland of the Pathe exchange is spending the week-end in Burlington. Mr. Strickland has been on the road for the past two weeks.

Visiting the Famous Players exchange this week is R. A. Schular, special representative in the advance sales department.

Spark Plug is what L. V. Clements, booker for the Famous Players, is calling his new ten-pound boy, who, while not yet as strong on his legs as old Sparky, shows promise of being a world beater just the same.

Famous Players have added two new stenographers to their office force. They are Miss Louise Wallensack, stenographer for the booking and accounting department, and Miss Lucille Moellar, stenographer for the advance sales department.

James Boyle of the First National exchange is in town this week looking for a new theatre location.

The Crystal theatre at Cedar Rapids, Ia., has been purchased by Joe Jacobson, who was formerly connected with the A. H. Blank Enterprises.

Paul O. Roby from Williamsburg, Ia., and manager of the Latona theatre, is visiting in town this week.

James McGovern, former office manager of the Film Booking Office, is now on the road.

Harry Weinberg of the Associated First National exchange states that up to the present time very few theatres have closed for the summer season, and from all appearances the small town exhibitors are going to experience the best summer business in the past three years.

W. C. Fenter, salesman out of the Des Moines Universal office, had an automobile wreck last week. His car was very badly smashed and he received a wound on his forehead.

The Universal Des Moines exchange is expecting to move some time in August to a new location on Tenth and High streets. They are going to indulge in entirely new equipment for the whole office force.

Washington Film Row and Theatre Brevities

THE film exchange managers entertained all salesmen and bookers Saturday noon, June 2, at lunch at the Harrington Hotel room where the F-I-L-M Board meets. The meeting was for the discussion of such vital matters as "Uniform Contracts" and "Ethics of Film Salesmanship."

Interesting and instructive talks were made by George Roberts, manager for Fox Films here; F. L. McName, F. B. O. manager; and Harry Hunter, Famous Players manager.

All large and small state right exchanges in the territory were represented among the 100 present.

George E. Roberts, local Fox manager, is to spend ten days or two weeks out of the city, as he will be in attendance on the Fox managers' convention at New York, and will visit the northern part of the territory on his way back.

Former Manager Craerin of Poli's theatre is understood to be acting as opening month manager for the new Takoma Park theatre to open about July 15.

Eugene Wilson, former Vitagraph manager and now selling Virginia for the Fox interests, reports that the new film theatre at South Hill, Va., is nearing completion. This house will be very attractive and will seat 800.

During Mr. Beaver's absence on account of his father's sudden death at his Pennsylvania home, Special Representative Paul J. Swift of the New York office has been looking after the local interests of the Al Lichtman organization.

R. D. Craver of Oasis Temple and a prominent Tarheel exhibitor of Charlotte, N. C., was a Film Row visitor between parades and entertainments.

Shrine guests of Noble Sidney B. Lust at his new home here included Mr. and Mrs. Harry McNiven of Richmond (prominently connected with the Wells enterprises), Mrs. Harry Bernstein, who would not miss a parade:

W. S. Wilder and Mrs. Wilder of the Norva, Norfolk; and D. P. Wine of Harrisonburg, Va.

I. Weinberg of Lexington, Va., was a Shriner Film Row visitor during the week.

Miss Helen Ullman, operating the Ullman's opera house at Salisbury, Md., was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes of the Holmes bakery here during Shrine week.

Leo G. Garner, exploiter for Sidney Lust, left last Friday for Richmond and Norfolk to put on an extensive campaign for the week runs of "Deserted at the Altar."

Paramount stags dined at the New Ebbitt June 1 in compliment to R. Sulley, who will soon be a year older than he was then. Manager Harry Hunter, S. R.; A. C. Benson of New York and Washington offices, sales chief; Fred Meyers and other film regulars were on deck. A gold watch was presented to Mr. Sulley, and vocal selections and solos were given by Sulley and Boucher with instrumental renditions for variety.

Manager George Fuller of the local Metro exchange has returned from the convention of Metro executives in New York.

E. J. Stutz turned the other cheek to his church folk opposition in Chevy Chase recently. He turned the house over for a day to the three churches, who put on a program of film subjects of an educational nature.

Two new salesmen are to be added to the sales force of J. H. Marks, covering Progress Pictures exhibitors in Maryland and Virginia, from the Washington office.

All Crandall musicians and house attaches blossomed out at last Sunday's performance in fresh new Palm Beaches. N. B. Bell says that the heat wave would have "from sheer temperature caused 'em to pass out, if heavy woollens were still worn."

A. Warner of Warner Bros. announced the appointment of Milton Simon as manager of the Washington exchange of Independent films of Philadelphia, local representatives of the Warner product. Former Manager Beiersdorff resigned last week to enter the newly enlarged Selznick distribution organization under Brother Beiersdorff and Manager Louis Reichert. Simon was formerly with the Robinson-Cole F. B. O. offices here, and more recently has been manager of the St. Louis exchange of F. B. O. Mr. Warner also approved the appointment of a new salesman, Mr. Ayers, formerly with the Goldwyn Distribution Corporation, as a member of the Warner Bros. local force.

Mather Building regulars are well stocked with cigars on account of the recent arrival, at the home of Manager Joe Young of Federated Films, of a baby daughter. The boys asked Noble Joe if she'd be called "Alma" on account of Almas temple, of which Joe is a member. No, sir, he'd call her "Almas."

Children now pay 15c to see the pictures in the Crandall Central in place of the adult charge of 25c.

Following a visit to New York for the film trade golf tournaments, Bill Moore of the Rialto admits that he managed to play a round of golf with Editor Johnston of the M. P. News. And Tom Moore, who also golfs, got the Exhibitors' cup, which seems to be a favorite trophy of the old-time showman. Then they felt tough enough to motor back to Washington.

Leslie Kay Doyle, a theatre pipe organist, well known in Chicago and the Middle West, last week was appointed to the position of concert organist at Crandall's Apollo theatre, Northeast, to succeed Stanley W. Rhoades, transferred to the console of the new triple-manual instrument recently installed at Crandall's Avenue Grand theatre. Mr. Doyle comes to the Apollo from the Oakely theatre in Chicago.

Theatre and Film Row Items from Cleveland

ROBERT COTTON, local Fox exchange manager and president of the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland, made a big hit in Mt. Vernon last Thursday, where he went to make an address before the Chamber of Commerce. Cotton chose "Better Pictures" as his topic. He spoke not as a representative of the producers, and not in his official capacity as president of the Film Board of Trade, but as a spectator who is diagnosing present motion picture conditions. Maurice Lebensberger, manager of the Standard Film Service Co.; Tom Colby, Universal exchange manager, and E. Mandelbaum, president of the First National Exhibitors' Co. of Ohio, accompanied Mr. Cotton to Mt. Vernon and listened to the talk.

Edward Vanderhof, for the past three years head booker of the Cleveland Goldwyn exchange, has just been promoted to the position of office manager of the Cleveland office.

Nat Baruch, local Goldwyn exchange manager, spent the week out in the territory, not selling, but just acquainting the exhibitors with the fall Goldwyn product and the fall Goldwyn policies.

J. A. Koerpel, central Goldwyn division manager, stopped off in Cleveland on his tour of the territory last Friday, and left the same night by boat for Detroit.

Richard Weil has joined the Cleveland Progress Pictures family and will make this his headquarters for some time while he is putting over exploitation on "The Streets of New York" in northern Ohio.

J. S. Jossey, president of Progress Pictures, and H. Hirsch, his associate, are out in the territory this week—but not together. Jossey is calling on the exhibitors in the southern part of the state, and Hirsch is combing the northern section. Eventually they will meet and compare results.

Norman C. Vibbard, manager of the Cincinnati branch of the Progress Pictures Co., spent the week-end in the Cleveland office.

Norman Moray, Pathe exchange manager, went up to Toledo last week to meet the old home folks. Moray springs from Toledo soil. He renewed old associations with Martin C. Smith, with whom he used to shoot marbles, and looked up a lot of other pals, many of whom have drifted into the picture business.

H. A. Bandy, central western First National division manager, president at a one-day sales convention, which was held in Cleveland last Sunday at the Hotel Cleveland. About forty were present, including exchange managers and salesmen from Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Cleveland. R. H. Clark, eastern division manager, and Roy Seer, mid-western division manager, were guests of the Cleveland office. The object of the gathering was to announce the fall First National product and to outline the fall policies.

Abe Warner of the Warner productions was in Cleveland last Thursday and was being chaperoned around town by Harry Charnas of the Standard Film Service Co.

George Revells, manager of the Cinderella theatre, Coshocton, was in the city last week, giving dates on previously booked First National pictures.

James Dunlavey of the Strand theatre, Akron, was in town last Monday to attend a meeting of the Joint Arbitration Board, of which he is one of three exhibitor members. Dunlavey says that the Joint Arbitration Board is not only in operation, but that it's hitting on all cylinders.

Nat Charnas left the Strand theatre, Toledo, to the mercies of a burning sun while he made a short visit to the shores of Lake Erie in Cleveland.

E. F. Reynard, head of the Marion Theatres' Corporation, controlling the Orpheum and Oakland theatres in Marion, brought his booking sheet and a sharp pencil to Cleveland last Wednesday and made a tour of the exchanges.

T. G. Evans of the Van Wert Amusement Co., which operates the Strand and Lyric theatres, Van Wert, was a guest of the local exchanges one day this week.

Jim Scoville and Percy Essick constitute two-thirds of the firm of Scoville, Essick & Reiff, who operate a chain of ten or more neighborhood motion picture houses in Cleveland. Because Reiff is putting on weight, Scoville and Essick have kindly consented to turn over the active management of their houses to Reiff while they devote their time to golf. It's a fine division of labor.

It is reported that the American theatre at Elyria closes June 16th for the summer.

Speaking of Bill Raynor reminds us that there was a fire in Reade's Hippodrome one day last week. It started in the projection booth. A jet of flame shot out across the auditorium and frightened a lot of people, but the organist kept right on playing until the audience was sufficiently soothed to go out quietly. Several thousand dollars' damage occurred. Defective wiring was given as the cause of the fire.

Middlefield, a little town in Ohio, about 40 miles from Cleveland, is a great amusement center. About 60 per cent of the population belongs to a religious sect which bans motion pictures and automobiles and makes marriage at the age of 21 compulsory. Yet, in spite of this condition, where's an exhibitor who has the temerity to open a picture house in Middle-field for two nights each week. He's playing regular pictures, and is making money.

Leo Selznick, connected with the local office of the American Releasing Corporation until that company's amalgamation with Select, is now managing a summer resort motion picture house at Mentor Beach, a lakeside resort about 20 miles from Cleveland.

Emile Gerstle, manager of Loew's Valentine theatre, Toledo, has started off on a four weeks' vacation trip through the Maine woods to shoot the elusive deer.

A. C. Hoganson, general manager of the Pantheon and Alhambra theatres, Toledo, is reported ill with ulcers of the stomach.

Howard Feigley, manager of Toledo's Rivoli theatre, told Norman Moray, Pathe exchange manager, that business was never better than it is today. If it were not generally known that the Rivoli is one of the most successful motion picture houses operating in the northern part of the state, Feigley's statement might be ambiguous.

Art Himmlein, manager of the Plaza, Toledo, is in New York.

W. E. Price of the Linwood Square theatre, Norwalk, says business is punk, but he's trying to forget all about it in the pursuit of the ever-vanishing golf ball.

Lemotto Smith of the Columbia theatre, Alliance, was here the end of the week and treated his interested listeners to a post-convention review of events.

Now we are going to find out just how much truth there is in this much-talked of power of the screen. Fifty-two local motion picture theatres have withdrawn all of their advertising from one of the leading daily newspapers because it sponsored a movement that hurt the business in those houses. The theatres say that they are doing just as much business as they did when they advertised every day. We are now waiting to learn if circulation of that particular daily has fallen off any since the withdrawal of those ads.

The Royal theatre, Akron, has notified local exchanges that it is closed for the summer months.

The Strand theatre, Maumee, formerly owned by Smith & Mouen, has been purchased by Messrs. Martin and Mouen.

Park C. Beatty is building a beautiful new 500-seat house in Carrollton and will have it ready to open early in August.

Included in the list of motion picture theatres which are closing for the summer are the King theatre, Cleveland, closing June 3; Princess, Kent, on June 10; Golden Eagle, Cleveland, on June 4; Rex, Toronto, June 10; and Rex, Youngstown, on June 25.

Photoplay Personals and Events in Southeast

WITH the city of Atlanta thronged with visitors attending the International Kiwanis convention, the theatres of the city enjoyed record business during the past week. The Howard and Metropolitan both reported banner business, as well as the Forsyth, Rialto and Grand. Exceptional programs for the entertainment of the throngs of visitors had been arranged by every manager.

The new Paramount exchange for Memphis, Tenn., will be open by July 1st and the Jacksonville office by August 1st, according to announcement by Fred Creswell, district manager of Famous Players who has just returned from an extensive tour of all exchanges and territories in the Southeastern states. Mr. Creswell announces that as managers for both of the new exchanges, men will be recruited from the sales force of Paramount, it being the policy of this organization to fill all such positions through promotions from their own ranks of employees. All employees who will open the two new branches are now being coached in other exchanges of the organization. New buildings are being constructed for both the Memphis and Jacksonville branches it is also announced.

C. O. Mos of Norfolk, Va., has leased the Lahoma Theatre, Gibsonville, North Carolina, from C. W. Overman, who has conducted it for the past ten years. After extensive alterations it will be renamed the Haven Theatre and will reopen under the management of A. M. Hardin.

Enrico Leide, director of presentation at the Howard theatre, Atlanta, had the honor of leading the Yaarab Million Dollar band at the Shriner convention in Washington.

Dr. F. E. Webb, of Piedmont, Alabama, announces the early completion of a 500-seat theatre in that town. He visited Atlanta the past week to arrange for film service.

E. F. Lae, of Sanford, Florida, and W. D. Patrick of Elba, Alabama, were among the theatre owners attending the Kiwanis convention last week.

Robert J. Murray, manager of the Charlotte Fox office was married on Thursday of last week to Miss Anna Simson, of Boston, from which city Mr. Murray came to Charlotte recently. Several members of the film fraternity witnessed the ceremony and Mr. and Mrs. Murray will make their home in Charlotte.

Fred H. Kirby has been transferred from the Charlotte Branch of F. B. O. to Atlanta succeeding C. B. Whitehead in Alabama territory.

Albany Notes and Eastern New York Briefs

THE past week witnessed two important changes in the management of motion picture theatres in Schenectady and Troy. Edwin O. Weinberg, who has been managing the State, in Schenectady, which recently went into the hands of a receiver, left the Electric City on Saturday for Buffalo, to become the manager of Renown's exchange in that city. The work will be something new to Mr. Weinberg who has always managed houses, first in Troy, and later in Buffalo and Syracuse, coming to Schenectady several months ago, when the new half million dollar State was opened to the public.

In Troy, H. E. Wilkinson is no longer manager of the Lincoln theatre. It is understood that Mr. Wilkinson has gone to New York and may later on tie up with some venture in Rochester. He is very well known through this section of New York State, having at one time managed the Select exchange here.

Colby Shaw, directing the Strand orchestra, in Albany, appeared in white flannels the other night, his associate musicians being in Palm Beach suits. The combination made a hit with the audience.

James Ruane, former accessory manager and later salesman at the Paramount exchange, in Albany, has resigned to become manager of John Sullivan's Empire theatre, in North Adams, Mass.

Everyone around the First National exchange in Albany, is happy these days, for Alec Herman, the manager, is still ahead in the contest with S. E. Field leading the salesmen, and Ed Lewin, in third place. Looks like a piece of change for these three.

The Mark Strand is planning to stage a children's benefit, while playing "Daddy" for the week of June 25.

John Birkenhauer, former assistant branch manager for Fox, in Albany, now handling the Fox exchange in Salt Lake City, arrived in Albany, Monday, and received the glad hand along Film Row.

Uly Hill, an old timer in the business, now managing both the Mark Strand in Albany, and the Troy, in Troy, doesn't pass up a bet when it means extra business. The other day, when the mercury stood in the nineties, Mr. Hill heard a patron remark that it was a pleasure to go to the Strand in summer, as it was the coolest place in all Albany. Next day's papers quoted the patron.

Arthur Whyte and George Trilling, of the Peerless Booking Corporation, were up from New York during the week, and drove over to Amsterdam one day with Marvin Kempner, manager for Paramount there.

Elmer Crowninshield, owner of the Bijou in Troy, will manage the bathing beach and dancing hall at Lake George this summer, while

Mrs. Crowninshield will stay in Troy and look after the theatre.

There was a small fire in the office of the Strand, in Schenectady, one night the past week. Its origin is unknown. There had been two attempts to force the safe in this theatre during the last month.

Talk about honest employees, the Mark Strand, in Albany, has one in Peter Lawrence, its porter. Recently, Mr. Lawrence found a diamond ring in the house, and upon its being returned to its owner, received a fifty dollar reward. On another occasion, he received a ten dollar reward for the return of a small diamond ring.

Marvin Kempner, of the Paramount exchange, is in New York this week.

G. A. Woodward, who manages the Fox exchange in Albany, is in New York this week, attending a managers' convention at the Pennsylvania Hotel.

Oscar Perrin, manager of the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, certainly had good reason to feel proud of his young son the past week. The boy was one of the pages at the big minstrel show given in connection with the Elks' Convention, and also led a division in the parade.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey, who have been employed in the Fox exchange here, left Saturday for Detroit, where he has another position.

Railroad trains have no place in the life of Frank Bruner these days. Mr. Bruner, manager of the Pathe exchange in Albany, recently bought a new car and makes all trips, big and little, by motor. He was in Oneida and Coopers-town the past week.

The Movie Home Journal, which was started at the Leland, by Oscar Perrin, is growing by leaps and bounds, and now has a subscription of something over 1,500.

Morris Silverman, of Schenectady, was along Film Row last week and looking for just one thing, and that was summer prices.

The Elks' Convention brought many an exhibitor to town during the past week. George Davis, of the Stratford, in Poughkeepsie was here, while Walter Roberts, handling the Troy, put in his first appearance since taking over this house. Mr. and Mrs. Lew Fischer were down from Ticonderoga, while Louis Schine appeared in the parade with the Gloversville Elks. C. H. Moyer was down from the Liberty, in Herkimer, while Sharon Springs was represented by O. E. Egan, of the Academy.

Gardner Hall, of Troy, owned by Armstrong and Miller, following its usual custom, closed on June 3 for the summer.

Gasper Battaglia, who runs the Lansing and the Monroe theatres in Troy, is spending the month of June in Delaware, buying berries.

Mr. Battaglia is in the fruit business, as well as the motion picture, and makes trips each year to Delaware.

George Tetrault's Grand, in Watervliet, will close on Tuesdays and Thursdays during the summer.

Between packing ice and running for film, Manager Gardner, of the Pine Hills theatre in Albany, is busier than a one arm paper hanger these days. Incidentally, Mr. Gardner has been heard to whisper that he is making more money out of his ice cream business than the pictures.

Friends of Marjorie Miller, cashier at the Albany theatre, are congratulating her these days. The event occurred on June 2, and the honeymoon will occur a little later.

The Avon theatre, which recently changed hands in Watertown, brought $275,000.

There is one boy who was the cynosure of all eyes in the Elks' parade. His name is Harry McNamara, owner of the Valatie theatre, who led the Hudson delegation. Tugged out in white flannels, and of superb build, Mr. McNamara attracted no end of attention.

"Doc" Frazier, of the Temple, in Richmondville, was in town last week, rearranging his summer program.

Gouverneur is to have one of the finest playhouses in northern New York. Harry Papanakos, proprietor of the Graylin theatre, was in New York the past week, in the interest of his business. The house is being entirely redecorated.

The street car strike continues in Schenectady, and as a result, the theatres in that city are badly crippled these days.

Louis Buettner, who led the Cohoes delegation of Elks in the parade, wears a broad smile these days for his fellow townsmen lugged off first prize. The only trouble with Mr. Buettner was that every member of the Cohoes delegation, indulging in a short street parade before leaving home, absolutely insisted on passing their own houses. So far as can be learned, Mr. Buettner was unsuccessful in parading past his own home.

Charles McCarthy, of the new theatre in Hoosick Falls, is on a three weeks' motor trip to Cleveland.

Jake Rosenthal, of the Rose, in Troy, is doing a land office business on Saturdays, and one that is costing him but little. Each week, Mr. Rosenthal ties up with some clothing merchant or other business house in Troy, and after furnishing 2,000 tickets to this person, which are given out with every purchase made, accepts them as admission without charge on Saturday.

R. V. Erk and his father, running the Big Ben in Ilion, were shopping for pictures in Albany during the week.

William Hanley, a shipper at the Universal exchange, became ill last Tuesday, but is back.

Theatre and Exchange Briefs from Canada

ART JOHNSON, formerly with the American Releasing Corp., until its absorption by Selznick, has been selected as assistant manager of the Des Moines, Ia., Film Booking Offices of America branch.

The personnel of the Kansas City Selznick office since the merger with the American Releasing Corp. will be "as you were," as far as the managership is concerned. M. A. Tanner will retain his position as branch manager, it was announced this week.

H. E. Schiller, manager of Al Lichtman Kansas City branch and former manager of the Kansas City Educational office, started on his first trip into the territory this week. Before returning he will visit all the key towns.

Between $40,000 and $50,000 will be spent in remodeling the Hubbell Opera House, Trenton, Mo., by the Capitol Enterprises, which owns a large string of motion picture houses, with headquarters in Kansas City. The house is owned by W. A. Hubbell, who is financially interested in Capitol Enterprises. The remodeling plans include a ground floor lobby, which will be of marble and tile up to the wainscoting line, providing for a second stairway opening, with the ticket office on the ground floor. Many attractive redecorative features have been decided for the exterior, in addition to the redecorating of the entire interior. A large canopy, brilliantly lighted and extended over the sidewalk, will be one of the improvements, as well as a huge electric sign.

The Quality theatre, Independence, Kas., has been purchased by Mark Wilson of the People's theatre, Chanute, Kas., who has taken possession of it and placed it under the direction of "Shake" Davidson, recently of the Kansas City Universal sales force. Mark Havenhill, of Manhattan, Kas., who purchased the Auditorium theatre at Burns, Kas., will open that house this week, while the City Hall theatre, Knobnoster, Mo., has been opened by Sam Wingert.

The Pastime theatre, Protection, Kas., holds the record in newspaper advertising, according to a consensus of opinion among Kansas City film salesmen. The latest issue of the Protection Post contains a half-page layout, featuring "Grandma's Boy" and mentioning coming attractions, in addition to a double column 9-inch Larry Semon cut and a half column news item referring to coming attractions.

The Kansas City Film Board of Trade will meet every other Monday for the remainder of the year, it has been decided. Many grievances already have been settled by the board this spring and the organization bids fair to function beneficially during the remainder of the year.

S. A. Davidson, of Cherryvale, Kas., "has the goods" on C. M. Pattee, veteran exhibitor of Lawrence, Kas., this time. Both men attended the national convention in Chicago. Since their return Mr. Davidson has lost no opportunity to tell of the "good" restaurant Mr. Pattee selected in Chicago. The fact that it was "good" is vouched for by Davidson, because of the fact that Pattee paid $1 for a baked potato, but that is as much as he will tell.

Can a High Class Picture Be "Commercial?"

EDWIN CAREWE, who produced "Mighty Lak' a Rose" and "The Girl of the Golden West" for First National, and will screen "The Bad Man" for the same distributor, said in an interview this week:

"To the minds of many of the so-called intelligentsia, the phrase 'giving the public what it wants' denotes a lowering and prostitution of an art. If it were true that the public must be pandered to with ultra-sensational productions the accusation might be true enough, but I am quite confident that such a picture is not desired by the great motion picturegoing public.

"I am going to give the public what it wants. And at the same time I am going to make high class dramatic attractions. These two statements are absolutely reconcilable, as anyone who has made more than a casual examination of the recent screen successes will be able to understand.

"Give the public credit for a better sense of picture values. I rate them far higher than that director who fills a picture with hokum and plot absurdities and cheap melodrama and then attempts to label this opus 'commercial.'"

For the coming season Carewe is scheduled to supply one of the biggest productions to the First National program in "The Bad Man," a screen version of Porter Emerson Browne's play which was a Broadway stage success of 1921-22. For this production Holbrook Blinn, who starred in the play on the New York stage and for two years throughout the country, has been engaged to play the leading role. Blinn scored a personal triumph in this play in the picturesque role of the Mexican bandit who proves, in the end, good enough to bring a happy couple together and start them on the road to a happy future.

The screen rights to "The Bad Man" were purchased by Mr. Carewe after he had seen a performance of the play in Los Angeles. The director lost no time in offering to Holbrook Blinn an opportunity to interpret the part before the camera, and as a result, before the play had run in the California city three days, Mr. Blinn had been persuaded to desert the stage long enough to transplant his famous characterization to the silver sheet.

In producing a picturization of "The Bad Man," Carewe promises that he will not depend upon the sub-titles to "put over" the bright, satirical and philosophical sayings of the central character, but will endeavor to obtain players whose work will be of such a quality as to interpret the humor, satire and philosophy with which the piece abounds without too much aid from the title writer, a fault that is often the case with the picturization of plays of the type of the Holbrook Blinn success.

"The Girl of the Golden West," is the most recent Carewe production to be released by First National.

Under the guiding hand of Edwin Carewe the famous characters of "The Girl," "Ramarrez," "The Sheriff," and the Mexican girl, live on the screen. Sylvia Breamer gives the screen the role first created by Blanche Bates, and J. Russell Simpson plays the part originated by Frank Keenan, and sung by Caruso on the operatic stage. J. Warren Kerrigan plays Ramarrez, the bandit, and Rosemary Theby the Mexican girl.

Totally different in theme and characterization from "Mighty Lak' a Rose," "The Girl of the Golden West" proves the versatility of the First National director. In the former he twisted the heart strings with a sweet, sad tale of the romance of a blind violinist. In the latter he takes his audience back to the days of '49, shows them the type of men, crazed with the thought and the hope of gold, who came from the ends of the earth and lived under crude laws and simple justice.

Edwin Carewe has permanently entered the fold of First National and a production to follow "The Bad Man" will be announced shortly. Meanwhile, he is making film preparations for the actual filming of the last named production. Holbrook Blinn will be surrounded with a capable cast of screen favorites, which are now being selected. Mr. Carewe has just recently returned to the Coast from a trip to New York and the recent Atlantic City meeting of the franchise holders of Associated First National when he screened "The Girl of the Golden West" before the entire gang.

New Stahl-Mayer Pictures for First National

JOHN M. STAHL, who brought to the screen "The Dangerous Age," will direct Louis B. Mayer productions for First National release during the coming season.

Mr. Stahl's previous First National pictures were "The Song of Life" and "One Clear Call." "The Wanters," a forthcoming Louis B. Mayer First National picture, has already been put into production.

"The Wanters" is a magazine story by Leila Burton Wells, and the picture is being made under that working title. In the leading feminine role will be seen Marie Prevost and Robert Ellis will enact the principal male part.

Following "The Wanters," Mr. Stahl will be given one of the cleverest Broadway plays of recent date to transfer to the silver sheet. This is "Why Men Leave Home," an Avery Hopwood play, which blends satire of the extravagant wife with tense drama and pathos.

In "Why Men Leave Home" he will have an assortment of modern, everyday, and universally known types.

For "The Wanters," Stahl announces that he has signed little Richard Headrick to play an important part. Richard, who is now only five years old, will be seen in the picture as one of those precocious youngsters who continually embarrasses his elders with his careless handling of the family secrets.

The return of Richard to the John M. Stahl production fold is very much in the nature of a home-coming, for it was under Stahl's direction that the little fellow scored his first big film hit in "The Child Thou Gavest Me." Since then he has played leads in a series of features, the most recent of which is "Chicago Sal."

A large list of stars has been assembled for "The Wanters," including among the principals: Marie Prevost, Robert Ellis, Norma

John M. Stahl and Louis B. Mayer.

Shearer, Gertrude Astor, Huntley Gordon, Richard Headrick, Lincoln Stedman, Lillian Langdon, Louise Fazenda, Hank Mann, Lydia Yeamans, Titus, Eddie Gribbon, and William Buckley. Leila Burton Wells wrote the story and J. G. Hawks and Paul Bern prepared the screen version. Ernest G. Palmer is chief photographer. Sydney Algier, who has been with Mr. Stahl on his last few successes, is serving as assistant director.

The actual shooting of "The Wanters" was started at the Mayer studio two weeks ago, with the filming of some interior scenes representing the action in the Long Island mansion of a New York multi-millionaire. Location work on beautiful estates in Pasadena and Santa Barbara is planned for a later date. Owing to the elaborate scale on which the picture is being made and the many tense dramatic episodes involved, it is expected that the production will not be completed for at least three months.

American Pictures Lead in Brazil Market

Considerable notice of the film trade of American producers abroad, and the competition met is shown by the May 28th issue of "Commerce Reports."

Foremost is an account of the film trade in "The Sao Paulo (Brazil) Market for Motion Pictures." U. S. Consul E. M. Lawton at the city which is the capital and port of the same province, or state, writes that "American pictures are more popular, than any of our foreign competitors, about eighty per cent being of American origin." Factors contributing, he intimates, are: clearness of photography, elegance of scenery and artistic portrayal of the leading parts. "The only complaint made (and this comes from the Latin exhibitor)," he adds, "is that the film seems to wear out very quickly."

French films are next in popularity. The Pathe Freres and Gaumont subjects are in great demand, due to their treatment of French scenery, buildings, and history. German pictures run a poor third, but despite a large following, due to local German colonies, sent there by the ex-Kaiser for twenty years, they no way secure the approbation given American and French pictures.

Frank Lloyd to Direct Production Series

FRANK Lloyd has produced four First National pictures and was part way through a fifth when there came to him an opportunity to produce independently for First National release. And as a result of this contract, signed only a month ago, First National is able to announce three, or possibly four, Frank Lloyd Productions during the coming season.

Of the five pictures which Frank Lloyd has directed for First National, four have starred Norma Talmadge and one Jackie Coogan. After completing "Within the Law" Mr. Lloyd was selected by Joseph M. Schenck to direct "Ashes of Vengeance." The total cost of this production, it is said will be high.

Lloyd has not selected his first picture which he will produce independently through First National. The direction of "Ashes of Vengeance" will keep him busy for some time to come, but immediately upon its completion he will start upon his first production under the recent contract.

Tourneur Producer of the Unusual on Screen

"A ROMANTICIST, a lover of the bizarre, the fantastic, the adventure that is unusual." Such is the description that has been applied to Maurice Tourneur, who is scheduled to produce a series of pictures for First National release. Tourneur, producer of "Lorna Doone" and "The Isle of Lost Ships," will next present "The Brass Bottle" through First National.

"The Brass Bottle" goes back to the time of Solomon, shows the glory of the days of old Egypt, and takes with him a weird genii, bringing him to modern London, where he shows Egyptian manners and customs in amusing conflict with British modernity. Incidentally this picture will mark Tourneur's debut as a director of comedy.

Three Younger Directors on First National List

IN addition to such directors as Frank Lloyd, Frank Borzage, John S. Robertson, George Fitzmaurice, Maurice Tourneur and Clarence Badger and others, all of whom will be represented on the First National schedule during the coming season, three of the most successful younger directors of the industry have been signed to pilot forthcoming First National productions.

Lynn Reynolds has already started work on "The Huntress," and to him will fall the task of introducing Colleen Moore as a First National star. Although only thirty-three years of age, Reynolds has already directed approximately sixty features.

James Young, a veteran in experience, although not in years, has been assigned to bring "Ponjola," Cynthia Stockley's stirring story of South Africa to the screen for First National. Young's experience includes everything from one and two reels to the biggest features.

For the leading role in "Ponjola" Anna Q. Nilsson has been selected. Production will start on this picture, under Young's direction, in a short time.

For "Flaming Youth," which will be Colleen Moore's second picture, for First National, Jack Dillon has been selected to direct. "Flaming Youth" is a screen adaption of Warner Fabian's sensational novel which is running in serial form in the Metropolitan magazine.

Borzage Productions for First National

FRANK Borzage, creator of "Humoresque," will shortly start work on his second production for First National, under the auspices of Arthur S. Jacobs. His first independent production, which has just been completed is "Children of Dust," adapted from the magazine story

Frank Borzage.

"Terwilliger" by Tristram Tupper. This heart interest story is laid in New York.

His second production for Arthur S. Jacobs for First National release will be "Dust in the Doorway," a Dixie Wilson magazine story published in McClure's Magazine. The continuity is now being prepared by Mary O'Hara and Borzage will shortly put it into production.

"A good director," states Arthur S. Jacobs, in speaking of his new pictures for First National and the young man who will direct them, "can make a mediocre story pleasing, entertaining and satisfying, but a big story or star with ordinary direction can never become anything but an everyday, unsatisfying production; just as a fountain never rises above its source."

Two Katherine MacDonald Pictures Coming

TWO Katherine MacDonald productions will be part of the First National fall program. There will be period plays from Barthelmess and Norma Talmadge, an outdoor story in "The Huntress," with Colleen Moore, and from other First National producers an assortment of stories varied in the locales and themes, but it is left to B. P. Shulberg to present Katherine MacDonald in two domestic drama stories of modern American womanhood.

The two productions are entitled "The Scarlet Lily" and "Chastity." In both productions Miss MacDonald is directed by Victor Schertzinger and the supporting cast in the former includes Stuart Holmes, Orville Caldwell, Edith Lyle, Adele Farrington, Grace Morse, Jane Miskinin and Lincoln Stedman. The story of "The Scarlet Lily" was written especially for Miss MacDonald by Fred Sittenham.

The cast in "Chastity" includes Huntley Gordon, Edythe Chapman, Frederick Truesdall, Gordon Russell, Lew Mason and Verne Winter. The story is by Ernest Pascal adapted by Eve Unsell to the screen.

"The Scarlet Lily" gives Miss MacDonald the role of a sales lady in an art connoisseur's shop who is forced to accept the hospitality of a man whose intentions she judges as worthy. The man's wife eagerly seizes upon the heroine's actions as grounds for a divorce suit which she has long been contemplating. Seeking refuge in a country village, the heroine finds her true love and is happily married, only to discover her past raked up to bring doubt and distress into the heart of the man she loves.

Katherine MacDonald.

Those of Miss MacDonald's admirers who look to her for a sartorial display will not be disappointed in "Chastity." The story gives an insight into stage life and shows vividly the disastrous results which trail in the wake of gossip and misunderstanding, and in the course of the drama, Miss MacDonald appears in a number of gowns and cloaks which will delight the eyes of the feminine portion of the audience.

The story of "Chastity" is said to have been inspired by the tragic life of Gaby Deslys, once the favorite of Manuel of Portugal.

Edward Montagne Adapting "Swamp Angel"

"The Swamp Angel," Richards Connell's Collier's Weekly story, has been assigned to Edward J. Montagne, to be adapted to the screen. Mr. Montagne is former scenario chief of the Selznick forces, and scenarized such pictures as "The Common Law," "Rupert of Hentzau," and many others, in addition to writing original stories, among which were "A Man's Home."

"The Swamp Angel" is a story of a man who centers his love upon a girl far above him in education and culture. In his effort to make himself worthy he discovers that he has risen above her and instead of looking up to her, he finds that she is unworthy of him. With the completion of Mr. Montagne's continuity the picture will be assigned to a director and filmed for First National release during the forthcoming season.

"Circus Days" Jackie Coogan's Next Picture

JACKIE Coogan, who was discovered and rose to fame under the auspices of Sol Lesser and First National Pictures, will be seen next in "Circus Days" for First National.

Jackie Coogan has not been confined to one type or role, and it is this fact, probably more than anything else that has helped to manifest his true worth as a master of pathos as well as comedy. In "Daddy" for instance he handled several scenes of intense pathos in such a manner that handkerchiefs and accompanying sobs were in order throughout the New York Strand, where the picture had its New York premiere.

In "Circus Days," which will be his next production for First National, Jackie will, however, strive for laughter. It is frankly a merry, jolly story of a "kid"—a kid surrounded by the glitter and glamor of the circus, mingling with its freaks, its animals and its happy-go-lucky attachees. There are elephants, tigers, monkeys, the Fat Lady, the Sword-Swallower, the Barker, and dozens of the human and four legged actors—and Jackie.

Once more he is a whole-hearted natural, fun-loving, kind-hearted and aggressive American boy. The circus comes to town, and when it goes away Jackie goes with it. There is a mother at home who needs his help and Jackie argues that there must be money in a place that glitters and shines as does the circus and its equipment.

The rest of the picture shows Jackie, alias "Toby Tyler" as he wins his way into the hearts of these circus folks, proves his ability as an attraction in the ring, and finally, after ten weeks, becomes the star of the "big top."

"Circus Days," was directed by Eddie Cline, the director of comedy who has aided and abetted Buster Keaton in his rise to fame. It is an adaptation of the well-known book "Toby Tyler or Ten Weeks With the Circus" by James Otis. This book takes its place among the memories of childhood along with the happy recollections in contrast with his immortal characterization of the old swimmin' hole and the county fair. The children of today are reading the book with as much avidity as their fathers and grandfathers displayed before them. Its circulation has not diminished over a period of fifty years and shows no signs of diminishing.

"Circus Days" will show Jackie's versatility still further, it is declared, when the role is considered in contrast with his immortal characterization of "Oliver Twist," which was brought to the screen under the direction of Frank Lloyd, now definitely aligned with the First National forces.

In "Oliver Twist" Jackie depicted one wistful aspect of childhood, and did it with great skill. It is pointed out that he will bring fully as vivid a characterization to the screen when he is seen in "Circus Days," according to advance reports on this latest vehicle for the starlet.

Famous Plays Among First National Releases

Four famous plays have been produced upon the silver sheet for First National to be included in the early releases of that company. They are:

"Within the Law," starring Norma Talmadge—the premiere "crook" melodrama. Written by Bayard Veiller in 1911, and produced by the Selwyns in 1912, with Jane Cowl in the leading role.

"The Girl of the Golden West," an Edwin Carewe production—written by David Belasco and produced by him in 1905 at the Belasco theatre. The cast included Blanche Bates, Frank Keenan and Robert Hilliard.

"Trilby"—Du Maurier's play produced on the screen by Richard Walton Tully. Written as a novel twenty-five years ago and later produced as a play, in New York and throughout the country.

Young to Head Lichtman Washington Exchange

Joseph Young will be the new manager of the Washington Exchange of the Al Lichtman Corporation, succeeding J. Howard Beaver, who resigned June 11. Mr. Young was formerly associated with the Selznick and Federated exchanges in the Washington territory and is thoroughly familiar with the capital's ization of "Oliver Twist," which was brought exhibitors and their problems.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"Michael O'Halloran"

Porter-Hodkinson—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANOTHER writer has come forward with a determination to see her story picture as it was written. It must be said, however, that Gene Stratton Porter's story of "Michael O'Halloran" makes much better reading via the printed page than it does adapted into terms of action. A story of young juveniles with the elements of sentiment and pathos unusually dominant, it fails to bring forth any balancing note of humor. There is no play of youthful prank. Rather is it a study of sadness which seems a trifle far-fetched, since most youngsters would play first and have a good cry afterward.

The picture is much too long. It could easily have been told in four reels, and tacking extra footage upon it only serves in showing up its shortcomings—lack of plot and incident. At best it could only detail a sketchy, episodic account of two little orphans, and when the action departs from the juvenile scenes one sees two distinct stories which bear little relation to one another. Naturally the continuity is jumpy in serving these two stories.

The sentimental side of the tale keeps it on an even key—and what the picture needs is comic relief—and plenty of it. As it is the action is of a sing-song character—with every detail in its place and sentiment and pathos ever being expressed.

We see an orphan, the title character, adopt a little cripple of the opposite sex. We see him radiating gladness to such an extent that it begins to pall before the seventh reel is reached. He has his benefactors, who carry him out of his environment, and the open spaces of the country give him a chance to develop his character further. The little girl joins him and an operation enables her to walk. There is a side plot concerning a wealthy man who registers hatred against his wife for neglecting her children. And a reconciliation is effected.

This part of the story has little in common with the juvenile interest—yet had it been eliminated the picture would have been unusually frail. As it is it is extremely slight—and the incident does not warrant the expenditure of so much footage. A very obvious tale, fairly well photographed and acted competently, but not much related to life. The subtitles are over-stressed with sentiment.

"Children of Dust"

Jacobs-First National—6228 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SIMPLE little character study is "Children of Dust"—a character study punctuated with an equally simple romance which concerns two men and a maid, the pathos of enlistment for the war by the two buddies and the long, anxious wait by the girl 'til the boys come home again. There is nothing to it in the shape of plot; it merely tells of an elderly caretaker whose affection for an orphan mellowed his life. Indeed this caretaker is the principal character and is excellently portrayed with good understanding by Bert Woodruff.

The plot (if you can call it such) starts off by showing the old fellow being arrested for beating a small orphan. He is the caretaker for the enclosed and restricted space known as Gramercy Park. The opening reels introduce the other characters as young juveniles who eventually grow up and develop a romantic conflict. But as they grow up and mature, the old fellow refuses to advance in years. In fact, he looks just the same at the end of the picture as he did at the beginning, yet years have elapsed.

The orphan boy has a rival placed in better circumstances. Which, of course, establishes the conflict. There is much fuss made over a gold piece which the boys bury in the park. It starts all the rivalry. Then comes the war with a fairly good scene showing the old man attired in his uniform of gray, in which he fought for Lee, attempting to enlist. A shot or two of the boys in the trenches and another of the girl biding her time, awaiting their home-coming, takes up the action until the finish—when the youth of better circumstances comes back. The girl, the old man and the youth think the orphan is dead, but the audience knows better. And, true to form, he turns up and wins the affection of the girl.

It is a very slight plot which is sympathetically treated by Frank Borzage. He has brought out every ounce of sentiment and pathos and heart interest in it. It won't create much stir, but it will please a program audience. Outside of Woodruff, the other players don't have any acting opportunities.

The Cast

Helen Raymond.....Frankie Lee
Harvey Livermore.....Pauline Garon
As the child.....Josephine Adair

By Tristram Tupper. Directed by Frank Borzage. Produced by Arthur H. Jacobs.

The Story—Tells of elderly caretaker who is adopted by orphan as his "father" after the latter serves a prison term for beating the boy. The youth loves a neighborhood girl and has a rival in another boy. The war comes and both boys enlist. The girl realizes that she loves the orphan who thinking that she loved his rival, assumed his guilt in a theft. Both boys come home and the girl is made happy with the orphan.

Classification—Human interest romance.

Production Highlights—The fine performance contributed by Bert Woodruff. The excellent local color. The enlistment scene.

Exploitation Angles—Put on prologue of city square with characters as nearly similar to those of story as you can select.

Drawing Power—Human interest will please most any picturegoer. Suitable for average house.

"Only 38"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE heart pangs of the advancing forties have their innings in this picture of a widow of thirty-eight summers who dashes into romance after the death of her puritanical husband. William De Mille, who has a flair to produce the simple things of life in contrast to his brother, Cecil, who has a flair to create bizarre and erotic productions, has done as well as possible with this adaptation of a play which lingered a short time on Broadway.

"Only 38" does not stir the imagination, nor stimulate the pulse. It is often dull and always obvious. Yet it is well executed. The fault is it carries no plot worthy of mention other than a conflict raised in the widow's home when her children object to her matrimonial ambitions.

Lois Wilson, who is not afraid of portraying a woman approaching middle age, and is to be commended for her courage, does not have much opportunity to get into character. Despite her efforts to appear the widow's age, she is forced to remind us that she is thirty-eight—and the kindly professor reiterates just as often that she is only thirty-eight. He is the accepted type of bookworm—a trifle absent-minded and never certain what he is going to do or say because his eyes are ever focused upon the pages of his books.

The widow may be said to have absorbed—mentally at least—a monkey gland or two because her rejuvenation provides the only sparkle of the picture. If she would dance the children object—if she would brighten up the house, the children offer their objections. But the professor proves to be a sort of heman under his quaint disguise—and once the widow robes herself in old-fashioned clothes, the children appreciate that she would be happy with the book-worm. And so she is allowed to wear what she pleases and conduct herself as the spirit moves her.

Not much to this picture, but its atmosphere and color and able interpretation give it a certain appeal. The spoken titles which are used by the professor are exceedingly trite. One would never imagine that he teaches English literature by reading them.

The Cast

The Story—Treats of a widowed mother, thirty eight years old, who longs for romance. Her children are shocked when she accepts the attentions of an admirer. To the mother it is a case of making a choice between her love for her children and the professor. She chooses the former, but in the end the mother's eyes are opened by her daughter's love affair and thus the way is paved to happiness for both.

Classification—Romantic comedy-drama.

Production Highlights—The capable work by cast—especially Lois Wilson. The human interest. The atmosphere. The light comedy moments.

Exploitation Angles—Treat of theme showing that love never comes too late. Link up with feminine apparel shops. Play up four leading players. Tell that it is adaptation of successful play. Treat it from the mother angle.

Drawing Power—Suitable for average house.

"Main Street"

Warner Brothers—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SINCLAIR LEWIS, the author of "Main Street," possesses a photographic mind. He never misses a single detail in his popular story. Thus is emphasized the inability of either stage or screen to record accurately his drab study of small town life. The book carries a psychological value which cannot be translated into terms of physical action. It is a story of words. And judging it from this basis the sponsors deserve unbounded praise for doing such a good job by it. No matter how they worked—speaking of the adaptor and director—they are sure to bring censure upon their heads. Some will kick because they haven't taken enough liberties—others because they have taken too many liberties.

It looks to us as if they have caught the salient episodes of the novel and handled the subject matter in a highly intelligent way. If it becomes somewhat dull toward the final scenes it is because the novel was dull and the sponsors did not want to destroy the fabric of the plot. The drab ugliness is well pointed and the characterization is deftly limned by Florence Vidor as Carol and Monte Blue as her physician husband.

The average small town is up in arms against Sinclair Lewis. The average villager thinks he is being indicted as a smug, complacent work-a-day individual without imagination or romance in his soul. As a result the picture will please the city patrons better than it will the villagers.

It isn't a picture of action. Nor can it be said to be burdened with words. It simply presents in a highly commendable manner what Mr. Lewis incorporates in his novel—a cross section of small town life as it is lived in Minnesota. The director had a monumental task upon his hands making it into a moving and compelling story. He has admirably sketched it with humor when it is inclined to become monotonous. But no director could possibly bring out the terrific indictment of the book, no matter how painstaking his work. It must be read to be appreciated completely. Yet we enjoyed the picture far better than the novel. Certainly the local color, atmosphere and characterization are highly praiseworthy.

Miss Vidor as the Minneapolis girl who was forced to give up her ideals and submit to small town smugness manages to suggest the part with the deepest understanding and sympathy, while Monte Blue as the genial, mild-mannered physician plays with admirable feeling. The other characters are as real. We recommend "Main Street." Whatever its faults rests with the author and not with the producers. It could be profitably shortened.

The Cast

Carol Milford..... Florence Vidor
Dr. Will Kennicott..... Monte Blue
Dave Dyer..... Harry Myers
Eric Valborg..... Robert Gordon
Adolph Valborg..... Noah Beery
Miles Bjornstam..... Alan Hale
Bea Sorenson..... Louise Fazenda

By Sinclair Lewis. Adapted by Julien Josephson. Directed by Harry Beaumont.

The Story—Treats of small town physician and his wife, the latter brought to the village from Minneapolis. She has ideals and would make Gopher Prairie over, but the natives rebel. They will stand for no outside interference.

Classification—Adaptation of Sinclair Lewis' small town study. Conflict of temperaments.

Production Highlights—The intelligent treatment. The atmosphere. The fine performances by Monte Blue and Florence Vidor.

Exploitation Angles—Put on prologue showing village quartette, girls in gingham, etc. Tie up with bookdealers on sale of book and other stories by author. Play it up big.

Drawing Power—Should be appreciated by intelligent audiences. Good for week's run.

"The Shock"

Universal—6738 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANY picture which gives Lon Chaney an opportunity to play the role of a cripple is destined to exact a great deal of sympathy from an audience—even if this very able character actor acts with so much realism that his characterization is often morbid. "The Shock" permits him to display his talent much after the fashion of "The Miracle Man."

As in that memorable story, this one introduces him as a crook who is redeemed through the guiding influence of a girl coupled with life in the open country. Without Chaney to do justice toward the role, the picture would not carry much substance. But his work is so finished—and he acts with such emotional fervor that he wins instant sympathy and admiration. Some will say that he plays the part too realistically. With those unduly sympathetic he will exact a full quota of tears.

The locale is San Francisco and the open spaces in the year of 1906, and the cripple is introduced as a member of a gang of crooks. He is sent to a little village by the feminine ring-leader to expose a bank president for theft. But before he can accomplish his mission he falls in love with the banker's daughter. This part of the story is saturated with pathos and human interest—the reason being the crook's unwillingness to believe that his romance is impossible of fulfillment. He saves the father from disgrace and is about to resign the girl to another man when the fair crook starts to "get" him. Her destructive plans are all prepared when the city starts to tremble, and the whole town becomes a blaze of flames as the result of the earthquake. The miniature effects are admirable and lend much color and suspense. The title finds its expression here—the shock of the disaster restores the use of his legs to the cripple and he proves successful in his love quest. The other man is shown up to be considerable of a rotter.

It's a dramatic story charged with melodramatic moments, as it concerns the underworld intrigue and is balanced with rich human interest. It may be overdone in places and appear somewhat improbable, but there is no denying that it possesses dramatic power and deep heart appeal. The story is well constructed, but should be shortened. Virginia Valli makes a charming heroine and Christine Mayo a colorful adventuress.

The Cast

Wilse Dilling..... Lon Chaney
Gertrude Hadley..... Virginia Valli
Jack Cooper..... Jack Mower
Mischa Hadley..... William Welsh
John Cooper, Sr..... Henry Barrows
Anne Vincent..... Christine Mayo
Olaf Wismer..... Harry Devere
Bill..... John Beck
The Captain..... Walter Long
By William Pelley and Charles Kenyon. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Produced by Universal.

The Story—The cripple is tool of gang of blackmailers. He is sent to little village to expose a bank president who has stolen money, but is prevented because he falls in love with the banker's daughter. Under her guiding influence and the life in the open spaces he is regenerated. He saves the father from disgrace, but the blackmailers hear about his redemption and prepare to "get" him for double-crossing them. The San Francisco earthquake occurs and the crooks are victims. The shock of the quake restores the cripple to the use of his legs. He finds happiness with the girl.

Classification—Heart interest story of crook redemption.

Production Highlights—The marvelous character study by Lon Chaney. The heart interest. The romantic scenes. The moment when he catches his beloved in embrace with another. The appealing work by Virginia Valli. The local color. The miniature of the Frisco earthquake.

Drawing Power—Heart interest will appeal everywhere—in any house.

"Penrod and Sam"

J. K. McDonald—First National—6275 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

NO author can approach Booth Tarkington in the depiction of precocious youth. Every story written by him based upon juvenile high jinks has a ring of realism about it. When this vital factor is balanced with a strong vein of humor the entertaining qualities may well be imagined.

The author's "Penrod and Sam" is just as delightful on the screen as it is between the covers of the book. If the Tarkington phrasing is missing, compensation is established through the salient episodes, the unusually deft characterization and the exceptionally sympathetic treatment which the characters have received at the hands of William Beaudine, the director. Here is a man who has not lost touch with his own boyhood. He brings forth not only the vital Tarkington high lights, but manages to express the abundant buoyancy of youth.

Any spectator who has outlived his childhood will be taken back through the years on a joy cruise of happy memories. If he sheds a wistful tear, it will mean that his boyhood is unusually dear to him. Such a picture as this is needed in this day, when the literary world is being searched for ideas. It is packed with delicious humor and high jinks. What is revealed is genuine. For example, look over the circus scene or the mischievous pranks of young brother when sister's beaux comes a-courtin'. Have a laugh over his discomfiture when dad comes in and asks him the time and he beats an awkward retreat from the house. There is a wistful appeal about the death of Penrod's dog and the burial scene. And the balancing note of humor (indeed the humor and pathos are admirably blended) is unforgettable when it expresses the two boys "on the carpet" before their fathers for refusing to admit the portly son of the village skinflint to their lodge.

Call it episodic if you will. Yet you must admit that it holds your interest with no thought occurring that it is sketchy. It is a true, accurate slice of childhood—childhood with all its exaggerated frivolities, sadness, spirit, sentiment and charm. There isn't a scene out of balance nor over-emphasized. And there are plenty of scenes which carry enough variety to appeal to any spectator. Somewhere among these high jinks he will find one which will strike home.

The acting is exceptional. There is little Ben Alexander (Ben is growing up, now, and you wouldn't recognize him as the child wonder of "Hearts of the World") playing Penrod to the life—Penrod with all his color and vitality—gladness and sadness. Joe Butterworth makes an excellent foil as Sam, while Rockliffe Fellows as Father Schofield is thoroughly in character.

The Cast

Penrod Schofield..... Ben Alexander
Sam Williams..... Joe Butterworth
Rodney Bitts..... Buddy Messinger
Georgie Bassett..... Newton Hall
Marjorie Jones (Penrod's sweetheart)..... Gertrude Messinger
Herman and Verman (colored brothers)..... Joe McGraw and Gene Jackson
Father Schofield..... Rockliffe Fellows
Mother Schofield..... Gladys Brockwell
Margaret Schofield..... Mary Philbin
Robert Williams (Margaret's sweetheart)..... Gareth Hughes
Deacon Bitts..... William V. Mong
By Booth Tarkington. Scenario by Hope Loring and Lewis Leighton. Directed by William Beaudine.

The Story—Treats of two inseparable boys, who typical of their age, put on a circus and a fraternity initiation. The hero delights in teasing his sister and parents. And once in a while he leaves the boys alone to play with his little sweetheart.

Classification—Picturization of Tarkington's delightful story of boyhood.

Production Highlights—The sympathetic treatment of story. The fine performances by Ben Alexander, Joe Butterworth. The circus scene.

Drawing Power—Should draw anywhere.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Crystal Jewels"

(Fox—One Reel)

THIS subject graphically depicts the huge task of supplying fresh water to over six millions of people. While dealing specifically with the system that brings water from the Catskill Mountains to Greater New York and therefore of special interest to big city audiences, this Fox educational, because of the fine handling of the subject, will probably possess a much wider appeal and will very likely go well in houses where entertaining educations are popular, irrespective of locality. The highlights of the subject are: the interior of the Shandaken tunnel, which when completed, will route the water of Lake Schoharie over eighteen miles and under the Catskill range to the great Ashokan reservoir; views of the Ashokan reservoir; the aerifying fountains that help purge the water of impurities; the laboratory tests under microscope; and the animated diagram showing the actual course that the water takes from the mountain springs to the houses of the metropolis.—E. "Pathe Review No. 24"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS number of the Pathe screen magazine opens with an interesting photographic study of sea-fog effects under the caption "Hidden Shore." "Pavement Pounding" gives a glimpse of the workings of a shoe factory and reveals the dispatch with which our boots are fashioned from the raw materials and put on display for our admiration and choice. This is all educational in force but also carries a decided element of entertainment. Birds and babies always possess an appeal of their own, and both species find representation in this number. The Kingfisher family are shown under the heading "The Emperor of the Brook," while "A Leaf from Life" depicts the round of duties that fall on the shoulders of the nurse. If the shots showing the baby ward and one of the little tots getting his daily "shower" don't get a pleasurable reaction from your audience then we haven't begun to learn our "A, B, C's" of human nature yet. The Pathecolor contribution is a series of pretty rural views of "Old New Jersey."—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Taking Orders"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS Century comedy presents Baby Peggy in the settings of a dental parlor and a restaurant. Both establishments are owned by Peg's father, and much of the comedy incident at the beginning consists in showing how Peg contrives to make the restaurant boost the declining business of the dental shop. The baby star registers with her customary appeal in the cute make-up of a pretty waitress and assistant to the chef. In the dental parlor, pa's laughing gas administered in lavish doses by the generous hand of Peg sends the patients floating ceilingward. A thrill is injected along with the comedy towards the close when father's enemies put dynamite in the apples waiting to be baked. Peg puts them in the oven with resultant disaster to herself and the kitchen. However, she manages to keep the diners from leaving by staging a hula hula dance on the counter for them. The fadeout shows Peggy in the amusing pose of a successful restaurant manager vainly trying to straighten out her income tax return.—E. F. SUPPLE.

J. Warren Kerrigan in a scene from "Man's Man," an F. B. O. attraction.

"Better Than Gold"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is another of Universal's "Tales of the Old West" with Roy Stewart in the featured role and Gertrude Olmsted opposite. The story is built around a gold rush incident of the early West. Mr. Norris owns the general store in Deer Point. Business is poor because prospectors have struck no gold in the district, and Mr. Norris closes down on credit purchases, selling only on a strictly cash basis. John Kingdon, a confidence man, buys a half interest in the shop. In collusion with an Indian he launches a false report of a gold strike. Business boom, the stock of Deer Point's general store being entirely sold out, presumably on a credit basis. Norris's pretty daughter and Phil Barton's (played by Stewart) sweetheart, enacted by Miss Olmsted, repulses Kingdon's advances. As a result, Kingdon tells the disappointed prospectors that Norris started the false rumor to boom his store's business. Kingdon's Indian confederate, however, recognizing Barton, Miss Norris's fiancé, as the man who once saved him from a lynching party, exonerates Mr. Norris and exposes Kingdon as the person responsible for the false report. The story is weak in spots as to logical structure and rather obvious as to its outcome. Not so good as some of the other subjects seen in this series.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Fare Enough"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is a Century Comedy presenting Jack Cooper and Marjorie Marcel in the featured roles. The fun revolves in the main around the competition waged between two rival conveyances—one a trolley car operated by Cooper in the role of a promotor and the other an auto-truck, carrying an elevated framework of seats, operated by Miss Marcel. The methods resorted to by the operators of the two competing vehicles to get the public's patronage will furnish some good laughs while keeping the action moving at a fast clip. There is no attempt to weave any well-constructed story here, the subject consisting of a string of slapstick "gags" which are worked in as the incident permits. At the beginning, Cooper, concealed inside of a mail bag, scares the baggage handlers at the village station, and then after being catapulted from a hand-truck to the top of a pile of trunks on an express wagon hangs on for dear life as trunks and wagon careen madly down the thoroughfare. The close shows a run-away trolley with the principals aboard come to disaster in a collision with a powder warehouse. The elongated Jack Earl adds to the fun, his unusual height being effectively taken advantage of to provide some laughs. On the whole, a good comedy of the slapstick order with plenty of action from start to finish.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Backfire"

(Educational—Two Reels)

HERE is an action comedy of superior calibre. Made by Jack White and presenting Lige Conley in the featured role, this subject offers almost as many thrills as laughs and an abundant quantity of both. The action centers largely around an auto road race, in which Conley drives as close an approach to a genuine "tin can" on wheels as we have ever seen on the screen or elsewhere. However, it has to all appearances all the endurance of a Whippet tank and the amphibious qualities of a submarine as well. At one point a stream intervenes but in it plunges, its apparent course across under water being marked by the wake it leaves on the surface. At another point it runs off the road and goes hurtling down the hillside, end over end, until it lands on the road at the bottom "on all fours" so to speak. With a perceptible shake of its tin body it is off again like a streak. At still another place dynamite explodes underneath it. Just as the spectator expects to see the contrivance come showering down in pieces from the sky it is seen to limp up out of the mine hole and resume the race. No matter what the obstacles, like the "little old Ford" it "rambles right along." And the close introduces a surprise twist of humor that ought to get a genuine shout of merriment anywhere outside of a graveyard. In addition to the main action occasional side-plays are worked in that add to the thrills and humor of the subject. A top-notch comedy that will go well in any class of house.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Lonesome Luck"

(Universal—Two Reels)

FOR adventuresome horsemanship this is by far the best two-reel western that we have seen in some time. Jack Dougherty, in the role of "Happy" Jack Morgan, gives a truly thrilling performance. The story gets under way in a rather odd fashion for a western, as the hero appears as a hobo resting in a hammock swung under a rapidly-moving freight car. After his forcible ejection at the mining town of Cactus, however, we are presented with all the ingredients of a screen western. Richard Barton is planning to gain control of the valuable oil lands belonging to Betty Lind, the pretty lunch-room proprietress. "Happy" Jack, who has been made driver of the stagecoach, is entrusted with the delivery of a trunk full of money to a neighboring town. The trunk is lost when the horses drawing the stage run away. Barton next accuses "Happy" Jack of stealing the trunk. Betty agrees to sell her land to Barton in order to get the necessary cash to compensate Jack's creditors for the loss of the money in the missing trunk. At this juncture a telegram reaches the sheriff for the arrest of Barton as a swindler. His arrest and exposure follows. The thrill moments are staged, first when "Happy" Jack pursues the run-away stagecoach horses and brings them to a halt by leaping from his own madly galloping steed to the top of the coach; and secondly when he races after the fleeing Barton and his accomplice and literally hurls both men from their mount by a flying tackle from the back of his own horse. If you want an action two-reeler in western setting don't miss this one.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Loyal Lives" Scenes All Completed

With the shooting of the scenes of the interior of the mail train at the Whitman Bennett studios this week, the mailman melodrama, "Loyal Lives," was fully completed as far as the actual making is concerned, and the film is now being cut and edited and being made ready for early release through Vitagraph.

Charles Giblyn, the director, says that the production was the smoothest he ever directed. The story was filmed, he says, without the slightest hitch in the pre-arranged schedule and not a single delay or mishap was encountered during the entire period of filming. This, he says, has resulted in over twenty-five reels of solid useable action and the problem that now confronts him is trimming this down to feature length.

Expert Lauds Johnson Animal Picture

The following letter reached the Metro New York offices last week from Hal G. Everts, well known expert in bird and big game photography after Mr. Everts had viewed Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's picture, "Trailing African Wild Animals," at the De Luxe theatre, Hutchinson, Kansas:

"This picture stands out unique as the best in its line. Everyone should see it. It's a most remarkable record of wild game in its natural haunts. The picture flows so smoothly that the spectators are apt to overlook the difficulties under which it was taken, the months of waiting, the countless disappointments, the persistence and patience of the Johnsons. It is indeed a most remarkable picture."

"Trailing African Wild Animals" is distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation.

"Human Wreckage" Premiere Set

New York Opening Scheduled for July 1st is Changed to June 27th

THE Film Booking Offices announce this week that Mrs. Wallace Reid's photo-drama, "Human Wreckage," which opening was scheduled for July 1st at the Lyric theatre, New York, will open before that date. Wednesday evening, June 27th, has now been selected for the premiere of the anti-narcotic production in the east.

The opening, which will be a de luxe affair, will be attended by Mrs. Wallace Reid in person. She will leave the Coast this week, where she was in attendance at the opening of the picture at the Ackerman-Harris Century theatre, San Francisco, on Saturday, June 9th. Never before, in the history of the Golden Gate city, has the opening of a picture caused the agitation and publicity that marked the opening of "Human Wreckage" in that city, it is claimed. The town was circused with paper. The newspapers, through sympathy for Mrs. Reid in her fight on narcotics, turned over half pages of free space, while the city authorities joined hands by the proclaiming of a narcotic week.

Mrs. Reid's appearances on the streets in connection with several public demonstrations were one round of riotous applause. Thousands of people witnessed the public burning of drugs on one of the main thoroughfares, under the supervision of Louis Zeh, of the Bureau of Pharmacy.

Mrs. Reid arrived from Los Angeles accompanied by several dramatic critics of that city. On her arrival she was met by a committee of the Pacific Coast Press Women's Association. At a luncheon at the St. Francis Hotel Mrs. Reid was voted the support of this organization in her campaign against narcotics. Following this she appeared before the Rotary Club and directly before a special matinee performance of the production she was presented a key of the city by the acting mayor who, in a speech of welcome, stated, "Just as the fabled Joan of Arc led the embattled forces of France to triumph, so you, Mrs. Reid, are leading the forces of humanity to the light. You are, indeed, a modern Joan of Arc and in behalf of the city of San Francisco, I bid you God speed."

During the four weeks' run of "Human Wreckage" at the Century theatre James Kirkwood, George Hackathorne, Claire McDowell, Robert McKim and others prominent in the cast of the picture will make personal appearances at the theatre.

Final arrangements have been completed for the showing of the picture at the Lyric theatre in New York. With a prologue outlined and planned by Sid Grauman the picture will open on June 27th to a formal audience, which will consist of stage and screen stars, public spirited people and many notables in public life. Mrs. Reid is also to make a personal appearance at the New York opening, as she has done at San Francisco, Los Angeles and Chicago.

Baltimore Women See "Famous Mrs. Fair"

A special presentation of Metro's "The Famous Mrs. Fair" was given at the Century theatre, Baltimore, last Monday. There were present the officers of the thirty-nine units of the Federation of Women's Clubs. A specially engraved invitation issued by Thomas D. Soriero, manager of the Century theatre, and an accompanying letter stating the unusual importance of the production had an immediate and successful response.

On the Saturday preceeding the showing, Mrs. Matthew E. Gault, president of the local federation, addressed a general meeting of Women's Clubs during which she urged the members to accept the invitations. Special showings of "The Famous Mrs. Fair" has been held in several other cities and news of this having preceded the actual showing the invitations were not wholly unexpected. This is part of the nation-wide exploitation scheme outlined on this picture.

"The Famous Mrs. Fair" is a Fred Niblo production for Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces. It was adapted by Frances Marion from the American play by James Forbes.

"Heart of Wetona" Is Popular

First of Selznick Sixteen Revivals Said to be Getting Many Bookings

"THE HEART OF WETONA," the first of Selznick's sixteen super revivals, according to David R. Blythe, director of sales for Selznick Distributing Corporation, is enjoying a remarkable booking. It was an unprecedented event for Sid Grauman's million dollar theatre in Los Angeles to use a revival. This is where "The Heart of Wetona" had its "re-premiere" during the week of May 28th. Mr. Blythe reports that Mr. Grauman is only one of many representative accounts which have booked these revivals.

Commenting on the picture, one reviewer in a Los Angeles paper claims that "It is better to see good old pictures than poor new ones." A statement which carries a lot of meaning.

Norma Talmadge always carries conviction in her acting, but in "The Heart of Wetona," she displays a depth of expression that is seldom reached in the cinema. Norma and Thomas Meighan in the same picture are a treat for a double list of fans. The story is delightful in its romantic values. Suspense is held throughout skillfully.

Mr. Blythe declares that "The Heart of Wetona" is an excellent example of the Selznick sixteen super revivals, all of them having been selected from the best pictures ever made by the company.

"Enemies of Women" Makes Record

THE Cosmopolitan production, "Enemies of Women," made from Vicente Blasco Ibanez's latest novel by Alan Crosland, has the record long-run of the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, Last Saturday night it closed an engagement of seven consecutive weeks, a run never before equalled at that big, modern picture theatre in the Loop District.

The photoplay did a consistently big business at the Roosevelt for the entire seven weeks, it is said. The popularity of its appeal was enormous.

"Enemies of Women" is continuing its run at the Cameo theatre, New York, after being seen at three other Broadway theatres. It is now in its eighth week in New York.

"Loyal Lives" First of Bennett Features

"Loyal Lives" has been chosen by Vitagraph and Whitman Bennett as the name of the first of the six Bennett productions which will be released by Vitagraph. It is said to be a human interest story woven around the unsung heroes in Government service—a post office mail carrier and a railway mail clerk.

The United States Post Office Department, through Harry S. New, Postmaster General, is said to be cooperating with the producer and lending every facility to accurately portray the duties of the employees of the department.

Prepare for "Shooting of Dan McGrew"

With the arrival of Bert Ennis in Hollywood this week, Arthur H. Sawyer will begin immediate preparations for an intensive campaign in behalf of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," the next S-L picture to be produced as a fall special for Metro release. From now until October a barrage of post cards, letters and broadsides will be used to acquaint exhibitors and the public throughout the country with the picturized version of Robert W. Service's world famous poem.

This campaign on the part of Sawyer and Lubin will dovetail with a series of trade paper and national publication advertisements issued by Metro Pictures Corporation six weeks prior to the release date of the film. Actual filming of the story will not begin for several weeks, pending the return from Italy of Barbara La Marr, who will play the role of "The Lady known as Lou." She is engaged in Italy in making "The Eternal City," through the courtesy of Arthur H. Sawyer, her professional manager.

"Green Goddess" Taking Shape

Spectacle of Distinctive Will Be Distributed by Goldwyn in Fall

AFTER six months of steady production work, "The Green Goddess" is rapidly assuming shape at the New York studios of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, and promises to be one of the great spectacles for fall release. Distinctive will furnish eight special features for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan distribution next season. "The Green Goddess" is third on the list, the first two already having been delivered, "Backbone" and "The Ragged Edge." "The Steadfast Heart" will be the fourth.

"The Green Goddess" is the production which will bring Alice Joyce back to the screen in support of George Arliss. With them will be David Powell, Harry T. Morey, Ivan Simpson and Jetta Goudal. It is said to be the biggest special ever undertaken by Distinctive. Interior and exterior sets now occupy approximately 75,000 square feet of space on the Distinctive premises in the Bronx—the old Biograph property. Sidney Olcott, who directed "Little Old New York," which is also on the list of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan releases, is directing "The Green Goddess" from Forrest Halsey's adaptation of William Archer's famous stage success. The play ran for two years on Broadway and played another year on the road to capacity houses.

Distinctive also announces its decision to put Alfred Lunt in a farce comedy, and to this end has purchased "Second Youth," a novel by Allan Updegraff. Lunt will undertake a role which will give him a chance to display the abilities which made him famous as "Clarence." Albert Parker has been engaged to direct this picture, in which Mimi Palmeri will appear for the second time. Miss Palmeri established herself as a new film beauty by her work with Lunt in "The Ragged Edge."

Jobyna Howland will take the part of a boarding house keeper. Walter Catlett will be one of the masculine funmakers and Herbert Cortell will be another.

It is probable that George Arliss will begin work in "The Adopted Father" for Distinctive immediately after he has finished with the part of the Rajah in "The Green Goddess." This is the Edgar Franklin story purchased especially for Mr. Arliss and adapted by Forrest Halsey, who has specialized in the preparation of the Arliss scripts.

"Shriek of Araby" Commended

New York Reviewers Give Praise to Ben Turpin and His Latest Comedy

BEN TURPIN'S forty-five degree eyes and his fine comedy in "The Shriek of Araby," Mack Sennett's latest five-reel burlesque feature, kept the Capitol theatre audiences in an uproar when this Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release had its first showing on Broadway June 10.

"Ben Turpin, the cross-eyed actor, achieves some fine moments of comedy and makes this latest record of the strange technique of a simple desert love, a very funny film," said Helen Pollock in the Morning Telegraph.

"The army of citizens at the Capitol did a great deal of laughing right out loud, and seemed to be having a good time," said P. W. Gallico in the Daily News.

"Ben Turpin's colliding orbs speak for themselves; their team work was as terrible as ever," said the critic for the New York World. "There was one of the greatest chases in the annals of lion-hunting,—it being understood that the lion was doing the hunting."

"'The Shriek of Araby' is sufficiently ludicrous to tickle the risibles of most people," said the Times' review. "Just seeing Turpin clad as a Sheikh is enough to make anybody laugh."

"'The Shriek of Araby' creates many shrieks on Broadway—shrieks of laughter—for Ben Turpin has never been so funny as in this Mack Sennett burlesque of the desert film picture," says the Evening Telegram.

Church Selects "Nero" to Raise Funds

REV. SETH C. CRAIG, pastor of the Northminster Presbyterian Church, New York, selected "Nero," the spectacle Fox production, from an array of several hundred pictures as the photoplay to be shown for a number of evenings in the drive to raise funds for the Daily Vacation Bible School. The film will be loaned by Fox Film Corporation.

Lesser Closes Deal for Super Five Series

Irving M. Lesser, vice-president and general manager of distribution of Principal Pictures Corporation, has sold the rights to his Super Five series and "Mind Over Motor" for the Inter-Mountain territory to the Mountain States Film Co. of Denver. E. J. Drucker, general manager of the latter concern, was the one to sign on the dotted line.

Since reopening, the Mountain States Co. has specialized in the Principal product, having bought the rights to nearly all the former output offered by Mr. Lesser, including "Environment," "The World's a Stage," "Flesh and Blood," and the Dick Hatton and Lester Cuneo series.

Will Present "Stormy Seas" July 1st

J. P. McGowan and Helen Holmes are declared to outdo their best previous work in "Stormy Seas," the offering which Associated Exhibitors is presenting July 1. This picture is described as straight-out melodrama.

The selection of a midsummer date for the release of "Stormy Seas" appears to have been particularly timely, for the bulk of the action is on the deep, making the offering especially appropriate for hot weather use.

Pervading the entire story, which is by Arthur W. Holmes, is said to be an element of deep and throbbing heart interest, with suspense and romance mingling with the recurring thrills, and the picture drawing to a surprise climax.

Old Theatre Reproduced for "Scaramouche"

FOR his Metro production of "Scaramouche" Rex Ingram has had built in the Metro west coast studios a complete reproduction of the famous theatre Feydoux in Paris. In the latter part of the eighteenth century the Feydoux was considered the highest development of theatre architecture and construction. It is chiefly notable for the now discarded principle of building the stage floor at an angle of ten degrees with the floor slanting upward toward the rear wall.

The scenario for "Scaramouche" was prepared by Willis Goldbeck. It is a Rex Ingram production for Metro and is being filmed by special arrangement with Charles L. Wagner. John F. Seitz is cameraman.

Lee-Bradford Announce Plans Will Distribute About Eighteen Features on State Rights Market

ARRANGEMENTS have been made with the Associated Authors Productions of Orlando, Fla., to distribute their first feature production, entitled "The Broad Road," featuring May Allison, Richard Travers and Ben Hendricks, as an early Fall release. The Associated Authors are now planning to make a series of pictures which will be released early in the Fall.

Indications are that the Lee-Bradford Corporation will release about 18 pictures on the state right market during the coming season. The majority of these will be made under the personal supervision of Mr. F. G. Bradford, vice-president of the Lee-Bradford Corporation.

Contracts have been signed with the Carl A. Theobald Producing Company of Dayton, Ohio, to make six pictures. Production on the first one will be started the middle of July.

There are three pictures to be made by the Roamax Film Corporation, in which Dorothy Chappelle $75,000 each.

Lloyd Hammond of the D. M. will be starred. There are two to be made by George L. Clarke, the pictures to approximately cost Film Corporation of Detroit, who recently made "Is Money Everything?" featuring Martha Mansfield, Miriam Cooper and Norman Kerry, which is now being released by the Lee-Bradford Corporation, has signed contracts to make a series of six productions for the coming season for Lee-Bradford.

Contracts were also recently signed with Arthur Donaldson and Joseph Levering to make one big special. Mr. Donaldson left New York last Wednesday, after signing the contract, to pick out locations for the story which has been decided upon and which will be announced at an early date.

F. B. O. House Organ Grows in Popularity

THIS week marks the issue of the first general edition of the Film Booking Offices house organ, published under the name of the F. B. O. News. Until recently the sheet consisted of one page, two columns, but has been gradually increased to four pages, five columns. It is now being printed to the number of ten thousand weekly, eight thousand of which are distributed to theatres and two thousand to publications throughout the country.

The matter it carries is a happy medium between fan and trade news, with picture layouts, and acquaints the exhibitor with F. B. O. news as well as the daily publications. The F. B. O. News is edited by Nat. G. Rothstein and Ed Hurley.

"Enemies of Women" Press Book Ready

The exhibitors' service book which the Goldwyn advertising and publicity department has prepared for Cosmopolitan's picturization of Vicente Blasco Ibanez's novel, "Enemies of Women," to be distributed by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, is just off the presses. It is crammed full of ideas and suggestions to the exhibitor. It was prepared by Silas F. Seadler and the staffs of the art and publicity departments.

The front cover is a reproduction, in color, of the striking, black and red window card. The back page shows, in color, the picturesque and impressionistic posters each one of which is so far out of the ordinary that it will command the eye wherever posted.

The series of drawn newspaper advertisements occupy four pages of the booklet. Four pages are devoted to newspaper stories—feature articles, advance notices, brief reviews. One page is devoted to stories for the woman's page of the newspaper.

The page of exploitation ideas is unusually rich in suggestions from merchant tie-ups to lobby displays.

Chicago, L. A. Boost "Safety Last"

Police Reserves Called to Control Crowds at Lloyd Feature Showings

"DID you hear the riot at Orchestra Hall last night?" asks the Chicago Herald-Examiner reviewer at the top of his column printed on May 29 and carrying the head, "Riot on Boulevard Is Caused by 'Safety Last'." "If you were within two blocks of the theatre you undoubtedly heard shriek upon shriek of laughter, followed by shrill screams of fear, and then more hilarious shouts.

"It was just the opening of Harold Lloyd in 'Safety Last.' What you heard was the audience enjoying the picture. If you ever saw a crowd of people go crazy with delight it was last night. . . . 'Safety Last' is the funniest comedy and shudderest thriller ever put on the screen. It isn't often you have these two combined. The result is one howling success—with everyone in the house howling at the same time."

Following are significant utterances of Los Angeles critics contained in extended reviews of "Safety Last":

Florence Lawrence, in the Examiner: "Lloyd's comedy mounts in ecstatic amazement—as it mounts in actual physical ascent. The sky's the limit for him, and when it lies just over the upper cornice of a twelve-story building he proves himself a 'climber' who would put the average nouveau riche society woman entirely out of the running. . . . The new film is without doubt the topnotch in hysterical culture."

Evening Herald: "It is a fitting thing that 'Safety Last' tells one of the most charming love stories ever presented on the screen. As the boy head over heels in love, Harold gets into the most trying difficulties. . . . I never saw so many thrills in a film in all my life. Real thrills, I mean. And in a comedy."

Grace Kingsley in the Daily Times: "As for Lloyd, we always knew he was funny, but we never realized how funny until this one. It isn't only that he does funny stunts, his comedy method itself is perfect of its own original kind."

"Brass" Has Preview in San Francisco

Charles G. Norris, author of "Brass," was the guest of honor at a banquet and preview of the Warner Brothers screen adaptation of the novel, at the San Francisco Hotel St. Francis, on Tuesday evening, May 22. More than 400 motion picture exhibitors of Northern California and Nevada attended.

The preview preceded the regular showing of "Brass" at the Granada theatre the following Saturday. A feature of the affair, which was sponsored by George A. Oppenheimer, Inc., Film Exchange, was the novel entrance to the ballroom. The guests entered through doorways formed by a reproduction of the cover of the book in mammoth size, and another huge cut-out poster showing the wedding ring of brass, from which the story takes its cue.

Notable among those present were Mrs. Kathleen Norris, author of "Lucretia Lombard," which Warner Brothers will adapt to the screen; Harry M. Warner; Harry Rapf, who produced "Brass"; Irene Rich and Monte Blue, stars in the picture; city officials and many associated with picture production.

Edward Belasco Production Is Approved at Premiere on West Coast

"HER ACCIDENTAL HUSBAND," the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation Edward Belasco Production featuring Miriam Cooper, Forrest Stanley, and Mitchell Lewis, went over with a bang on the occasion of its West Coast premiere, which was given at the California theatre, San Francisco, last week according to C. B. C. The newspapers there were unanimous in praising the production.

The San Francisco Examiner said: "Bound to please even the most fastidious. An offering of the thrilling kind."

"Fine cast, big sets, realistic action," was the opinion of the Chronicle.

"Belasco Picture royally received," read the head on the story in the News. "Mr. Belasco and his associates might be pardoned for patting themselves on the back. Received praise on all sides—praise which is fully deserved.

Well above average, holding interest from start to finish. Full quota of thrills. Characters well drawn and splendidly acted. Efficiently produced and carries conviction of realism that is highly commendable.

The Bulletin described the feature as "most spectacular in setting. Arouses direct interest. A splendid entertainment, has a novel plot, good action, and every requirement for an ideal motion picture, not forgetting an excellent cast."

Local interest in the film was especially high in that Mr. Belasco is a native of San Francisco, and the added fact that many of the social elect in San Francisco appeared as "extras" in the cabaret scenes, which were made in the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. The opening was described as something of a big social event, and Mr. Belasco, who was in San Francisco, was lionized.

Triangle Re-issue Schedule

Twenty-four New Editions Include Fairbanks, Hart and Talmadges

TWENTY-FOUR new editions of the greatest successes of the Triangle Film Corporation will be issued by Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc., this coming season, according to Oscar A. Price, president. The list includes four starring Fairbanks, three starring William S. Hart, three starring Norma Talmadge, two starring Lillian Gish, two starring Charles Ray, one each starring Alma Rubens, Constance Talmadge, Dorothy Gish, Bessie Love, Frank Keenan, Dorothy Dalton, Jane Grey and William Collier, Jr., and two special productions, one made by Allan Dwan and the other by Christie Cabanne.

H. E. Aitken, vice-president and general manager of Tri-Stone and former president of Triangle, selected a list, from the Triangle sales books, of the greatest successes of the stars who are popular today, and then made up the releasing list only of those in which the negatives are in perfect condition.

Each of the productions will be carefully re-edited and re-titled to conform to present usage, and entirely new advertising accessories will be prepared. Anita Loos and John Emerson have already completed the work in making new editions of two of the Fairbanks features, and probably will prepare the other two. Equally noted editors will handle the others.

It is planned to release them at the rate of two a month beginning June 15th. The following list, while subject to change in some of the distributing territories, indicates the order in which they will be available:

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Americano;" Alma Rubens in "I Love You;" William S. Hart in "The Bargain;" "The Food Gamblers," an Allan Dwan production, with Wilfred Lucas, Hedda Hopper and Elda Furry; Charles Ray in "The Pinch Hitter;" Norma Talmadge in "The Devil's Needle;" "The Mayor of Filbert," a Christie Cabanne production; Frank Keenan in "War's Women;" Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad Man;" William S. Hart in "Hell's Hinges;" Lillian Gish in "The Lily and the Rose;" Jane Grey in "Let Katy Do It;" Dorothy Dalton in "The Flame of the Yukon;" Norma Talmadge in "The Social Secretary;" Douglas Fairbanks in "The Half Breed;" Charles Ray and Frank Keenan in "The Coward;" William S. Lesser Signs Beauty to Long Contract

Sol Lesser, president of Principal Pictures Corporation, this week laid aside all laws and customs regarding girls having to work up in the movies, by signing pretty June Marlowe, aged 17, of Minneapolis, to play important roles in forthcoming Principal Pictures Corporation productions.

The contract covers a three year period and Miss Marlowe, who had never before been in studio work, was called on for immediate work in the Harold Bell Wright story, "When a Man's a Man."

Lesser feels she possesses unusual camera capabilities.

The second Fisher production following "Youth Triumphant" will be selected from three stories which the company purchased during the past two weeks including two popular books and one New feature's release date.

York stage success. Adaptations of these stories are now in work under the direction of Lillian Ducey, adapter and director of "Youth Triumphant." While Mr. Fisher is in New York, the producing activities will be under the charge of David Chapman, assistant supervising director, and James Dent, production manager.

In the cast are Virginia Lee Corbin, Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, George Siegman, Eugenie Besserer, Joseph Dowling, Kate Price, Mary Anderson and others.

Special Book Edition on "Daughters of Rich"

Brentano's, New York publishers, are so impressed with the importance of the Al Lichtman Corporation's Preferred Picture, "Daughters of the Rich," that they are issuing a special motion picture edition of the novel by Edgar Saltus, from which the film is adapted.

A new jacket illustrated with stills from the photoplay is now being prepared and will be available through Brentano's by June 15, the

Clara Bow Appearing in Person

Clara Bow, who after winning the Fame and Fortune contest conducted by the Brewster publications, made her successful film debut in the ingenue role in Elmer Clifton's super-production for Hodkinson, "Down to the Sea in Ships," and who last week began work at the Pyramid Studios in Astoria, Long Island, as leading woman for Glenn Hunter, in "Grit," has been making personal appearances the past few days, in connection with the showing in several Brooklyn and Long Island theatres of "Down to the Sea in Ships," as well as in conjunction with a Screen Personality contest for Brooklyn and Long Island, which is being conducted as a part of a nationwide campaign in the interests of the India Relief Fund.

Carl Cochems, former grand opera star, well remembered because of his work with the Chicago Grand Opera Co., who last week signed a contract to play a leading role in a forthcoming India Pictures Corporation production, also appeared in a number of the Brooklyn theatres and lent his services in the Screen contest drive.

George O'Hara at Work on Two Pictures

George O'Hara, featured player in the Witwer "Fighting Blood" series released on the F. B. O. program starts in this week on another Witwer feature production for a fall F. B. O. release entitled "Life, Liberty and —." O'Hara is now working on the second series of the "Fighting Blood" two-reelers.

Metro Pictures Corporation presents "The Fog," a Max Graf production, from which these scenes were made.

Selznick Is Releasing "Monkey's Paw"

"THE MONKEY'S PAW," a new mystery picture from the story by W. W. Jacobs has been released by Selznick Distributing Corporation.

It is said to be a tale of rural life, entwined with strands of Indian magic.

It offers exploitation angles with a good title, Indian magic and mother love.

The Selznick Distributing Corporation has also announced the early release of "Rupert of Hentzau" and "The Common Law." Both are Myron Selznick masterpieces and are the biggest productions ever made by Selznick.

Song "Just Like Woman" to be Broadcast

More than 200 radio stations throughout the United States will broadcast the fox trot ballad, "Just Like a Woman," written by Milt Hagen and Grace Haskins, producer of the picture of the same name recently released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

The song, which is the theme of the production produced by Miss Haskins, known as the youngest female producer in the motion picture field, is released for motion picture and broadcasting use without any charge or license fees.

Campaign Book Out for "Counterfeit Love"

Copies are now being distributed of the campaign book on "Counterfeit Love," the Playgoers Special presented by Murray W. Garsson, which has just been released. It is in eight pages, each about the size of a newspaper page, and with a cover in two colors.

An unusual amount of space is devoted to publicity stories, ready for reproduction in newspapers, and there is an extensive display of scene and advertising cuts, both of which are available to exhibitors in sizes ranging from one to four columns.

Special attention is paid to the presentation of exploitation ideas, of which a large number are offered, all designed to be of highly practical use as well as inexpensive.

Postal Chiefs Approve "Loyal Lives"

Vitagraph's coming Whitman Bennett production, "Loyal Lives," devoted to the men in the mail service will have the cooperation of the entire postal department, it is claimed. Harry S. New, Postmaster General, is said to have endorsed the story, and Walter S. Rydell, general superintendent of the railway mail service is said to be giving his personal attention to the direction of the train scenes.

Direction of the feature is in the hands of Charles Giblyn. The cast is headed by Brandon Tynan, while those supporting him are, Mary Carr, Faire Binney, "Buster" Collier, Blanche Craig and Charles Mac Donald.

Neilan Will Present Russian Story

Anticipating the demand for Russian stories on the screen, Marshall Neilan some two months ago purchased the rights to "The Rendezvous," a tragic Russian romance by Madeline Ruthven, student of the Russian drama and unknown as a motion picture author. This picturization is now nearing completion at the Goldwyn studio.

"For the past few years the Russian drama has been sadly neglected as far as motion pictures are concerned," said Mr. Neilan. "Here is a field of colorful motion picture material that has hardly been scratched.

"The wonderful success of Russian stage plays in New York I have felt for some time is bound to create a wide demand among film producers for this type of play."

In the leading characters of "The Rendezvous" are Conrad Nagel, Sydney Chaplin, Lucille Ricksen, Emmett Corrigan, Richard Travers, Kathleen Key, Elmo Lincoln, Eugenie Besserer and other popular players.

"Spider and Rose" Is Sold Abroad

Max Roth, manager of the foreign department of Principal Pictures Corporation, announces the consummation of two important transactions during the past week, each involving the sale of territorial rights to "The Spider and the Rose."

Pathe Freres Cinema, Ltd., of London, has acquired the rights to this picture for the entire United Kingdom. The other purchaser was Reginald Ford, who bought the rights for France, Belgium, Switzerland, Spain and Portugal for the same production.

"Unknown Purple" Being Produced by Carlos

BECAUSE of some slight confusion in the publication of the announcements relative to the production being made by Carlos Productions, Inc., for Truett distribution on the independent market, M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of Truett Film Corporation states that the picture being made is adapted from the stage play, "The Unknown Purple," written and produced by Roland West and Carlyle Moore, played for two seasons in New York with Richard Bennett, Helen MacKellar and Earle Brown in the principal roles.

The confusion arose from the fact that it was variously announced that the picture being made was adapted from "The Deep Purple," which is not so.

Cast in the principal roles of "The Unknown Purple" are Henry B. Walthall, Alice Lake, Helen Ferguson, Rosemary Theby, Stuart Holmes, Brinsley Shaw, James Morrison and Frankie Lee.

Metro Company Leaves for Location

Director Edward Sloman, with a company of 30 players and technicians and 22 horses, has left the Metro studios for Bishop, California, where some of the most important scenes of Metro's "The Eagle's Feather," will be photographed.

A realistic cattle stampede will be staged in the vicinity of Mammoth Lake, after which the company will move up into the snow country to secure some winter sequences.

The featured players who are on this three week location trip are Mary Alden, James Kirkwood, Elinor Fair, Lester Cuneo, George Seligmann, William Orlamond, Charles McHugh and John Elliott.

"The Eagle's Feather" is a story of the West by Katherine Newlin Burt and was adapted to the screen by Winifred Dunn. It will be the first of the new series of Metro all-star special productions to be released during the coming season.

"Under Red Robe" Troupe on Location

Alan Crosland and twenty members of the "Under the Red Robe" company left Stamford, Ct., where they have been on location for two weeks, for Ausable Chasm, near Plattsburgh, this week, where one of the big scenes in Cosmopolitan's picturization of Stanley Weyman's story will be filmed. This scene is said to depict a realistic battle between Gustav von Seyffertitz and George Houseman on one of the high cliffs overlooking the famous Ausable Chasm.

George Barnes and Ira H. Morgan will do the shooting. Robert B. Mantell, John Charles Thomas and Alma Rubens are the featured players.

Max Graf Sees Picture Changes

Says Demand of Public Is Far More of Human Element on the Screen

MAX GRAF, supervising director of the Graf Productions, who recently completed "The Fog" distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation, finds that the tendency of the film industry today is to get away from the machine made product.

"The demand of the public is for the human element on the screen, for a real transcript of life, for actors who produce their effects without recourse to theatricals, conducting themselves like human beings," declared Mr. Graf recently before an informal meeting of the executives of the moving picture industry on the west coast.

"The best pictures of the year have had almost no story at all. But they were real pictures of life as it is and this was the cause of their success. Such a one I should say is 'The Covered Wagon.'"

"Hackneyed love stories, too, will no longer suffice. The public demands originality. And they want to get away from the eternal parading of youth, youth, youth. They like a mixture of ages in the casts—because in life it takes people of all kinds and all ages to make things go round.

"Then there is too much unjustifiable exploitation. All-star casts are very well but the picture is the thing in the analysis for success—not casts. The public has its favorites, true, but these are often miscast merely to have their names on the billboards and electric signs. This day is fading fast."

Mr. Graf's recently finished picture, "The Fog," will be distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation. Among others in a notable cast were Mildred Harris and Cullen Landis. It was directed by Paul Powell under the personal supervision of Mr. Graf. The story is by William Dudley Pelley and was adapted to the screen by H. H. Van Loan and scenariorized by Winifred Dunn.

Endorsement for "Alice Adams"

Cleveland Women Give Approval to Feature of Associated Exhibitors

FOLLOWING a preview, the Cinema Club of Cleveland, Ohio, an organization of 150 representative women, has just given its endorsement to the Associated Exhibitors feature, Florence Vidor in "Alice Adams." Official action was taken declaring the picture admirable and the work of Miss Vidor and of Claude Gillingwater, who plays the role of Virgil Adams, as superb.

Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, who is president of the Cinema Club, was one of the speakers at the recent national convention in Chicago of the M. P. T. O. A. The club is in close touch with the exhibitors in opposing the Ohio censorship law, the women believing that the passing upon the merits of pictures is a function which should be handled by local communities.

Approval of "Alice Adams," as proof that a novel can be adapted to the screen without distorting the author's story or misrepresenting his characters, is given by the Butte Miner, which says:

"Seeing Florence Vidor in 'Alice Adams' was like having your imagination visualized. The picture painted in your mind by Booth Tarkington's words was unfolded on the screen before your amazed eyes. 'Alice Adams' is irrefutable evidence that a novel can be filmed as written. Florence Vidor proves, also, that the mental and spiritual processes of a character can be registered for the camera without explanatory sub-titles. Her face reflects all the fleeting thoughts of Alice, that very real young person who was so foolish, yet so brave—who tries to make so little seem like so much. As Miss Vidor portrays Alice you see beneath all her pretense and forced gayety the bravery and heartache of the girl who wanted to make her life seem as happy and prosperous as she wished it were."

Lincoln Returns to N. Y. for Visit

E. K. LINCOLN returned from California last Thursday, and will remain in the East for a number of weeks. He has been starring on the Coast in "The Right of the Strongest," by Frances Nimmo Greene, author of "One Clear Call." Katherine Hilliker is now titling the picture.

"A Wife's Romance" Is Near Completion

"A Wife's Romance," Clara Kimball Young's newest starring vehicle, to be presented through Metro by Harry Garson, is rapidly nearing completion at Metro's Hollywood studios. Unusual care is being taken by the director, Thomas Heffron, to preserve the true Spanish atmosphere of H. W. Roberts's fascinating novel, "La Rubia," on which the photoplay is based.

The cast for this photoplay includes such players as Lewis Dayton, Louise Bates Mortimer, Albert Roscoe, Lillian Adrian, Wedgewood Nowell, Arthur Hull, and Robert Caution.

The novel was adapted to the screen by Frank Beresford. The art direction is under the supervision of Joseph C. Wright, and the production is being photographed by Charles Richardson.

Universal City Host to War Secretary

UNIVERSAL CITY played host to Secretary of War Weeks, and the Congressional party visiting the Pacific Coast to view National defenses and strategic points, when the law makers and chief executives of the United States Army put in a day sightseeing at the big studio.

The party saw the making of pictures in detail, visiting the sets on which Herbert Rawlinson, Gladys Walton, Virginia Valli, Jack Mower and Eileen Sedgwick and Lon Chaney were working, and watching scenes filmed from "Railroaded," "The Untameable," "A Lady of Quality," "Daniel Boone" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

The great set for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," in which Lon Chaney is being starred, impressed the party particularly, and the Congressmen were loud in their expressions of wonder at the size of the spectacle.

Arrow Has "Little Red Schoolhouse" Novelty

What should be an attractive novelty comes to hand from the Arrow Film Corporation in the form of a beautifully printed booklet, telling, in word and picture, the story of the play, "The Little Red Schoolhouse," the Arrow Special which was made from Hal Reid's stage success of the same name.

This booklet is an excellent souvenir of the play. It is also available for use as a herald by the theatre, the inside back cover providing space for the exhibitor's advertisement.

The booklet, so Arrow states, is extremely inexpensive, due to the nature of the process by which it was made and the extremely large quantities Arrow has had prepared.

Theatre Named After Norma Talmadge

In honor of Norma Talmadge, the West Coast Theatres, Inc., which controls a chain of more than 100 photoplay houses on the Pacific Slope, has decided that their 3,000-seat house in Oakland will hereafter be known as "The Norma Talmadge theatre." The house is now being remodeled and redecorated.

The success of the Norma Talmadge pictures has induced executives of the big chain of motion picture houses to bestow upon the star this special honor.

Fox Offers Summer Attractions Has Long List of Special Productions Now in Distribution

With the tail end of the current season coming with the summer, and the 1923-24 program of special releases by Fox Film Corporation now in preparation, exhibitors are offered unusual opportunities for profitable runs on many of the big productions now in distribution.

Among the super-dramas which the Fox office claims provide excellent summer attractions and entertainment are: "Monte Cristo," with John Gilbert, the Alexander Dumas' masterpiece; "A Fool There Was," Peter Emerson Browne's stage success; "My Friend the Devil," based on the famous French novel, "Dr. Rameau," "The Face on the Barroom Floor," "Silver Wings," with Mary Carr; "The Town that Forgot God," "Lights of New York," "Who Are My Parents?" "Nero," Lincoln J. Carter's "The Fast Mail," Lupino Lane in "A Friendly Husband," "The Village Blacksmith," from Longfellow's famous poem, and "The Custard Cup," another special, with Mary Carr.

The star series offer "Tom Mix in Arabia," "Just Tony," "Do and Dare," "Romance Land," "3 Jumps Ahead," "Catch My Smoke," and "Stepping Fast," "John Gilbert in "Honor First," Calvert's Valley," "The Love Gambler," "Truxton King," "A California Romance," and "The Madness of Youth," Charles Jones in "West of Chicago," "Bells of San Juan," "The Footlight Ranger," "Snowdrift," "Skid Proof," "Boss of Camp 4," Shirley Mason in "Youth Must Have Love," "Lovebound," "Shirley of the Circus," "Pawn Ticket 210," and "The New Teacher."

William Russell has "Mixed Faces," "The Crusader," "The Great Night," "Man's Size," "Good-by, Girls," and "Boston Blackie." Those with William Farnum are "Moonshine Valley," "Without Compromise," and "Brass Commandments." Dustin Farnum has appeared in the following features: "Oathbound," "The Buster," "The Yosemite Trail," "While Justice Waits," "Three Who Paid," and "Buckling the Barrier."

Irene Rich to Appear in C. B. C. Feature

IRENE RICH has been secured by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for an important role in "Yesterday's Wife," the first of the Columbia Pictures series which that company will distribute on the Independent Market this fall. Miss Rich's engagement for this feature is in line with the C. B. C. announcement that its casts for the coming year will be distinguished by players who, in the seasons past, have shown a steady forging ahead in strength of portrayal and public esteem. In securing her in addition to Eileen Percy they will have two players whose personalities have come to mean much to the film goers.

Miss Rich's reputation was won by hard work and a variety of interpretations. Her most recent success was in Warner Bros. "Brass," and she also has an important part in Mary Pickford's newest feature, "The Street Singer."

"Safety Last" Packing Two L. A. Houses

Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last" is now said to be packing both the California and Miller theatres in Los Angeles. Placing the picture in the second house became necessary because of its popularity.

The Los Angeles newspapers all commented on this enlistment of another theatre, day and date, in the California's "Safety Last" extended run. In the Express, Pearl Rall's double-column leader started with the following:

"For the second time in the history of Los Angeles Filmdom, and of the Miller houses particularly, a picture has proved so popular that two houses have been necessary, and both the California and Miller's have been impressed into service for the wider exhibition of a screen story. Harold Lloyd's 'Safety Last' takes its place alongside Mary Pickford's 'Tess of the Storm Country.'"

Goodman Is Completing Equity Special

While Daniel Carson Goodman is titling and editing his next Special production to be distributed by Equity Pictures Corporation, Louis Baum, vice-president and general manager of that corporation announces that inquiries from many independent buyers are coming into the office regarding it.

The cast includes Mary Carr, Mildred Harris, Charles Emmet Mack, Clara Bow, and "The Gingham Girl" chorus.

"Mark of Beast" Is Due Shortly

Thomas Dixon Production Will Be Distributed Through Hodkinson

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation that they will distribute "The Mark of the Beast," which is a picturization of the novel, "The Beast," by Thomas Dixon. It was produced personally by Thomas Dixon. He was also responsible for the direction and the continuity. In a statement made by the author of "The Birth of a Nation," as soon as the distribution rights with the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation had been made, he said that his effort to produce and direct his own story was decided upon in order to give absolute freedom to the author in the filmization of the story.

In a brief address made to a specially invited audience at the Town Hall, New York, recently, preceding the showing of "The Mark of the Beast," Mr. Dixon admitted that this production would not have any unusual sets, big spectacles, such as snow storms, forest fires and other motion picture sensationalisms, in fact there would be no resorting to the popular "hokum" to get the production across. In this respect it is stated that the success of the entertainment value of the story would depend entirely upon its own dramatic merits and plot.

matic merits and plot.

It is felt by the Hodkinson officials that this dependency is not misplaced when it is considered that Thomas Dixon's reputation in the publishing world has proved him to be one of the greatest authors in developing dramatic situations.

"The Mark of the Beast" is a story of the sub-conscious mind and that mystic power within which impels human beings to strange actions over which they have no control.

The continuity was arranged by Mr. Dixon who was also responsible for the direction with William C. Thompson as his assistant. Harry Fishbeck did the photography. The interiors were filmed at the Tilford Cinema studios. A strong cast was selected to interpret Mr. Dixon's unusual characterizations. Madelyn Clare plays the role of the girl. Robert Ellis enacts the part of Dr. David Hale and Warner P. Richmond plays the difficult role of Donald Duncan, "The Beast." Helen Ware and Gustav Von Seyffertitz also present strong characterizations.

"The Mark of the Beast" is scheduled for release June 17 by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

Unusual Architecture Embodied in Theatre

Grauman's Metropolitan Combines Gothic, Persian, Greek Aztec, Oriental, Etc.

ARCHITECTURAL designs emblematic of many sections of the world have been used in the designing of Sid Grauman's Metropolitan theatre, Los Angeles.

The Metropolitan is the fourth and by far the largest house to bear the name of Grauman in Los Angeles, and, like the cinema temple at Third and Broadway, the Rialto, near Eighth street, and Hollywood Egyptian, this magnificent auditorium for the exhibition of motion pictures has individuality, and it is safe to predict that anyone visiting this place will never forget its beauty and attractiveness.

Seating Capacity More Than Four Thousand

The theatre, having a seating capacity of more than four thousand, will have three entrances and more than three times that many exits. The main entrance is from Broadway, forty feet in width and extends through the half block and over an alley by a ramp to the promenade floor of the theatre. On one side of this entrance eventually will be three or four small shops built on the arcade design, and adding beauty to the general character of the long lobby. The second entrance of importance is that on Sixth street. The building on this side is set back ten feet from the property line with the exception of the box office, which fronts on the property line,

The Importance of Architecture

THE architectural design embodied by a motion picture theatre is becoming of utmost importance in the successful operation of the house.

The physical characteristics make a decided appeal to the clientele. The theatre herewith described features periods of architecture which makes the general effect most unusual and striking. A great amount of study and thought is warranted in determining the physical characteristics for the theatre and good judgment should be made in selecting a competent architect with whom the ultimate responsibility rests.

The future holds forth interesting developments for the architecture of motion picture theatres. Each year marks an advancement. The motion picture theatre is affording the opportunity for the development of architecture in America.

adding prominence to this highly important part of the theatre. This entrance is 62 feet wide and has a depth of 28 feet. The Hill street entrance is smaller, being about 20 feet square. Both the Sixth and the Hill street entrances lead to the main foyer, which is 28 x 126 feet. From this there are three entrances to the main floor promenade and stairways on either side to the mezzanine and balcony floors. The main floor auditorium is 126 x 144 feet in depth, while the balcony is the same width and but 90 feet deep. The stage, by far the largest west of Chicago, is 126 feet in width, 40 feet in depth and has a proscenium arch 60 feet in width and 80 feet in height. Immediately inside of this is the orchestra platform, 56 feet in width and of sufficient depth for sixty musicians, which is placed upon an elevator and may be lowered or raised 15 feet.

The theatre, designed and built under the supervision of William Lee Woollett, is spoken of by the designer as metropolitan, but, in the opinion of the writer, it should be referred to as cosmopolitan. Gothic, Persian, Greek Aztec, Oriental and every other known style of architecture, it seems, has been used to advantage. The theatre may be termed an architectural melting pot. In every direction it is different. In every room there is an individual color design, but in each instance this color design is augmented by lighting effects encompassing the three complementary colors. Gray predominates throughout the entire edifice.

Of particular significance is the artistic manner in which the required asbestos drop curtain has been treated. This usually drab feature of a theatre, in this instance becomes a wonderful and exotic thing of beauty. On it has been painted a satire on the early chapters of Wells' book, "The Outlines of History." At the bottom are shallow waters which Wells tells us were life's beginning. From this two noble figures spring and hold aloft a human heart from which branches the tree of life. A red cross typifies the emblem of mercy, thus recalling the deeds of valor and Flanders Field, and at the left Adam kneels before the wily serpent.

There are but four pieces of drapery used decoratively, two hanging on either of the side walls. The remainder of the walls take on the appearance of being covered with drapes, which in reality are paintings that have a tapestry appearance. The designs and studies in these conform to the architecture of each individual room.

Projection Department Well Equipped and Designed

The projection room, 40 feet in width and 15 feet deep, is located in the center back of the balcony. The equipment includes Powers projectors of the latest type, stereopticon spot lights and fireproof automatic rewinders. The switchboard, 10 feet in height and 18 feet in length, was specially built upon the stage to meet the requirements of the theatre. All lights are on a dimmer system and to every section of the building the separate wiring of the colored lights has been extended.

Bar Room Set Can Make Appeal

Important Points on Prologues that Should be Considered by Exhibitors

Article by Lee S. Ferguson

SOMETHING that seems to have a universal appeal is a log cabin set or a bar room set, and the latter as a background for a prologue is what Managing Director Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand used for "The Girl of the Golden West." Another good reason for its use at this time was because anything of like nature had not been put on at the Brooklyn Mark Strand for quite some time, and thus it would not be a repetition. That is a thought for all showmen to keep in mind—don't repeat too frequently, because when monotony comes in at the stage door the customers leave by the front door and forget to come back. Old ideas dressed up can pass as new, but still there is so much that can be created—so much that has not yet been created—that repetition is excusable only upon public demand.

There may be exhibitors who are afraid to try a bar room set for various reasons. Some think it may revive thoughts of pre-Volstead days that may be unwelcome to the public. Some think it may injure the tone of the house. But, the fact that this idea can be used successfully at the Brooklyn Mark Strand, which theatre is second to none in the country in class, proves that those beliefs are wrong. To be sure, a great deal depends upon the way in which it is done. The set is only a background, just atmosphere. What you present with it is what spills the beans or brings home the bacon. In doing a prologue of this nature it should be lifted up out of the commonplace and made a real presentation that can take its place with the artistic things of life, despite its locale.

Thus, in planning this prologue, the song number, "The Girl of the Golden West," was made the feature, and a lovely girl to represent "the girl," of secondary importance. The Criterion Male Quartette, one of the best known singing organizations in this country, was engaged to do the "vocalizing." As can be noted from the cut accompanying this story, the quartette was costumed as miners of the days of '49, in keeping with the story of the picture. They sang to the girl, who resembled Sylvia Breamer and stood behind the bar. At the second chorus the lights began to dim down and at the finish were out altogether, with only an orange spot covering the girl's head and shoulders. A serim was in front of the set, and the picture, "The Girl of the Golden West," was flashed on at the close of the song and while the girl was still in tableau, making a very complete and effective tie-up between prologue and picture.

A log cabin set or bar room set is what is needed for this prologue or one of similar nature. The former is more quickly associated with the old West in the average mind. The "props" include two or three small tables, four chairs, a bar, two skins to hang on the wall, a small beer keg and faucet, a hanging oil lamp, and plenty of bottles. Of course, the hanging lamp is wired for electricity—and the bottles are empty. The bar is made of a skeleton covered with painted canvas, and the shelves behind the bar are plain. Immediately behind the girl is a window, mainly for lighting purposes. This set was lighted in orange and blue, using borders, foots and spots, with a flood coming in through the window behind the girl. Note that but one painted sign was used, as several would in a way tend to cheapen the prologue. This, however, is an elastic matter governed by the class of the house and the class of the patronage. Backing up this prologue set was a black cyclorama, which adds another point to our story which appeared in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of June 9.

New Theatre for Staten Island

The Johnson & Moses Theatrical Company which controls a group of theatres in Staten Island, N. Y., announced this week that they had awarded the contract for their new theatre to be built in Port Richmond, Staten Island, to M. Shapiro & Son of 1540 Broadway. The work is going ahead immediately, ground having been broken on the new project. The new theatre will seat 2,400 and will be the finest in equipment that money can buy. It will be ready for opening some time next November. A picture and vaudeville policy will feature the new theatre, following the style of the Liberty theatre which is now the leading theatre in Staten Island.

The name of the new theatre will be picked by the theatregoers of Staten Island themselves. The Johnson & Moses Theatrical Company will conduct a public contest through the Staten Island newspapers and through the theatres now operated and whatever name is suggested by the most people will be chosen.

The Capitol, Des Moines' Newest House, Replica of Spanish Art

THE CAPITOL is to be the name of the new theatre in the Alhambra Building, now nearing completion, on Grand Avenue between Fifth Street and Sixth Avenue, Des Moines, and will be twelve stories high when completed.

The new theatre is just across the alleyway from Des Moines' largest motion picture house, the Des Moines. The Capitol has a stage and dressing rooms such as to make it available as a legitimate house. Its seating capacity will allow 2,000 people to be handled comfortably. It is not decided as yet whether the Capitol will be a house for motion pictures or vaudeville and pictures.

Norman Vorse of Vorse, Kraetsch & Kraetsch, is the architect and says that every feature of the house was copied from one of the old Spanish renaissance buildings.

The spacious lobby will indicate the style of architecture which is carried out inside the theatre. The floors and wainscoting will be of tile and the ceiling will be of highly-colored plaster work. Two wide staircases will lead up to the lounge, which will occupy the entire front of the building. It will be fitted with Spanish rugs, tapestries and lamps, according to present plans.

The entrance to the balcony will be on the same floor level as that of the lounge, doing away with further steps. The balcony will be spacious and luxuriously fitted.

The stage will be large enough to provide for any sort of entertainment. The proscenium will be 36 feet wide, permitting the use of regulation 35-foot drops. The color scheme of the inside of the theatre has not yet been definitely decided, but if the plans now made are followed it will be a riot of colors corresponding to the Spanish buildings.—Phillips.

Theatre Deal Is Made in Providence, R. I.

Max Nathanson, owner of the Modern theatre, Providence, R. I., and Archibald Silverman, Charles Silverman, Manuel F. W. Williams, Louis Robinson, J. Monte Robinson, and Isaac Rose and the National Realty Company, owners of the Strand theatre building, Providence, have bought the stock of Burton A. Emery in the Emery Amusement Company, amounting to 38 shares.

The purchase does not alter the control of the Emery company, it was said. The general management of the Emery Amusement Company will continue as heretofore under the management of Alton C. Emery, secretary-treasurer of the corporation, and Martin R. Toohey, general manager, who has heretofore been manager of the Emery theatre, and who on behalf of the Emery Amusement Company is also associated with the new Leroy in Pawtucket.

New Leroy, Pawtucket, R. I., Opens

The new Leroy Theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., costing nearly $1,000,000., opened recently with an audience of more than 3000. The three men behind the venture were Jude, Charles and Clinton Payne. The Paynes plan to show motion pictures during the summer season. In the fall the Leroy will present vaudeville and pictures.

There are no posts or other obstructions in the entire theatre, a full view of the stage and huge organ being permitted from any seat in the house. The walls are lined with silk damask of mulberry and gold, adding to the warmth and effect of the general coloring. The richly colored and handsomely furnished circular promenade in the balcony and the proscenium arch, said to be among the largest in the country, are attractive features of the house. The theatre was two years in process of construction. The temperature of the house is controlled by automatic regulators. By this system, fresh air is taken from out-of-doors and passed thru tempering coils, an air washer, reheaters and then into the plenum space under the auditorium floor whence it enters the building thru openings in the floor at the end of each row of seats. Thus a constant flow of air is distributed throughout the auditorium. Edwin D. Hirtle of Pawtucket was superintendent of construction and supervised the entire erection under the direction of the architect, Arthur Brounet, nationally known artist of New York City.—Strong.

The Cash Value of Controlled Lighting

Good lighting is not a frill that you throw in; the successful exhibitor well knows that it is as important as any part of his entertainment. Audiences respond to artistic lighting effect; it increases their enjoyment of the performance, and that means they come back.

That's the reason the big, successful houses consider their color symphonies just as important as the music they provide.

You will find the Major System of light control in use in the great theatres famous for their sumptuous productions, as in the smaller houses with the paying patronage. Being of unit construction, the Major System can be readily installed in any theatre, large or small; it will produce revenue from either. It is one-man controlled, even in the largest theatres, and absolutely safe even with an inexperienced operator.

MAJOR SYSTEM ADVANTAGES:

Remote Control
 Extended Remote Control
 Remote Dimmer Control Cumulative Control
 Pre-selection
 Flashless, noiseless switch operation
 Minimum stage space
 Unit construction
 Experienced design
 Perfect workmanship
 Highest grade materials

Direct Current Machinery

LESSON VI—PART IV

Field Windings

IRECT current machines are usually distinguished from each other by their field winding. This applies to both generators and motors so there should be no need to repeat in future chapters dealing with motors what will be said now.

The field winding usually furnishes the means for controlling the operation of the machine. This is quite logical since the field winding is responsible for the flux threading the armature coils and the flux in turn, other things being constant, practically controls the current induced in the armature. In the case of a motor the flux controls the speed of the armature as will be shown later.

There are two general groups into which all D. C. machines fall with respect to their field windings. These are:

1. Separately excited machines.
2. Self-excited machines.

Separately Excited Machines

A separately excited generator is one which has its field coils excited by some external source of supply and does not rely in any way on the current generated in the armature for the necessary exciting current. Such a machine is shown in Fig. 67 where E represents the line voltage and R the variable control resistance regulating the current following through field coils. As the current through the field coils is increased from zero the flux will also increase in almost direct proportions. That is if the current is doubled, the flux will also be doubled. This will continue until a point is reached where the iron path through the machine will be able to hold less and less flux. A point will finally be reached, as the exciting current is increased where apparently little further increase in flux is obtained and the machine is then said to be saturated. As the flux is increased, the voltage induced in the armature is also increased.

If, however, the excitation (flux) of the machine is held constant and the machine is loaded the terminal voltage will begin to fall off and decrease as the load increases. This drop in terminal voltage in the case of a separately excited machine is due to two things:

1. Armature Reaction drop.
2. Armature Resistance drop ($E - IR$).

The reason for the drop due to armature reaction was explained in last week's article and the drops due to the resistance of the armature conductors should be familiar to the projectionist. As the load is increased, obviously, the line current also increases and hence the IR drop along with it. And the more current flowing through the armature coils the greater will be the demagnetizing effect of the armature reaction.

Self-Excited Machines

Self-excitation depends upon the residual magnetism of the iron path in the generator. By residual magnetism is meant the small amount of magnetism left in the iron after the current is thrown off. This magnetism is used to start the induction of voltage in the armature and as load is applied part of the current drawn from the generator is shunted, or switched to the field coils to further excite the coil and so build up the flux. A machine of this type is shown in Fig. 68.

What was said regarding the increase of magnetizing flux with increase of exciting current in the case of separately excited generators also applies to shunt machines. That is, the flux will increase almost proportionally with increase of exciting current until saturation begins when any increase in current will produce only a small increase in flux.

As a shunt generator is loaded, however, a greater drop in terminal voltage will occur than would be the case if a separately excited machine were used. Instead of having only two voltage drops there are now three. These are:

1. Armature reaction drop.
2. Armature resistance drop.
3. Drop due to decrease in excitation.

The third drop is really the result of the first two because as the terminal falls the current through the shunt field, which is dependent upon this voltage, also falls and this in turn decreases the excitation.

It is a property of shunt generators that they protect themselves on short circuit. If a short circuit occurs, the terminal voltage drops to zero and since the exciting current depends upon the voltage, it, too, will drop to zero and the only current flowing through armature will be that due to residual magnetism which is quite small.

Series Machines

If the field coil of a direct current generator is so connected in the circuit that the same current which flows through the armature also flows through and excites the field, the machine is called a series generator. This type of machine was quite commonly used for supplying energy to the arc lamps of street series lighting systems and by means of a regulator, furnished a constant current to the lamps. It is practically obsolete now, however. Such a machine is shown in Fig. 69.

The voltage drops in this machine number two and consist of the drop due to armature section and that due to armature resistance.

Compound Machines

A very useful form of direct current generator is obtained by combining both the shunt and series types of machines in one. Thus if a shunt winding and series winding be placed on the same machine, the result will be a compound generator. There are two such types depending upon how the windings are connected. These are known as the short shunt and long shunt compound wound generators. Fig. 70 shows both of these connectors. The connection for the long shunt machine is shown by the dotted line while that for the short shunt is shown by the full heavy line.

The principal purpose of compound generator is to control the terminal voltage as the load on the machine increases. This is done by varying the number of series turns. Thus a large number of series turns will produce a large drop in terminal voltage (Continued on page 3004) is now dotted with hundreds of prosperous cities and towns. Millions of acres of field and meadow, with stretches of friendly woodland in between, extend from horizon line to horizon line, and joining all in a very network of lines, crossing and recrossing in every direction, run many thousands of miles of rail and automobile roads, living arteries of busy trade and social intercourse. Great indeed has been the transformation from the wilderness of that early day. The dreams of the brave pioneers are being realized. Civilization has overtaken and overcome the wild.

So it comes that today the luxuries and refinements of the great metropolitan centres are taken quite as a matter of course in both the public and the private life of the people of this entire region, whether "South" or "North of 36."

Especially notable in the cities are the beauty and luxuriousness of the newer theatres and auditoriums, vying with the finest in the country in architectural beauty and richness of furnishings.

In the important matter of correct and comfortable theatre seating, through the nationwide services of the American Seating Company, the West need take no "back seat" to the East. For through this company the best in Theatre Seating is available and welcomed throughout the entire West from the Mississippi River to the Coast.

The four theatres here illustrated are representative recent American Seating Company installations in this region.

Other theatres considering remodeling, or new theatres in contemplation could hardly do better than follow the example of these leaders in their field.

The "Stratford" Being Renovated

The Stratford, Conn., theatre, only moving picture house in that town, has been bought by James M. Sullivan of South Manchester, Conn., from I. Alpert. Alterations and repairs are now in progress and the new owner announces he will reopen the house the 19th. Alpert closed the deal, whereby his interests in the theatre are transferred to Sullivan, several days ago but remained in possession until the night of the 12th. The theatre has passed through several ownerships during the past year, Harry Feldman having sold it to Edward Turner, who, on March 30, sold it to Alpert.

Novel Stunt for Radio Week

Manager Herschel Stuart of the Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., emphasized "Radio Week" by the origination of the following stunt:

A microphone was placed in one of the upper boxes. This microphone was connected to the broadcasting station of one of the newspapers, Station WMC. Several receiving sets with loud speakers were set up in various parts of the house, so distributed that one could be heard from every part of the house. With the equipment set as explained, programs, including solos by members of the orchestra, were played in this upper box. They were transmitted from there to the broadcasting station, there broadcasted, then received back in the theatre, where the entire audience received the number in great volume, the fact being both explained and demonstrated that the artist was transmitting his number not much louder than a whisper, the same being amplified by the broadcasting station.

duce what is called "over compounding." That is, the terminal voltage will rise as the load is increased due to the large current flowing through the series coil in comparison to that through the shunt coil. Over compound is resorted to by central stations in order to compensate for the IR drop due to line resistance.

If the voltage of the machine remains practically constant for a wide range of loads, the machine is said to be "flat-compounded." This type of direct current generator is much used for motor picture projection so that for any amperage up to about 100 the voltage remains practically constant. One common type used for projection has the arcs connected in multiple, so that the additional arc while being "warmed up" has no effect on the one projecting the picture. Compound machines are also much used for other purposes.

Good Work of N. A. M. L. Greatly Appreciated

We wish to tell you how much we appreciate the good work that the N. A. M. L. is doing. Enclosed you will find two membership blanks and fifty cents for two buttons. Please admit us to this wonderful league and send us blanks and every thing that goes with it.

We are under the heading of the High School theatre, and our performances take place in the auditorium of the local high school, which has a seating capacity of 810. We have two new Powers 6-B projectors with A. C. compensare, while a fourteen-inch exhaust fan in the top of the projection room gives us ample ventilation at all times. The projection room is also equipped with a 12-volt system for framing lights. We think that we have one of the best outfits of any theatre of this size in the vicinity, and try to give them the best projection possible.

We usually run the same show three or four times and we cut out all the misframes and punch-marks after the first screening.

We sincerely hope that the League will continue to grow and that there will be more real projectionists in the country.

Projectionally yours,

Dear Editor:

Being an old number, 604, of the League and have never written the Forum, guess I had better give an account of myself. I joined in 1918, then operating at the Catharine theatre at Monticello, Fla. But have been here at the Dixie since August, 1919. My equipment consists of two Simplex running on alternating current; size of operating room, 8 x 12-8 feet deep. Fulco fireproof rewind motor driven. My picture is as near perfect as I should want—my throw being 85 feet. Enclosed find 25 cents in stamps for new button, and please send me labels.

Many thanks from one that is going to do his part in improving film conditions.

LOUISIANA

Gretna—Ground will be broken for a $12,000 theatre the promoters of which are Thomassie & Cassou of Harvey. Lot at Newton & 3rd Sts., opposite the Knights of Columbus Home.

Reno Rialto Being Thoroughly Remodelled

Plans for remodeling the Rialto theatre at a cost of $75,000 and changing the famous playhouse into a motion picture theatre were completed when the Reno stockholders in the T. & D. Jr. enterprises met with Mike Naify, general manager and Frank Costello, local manager of the company, and gave their O. K. to the plans with instructions to have plans completed at once and to start work at once.

The theatre is the largest in Reno and the remodeling plans call for enlarging the seating capacity, installing new seats, retinting and redecorating, the adding of two stores on either side of the entrance, one to be rented for a confectionery store, the placing of commodious offices on the mezzanine floor for the officers of the company and the installation of modern equipment for the showing of high class pictures. The entrance is to be changed in such a way as to make it more attractive and of value for advertising the attractions.

Two large electric signs are to be placed on either side of the theatre building and a large vacant lot adjoining has been leased by the company to afford parking space for patrons.

The T. & D. Jr., enterprises now control twenty-two show houses in Nevada and California and it is announced that within ninety days the company will add fifteen more to its holdings, buying theatres in a number of places and building new houses where it is deemed advisable.—Floyd

Grand Theatre, Hartford, Opens

With the opening of the Grand theatre, Hartford, Conn., has another motion picture house to cater to a high-grade and critical public. Philip Smith of Boston, Mass., who operates a chain of theatres in western New York and in Massachusetts, has secured a five-year lease on the Grand, with privilege of renewal, and will conduct the house on a modern scale, playing only feature films.

Ray S. Averill, general manager of the Smith chain of theatres, has been in Hartford supervising the installation of new projection equipment and new screen. The equipment will bring, it is claimed, the Grand on a par with the other motion picture houses of the city.

The theatre will run a continuous bill from 10.30 a. m. to 10.30 p. m., changing its program Monday, Wednesday and Friday, with a special Sunday evening program.

Mr. Averill, who will manage the house until it has been firmly established, is planning to organize a women's orchestra, which will play at all programs. Mr. Averill was identified with the Connecticut motion picture field prior to his going to Boston.

CHARACTERS { Twelve year old Simplex
Newly installed Simplex

New Simplex: "Say boy, that bird Oswald you told me about last week musta been a hot sketch. He sure had you tied up in a knot."

Old Simplex: "I'll say he did. But you know, at heart Oswald wasn't such a bad guy. That was just his way of learnin'. I don't mind a feller pullin' a bone if he learns somethin' by doin' it. It's the mean bimbos like this 'one-way' Jiggins that get me sore, with the miserable stunts they pull off and blame the machine for if they're caught at it.

"This boy Jiggins sure was a tight guy. The gang called him 'One-Way' because that's the only direction he ever allowed his money to go, just one way and that was 'in'—never 'out.' The boys used to say that Jiggins was so stingy, he'd only allow his watch to run during the day time. He shut it off at night; claimed it would last twice as long that way.

"Once, Jack our Operator was booked to go to an Operators' Convention and he arranged with Jiggins to substitute for him here for a few days. It seems that being nosey was one of Jiggins' failings along with all of his others, and the first thing he did after Jack went away was to take out my intermittent movement. Now Jack had me runnin' like a clock and he never would dream of pullin' me apart, but a little thing like that didn't worry Jiggins any. And while the poor nut was standin' there holdin' the intermittent movement in one hand, he began spinnin' the fly wheel with the other tryin' to adjust the star when all of a sudden—ZOWIE!!—the movement slipped out of his hand and crashed down on to the cement floor.

"Well, the result was a badly sprung star wheel shaft and a dented intermittent sprocket which Jiggins tinkered up enough so we could limp through the afternoon show. Then he dashed down to Spivens, the second hand supply king down in the film district, and he brought back a fake Simplex sprocket and shaft. After a lot of sweatin' and swearin' and filin' he finally forced these fake parts into the intermittent and started me going.

"Oh, boy!! it fairly made me sick to feel my pin wheel strainin' and bumpin' its way over that poorly made star wheel. And you should have seen the picture on the screen. Say—that film was doin' a regular hula hula. The manager came rushin' up into the coop. 'What the sufferin' hoozis happened to the machine,' he roared at Jiggins. 'Why,' sez Jiggins, 'I had to put a new star and shaft on this afternoon,' and he presented the manager with a receipted bill for one Simplex star and shaft. He didn't tell the manager though, that the difference between the fake parts and what genuine Simplex parts would cost went into his 'one-way' pocket.

"'But why should new Simplex parts run such an awful lookin' picture?' sez the manager.

"'Why,' sez Jiggins without battin' an eye, 'BECAUSE THEY DON'T MAKE SIMPLEX PARTS AS GOOD AS THEY USTER.'"

New Simplex: "Sweet Patootie! But that guy Jiggins sure was a rough worker. But he and his friend Spivens will get an awful setback when they find that all new Simplex parts are being marked now."

Old Simplex: "I'll say they will. But Jiggins got set back enough when Jack came home. And judgin' from the color of Jiggins' left eye right afterwards, he couldn't have seen a trademark if it was hangin' down off the front of his hat."

"THREE AGES"

PON the completion of Buster Keaton's first feature-length comedy, "Three Ages", Lou Anger wrote STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES: "I want to compliment your organization upon its excellent service in the daily laboratory work upon this picture.

A producer wants just two things from a laboratory: proper developing; and prompt, dependable service. STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES have given us both in the production of 'Three Ages'. We appreciate the many advantages of your institution."

S General Manager of Buster Keaton comedies, Lou Anger knows motion picture production. He realizes the laboratory's importance in bringing to the screen the producer's conception of his story, be it comedy or drama. His recognition of the excellence of STANDARD SERVICE means much, because he knows the value of that service to producers.

HE corresponding excellence of STANDARD PRINTS means much to distributors and exhibitors. A steadily increasing number of the West's foremost producers have learned that their pictures are best presented to the public through our camera-to-screen service. They have learned that their best guarantee of exhibitor satisfaction is the name, STANDARD PRINTS.

MERRY GO ROUND

"ALL the world loves a lover"—and all the world will love "MERRY GO ROUND," for here is the most stupendous love drama ever told on the screen. Over a year in the making, this mad whirl of life, love and luxury cost a fortune. The result is worth it.

We quote below one of the critics who witnessed this masterpiece at a special showing in Los Angeles:

Says Emm Ell in "Closeup":

"'MERRY GO ROUND' IS DESTINED TO HAVE A PHENOMENAL SUCCESS. We see the life of the Prater, the Coney Island of Vienna, in all its boisterousness, gayety and heartaches. If you seek emotion, you will find it here aplenty. If in search of humor, there are touches here and there to amuse you. If you are a snob and desire to delve into high court circles and society, affection and snobbery, it is here that you will receive a liberal education. 'Merry Go Round' is a vital thing for every human heart.

"There is one paramount thought now in mind—and that is THAT 'MERRY GO ROUND' WILL STAND OUT AS THE CINEMATIC ACHIEVEMENT IN THE YEAR 1923."

It has been many years since the New York public experienced as great a sensation as this stage success. It will be many years before the theatre-going public will forget the tremendous, unusual situations in this powerful drama that thrilled all who saw it (so universally recognized for its tremendous possibilities as a great screen production that Universal had to outbid every large picture producing company in purchasing this powerful play). With the greater facilities and larger scope it will receive in picturized form, you can readily imagine the big screen sensation this play will prove to be. In the role made famous by Ann Mason will be one of the most beautiful women on the screen—Claire Windsor. Playing the male lead opposite her will be Norman Kerry, one of the handsomest and most highly talented of actors. Another of the great pictures you will get from Universal this coming season.

the SIGNAL TOWER

Each year Edward O'Brien publishes in book form a compilation of the best short stories of the year. This has come to be recognized here and abroad as a standard work. Among the top ranking stories in O'Brien's best short stories for 1922 was "The Signal Tower" by Wadsworth Camp. Universal recognized in this masterpiece a rare, dramatic thriller—a gem of the first water—one that would lend itself ideally for a tremendous box office success. This story will shortly go into production with an all-star cast soon to be announced.

UP THE LADDER

One of the biggest popular stage successes in recent years and which scored a great hit in Chicago during the present season is "Up the Ladder." This play was written by Owen Davis who has just been presented with the Pulitzer Prize in recognition of his latest success, "Icebound."

Carrying an appeal that is almost universal, this comedy drama will be produced under the direction of Harry Pollard, the man who directed "The Leather Pushers" and "Trifling With Honor" for Universal. The cast is now being selected and when announced will prove a surprise sensation. "Up the Ladder" is another guarantee of the worth-while pictures, packed with tremendous pulling power that Universal is offering exhibitors for the season of 1923-24.

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS

No better news—surely none of more importance—can come to gladden the hearts of exhibitors and their patrons than Universal's announcement that Reginald Denny, the brilliant, handsome star, will appear in four Jewel Productions. This extraordinarily popular star of "The Leather Pushers," "The Kentucky Derby" and later "The Abysmal Brute" has created for himself a following that ranks with the topmost. Stories by famous authors that will fit his striking, dashing personality are now in preparation and will be shortly announced. UNIVERSAL
PICTURES

"The Pleasure is All Yours"

PARAMOUNT will release in the season 1923-1924, fifty-two pictures—one a week.

Recently, superlatives have been overworked in describing coming motion pictures. Promises have been big. "All star casts" is a phrase that has come to mean little. "Knock-out," "wallop," "pack them in," "real special," "film epic," "box-office appeal," "capacity crowds," "real bets," "solid gold," "greatest of history" are labels pasted on almost all film productions these days.

Paramount need only point out that the entire resources of the Paramount organization previously engaged in making 80 to 100 pictures a year of the consistently high quality of all Paramount Pictures, will this season be concentrated in the making of 52 productions.

Never has it been truer that what the public wants is great stars, superbly directed in great screen stories. A simple formula, but one whose fulfillment is only possible after tremendous efforts, prophetic insight into public taste and a producing personnel of stars and artists who have proved their real value to the public.

Such effort Paramount has made. Such a personnel Paramount has. And the results will be offered to exhibitors in a product of fifty-two pictures that, by themselves, can and will make the season of 1923-24 without question the most profitable in exhibitor history.

Paramount is announcing at this time only a few of the productions for 1923, in order to provide protection to the great productions to be released later in the season, to give necessary protection to the exhibitor, to allow him to cash in on the full value of titles, stories and new production ideas, and to enable him to establish himself, without fear of interference, as the leader in the field.

The New Paramount Pictures

"THE CHEAT" has a happy ending. In it Miss Negri appears as the luxury-loving wife of a young American (Jack Holt) torn between her love for her husband and the riches offered her by a handsome Prince (Charles de Roche). The story is one of the most intense dramatic interest. There is not a flaw in story or production. Miss Negri has never been so beautiful, never has she had such an appealing role, never has any star worn such marvelous gowns. You need take no one's word for these statements. See it for yourself.

GLORIA Swanson as "BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE" is an announcement that will bring in the crowds. And after they're in they'll see a flawless representation of this famous French comedy—filled with laughs, with surprises, with gorgeous beauty, with drama, with real human interest. This is a "big-time show, double A number 1," one of the really big money-makers of the new season.

Christie Comedies

A Valuable Asset to the WELL-BALANCED SUMMER PROGRAM

"BACK TO THE WOODS"

— made in the great redwood forests, with Neal Burns and Vera Steadman; and such other current Christie Comedies as "Plumb Crazy", "Roll Along" (the first comedy in black face), and "Winter Has Come" can all be counted on as sure-fire laugh-hits in any warm-weather show.

AND NOW

First a Nation-wide Success—

"ENEMIES OF WOMEN" in London has duplicated its American success. Opening at the Empire Theatre on June 15th, to one of the most distinguished audiences ever gathered for a motion picture, it has proved to be one of the most extraordinary successes in Europe's history. Critics, nobles and the public proclaim it a masterpiece.

SOME OF THE COMMENTS

LONDON DAILY TELEGRAPH:

"In this work of Ibanez it seems that at last has been discovered something close to the ideal for which the screen has long been groping. It is, in fact, what so many films claim to be, but are not, a real super-production."

LONDON DAILY GRAPHIC:

"The scenes of Monte Carlo, Paris and Russia are exceptionally beautiful. Barrymore is a rake without equal. Alma Rubens greatly enhances her reputation as an actress of imagination and emotional strength. 'Enemies of Women' has even greater possibilities of entertainment than 'The Four Horsemen.'"

LONDON DAILY NEWS:

"It is a film full of interest and excitement. The wonderful sabre fight, the amazing pictures showing the storming of the Prince's palace by the terrorists are very real."

LONDON DAILY HERALD:

"It is a picture with one big quality—it never bores. It is a first class entertainment. There is a superb duel with sabres, followed by another thrilling fight with pistols. It pictures all that is luxurious and lavish. Any amount of entertainment can be had at such a performance."

LONDON DAILY EXPRESS:

"Ibanez' crowded story of a cynical French Duchess and a rascally Russian prince is enriched by superb photography. There is a superb display of swordsmanship, Bolshevik riots and a Riverian orgy in which a mob of women fight like savages for jewels flung to them by the Prince. These form the high spots of a gorgeous and costly production which should be a popular success."

LONDON SUNDAY EXPRESS:

"'Enemies of Women' is a sensational triumph."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE:

"'Enemies of Women' deserves the distinction of being called a superfilm. It is full of exciting action amid beautiful surroundings. The story brings in France, Russia and the Riviera with thrilling episodes of the first revolution."

LONDON DAILY CHRONICLE:

"'Enemies of Women' vividly portrays a story that grips and is strong in thrills and sustained fascination. While it is a spectacular show, it is absorbingly interesting. Life is mirrored with fidelity that is accentuated by art and beautiful color effects. The production is a success."

LONDON NEWS OF THE WORLD:

"'Enemies of Women' is an extremely fine bit of work, unfolding a gripping story. It is splendidly acted in magnificent settings."

A COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTION

IN LONDON

Now an International Sensation!

FROM all indications "Enemies of Women" in London will equal its great American runs. In New York it is now in its tenth week. It ran seven weeks in Chicago, breaking all records; six weeks in San Francisco; ten in Los Angeles, and did tremendous business in Detroit, Milwaukee and Washington.

SOME OF THE COMMENTS

LONDON REFEREE:

"For weeks yet uncounted 'Enemies of Women' should draw London and many from the provinces to the Empire Theatre. This super-picture is beyond newspaper criticism. The settings are most beautiful."

LONDON SUNDAY PICTORIAL:

"'Enemies of Women' should come near breaking the West End record established by 'The Four Horsemen.' The performance would be difficult to parallel in its power and artistry."

LONDON SUNDAY ILLUSTRATED:

"There is no doubt about the popular success of 'Enemies of Women.' Lionel Barrymore is magnificent. Alma Rubens is beautiful, and the whole film is a gorgeous spectacle."

PRINCE SERGE OBOLENSKI:

(A sufferer from the overthrow of the Czar's government).

"It is a marvelous picture. Of course, it made a special appeal to me. In the film one never loses the thread of the beautiful love story."

LORD LOUGHBOROUGH:

"It is one of the finest pictures I have ever seen. It is better than 'The Four Horsemen.' I felt that I was back in Monte Carlo as I gazed on the scene inside the Casino. I seemed to know two of the croupiers."

SIR MATTHEW WILSON:

"It was the finest fencing scene ever filmed. It gave me a real thrill. It is a great picture."

LADY ISLINGTON:

"It is a perfectly wonderful and beautiful story. The producers have done a most admirable work. I hope to see this picture again and again. Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens, in fact the whole cast, are splendid."

LADY EDWARD GRIGG:

"It is splendid, and so absorbing I did not want to miss a scene. I have never seen a more beautiful picture. It is an artistic production."

COUNTESS OF ROSSLYN:

"Whoever is responsible for producing this picture in London is entitled to the gratitude of the British public. It is a masterpiece."

LADY ABDY:

"I was unable to take my eyes from the screen a single moment."

SIR FRANCIS TOWLE:

"The duel stirred my blood. I must see it again."

LADY WILSON:

"It was the most beautiful and most appealing picture I ever saw. It teaches a lesson that will be of great service to mankind. It is a most exquisite production."

"‘HUMAN Wreckage’ is the most important picture ever made," said the Los Angeles Examiner when the picture opened for a four-weeks' run at the Century Theatre. "San Francisco expressed its approval and support in unrestrained applause by the greatest audience that could crowd into the Century . . . the picture is fascinatingly dramatic from beginning to end." To which the Chronicle added: "The scenes that pass before the spectator are splendidly enacted and therefore are magnificent as a cry against the evil."

Mrs. Wallace

THE New York Morning Telegraph said: "Though we are not exactly a judge of San Francisco's enthusiasm for motion pictures, we'll wager that the Bay City has never shown more interest in a photoplay than that which greeted Mrs. Wallace Reid in 'Human Wreckage' at its world premiere at the Century Theatre there Saturday."

"HUMAN WRECKAGE"

Distributed thruout the world by F. B. O., 723 Seventh Ave., New York, N. Y.—

"MRS. REID has given the public something that is actually new, something that is extremely powerful, and something unusually interesting — and artistic," said the San Francisco Call & Post. "It should be remembered as long as the screen exists . . . in a class by itself . . . indeed a shame that such a film was not produced years ago . . . an exceptional drama . . . a most original dramatic hit . . . one play that all may see at a distinct profit. Mrs. Reid, James Kirkwood, Bessie Love and George Hackathorne splendid."

Wallace Reid

For the honest sincerity which dominates every true creative genius, the photoplay field today extends a cheerful welcome.

Because of this fellowship of craftsmen, this freemasonry of art, which, despite contrary criticism extends from the workshop of the cinema studio technician to the office of the sincere sales executive, Richard Thomas, painter, etcher and one of the only three living sculptors of cameo portraiture, was induced to utilize his natural dramatic talents and his artistic ingenuity for the production of motion pictures.

They say in Hollywood:—

That EDWIN SCHALLERT of the Los Angeles Times is the hardest-to-please critic in America

NIFTY HOKUM

Plot works out neatly in "Girl Who Came Back"

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

(In the Los Angeles Times)

In any perfectly good fairy story all the perfectly good people never do any wrong, and though they have a terrible time, they always live happily ever afterward because something is bound to happen to all the mean giants and ogres just when everything is blackest. Which, as it turns out, is exactly what transpires in "The Girl Who Came Back". It is a neat trick play is "The Girl Who Came Back", and it is well enough acted as a whole, so that though it might be as full of holes as imported Swiss cheese, you won't bother to look for them.

Really, when the two villains shoot each other, and thus dispose of everybody, who might get the happily married couple into trouble, you cannot help but smile. It is so neatly put over

While it is essentially nifty hokum, "The Girl Who Came Back" has realism and atmosphere too, lots of it, especially in the prison scenes that open the show. Tom Forman directed, and he went to some trouble apparently to get things to look right. The only thing I have against him is the oriental party which he insists on staging during a sequence laid in South Africa. It's the routine stuff with a pageant in bathing pool, girls tugging a very made-up looking raft on which the heroine is ensconced, and diving beauties splashing water over the sides of the pond. Why on earth don't directors leave that sort of stuff to C. B. De Mille, who has specialized in it for so long that you expect him to do it better than anybody else, even though he doesn't?

Outside of this one very cheap, if costly, touch, "The Girl Who Came Back" is pretty much worth while as entertainment. One of its chief attractions is that it brings back Miriam Cooper as the girl. I never knew how well she could act before. I don't think that she did, either. She's gotten away from those Griffith mannerisms, which used to spoil her performances, and some of the scenes where she is supposed to convey the impression of being utterly down and out are done with real feeling and finesse. There is no arm swinging about this, either. It's just quiet, patient and painstaking registering of thought. Really, Miss Cooper can make a new name for herself if she keeps up this sort of thing.

Joseph Dowling's portrayal of "Old 555" is exceptional for character and seems to stand out stronger than the work of the other men. Kenneth Harlan is a little too pleasant to be convincing as the man who is imprisoned on a false charge. Gaston Glass and Fred Malatesta pass, but Zasu Pitts is pretty well lost, owing to an evident lack of understanding of what she can do.

"... is wholesome, the characters human and the whole thing is clean without reeking of the "great outdoors" all the time.

Good entertainment, with a powerful story and a good cast. Harry Morey is perfectly cast . . . and Mary Astor makes a beautiful heroine.

A Drama of Hearts and Fences!

DRAMA that mirrors real moments of life—pulsing with genuine human emotions of love and hate, smiles and tears. HEARTS that throb to the joys and sorrows of actual situations as every man and woman has felt them—finding a responsive chord in every breast.

FENCES that separate poor and rich, the ugly and the beautiful, the good and the bad—barriers that are eventually swept away in the flood of glowing love in a girl's heart.

Frank Borzage made it. And he has endowed it with that magical touch that gets under the skin and reaches the heart, just as he did in "Humoresque."

An all-star cast includes Johnny Walker, Pauline Garon and Lloyd Hughes.

Rothafel again presents "Passion" at the Capitol!

The Great are not guided by precedent but think and act for themselves

Two years ago, Rothafel upset precedent two weeks in succession.

The first was in giving the laugh to an imaginative popular aversion to costume plays—and presenting Pola Negri in "Passion" at the Capitol, world's largest photoplay theatre.

And the second was in holding Pola Negri in "Passion" for a second week! Vindication of judgment in the first instance, by a box-office return which overwhelmingly shattered records, prompted the overriding of precedent the second week—when the first week's record-breaking business was topped!

And now Rothafel again smashes precedent! Again with the same picture! For, recognizing its altogether superlative merit as an entertainment, and wishing to enthrall additional thousands by its wonderfully realistic depiction of an immortal topic, commencing June 24th, SAMUEL L. ROTHAFEL is presenting at CAPITOL THEATRE,

POLA NEGRI

The famous continental star

in

PASSION

The Intimate Romance of a Wonder Woman

A First National Picture

Now here's food for thought, Mr. Exhibitor.

Not anywhere have the possibilities of "Passion" been exhausted. The time for re-showing is ripe. The star has, since your showing, achieved tremendous popularity, and is today at the zenith of her career. And "Passion" remains her picture beyond compare.

Motion Picture News

Construct

WE call particular attention to the remarks in this issue by Otto H. Kahn, the banker.

They are well worth every man's serious consideration.

Mr. Kahn, by virtue of experience, wealth and world contact, holds his head somewhat above the dust that's raised by mere business scramble.

And, if we can get our own noses up from the grindstone a moment, up from the vanity, jealousy and hate that are human but damnably short-sighted qualities, we'll get a mighty sound lesson about this potentially big business of ours.

Mr. Kahn pays a tribute to the American "go-getter," the man who makes much out of little, a type that is tremendously admired and studied abroad and which, in this country, is apt to be hounded instead.

It is about time, he suggests, that particularly those engaged in the go-getter's own field of effort stop snapping at his heels and fight him instead face to face and fairly with his own weapons of pluck and ability.

It is better, he suggests, decidedly better, for the business itself and for everyone in it.

And we decidedly agree with him.

Half the fierce animosity towards the people of this industry upon the part of its public enemies is due to just plain human jealousy.

The well salaried reformer hates the motion picture magnate, whom, in utter ignorance, he conceives to be a lawless creature of Mammon—whom he publicly acclaims as such. And from the very beginning the motion picture has been bitterly and unjustly assailed by other and rival institutions whose hold upon the public was lessened by this greater attraction.

So much for the forces without the industry. Public opinion—and this industry has in the past set its worst face to the public—is being fairly and favorably moulded through the conscientious efforts of Will H. Hays and the Producers and Distributors Association; and every man in the industry should know and appreciate this important fact. It is a fact.

But what of the situation inside the industry?

Isn't it about time for a friendly, fair and robust rivalry to take the place of vengeful heel-snapping?

Isn't it about time to stop fighting, especially the fighting that seeks to air itself for all the world to see and which by that very mark is fighting done for private gain because it openly and deliberately arranges an audience.

It is time to stop fighting, gentlemen.

And it's also time to suspect the fighter, or at least to question the motives of the man who won't discuss, who won't arbitrate, who obviously and unquestionably thrives on fighting and wants all the publicity he can get about it.

It is time to construct.

The banker doesn't like an industry the only public reports of which indicate a civil war. And the exhibitor today—let alone the producer and distributor—needs the bank. He knows it.

The public is interested only in the industry's output not in its heel-snapping.

The politician has no respect for a house quarrelling within itself.

IT IS TIME TO CONSTRUCT—this business. Time, from every practical, immediate and future standpoint.

Time, if this business is ever to be big business.

Time, if the picture is to fulfill its mission as the greatest constructive force of this age.

Wm A. Houston

FRANK TILLEY, editor of the Kinematograph Weekly, who after a brief visit in New York, has departed for the Coast, offers a message, through a letter to William A. Johnston of the NEWS, to the film trade—not only for America, but for everywhere. Coming from England he is able to view conditions with a different perspective.

Mr. Tilley says: "Think sometimes about other things besides the scramble for money. Do not be so certain that the public is only able to appreciate obviousness and sentimentality. The film producer has a duty to himself and the community that goes beyond just profit—a duty to help it to improve its ideas and tastes—to grow ideals and to appreciate the beautiful. And there is no greater, no more powerful medium for the accomplishment of this high purpose than the screen. It will not—ultimately it dare not—betray that purpose."

True words uttered with sincerity and with a breadth of vision—words which should be thoroughly digested. Help to improve its ideas and tastes and the screen will reach the high pinnacle which it has set for itself.

THE quest for the muck called gold—the quest for fame and fortune has inspired a few hundred girls to trek westward along the Lincoln Highway to Movieland. The despatches in the papers tell us that the Highway from Washington as far west as Omaha is virtually lined with screen-struck girls tramping to Hollywood in hope of finding fame and fortune upon arrival. These human moths will undoubtedly reach the flame. Some of them will have their wings scorched—others will be consumed—and that's the last we will hear of them. Their courage, however, is unwavering. They don't know where they're going—but they're on their way.

*At last an asterisk from the National Board of Review—or rather two asterisks to be exact. One is given to "The Brass Bottle," sponsored by First National, the other to "Rupert of Hentzau," sponsored by Selznick. And lest you forget an * indicates a particularly fine picture.*

JOHAN J. McHENRY, booking manager for the Allen Charette, Inc., who operate several houses in New Bedford, Mass., registers a complaint about producers making pictures that show the inside workings of the studio, scenes back stage, and secrets of production given away to numerous photoplay mediums, such as the fan magazines, etc. Mr. McHenry would keep our secrets to ourselves, for in secrecy there is an attractiveness. And patrons are surely being disappointed—what with the revelations of screen production and activities.

The NEWS agrees with Mr. McHenry in that producers are liable to err in acquainting the picturegoers with the secrets of production. A little revelation of studio life goes a long way. The mystery of the land of Make-Believe is one of its dominant factors of appeal. Take it away and the glamour and romance and charm are gone.

MARSHALL (Mickey) NEILAN has arrived in New York for a brief vacation and to arrange for the premiere showing of "The Eternal Three." On his way East he burned the compartment lights in his Pullman while dashing off some continuity work upon his portable typewriter. Just as soon as Mrs. Neilan (Blanche Sweet) has completed the role of Dolores in Goldwyn's "In the Palace of the King," she will join her husband in the metropolis. While in New York the Neilans will look over the theatrical menu and possibly order a slice of melodrama for future production. Incidentally there will be much handshaking, for several of his screen and stage friends are still lingering around the Lambs, Friars, the Algonquin, et al.

R. J. RELF of the Star theatre, Decorah, Iowa, writes us that he has just played Charlie Chaplin in "The Pilgrim," and that it is the first profit he has made in a year and a half—and out of his profits he subscribes for another WARNER BROTHERS, through the good offices of their advertising and publicity directors, Messrs Parker and Young, gave members of the press, trade and fan publications and their friends, an enjoyable evening last week in honor of the showing of "Main Street" at the Strand. The sponsors, to carry out the sweet rusticity of the open country, provided a hay-rack and an ancient and honorable hotel omnibus to carry their guests to the Strand, and after viewing the picture—the "hosses" were driven to the Casino in Central Park where with much dancing and refreshments a good time was had by all.

The boys did the stunt right. Regular farm straws were given the fellows and old-fashioned sun-bonnets were given the girls. And to the accompaniment of much blowing of horns and harmonicas the wagons circled around Times Square and up Broadway. The spirit of the small town was abroad and the onlookers on the curb got an eye-full of how the small villagers put on a good time.

SPEAKING of "Main Street" we would say that the picture carries on the spirit and flavor of the book—even, tho, it is a psychological study. Sinclair Lewis painted a drab, sometimes ugly, canvas of small town life. We disagree with him in that his novel is not representative of the average small town in the East. The telephone, auto, moving pictures, country clubs—and other modern inventions and innovations have taken the drabness away from village life. The story is often dull because Lewis goes to extremes in photographing the "open sores" of the small town. And his characterization is often faulty. What is true in his book may be found in the villager content to live his life in his own way without interference. He can no more be changed than the soil from which he sprung.

The picture is vastly more entertaining than the book and gets away from the orthodox ideas. It presents something new—something novel. It has been approached with an appreciation, that it has absorbed millions of readers. And the result is a success. The drab backgrounds, the smug complacency of the villagers, the easy enjoyment with the most simple of pastimes—these are all incorporated.

But what makes the picture hit the high places is the deft characterization of Carol Kennicutt by Florence Vidor. She catches the true psychology of the figure, particularly when she realizes she is being thrust into the midst of a strange and uncouth people. The train scene is a gem. She would make Gopher Prairie over like her own Minneapolis—and she fails. A marvelous performance, admirably limned with pathos, haughtiness, silent suffering, and a feeling of the utter futility of making progress against a stubborn and unimaginative community. Monte Blue's rendition of Will Kennicutt is of cameo fineness. He is always genuine in every scene. And Harry Myers' local druggist is also true to life.

OUR Paris spy informs that a motion picture camera was the cause of the death of a valuable filly on the Maisons Lafitte track. As a result Baron de Rothschild is suing The Society for the Encouragement of Sports for the death of his fast stepper. The Baron charges that the society is to blame for allowing a picture machine in the paddock without proper supervision, as his horse reared while passing the camera and had to be shot.

WE are calling your attention to the elaborate and dignified Fox insert of seventy-two pages in the current issue of the NEWS. Here are all the announcements of the company's production activities for the coming season. There are several Big Ones listed. It looks like good runs for "If Winter Comes," "The Shepherd King," "Cameo Kirby," and "Six Cylinder Love." And Gallagher & Shean, the boys who have made absolutely and positively popular in everyone's vocabulary, will soon show you their "stuff" in "Around the Town."

HERE'S initiative for you! The Los Angeles High School Players' association, its interest awakened by the recent Congress of Authors, has decided to produce a photoplay next season. It will be made within the confines of the student body with the exception of the printing of the film. The students are well equipped to produce a picture—since film is developed in the laboratory and cameramen's classes are taught to take professional positions. Many of them have taken minor parts in pictures in Hollywood studios during vacation—while several have tried their hands at scenario writing. The picture will be the first ever produced by an American high school.

We cannot see any reason why motion picture technique should not be on every high school curriculum. A student graduating with special honors in scenario writing, direction or acting would be equipped to jump right on the lot.

CAN it be that a publicity manager is going to establish a precedent during his vacation? The babbling brook, the open road, the downy couch of grass, the swinging hammock, the gliding canoe, the zipping motor launch, the summer Chautauqua, the winging of partridge, the canter of the steed—all these are brushed aside that R. W. Baremore, p. m. for C. C. Burr, may visit his dentist. The pastime of swimming and frying bacon will be attended to, however, for he expects to go to a Maine camp during the fog end of his vacation. Yes, we have no venison!

IN this week's issue of the NEWS is a prospectus of the coming season in which is listed several Big Pictures. Those mentioned look like extended run possibilities in the larger cities. With Fairbanks, Barthelmess, Marion Davies and several other top favorites hitting the high marks with costume or period dramas the past season and finding success, naturally the producers are turning more and more to the historical romances and adventures of yesterday. A number of successful stage dramas have been adapted to the screen—as well as a few immortal classics—speaking of "Ben Hur" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Certainly it looks like a big year. It also looks as if the scenario writers of originals will have to be content in fashioning the everyday program picture.

"BY arrangement with" How often have you read this little item tucked away on a theatre program? Frohman may borrow a star from Shubert or vice versa. An adaptor may credit a playwright or again vice versa. But it has taken Paramount and Universal to establish a precedent in a trade magazine. Through courtesy of Famous, Universal has been given first position in the advertising section of this week's issue of the NEWS. Who said chivalry is dead?

IS Hollywood becoming a boom town for real estate? It would seem so judging from the report that picture men are making fortunes these days in land transactions in the famous Los Angeles suburb. As an example, 33 acres in Hollywood were purchased five years ago by the United Studios. Today, 1100 feet frontage on the street is valued at $200,000, and is to be sold or improved with business blocks by M. C. Levee, president of the studio. This sale will effect only a small part of the studio property which will in fact house greater activities than ever before.

JEANNETTE HELEN PORTER, daughter of Gene Stratton Porter, author of "Michael O'Halloran," was married June 2nd, to James Leo Meehan, the director of the picture. The marriage places the young benedict in deep complications by making his mother-in-law his professional "boss" and his former assistant director (Jeanette), his chief director, especially in the home. A motor honeymoon is being enjoyed by the happy couple after which they will spend some time in Mrs. Porter's Limberlost Cabin in Indiana. The authoress will next engage upon the production of her story, "The Girl of the Limberlost," and Mr. Meehan will work upon the continuity while he is at the Cabin.

WE regret to record the passing of Macey Harlam who died yesterday at Saranac Lake. The screen actor, who distinguished himself in roles of an Oriental character, came East from Hollywood after finishing work with Pola Negri in "Bella Donna." Those who met him while he was in New York were shocked when they learned of his death, as he looked to be in the best of health, and it was understood he was merely going up State for a much needed rest.

ONE of the outstanding features of the Syracuse Convention of the New York State Exhibitors was the great speech made by Will H. Hays. He told the theatre owners that the producers were anxious to meet them for the mutual threshing out of difficulties, and the response he got from the convention left no doubt that his proposal was absolutely in accord with the exhibitor viewpoint. Senator Walker, also one of the most prominent figures at the meeting, paid Mr. Hays several marked compliments and the M. P. P. D. A. head responded in kind.

Otto H. Kahn Deplores Attacks on Industry

Financier Praises Great Progress Made by Leaders in Motion Picture Business

IN a speech at the International Congress of Motion Picture Arts, held in New York recently, Otto H. Kahn, of Kuhn, Loeb & Company, one of the most prominent financiers in the country and a patron of the arts, defended the motion picture industry from indiscriminate attacks. Mr. Kahn said in part:

"There exists a curious contrast between our attitude toward the thing called success and toward those industries, corporations or individuals who have contrived conspicuously to attain it. We inculcate into our youth lessons of industry and application, we stimulate their ambition, we hold out the incentive of liberal reward to those who, climbing along the steep road of effort, reach or approach the summit; we preach the gospel of enterprise, we give popular encouragement to the 'go getter' and the 'world beater'—but when they have accomplished what we have spurred them on to strive for with all their might, the bricks of criticism, abuse and suspicion are apt to fly in profusion around their heads.

"In certain of our undertakings and achievements, we admittedly lead the world. Men from all countries come here to admire them and study them and learn from them. Again and again have I heard visitors from Europe express their amazement at finding men and things belittled, criticized and assailed that to them were objects of respectful emulation and that they had expected to see surrounded by an atmosphere of public encouragement and encomium. We pride ourselves, especially toward the rest of the world, on the bigness and superiority of our industrial achievements, and at the same time we are addicted to the pastime of 'knocking' the individuals who are the master builders of those achievements.

"Democracy is right in guarding jealously against industrial usurpation and in striving

North Carolina Looks For Lively Session

NORTH CAROLINA exhibitors are looking forward with more than the usual interest to the state convention to be held at Wrightsville Beach, June 28 and 29. With the withdrawal of the state from the M. P. T. O. A. it is hoped to make the local body stronger than ever.

One of the first effects of the withdrawal was the immediate announcement that all theatres within the state belonging to the Famous Players-Lasky corporation would proffer their applications for membership at the Wrightsville Beach convention and that Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres, would himself attend the convention.

Definite plans for the adequate financing of the North Carolina organization so that censorship or other battles can be fought without calling for aid from outside North Carolina will be one of the principal problems to be tackled.

Frank J. Rembusch has accepted an invitation to attend and make an address, also Charles C. Pettijohn, New York City; Harry M. Crandall, Washington; James Wells, Richmond, Va.; Willard C. Patterson, Atlanta, and J. H. Borosky, Chattanooga, Tenn.

to keep open the avenues of opportunity; it is right in throwing a 'fierce light' upon those in dominant places of finance and commerce and in being intolerant of smug self-complacency or of overbearance or greed among those in positions of leadership. But it is wrong when it permits wanton harassing and baiting, when it listens to the voice of envy and demagoguery, when it countenances governmental commissions giving to reckless innuendo, irresponsible gossip and sensational exaggeration the place and scope that belong to trustworthy testimony, when it tolerates unwarranted assault on the reputation of business men, with resulting damage to the good name of American business both at home and in foreign lands.

"That the motion picture industry and conspicuously successful concerns and individuals connected with it would not escape criticism, detraction and attack was a foregone conclusion. I hold no brief for either the industry or the corporations and individuals concerned. But it is fitting that certain things should be remembered and fairly weighed in the balance:

"The motion picture was born barely a dozen years ago. It was in no sense a monopoly. Its exploitation was open to everybody. The field was absolutely free. Men in possession of, or with access to, large capital, looked at it askance. It was men of small means, self-made men, starting from the bottom of the ladder, who discerned and set about to realize its potentialities, and staked their savings, their credit, their solvency, on the attempt. Many fell by the wayside, a limited number achieved great success by dint of strenuous work, adherence to sound business methods, bold and broad vision, and unusual organizing ability.

"Having no precedents or traditions to guide them, working in a wholly novel and untried field, educating themselves as they went along, being driven far beyond their original planning by the incredible rapidity and vastness of the growth of the young giant whom they had helped to nurture, they would have had to be more than human to show a record of 100 per cent. praiseworthy, free from errors and unmarred by yielding to temptations.

"But, as against such shortcomings, let us contemplate the picture of the stupendous things which the American 'movie' industry has accomplished under the guidance and impulse of those men. An infant industry, a boisterous and untutored stripling! Yet, it has jumped into the very front rank among our old-established industries; it has produced untold millions of new national values and wealth; it has created employment for hundreds of thousands; it has brought a new means of enjoyment and education into the lives of the masses and has broadened their horizon, stimulated their interests and enriched their leisure hours; it has conquered the world for the American 'movie'; it has attained technical perfection unrivaled in any other country; it is laying the basis for the manifestation and growth of a new and genuine American art. In no other country of the world has there been a development of this new medium of enjoyment, interest and enlightenment that would be comparable to what it is in America."

No New Picture Laws from Penn. Solons

The Pennsylvania Legislature adjourned at the capitol in Harrisburg, on June 14, without having adopted any measures affecting the motion picture industry of the state, except the anti-daylight saving law which had the backing of the picture interests. This law prohibited the passage by municipalities of local ordinances establishing any except standard time as the official time, and the law is now in effect.

"Hollywood" Is Now Ready for Release

"HOLLYWOOD," produced by James Cruze for Paramount, is finished. It has been edited and titled to the complete satisfaction of the Lasky studio executives and is now ready for release. The world premiere will take place probably in New York some time in August and the picture will be available to first-run exhibitors early in the Fall.

The picture shows the stars and celebrities of the screen in their real surroundings.

Practically the entire cast of principals was chosen from the ranks of the "unknowns," so far as pictures are concerned, but scores of picture notables are introduced. The selection of these players, however, occupied fully two months of Mr. Cruze's time.

Among the other players who play a vital part in the drama are twenty recognized stars of the screen and exactly fifty other film celebrities.

M. P. T. O. A. Perfects Plans For Tax Fight

AT a meeting of the members of the National Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, held in Chicago immediately following the adjournment of the National Convention there, a program of National Legislative activities was discussed which comprehended moves to repeal the Seat and Admission Taxes as well as the Music License Fee.

Since that time these plans have been perfected, and definite arrangements have now been made for the introduction of such legislation in these matters as will afford the Theatre Owners the relief needed.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be represented at Washington at all times during the coming session of Congress, and plans for an intensive campaign of the entire United States have been agreed upon. It is planned to have Theatre Owners in all parts of the country bring the facts in the case to the attention of the members of Congress in such a manner that when Congress convenes these representatives will be familiar with the merits of our case, and the urgent need for relief from these war measures.

Cohen Finishes Testimony at F.P.-L. Hearing

Sessions in New York Completed; Trial Will Be Resumed in Philadelphia, June 25

MAINTAINING that independent theatre owners were menaced when distribution was put in the hands of those who also control or operate theatre chains, but declaring that Adolph Zukor and S. R. Kent had shown every disposition to be fair in making adjustments with exhibitors, Sydney S. Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. A., final witness at the New York hearings on the Federal Trade Commission charges against Famous Players-Lasky and the other respondents, completed his testimony Tuesday, June 19.

Under examination by W. H. Fuller and Marvin Farrington, of Government counsel, Mr. Cohen submitted more than forty exhibitor complaints which he had taken up with Famous Players over a three-year period. These were gone into in detail during the lengthy cross-examination of the witness by Robert T. Swain, chief counsel for the defense.

When Mr. Cohen had finished, Examiner E. C. Alvord declared a recess until June 25. The hearings will be resumed on that date in Philadelphia at Room 318 Postoffice Building.

When Mr. Cohen again took the stand on Friday, June 15, he stated that he had five theatres, all in New York City—the North Star, Tremont, McKinley Square, Empire and Bronx Strand. There were five Loew theatres in the Bronx, he stated, to which his Bronx houses, with one exception, played second run Paramount, when he was using that service.

He had found it very difficult to get first runs in competition with Loew, "and had to buy as F. P.-L. wanted to sell." When he was unable to get any Paramounts for his Empire theatre, the witness said he went to S. R. Kent and appealed to him for the service on the ground that he was an old customer. Mr. Kent told him, according to the witness, that Loew was using pressure to force Paramount to give him first runs in New York, employing his buying power in other cities as a club. "Mr. Kent agreed with me that Famous Players would get more money from independent theatres than from Loew, but said his hands were tied," added Cohen.

The history of exhibitor organization was gone into, and Marvin Farrington, for the Government, brought out that Alfred S. Black had succeeded Peter J. Schaefer, of Chicago, as president of the old Exhibitors' League of America, which the witness described as an organization composed of all generals and no doughboys.

Coming to the so-called Patterson convention at Chicago in 1920, just before the M. P. T. O. A. was formed at Cleveland, Mr. Cohen told how E. J. Hudson of First National had said "sweet things" to him and urged him to attend the Chicago meeting. "I thought caution was best and stayed away," the witness declared.

Among the reasons Cohen gave for the organization of the M. P. T. O. A. were the taxation situation; the announcement of the purchase of the B. S. Moss theatres by Famous Players; and the F. P.-L. plan to extend its theatre interests all over the country.

The witness declared he had personally been threatened by A. G. Whyte, then a member of the Paramount sales forces. The latter told him, he went on, that if Cohen did not meet the Paramount price demands for service in 1919-20 Paramount might have to build a theatre in opposition to one of his.

When he took this matter up with Mr. Zukor the latter informed him that it "was news to him," adding that he would look into the matter and let him know. "I am still waiting," he added. "The theatre was built."

"Mr. Zukor also said the exhibitors could never be organized, and if they were it would be very easy to make them inactive," said Mr. Cohen.

He condemned block-booking as destructive, because it handcuffed the theatre owner and foisted on the public pictures which ought not to be shown because of their inferior quality. "Selling pictures before they are made is hazardous," he went on. "The exhibitor should be permitted to see the film before booking."

As for Broadway showings, the witness thought they didn't mean as much now as formerly, for the reason that so many inferior pictures are shown and so many pictures of merit denied a showing. "It doesn't require as much ability to run a theatre on Broadway as it does in a small town," said he. "And there is room for at least four more first run theatres on Broadway. They would be heavily patronized."

Coming back to the Cleveland convention, Mr. Cohen told of the speech made by Marcus Loew, in which Loew said in effect that he had found it necessary to buy Metro against his will in order to protect himself. Shortly after Minneapolis, Mr. Loew asked the M. P. T. O. A. to take over Metro, Cohen testified.

He then described meetings of various committees with Mr. Zukor and the signing of the agreement of August 12, 1920, on the subject of theatre acquisition.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, took the stand for a short time on Monday and identified a document entitled "Memoranda on the Motion Picture Industry." It was a prospectus, he said, and related to the owning and controlling of small theatres throughout the country.

The witness said Alfred S. Black, one of the respondents, had come to his office in 1919, become interested in the plan which Dr. Shallenberger had had in mind for some years, and the prospectus resulted.

Black told him, the witness went on, that he (Black) had submitted the plan to a financial organization, but the latter rejected it. Black informed him later, said the witness, that he had also taken the matter up with Marcus Loew. Black quoted Loew as saying that there was an idea in it, provided it was tied up with a distributing corporation.

Subsequently, said Dr. Shallenberger, Black said he had negotiated with United Picture theatres, but no deal was made, because decision was reached that "it would not be good business to do so."

Mr. Swain, for the respondents, objected on the ground that the document might be relevant as against Black, but not the other respondents, and Mr. Farrington, for the Government, declared he was content with that viewpoint.

On cross-examination, Dr. Shallenberger told Mr. Swain that the contemplated corporation had never been organized.

Mr. Cohen then resumed his testimony. A telegram from Ralph Talbot, of Oklahoma, which the witness described as a complaint against F. P.-L., and a wire from E. H. Birmingham, of Indianapolis, were taken up.

Reference was then made to the case of Senator Hartford, of Pawtucket, R. I., who had complained that he was unable to get Paramount Pictures for the season because Black was building a theatre in the town, and under Black's agreement with Famous Players Black was to get the product.

The situation in the South was gone into at some length. The witness said Mr. Zukor had informed the M. P. T. O. A. Executive Committee at Minneapolis that he (Zukor) could now make Lynch do what Zukor wanted him to do.

"Afterwards," said Mr. Cohen, "our committee met Mr. Lynch, who said that Mr. Zukor could not take care of matters in the South. Mr. Lynch wanted me to make a public statement that I would not take up Southern grievances with Mr. Zukor, but I declined to do so. I told Mr. Lynch that the agreement we had signed in 1920 with Mr. Zukor was not a state rights proposition, but covered the whole country."

"Mr. Lynch then said he would not deal with me. Our discussions were rather heated."

After Cohen had taken up a number of specific complaints with Mr. Zukor, or other F. P.-L. officials, "the great complaint of coercion and intimidation throughout the country" ceased to a large degree, the witness went on, and gave as the reason the activities of Messrs. Kent and Zukor in adjusting complaints and the publicity accorded the matter in the trade press.

Describing in detail Mr. Zukor's appearance before the Executive Committee at Minneapolis in 1921, Mr. Cohen quoted Mr. Zukor as admitting that the 1920 agreement had been broken. "He asked for another chance," continued the M. P. T. O. A. president, "and promised the agreement would be kept, everything would be fixed up and his company would not compete with independent theatre owners if given proper representation."

The witness said he made a rather heated reply to Mr. Zukor, because Mr. Zukor had previously sent him a message that the organization must be broken and Cohen personally destroyed because of his activities as president of the M. P. T. O. A.

Following the meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York, just before Minneapolis, when Senator Walker delivered his famous arraignment, Mr. Zukor, said the witness, phoned him that he wanted to adjust the Dodge and Schwartz cases at once. He sent Henry Salisbury over, and an itemized statement of the damages was given the latter, said Mr. Cohen, who then went on to tell the story of how the M. P. T. O. A. got the Town Hall in Morrisville, Vt., for Mrs. Dodge, and put on "Way Down East," donated by D. W. Griffith.

"Mr. Salisbury thanked us for the small amount asked for and brought over the Dodge and Schwartz checks," he added. "The organization had gone to considerable expense, but we gave Mrs. Dodge the greater part of the amount and in excess of that her expenses in carrying on the theatre."

Mr. Cohen then read into the record a list of the complaints he said he had received from exhibitors against F. P.-L. over the three-year period of his presidency of the M. P. T. O. A. They were from the following exhibitors and towns: Richford, Vt. (C. Carl Carpenter); Glenwood, Iowa (Mr. Seymour); Centerville, Md. (Mr. Cahill); Columbia, Tenn. (Mr. Jackson); Huntsville, Ala. C. L. Hackworth, with correspondence on the case from W. C. Patterson, of Atlanta); Bartow, Fla. (Marquis Amusement Co.); Ft. Smith, Ark. (C. A. Lick); Pawtucket, R. I. (Senator Hartford); Caribou, Maine (Mr. Flora); Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. (Mr. Depaul); Madison, Neb. (Mr. Boettner); Lawrence, Mass. (A. J. Cobs, Rialto theatre); New Orleans (Amelie Poulaj); New Bedford, Mass. (George W. Allen, Jr.); Newman, Cal. (Mr. Johnson); Wilimantie, Conn. (H. Schwartz); Oxford, Miss. (R. X. Williams); Oakland, Cal. (C. C. Griffin); Ft. Hope, Canada (J. S. Smart); Tomahawk, Wis. (Mr. Robarge); Allentown, Pa. (Dr. Stuckert); Beloit, Wis. (Frank Reichstein); Bristol, Tenn. (Wesley White); Bath, N. Y. (Mr. Thomas); Buffalo, N. Y. (A. C. Hayman); Bangor, Maine (C. Stern); Houma, La. (A. J. Bethancourt); Kansas City Mo. (C. H. Burkey); Ada, Ohio (Mr. Faulkner); Kansas City, Mo. (Angus & Bradshaw, operating a theatre in Monroe, Mo.); Joliet, Ill. (J. J. Rubens); Mattoon, Ill. (B. Uran); Harrisburg, Pa. (Peter Magaro); Mansfield, La. (Mrs. Brownfield); Lexington, Neb. (Mr. Falkenberg); Hastings, Neb. (Mr. Preston); Chicago (Mr. Koffman); Charlotte, N. C. (H. B. Varner). He also identified letters from Alfred S. Black to Mrs. Lottie M. Pierce, Lyric theatre, Manchester, La.; telegrams and letters to Mr. Zukor sent last year; and a copy of the Roseville (Cal.) Register.

In response to a question from Mr. Farrington, the witness stated that he had never received any salary as head of the M. P. T. O. A. "The organization voted me $85,000 salary in three years, but I have not received it. Twenty-five thousand was voted at Cleveland, and $30,000 at each of two other conventions," said he.

Before concluding direct examination, Government counsel asked Mr. Cohen if there were any other matters they had previously discussed with him about which he had not been questioned on the stand, and Mr. Cohen said he could think of none.

The long cross-examination of the witness began Monday afternoon.

"How many members did you have in your organization at the Cleveland convention?" queried Mr. Swain.

"Five hundred," replied the witness.

"How many at the time of the Minneapolis meeting?"

"Between six and seven thousand," was the answer.

"At the time of the Washington convention?"

"In excess of 10,000," responded Mr. Cohen, who said the membership at the time of the Chicago session was about the same.

"And now?" Swain asked.

"About ten thousand," Mr. Cohen answered.

Pointing out that there were about 16,000 picture theatres, Mr. Swain remarked: "So you have about two-thirds of the exhibitors in the organization. Are they all paid up?"

Mr. Cohen said that they were not, but explained that the plan was for members to pay dues to their state organizations, which in turn sent their quotas to national headquarters.

Mr. Cohen's figures for actual attendance at the M. P. T. O. A. conventions were: Cleveland, 500; Minneapolis, 1,000 to 1,400; Washington, 1,200; Chicago, 700 to 1,100.

He declared that it had been his purpose all along to make the organization militant and to protect the interests of all its members. To this end, he told Mr. Swain, exhibitors were urged to send in complaints against producers and distributors so that adjustments might be effected.

O. convention at Wrightsville Beach, June 28, on "Exploitation and Supervision" and Al Hicks, formerly exploitation expert with Southern Enterprises, will talk on "Putting the Picture Over." A discussion relative to the sliding scale or uniform prices for picture theatre attractions, to be led by James A. Estridge of Gastonia, promises to be one of the interesting high lights of the open discussion part of the convention.

"The complaints were not confined to Famous Players," he went on. "There were numerous complaints against other companies, and many against First National."

Greater progress was made with Famous Players in obtaining adjustments than with First National, he continued, although the organization had got some adjustments through H. O. Schwalbe.

"Would you say that Mr. Zukor and Mr. Kent sincerely tried to make adjustments?" Cohen was asked, and his reply was "Yes."

"I stated at a number of conventions that we were making fine progress in the Famous Players adjustments, and I was criticized for saying it. The criticism came from sources unfriendly to Famous Players and to me," he added.

At the time of the Cleveland convention, from his best information, First National had about 1,800 subfranchise holders, Mr. Cohen declared. "J. D. Williams offered me five subfranchises at my own price," he volunteered, "but I declined with thanks."

Mr. Swain brought out that the subfranchise holders were supposed to take all the First National pictures, but Mr. Cohen said the contract was not always lived up to.

"The theatre owner paid a percentage of the exhibition value. There was no fixed standard for sale price on pictures. The First National officials wrote the ticket as they saw fit," he stated.

When First National was organized it was a protective move, and at first did a lot of good, the witness said.

The controlling of theatres by distributors Mr. Cohen described as a menace to the industry, and to the independent exhibitor and producer in particular. It resulted in the distributor withholding the product from the independent exhibitor, or pooling it, or compelling him to sell his house.

"First National's announced intention was to have a program of enough pictures to supply the entire time of the weekly change houses," Mr. Swain said. "If that had proved successful, the pictures of any other distributor would have been excluded, wouldn't they?" Mr. Cohen agreed.

Mr. Cohen denied that the average exhibitor was temperamental and given to making complaints.

With reference to block-booking in 1919-1920, Mr. Swain brought out that the system as in vogue with all companies and not confined to F. P.-L. Then the Broadway first-run situation was taken up.

"You stated on direct examination that, in your opinion, there is plenty of room on Broadway for four more first-class first run houses," the Famous Players chief counsel began.

"Yes," Mr. Cohen agreed. "But some of the land would have to be bought from Famous Players."

He thought there were no available sites for theatres from Forty-second to Fifty-first streets, and then described in detail the real estate situation. He finally said there might be some possible sites above Fifty-first, but he did not consider that location as good as the Forty-second to Fifty-first territory.

As to picture supply for "these theoretical theatres," Mr. Cohen thought there would be no trouble about that. He agreed with Mr. Swain that the Capitol was recognized as "Goldwyn's show window," and the same term would apply about 95 per cent to the Strand as a First National house. The Rivoli and Rialto were recognized as exploitation theatres for F. P.-L.

Questioned concerning the deposit system, the witness declared exhibitors were opposed to it, because it inflated values in the industry and brought high film rentals. Their objection also was caused by the failure of some companies to return deposit moneys on occasion.

He quickly added that Famous Players strictly segregated deposit funds, according to the law of the State of New York, and there had been no trouble whatever on the subject of deposit moneys with F. P.-L.

"Forty-two complaints in all have been named by you," said Mr. Swain. "Are there any others?"

"There are a few," the witness answered. "Not very many. Yes, they cover a period of three years."

Declaring that there were about 8,000 accounts on the F. P.-L. books, Mr. Swain asked Mr. Cohen if he didn't think the number of complaints was small.

"The number is small," the witness stated. "But the matter of policy involved is large."

With regard to the Black New England situation, Mr. Cohen gave it as his opinion that Famous Players would have fared better if it had disregarded Black and sold its product to independent theatres. There was no objection to Famous Players acquiring large theatres. The complaints centered on the smaller cities and the methods employed.

He denied that Black improved theatres when he took them over, and declared he had no real difficulties with Black until the complaints began to come up.

In trying to make adjustments in New England, Messrs. Zukor and Kent were often blocked by Mr. Black, he admitted, but declared he did not know that Black controlled the Board of Directors of the New England subsidiary prior to the purchase of Black's 50 per cent interest by F. P.-L.

Mr. Swain then began taking up the Cohen list of complaints in detail. The first was the Hartford case in Pawtucket, R. I. "Senator Hartford wanted $50,000 cash settlement," the witness explained. "He would not take a fifty-fifty break with Black's new theatre, and also turned down a pooling arrangement and a guarantee of receipts offered by F. P.-L. Our committee thought Famous Players made him a very fine offer."

In the Allentown case, Mr. Cohen explained, Messrs. Zukor and Kent had W. E. Smith, Paramount representative in Philadelphia, come to M. P. T. O. A. headquarters. "Smith went the fullest extent," he added.

The Robarge matter in Tomahawk, Wis., a case of trouble over film prices, and not related in any way to theatre acquisition, was settled by Mr. Kent, the witness stated.

Brandt Elected Head of New York M. P. T. O.

Annual Convention Marked by Constructive Discussions and Absence of Fireworks

Syracuse, N. Y., June 21.

RUMORS that the convention of the M. P. T. O. of New York, held at the Hotel Onondaga, June 19th and 20th, a third day's program being abandoned, would develop fireworks and that a new National Exhibitor body was to be born during the session failed to materialize into fact.

The convention was of the usual variety, orthodox to the last minute, election, speeches, banquet, and then home.

The several sessions, however, were well attended by a representative body of exhibitors who came to the convention with serious purposes and remained to work along constructive lines so far as the limitations of time and place would allow.

Senator James J. Walker was a guest of the convention and at the banquet presided as toastmaster for speakers that included Will H. Hays, Dean Flint of Syracuse University, Mayor Walrath and Senator McGregor.

Charles L. O'Reilly, retiring president of the New York M. P. T. O., was unable to attend the convention owing to the serious illness of his wife.

The first session of the convention was held Tuesday evening with Vice-President William A. Dillon of the Strand theatre, Ithaca, presiding in the absence of President O'Reilly.

In opening the session Mr. Dillon referred in a general way to the fact that the New York organization had withdrawn from the National body and justified its action. This was the only direct reference to Sydney Cohen or the split that occurred last year at Washington.

Rev. Dr. Betts of Syracuse offered prayer and was followed by Mayor Walrath, who formally welcomed the delegates.

The first speech was by Congressman McGregor of Buffalo, who made an appeal for a national organization of sufficient strength to go to Washington and successfully combat hostile legislation. Mr. McGregor recommended that a man of Will H. Hays' calibre be secured to represent the exhibitor interests at Washington and that a bureau be established there.

The first business matter to come before the convention was the theatre tax. After several delegates had expressed their views on the subject, calling attention to the injustice of the measure, A. C. Hayman, of Niagara Falls, offered a resolution which was adopted, calling for the appointment of a committee to invite and promote nation-wide co-operation of state exhibitor bodies that would bring about the repeal of the measure. The committee appointed was Bernard Edelhertz, New York; J. P. Michaels, Buffalo; William A. Dillon, Ithaca; Walter Hays, Syracuse; Louis Blumenthal, Jersey City; and William Brandt, New York.

H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., was a guest of the convention and following the admission tax discussion, he was invited to address the convention.

Mr. Richey, who has jumped into national prominence in the past few months in connection with the candidacy of James C. Ritter for National President of the M. P. T. O. A. and in other ways concerning Michigan's live organization, made an extremely favorable impression explained Michigan's position relative to the withdrawal from the national body.

He referred to the Chicago convention as "ancient history." "Michigan's grounds for withdrawal are well founded," he declared in the course of his speech. "At Washington we stuck with the national body when New York withdrew. But when we saw Chicago we were convinced that we would not support a program that was not conducive to our best interests as we saw them. There was only one thing to do and that was to get out."

"We merely felt that we must either be for or against," continued Mr. Richey.

Mr. Richey stated that Michigan is well aware that there is need of a national organization and is looking forward to the time when it can join a movement towards that end.

Wednesday's session did not begin until afternoon. The proceedings led off with the addresses that had been scheduled. The first by Lou Blumenthal, who took as his topic, "Film Rentals." He advanced as some of the reasons for excessive prices, the practice of making extra-length features, waste in distribution and production and advocated that a committee be appointed to consult with Will

H. Hays as a possible means of remedying the faults enumerated.

Mr. Blumenthal's speech was followed by others of a similar tenor, the meeting being held open for general discussion. The uniform contract was the subject of an address by Bernard Edelhertz, one of the exhibitor committee instrumental in framing the instrument. Mr. Edelhertz explained the new contract's provisions and defended some of the clauses that have been subjected to criticism in various quarters.

William Brandt followed Mr. Edelhertz, taking as his theme, "Co-operation." He asked for assistance from the theatre owners and dwelt especially on the necessity of paying dues promptly that the organization might have ample funds for the necessary expenses.

A recess was taken following Mr. Brandt's talk during which time several thousand dollars was paid in to the treasury or pledged.

After the recess, the executive committee which had been in session most of the previous night made its report through Jules M. Michaels, chairman. The committee had resolved itself into a nominating committee and presented the following names as a suggestion to the convention:

President, William Brandt, New York; first vice-president, William A. Dillon, Ithaca; second vice-president, Lou Buettner, Cohoes; third vice-president, Meyer Schine, Gloversville; treasurer, A. C. Hayman, Niagara Falls; executive secretary, S. I. Berman, New York; chairman of executive committee, J. Michaels, Buffalo; board of directors, Leo Brecher, New York; William Benton, Saratoga Springs; Walter Hays, Syracuse; Michael Shea, Buffalo; Charles L. O'Reilly, New York; Nathan Robbins, Utica; Joseph Quittner, Middletown; Charles Steiner, New York; Sam Suckno, Albany; B. Edelhertz, R. Sanders, Brooklyn; V. A. Warren, Messina; and Charles Moses, Staten Island.

This list was unanimously accepted as the official slate of nominations and also unanimously elected.

Mr. Brandt took the chair after his election and called the meeting to order after a short

M.P.T.O.A. Urges Shorter Features

Committee Is Appointed and Will Discuss Exhibitor Problems with Producers

WITH a view to bringing about a shortening of the length of feature pictures so as to enable the theatre owners to present more diversified and consequently more interesting programs to their patrons, the following letter has been addressed by National President Sydney S. Cohen, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to the different producers of pictures here and in Los Angeles:

"Gentlemen—At the Chicago Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in May, 1923, I recommended in my annual report that shorter feature pictures be produced.

"This recommendation was adopted unanimously by the delegates to the convention. In my report I said the following respecting the shortening of feature pictures:

"Because of the length of some of these features, which simply means to the public useless yards of celluloid in many instances, interest in our theatre programs diminishes, and in order that we might bring this up to the proper point and always please our patrons, theatre owners should be in a position to present much more diversified programs. This will enable us to use short reels of entertainment and informative value, and give that necessary diversification to our entertainment which is often lacking under present conditions.

"I suggest that this matter be considered very carefully by a special committee appointed for that purpose, who will report to the National Board of Directors, after having discussed the situation with producers and others agreed upon, a comprehensive line of procedure which will enable us to bring about the results aimed at."

"With this purpose in view the following committee has been designated: Messrs. M. E. Comerford, of Scranton; Harry Davis, of Pittsburg; R. F. Woodhull, of Dover, N. J., who are prepared to meet with you at the earliest possible moment to discuss the matter in its entirety and present to you the viewpoint of the theatre owners of the country, representing our public.

"I hope that the conference between you and the members of our committee will be of a very helpful character and that we will be able to arrive at understandings along the lines indicated, which will be of general advantage to our industry.

"Awaiting your early reply in the matter, I am,

Sincerely Yours,

(Signed) "SYDNEY S. COHEN, President."

Vancouver Allen House Not in Famous Deal

That the sale of Allen Theatres, Ltd., comprising the extensive chain of moving picture theatres in Canada, to the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., Toronto, has no bearing on the Allen theatre at Vancouver, B. C., is the announcement which has been made by W. P. Dewees, of Vancouver, managing director of the company which operates the new and large Allen theatre in that city.

Mr. Dewees has issued a statement in which he asserts that the Allen house in Vancouver is operated by Allen's Vancouver Theatre, Ltd., and that the purchase of Allen Theatres, Ltd., will in no way affect either the theatre at Vancouver or the operating company. The Vancouver company, he declared, is a purely Vancouver enterprise and practically all the shares in the company are owned in Vancouver. The directors of Allen's Vancouver Theatre, Ltd., are: General Victor W. Odum, J. H. Sankler, W. W. Boulton, W. P. Dewees, J. A. Schulberg, S. J. Coffland and P. G. Crisp, all of Vancouver.

A question has also arisen as to the control of the Allen theatre at Winnipeg, Man., and it has been intimated that if this is not included in the sale to Famous Players an allowance of $25,000 is to be made by G. T. Clarkson, authorized trustee of Allen theatres, Ltd., during the receivership term, from the total purchase price of $650,000 for the whole chain.

speech in which he expressed his appreciation of the honor and pledged his best efforts in office.

Later, Mr. Brandt relinquished the chair to take the floor for the purpose of offering a resolution that expressed disapproval of Rudolph Valentino's dancing tour, his speeches at the Chicago convention and his conduct in general. This resolution brought forth protests that the matter was not one to properly come before the convention and was later withdrawn.

Senator Walker made a speech at the close of the Wednesday session that contained many constructive ideas and sparkled with epigrams.

He told his audience that organization among exhibitors was possible and stated that his connection with the industry was never based on commercial or financial influence.

"There must be co-operation between the three great branches of the business," said Mr. Walker. And then he added that there must be compromise, too.

To President Brandt he said, "Prove they didn't elect a politician" and to the exhibitors present, "Stay at the work and do it right or get out of the business."

The last business of the session was an explanation of the music tax from the angle of the American Society of Publishers and Authors by E. C. Mills.

In the evening the annual banquet was held. This affair was a feature due largely to the brilliant array of speakers provided. Senator Walker introduced in turn Mayor Walrath of Syracuse, Congressman McGregor, Dean Flint of Syracuse University, Will H. Hays, Marcus Loew, and Peter J. Brady.

All the speeches were of a serious nature and urged the exhibitors present to use their screens not entirely for financial profit but also for constructive purposes.

Mr. Hays' was complimentary to Senator Walker, and the work of the T. O. O. C., especially in connection with the adoption of the uniform contract.

* Marcus Loew stated that his company, meaning Metro, would make 33 pictures for the ensuing year at a gross cost of twelve million dollars and made a comparison with the productions during his first year as head of Metro when between forty and fifty pictures had cost only three millions.

He also announced that the Loew houses would raise admission prices this fall to meet the demands of the new schedule of the high-priced pictures that not only Metro but other companies would turn out.

Levee Entertains First National Gathering

A general gathering of producers for First National, directors, players and exchange men of Western districts took place at the United Studios last week when M. C. Levee entertained the Sales conventionists and tendered them a farewell luncheon.

Headed by Floyd Brockell, John McCormick and Earl Hudson, the First Nationalists met at the United Studios for a tour of inspection. Mr. Levee, together with every First National director working on the "lot" conducted the visitors about the studio where they viewed several new productions in the making

Cohen Testifies at Federal Hearing

The complaint of the Moon theatre, Tecumseh, Neb., had to do with the showing of Paramount pictures at a Chautauqua and in schools, and other school complaints came from Oxford, Miss.; Salem, Ohio, and Ada, Ohio. A discussion of the showing of pictures in schools ensued, and Mr. Cohen declared he could see no objection to the running of pedagogic, educational or Biblical films, but it was unfair for schools to show feature dramas in competition with the exhibitor.

"It is destroying the little man who keeps the industry going," the witness summed up. He admitted that the practice might not be illegal, but nevertheless it was unfair.

The cross-examination of Mr. Cohen, resumed Tuesday morning at 10:45 o'clock, lasted until 1:30 p. m.

Mr. Swain took up, case by case, all the remaining complaints. Many of these were difficulties between exhibitors and F. P.-L. sales representatives over film prices, or complaints that service had been taken away and given to opposition houses.

Many of the cases were from the South and New England. The Marquis Amusement Company case, Bartow, Fla., came to his attention from W. C. Patterson, of Atlanta, said the witness. He had no recollection of having been shown an admission that the exhibitor in the case had switched films from one city to another, and did not know that F. P.-L. had paid the exhibitor $100 in adjustment.

In the Carpenter case at Richford, Vt., Mr. Swain showed that a pooling arrangement had been obtained for Carpenter with Black.

Although he had tried to get a settlement for C. A. Lick, of Ft. Smith, Ark., he had been unable to do so, Cohen stated, and Mr. Swain asked him to let Famous Players have the facts so that an adjustment could be worked out. Mr. Lick was described by the witness as one of the most substantial and cleanest exhibitors in the country.

In the Huntsville, Ala., matter, Mr. Swain brought out that Hackworth and his partner had asked Southern Enterprises to help finance the building of a theatre and that Southern Enterprises had afterwards sold their 50 per cent interest in the house. Mr. Cohen said he didn't remember that, but would not say Mr. Swain's version was wrong.

Considerable attention was devoted to the case of H. H. Jackson, Columbia, Tenn., which Mr. Cohen described as the absolute undermining of a theatre owner. Some of the correspondence in this matter came from representatives of Metro and First National, which led Mr. Swain to ask pointedly:

"You mean to say complaints came to you from representatives of our competitors?"

"A few did," the witness answered.

The complaint was to the effect that a representative of Southern Enterprises wanted to take over Jackson's theatre, and when Jackson refused the F. P.-L. subsidiary got another house and refused to give him any more Paramount pictures beyond those he had already contracted for.

"Don't you know that Southern Enterprises never did own a theatre in Columbia?" asked Swain. Mr. Cohen replied he didn't know that.

"The steps they took," Mr. Swain contin-

Harding to Present Print of "Covered Wagon"

ON Tuesday, July 3rd, President Harding will visit Blue Mountain, Meacham, Oregon, and there formally present to the Old Oregon Trail Association, for preservation in its official archives, a print of James Cruze's Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon."

The print is being given the association by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation through the courtesy of S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution, and C. M. Hill, branch manager at Portland. Arrangements to have the President make the presentation address were made by W. E. Meacham, of Baker, Ore., president of the association, who last week telegraphed to Mr. Kent his thanks and that of his organization.

Mr. Kent has also received the following message from Hon. Walter M. Pierce, Governor of Oregon:

"Please permit me to thank you on behalf of the State of Oregon for your kind co-operation in presenting print of 'The Covered Wagon' to the Old Oregon Trail Association."

ued, "was to give the service to a brother of a Famous Players employe."

The Glenwood, Iowa, case Mr. Cohen described as "a rather mean" one, in which a small exhibitor, having had difficulties with a Paramount representative, was subject to the so-called "shock" advertising. Mr. Swain pointed out that F. P.-L. never owned a theatre in Glenwood, and that the case was merely one where a rival theatre opened and got the Paramount service.

This brought a statement from Cohen that the "shock" advertising was used by Paramount representatives in the field for their own purposes, but a moment later he admitted to Mr. Swain that the ads were used only in towns where Paramount pictures were not being shown.

On one occasion when a Kansas City representative wrote a threatening letter to an exhibitor, the representative was discharged by Mr. Kent, it was revealed.

As to the whole New England situation at the time of the complaints, Mr. Cohen said: "Zukor and Kent tried to stop Black because Black was making so many blunders."

"As a matter of fact, every time an exhibitor got in a quarrel over service, didn't he imagine Famous Players was going to come in and build a theatre?" Mr. Swain wanted to know.

This Mr. Cohen denied, but he added: "We did find that First National pictured Lynch as an overpowering monster, and Lynch was smart enough to let the exhibitors believe it." Mr. Lynch was not what he was "built up" to be by propaganda, but just like most people, the witness went on, and in addition a man of great ability.

Because of the fear of reprisals, only a small percentage of the cases came to M. P. T. O. A. headquarters, Mr. Cohen thought.

The Madison, Neb., case turned out, when Mr. Cohen's file was examined, to be a complaint against Fox and Universal and had nothing to do with Famous Players.

The Andrew J. Cobe matter was dismissed as a controversy which culminated in a dispute over salary which Cobe claimed was due him from F. P.-L.

The problem of length of protection came up in connection with the Poujal case in New Orleans, "where the distributor gives long protection, he puts his own pictures out of business for the time being, doesn't he?" asked Mr. Swain. Mr. Cohen said that might be true, but called attention to the advertising of "The Sheik" in Detroit by John H. Kunskey, wherein Mr. Kunskey stated that the picture wouldn't show in Detroit the rest of the year. The advertisement was dated September 1, 1922.

The M. P. T. O. of Michigan declared for not more than thirty days as the right length for protection, and the advertisement was changed and the matter adjusted. Mr. Swain declared that Mr. Kunskey had no authority for the statement in the advertisement.

The George W. Allen matter in New Bedford turned out to be a service complaint which was satisfactorily adjusted. Newman, Cal., furnished another example of "shock" advertising. Mr. Cohen knew nothing of the merits of the case. The complaint of C. C. Griffin, Oakland, Cal., was personally settled by Mr. Kent. "Shock" advertising was also used in Beloit, Wis., but Mr. Swain brought out the fact that Paramount Pictures had not played the town for two years and a half previously.

In connection with the case of Wesley White, Bristol, Tenn., the relations of Mr. Lynch with F. P.-L. came up again.

"In talking with Mr. Zukor," said the witness, "we found that Lynch had an option for eleven other states for distribution of Paramount pictures, but Mr. Zukor told our committee that Mr. Lynch would not get the other eleven, and he did not. We're glad he didn't."

"Have you had any exhibitor complaints from the South since Famous Players took over the Lynch interests?" the witness was asked. His answer was "No."

A. C. Hayman, of Buffalo, had sent in a complaint concerning an exhibitor, who asserted that on the promise of Paramount service he had gone ahead and bought a theatre, extensively advertising the fact that it would show Paramount Pictures. Mr. Swain pointed out that another exhibitor already had the service in the town, and asked the witness if he would think it fair to take the service away from the man who had it and give it to the other exhibitor.

"I would have felt that to be unfair," responded Mr. Cohen, whereupon Mr. Swain remarked: "That was a case where we would have been damned if we did, and damned if we didn't."

The ultimate result of the C. Stern case, Bangor, Me., Mr. Cohen did not know. Stern, he said, was ready to buy one of Black's theatres in Bangor, and the matter was taken up with E. J. Ludvig, but nothing happened. Afterwards, the witness declared, Mr. Stern met Harold B. Franklin, who wanted Stern to pool, but this the latter declined to do.

The C. H. Burkey, Kansas City, case turned out to be a service complaint and the Angus & Bradshaw affair a dispute over deposits.

The Mattoon matter Mr. Cohen described as a typical "shock" advertising case. It was brought out that B. Uran, the complainant, got into a controversy with F. P.-L. over film prices and discontinued the service. Then Fitzpatrick and McElroy came into the town, took a theatre and played Paramount.

Cohen Witness in F. P.-L. Case

Mr. Kent arranged with Mr. Cohen to give Uran a large number of Paramount pictures gratis to settle the dispute and this was done.

However, Mr. Cohen declared the Minneapolis Convention felt that Mr. Uran's attitude was fair at that time, and went on to say that Uran considered he was held up to ridicule by the Paramount advertising, and the sending of post cards to people in Mattoon. Mr. Swain stated that Fitzpatrick & McElroy eventually bought Uran's theatre.

The Rubens complaint related to the treatment alleged to have been given W. D. Burford, of Aurora, Ill., by Paramount because of his attitude at Minneapolis. This led Mr. Kent, who was sitting in the group of Famous Players counsel and officials at the trial, to break in with: "If I had my way we wouldn't sell Burford a dollar's worth of film. However, we're selling him."

Mr. Cohen declared he believed Mr. Burford was trying to get a constructive solution at Minneapolis, but of course what might happen in the heat of Minneapolis, with two hundred men around an argument in a hotel lobby was another matter. He agreed with Mr. Swain that "reasonable men may differ."

Peter Megaro's complaint was a service matter, it was agreed, and was settled by splitting the product with Wilmer & Vincent. The case of Mrs. Brownfield, in Mansfield, La., arose, according to the witness, from a "fool letter" written to her to the effect that if she didn't take the deal offered, Southern Enterprises would run a theatre in opposition to her. The threat never materialized. "That's another case of an overenthusiastic salesman," Mr. Swain commented.

Other cases were taken up, but they did not reveal any startling features, and finally Mr. Swain asked the witness about correspondence with H. B. Varner, secretary of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. Mr. Cohen said it was not a complaint about Mr. Varner's theatres, but related generally to the Lynch situation.

"By the way," said the Famous Players' counsel, "is North Carolina in your organization now?"

Mr. Cohen's reply was that "we received a letter the other day from the Executive Committee on North Carolina's withdrawal, but we have received letters from other theatre owners in the State—one a very large theatre owner—declaring they wanted to function with our national organization."

The case of H. Schwartz, Willimantic, Conn., was then gone over in detail, and Mr. Cohen, responding to questions, stated that Mr. Zukor and Mr. Kent showed every disposition to do the right thing. Schwartz, it was shown, got a $3,500 check from Famous Players in settlement.

Asked how much of the check went to Schwartz, Mr. Cohen said "$2,500," and the organization spent $1,500 in his behalf.

Mr. Swain tried to show that Schwartz had taken the $2,500 and done the same thing in acquiring a theatre in Taftville, Conn., that Black had done to Schwartz in Willimantic.

To this Mr. Cohen demurred, saying that the difference was that Schwartz in his Taftville deal was not associated with a big producing the Virginia exhibitor group, was up as one of the arbiters.

and distributing company, and the situations were therefore not the same.

The settlement with Mrs. Dodge was made by Famous Players giving its own check for $5,016.53, Mr. Swain declared, and asked Mr. Cohen how much Mrs. Dodge got.

"Sixty-five hundred dollars," replied Mr. Cohen.

"Cash?" asked Mr. Swain, in a surprised tone.

"Yes, cash," the witness responded. "She received $3,500 at Minneapolis after the check was sent us by Famous Players, and we had given her $3,000 or more toward running her theatre."

Holding up a copy of Mr. Cohen's annual report at the Chicago Convention, containing a page with cuts of the Dodge and Schwartz checks, Mr. Swain said: "Now, Mr. Cohen, you have stated that we tried to be fair. Don't you think it was a little unfair on your part to drag out those checks in 1923 as an indictment of us?"

Mr. Cohen leaned forward in the witness chair, and hastened to explain:

"That report was drawn up as the final accounting of my three years' stewardship as head of the M. P. T. O. A. If I had thought I was going to be re-elected I certainly would not have gone to the expense of getting up the document. The checks were only put in there because I read in the Film Daily's report of the testimony of J. C. Boss at this hearing that I was negligent in protecting the exhibitors' interests. Otherwise, the checks would never have appeared in the report. I myself and some of our leaders thought in justice to the organization and myself the checks should be contained in the report. But it is not intended as an indictment of Famous Players."

Mr. Cohen again made it plain that he considered Messrs. Zukor and Kent had tried to be fair all through the controversy, but still held to his point that theatre acquisition by Famous Players was a wrong policy. He declared that he was strong for co-operation between producer and exhibitor.

Mr. Swain made the statement that the maximum number of theatres Famous Players had at any time was 400, and today the number was about 120.

"If Famous Players found—as we did find in twenty-odd cities—that the best theatres had taken First National pictures which they had to play under the franchise, and taking into account the announced policy of First National to put out a program sufficient to supply these houses, wouldn't you understand the necessity for acquisition of theatres by Famous Players?" Mr. Swain asked.

"I do," answered the witness, "but I told Mr. Zukor at the time he stated that he was having the fight with Schwalbe and Williams that his reprisals should be on the people who were fighting him and not on any others."

The defense then introduced a communication written by Cohen to the M. P. T. O. A. members referring to First National, with a reference in one paragraph to F. P.-L. Chief Counsel Fuller, for the Government, at first objected to its introduction, but finally agreed to its being offered in evidence merely as showing the state of mind of the witness at that time and not as proving any facts.

Mr. Cohen's redirect examination was very short. Mr. Fuller asked him when he called the Dodge matter to Mr. Zukor's attention, and got the answer that it was September, 1920. The Dodge check was drawn in June of the following year, he told Mr. Fuller.

To Complete Organization of Carolina Board

Organization of the joint arbitration board which will handle all differences between exchanges and exhibitors in the Charlotte territory will be completed this week. Secretary B. Varner goes to Charlotte with other leading exhibitors for a conference with the film exchange members of the board, which has already been elected by the Managers' Association of Charlotte, and at this conference the exhibitor members of the board will be appointed.

The M. P. T. O. of North Carolina, at its last annual convention a year ago, passed resolutions favoring such a board, at the suggestion of E. F. Dardine.

D. C. Arbitration Board Holds Session

The Arbitration Board in Washington, D. C., held its mid-June session last week in the private offices of Harry M. Crandall, chairman of the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware group of exhibitors. Several important cases were presented and a few decisions made.

Some cases involving several similar disagreements between a Maryland exhibitor and two or more Washington exchanges were postponed for later settlement.

Griffin for Regional Plan of Organization

President of Northern California M. P. T. O. for Straight Out-and-Out Business Plan

ANOTHER exhibitor leader—C. C. Griffin, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Northern California—has written a constructive article on exhibitor organization for MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Referring to William A. Johnston's editorial in the issue of June 9, entitled "Build It Right," Mr. Griffin says: "Everything in it agrees pretty well with my sentiments." Outlining his views in detail, Mr. Griffin declares that the regional unit should be the foundation of national organization. His letter to Mr. Johnston follows:

"As I told you in Chicago I am very much opposed to any national exhibitor organization founded along political lines. Exhibitors are business men, not politicians, as a rule. If there be some in the exhibitor ranks who are politicians they are the ones who will control the organization. That has been the case ever since the inception of the M. P. T. O. A. and it always will be the case. What I want to see is a straight out-and-out business organization that permits of no politics and I believe that this can be accomplished by the following method:

"First: By the organization of a strong regional unit in each shipping zone; organized of course along the lines most suitable to the exhibitors in that particular section of the country thoroughly free from any dictation from the national body except as to the method of cooperation therewith which, of course, should be uniform throughout the country and not haphazard as it is now.

"Second: Each unit so organized should elect one of their members to sit on a Board of Governors of the national organization with full power to transact business between that unit and the national body subject, of course, to the approval of the local unit.

"Third: This Board of Governors so constituted should be the governing body of the national organization and should be empowered to appoint whatever executives necessary to conduct the business of the national organization, such as employment of a national council, national secretary, national treasurer, etc.

"The work of the national secretary should be laid out by this board of governors and all executives should be subject to dismissal at any time that the board of governors decide that their services were not satisfactory.

"Such a procedure would eliminate all politics from the national organization. Whatever politics is necessary in the ranks of the organized exhibitors should be and would be found in the regional units and I believe by this method the regional units would be very careful to select men best qualified to serve on such a board of governors to the end that politics would cut very little figure in such selection.

"The matter of finances of course is a difficult problem but I am convinced with such an organization totally free from politics, the large exhibitors of the country who have so far held aloof from organization on account of politics would be attracted to it and would lend their financial support unstintingly.

"There should, however, be a uniform system of dues both as to regional and national organization. Each regional organization

Petty Politics Will First Have to Die Out, Says Richards

IN a letter to William A. Johnston, editor of Motion Picture News, E. V. Richards, Vice-President and General Manager of the Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans, has this to say on the subject of exhibitor organization:

"I think your editorial of the 9th is very good, and I hope for the best in the future—for an exclusive exhibitor association, on a broad and powerful basis, for the uplift of the industry. But narrow minds and petty politics will first have to die out in order to attract real men and thought to patriotic action."

should be free to employ such methods as are practical to obtain funds to operate on. The board of governors, however, would act in an advisory capacity in these matters to the end that each regional organization should be fully informed as to the methods employed in all other regionals.

"I believe in the quota system, that is to say, each regional organization should stand its pro rata of the expenses of operating the national organization but said expenses would be budgeted annually so that each unit would know exactly how much its quota is and what is being done with the money.

"I am a firm believer in conventions but not political fiascos as we have had in the past. Nothing of a constructive nature can ever be accomplished at a convention where politics is the main issue. I do not believe that any elections should be held at the convention. The convention, however, should ratify the work of the board of governors of the past year and make such recommendations to the board of governors as seems proper. My idea of a convention is a gathering of exhibitors for the purpose of an exchange of ideas and concerted action upon matters which are of interest to the exhibitors and also concerted action on matters of public interest and for the good of the industry at large.

"The first step in the founding of a national organization is the organization of regional units and naturally that is the hardest problem because it costs money. I really believe, however, that enough high powered exhibitors can be prevailed upon to subscribe to a fund for this purpose. I think that should be done by one of the larger exhibitor organizations, for instance the Michigan organization or the New York Chamber of Commerce or perhaps the New York organization headed by Charlie O'Reilly.

"All of the above may seem to indicate that I am in favor of starting a new national organization but I want to assure you that I am not, provided however, that the M. P. T. O. A. as it is at present constituted would scrap its constitution and get off its political pedestal and get down to business along such lines as set forth above.

"I do not believe, however, that they will be able to finance the national organization enough to go out and accomplish anything of importance, therefore that work should be taken up by some regional organization.

"Perhaps there are other plans that might work out to advantage and if so I am for them regardless of who formulates them, because that is only incidental to the big scheme of things.

"I want to say again that I am unalterably opposed to any plan which permits of political maneuvering and steam rolling such as we have always had in the M. P. T. O. A."

Kansas City Exhibitors to Battle Unions

Just as a prosperous Summer season confronts Kansas City exhibitors, a cloud of trouble, in the form of allied amusement union interests, looms on the horizon.

The unions, including musicians, operators and billposters, have started a campaign to unionize every motion picture theatre in Kansas City. At present only four Kansas City houses are completely unionized, controversies of any large degree heretofore having been averted. But the Kansas City division of the M. P. T. O. A. does not intend to yield an inch, according to A. M. Eisner, president.

"There is a clause in the present contract with the unions stating that a motion picture theatre cannot employ part union employees, but that all must be union employees," said Mr. Eisner. "Such terms are unreasonable, in that the musicians of many of the smaller exhibitors are relatives, and such an exhibitor could not afford to employ union musicians, especially in the summer season. The Kansas City theatres will continue the same policy that has prevailed in the past—hire whom we please, regardless of any affiliations with unions."

New Knickerbocker Suits Go Into Court

The latest group of Knickerbocker suits were brought up in court last week. The Friday assignment in Circuit Division II included Wesson vs. Knickerbocker Company; Attorneys Cromelin and Laws for Plaintiff Wesson, and Lambert and Yeatman for the theatre.

Case No. 16 was the Miss Rose Goon vs. Knickerbocker, her attorney, Hazell, appearing, while Glennan and O'Brien appeared for the theatre.

Administrator Charles Wesson was granted a motion favorable to further litigation in his suit for $10,000 damages from the now defunct Knickerbocker Corporation.

Sees First Picture at 90, Says Its Wonderful

At the age of ninety years, Mrs. Caroline Eddy, of Watertown, N. Y., witnessed her first motion picture this week. Mrs. Eddy was taken to the Avon theatre, where she saw "A Connecticut Yankee," and expressed herself as much pleased. It was the woman's ninetieth birthday.

Mrs. Eddy has never had any prejudice against the movies, but simply had no desire to go. Her only remark upon seeing the picture was "Wonderful!"

Prospectus of Coming Season

By Laurence Reid

THE hot dog days of June and July may mean vacation time to the youngsters, but to people identified with the show business—whether it pertains to stage or screen—they indicate that the buyers are in our midst—buyers for all kinds of industries and professions. The stage producer, to entertain the vast army of merchandise buyers, puts on his summer musical attractions, knowing full well that the heat of the day which lingers into the night is too oppressive to give the boys—and some of the big stores employ girls as bargainers—dramatic plays which might compel them to think.

So it is said and sung with "words and music." The girls who woo the T. B. M. with their charms, manners and costumes came forth to sing a little and dance a great deal. The buyers from Keokuk, Kankakee and Kansas City and other points North, South, East and West return home with their orders placed and a feeling of being well entertained by the "Follies," "Scandals," "Vanities," et al.

There is another army of buyers in New York who have a different kind of orders to place. They represent the front phalanx of exhibitors—the exhibitors from the key cities—who have come to town to see what the producing companies have to offer for fall and winter attractions. And the radius of their activities is not up in the automobile district, nor down among the cotton goods district, but extend in a small arc in the heart of Broadway and Fifth Avenue. And on these thoroughfares and Madison avenue they will find sufficient big pictures to make a fuss over when they book them back home.

The producers have said it, the NEWS has printed it, and most of the buyers know it, that the market is fairly crowded with big attractions. Reams of publicity and advertising matter have acquainted them with the highlights of these products. They have come to New York to talk "shop" and they're going back home with a feeling of elation that their audiences will be entertained when the first chill of November is in the air.

However, it stands to reason that many of the exhibitors will be unable to make the trip. And it is the purpose of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS to acquaint them with what the boys who have made the trip eastward have learned.

It is also the purpose of this magazine to give some ready tips to the buyers in our midst. We don't claim to be infallible as what constitutes greatness in a picture. We only aim to serve our clientele. What may go well in Baltimore may fail miserably in Butte. But we are going to catalogue several attractions which have the earmarks of being BIG.

Taking Goldwyn's "Ben Hur" for a starter, it would seem as if this picture is destined to carry the screen to still further heights—heights which were only reached with "The Four Horsemen," "Robin Hood" and "The Birth of a Nation." Certainly nothing is being left undone to create a gorgeous tapestry. As yet the actor has not been selected who will interpret the title role, but rest assured whoever is chosen will be chosen because his personality and talent are adaptable. Goldwyn will send its army of players and technical experts to the Far East to record accurately the pages of General Lew Wallace's great story—which as a play entertained vast hordes of amusement seekers and netted a snug profit to its producers. It will be Goldwyn's supreme effort.

Other pictures which carry the flavor, the spirit, and the background of the Orient will soon be ready for bookings. We mention "The Thief of Bagdad," which Doug will offer as a successor to "Robin Hood." The star has placed his recent efforts upon a high pedestal. He is forced to aim high as a result in everything which he undertakes. But rumors and facts from the Coast indicate that Doug has another masterpiece in the above-mentioned opus. Certainly he is showing variety and versatility in going after stories and characters which he has heretofore not attempted.

Look you toward "The Ten Commandments" which Cecil De Mille promises will be his greatest production. This director with a flair for the exotic, for the spectacular arrangement of sweeping designs, has surpassed anything which he has accomplished in the past. Right now he is in the midst of activities wielding the megaphone over a vast horde of figures who are busily engaged in a biblical city risen from the plains of the Santa Maria desert. It is the largest exterior set ever built according to our Coast spies. And across the hot sands will plod the ships of the desert—namely, the camels—to say nothing of a few thousand royal steeds and sacred elephants. And hundreds of chariots. De Mille is searching the four quarters as well as all the nooks and crannies of the globe for atmosphere which will be employed to make the picture accurate and complete. And if he feels that a certain accuracy is lacking nothing will stop him making a trip to Palestine to collect genuine exteriors. Such is De Mille's way.

As is customary with most of his colorful essays, there will be a modern story interpreting the Decalogue in its relation to present-day life. This is written by Jeanie MacPherson, who has worked hand in hand with the director since his early days of screen production. And preceding this modern tale will be a biblical prologue. Lest you become confused we will tell you that two separate and distinct casts will interpret "The Ten Commandments." The figures of Rameses, Miriam, Aaron and Moses are played by Charles de Roche, Estelle Taylor, James Neill and Theodore Roberts, respectively. Other Old Testament personages are given to adaptable players. De Mille has apparently achieved something here which will make screen history. And it looks certain that the exhibitor who books it will make local screen history with his S. R. O. sign.

Richard Watson Tully's colorful romance of the tropics, "The Bird of Paradise," should prove to be a "hum-dinger." Certainly no expense will be spared to bring forth all of its atmospheric appeal. The picture will be staged in the Hawaiian Islands, where the story is laid. As a play it has proved to be one of the perennial favorites of the theatregoing public—with such players as Lenore Ulric, Lanrette Taylor, Florence Rockwell, Guy Bates Post and Theodore Roberts carried to the heights with their very able interpretations. The cast for the picture has not as yet been selected, but James Young will direct. Do you remember how the producers bid for the rights to Tully's play? Mr. Tully will produce it, himself, for First National.

The period dramas have shown in the past that if produced with meticulous care and detail and with an effort to be correct in character, atmosphere and background—they are sure to attract intelligent and appreciative audiences. There are several period dramas—call them costume plays if you will—awaiting your approval.

We predict that Marion Davies' "Little Old New York," sponsored by Cosmopolitan and carrying the Goldwyn banner, will be hailed as one of the biggest period dramas of the year. We have seen some of the stills and they are sumptuous and impressive. And we know for a certainty—having attended the production of one particularly lavish exterior—that it carries breadth and opulence. This is a picture of early New York—of the day when John Jacob Astor was a furrier and Commodore Vanderbilt piloted a ferryboat. The picture as a play was a great success. It sings with romance—of early American chivalry.

"The Street Singer" will introduce Mary Pickford against a Spanish background in a story exuding romantic glamour, adventure and colorful characterization. The title role brings the star into a distinct departure from her previous essays. Word comes that she is busily engaged upon "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," another costume drama which goes back to the period of knights in armor—and with faire ladies being entertained.

If Rex Ingram's production of "Scaramouche" does not meet with popular response we will have failed as a prognosticator of good things. This drama of the French Revolution is strong in the elements of the drama. Conflict and intrigue clash—and color and adventure are two of its dominant virtues. The players selected to carry on the spirit of Sabatini's vital tale include Alice Terry, Lewis Stone and Ramon Navarro.

It seems to be a year of period dramas, for the list is nowhere near exhausted. Here is Goldwyn's "Alice of Old Vincennes," a romance of the Revolutionary War—also to be a costume drama for the expression of Marion Davies' charm and personality. The readers of the book—and they were legion when it first came out several years ago—will be delighted to see it humanized upon the screen.

From Universal, probably the most interesting picture to mark the late winter comes "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," adapted, as every one knows, from Victor Hugo's novel. This stirring document of Paris of the fifteenth century will be accepted everywhere as Universal's biggest canvas. The producers are justly proud of their effort and they have good reason to feel that the production is not in vain. Lon Chaney, whose skill at characterization is unsurpassed, will interpret the title role.

Here is "Under the Red Robe," a Cosmopolitan, which will introduce the Shakespearean actor, Robert B. Mantell, in the role of Cardinal Richelieu. Certainly the producers are vying with one another to produce spectacular period dramas, and Cosmopolitan seems to be giving particular attention to these historical romances of yesterday. Another effort of theirs is "Yolanda," also starring Marion Davies. This story is by Charles Major, the author of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and is said to be rich with romance and adventurous incident.

Inspiration comes forward with "The Fighting Blade," which is Richard Barthelmess' contribution to the period dramas. It is a romantic story of the Cromwellian chapter in English history. Word reaches us that he has just completed work upon the biggest set ever made in the East. The picture is a replica of English court life during the seventeenth century. Dorothy Mackaill will appear opposite the star and John S. Robertson is in charge of the direction. Barthelmess is another player who seems determined to scale the heights. "The Bright Shawl" and "Tol'able David" indicate that he will make good pictures or fail in the attempt.

Fox is on the big picture list with at least one production which every exhibitor will be interested in. We are speaking of "The Shepherd King," written by Wright Lorrimer—which as a play was toured up and down the country by the author. J. Gordon Edwards, a director perfectly at home with spectacles, will produce the feature. The story carries on a biblical romance—and because of its atmosphere and the suggestion of rich old backgrounds it should find instant response. Save a place for it.

Another picture on which production has not progressed far enough to gather any first-hand information is Goldwyn's "In the Palace of the King." As a story it brought undying fame to its author, F. Marion Crawford. When it was produced as a play critics spoke about its perfect dramatic action and incident. June Mathis is responsible for the script and Emmett J. Flynn is in charge of the direction. And Blanche Sweet has been selected to interpret the role made famous by Viola Allen upon the stage. It certainly looks like a great picture—what with its net of intrigue and adventure during a period glorious in Spanish history.

A newcomer amongst the producers of the period dramas is Charles Ray, who gives up his rustic study to appear in "The Courtship of Miles Standish." This is a big gesture away from the simple homespun expressions with which he has heretofore been identified—and he is to be commended for allowing his talent and personality a wider range. Every one is familiar with Longfellow's poem. It has endeared itself to the heart of every school child—and humanized upon the screen it should carry Ray farther than he has ever been carried before. He is producing the picture upon a big scale and according to the stills it will rank with the best which the season has to offer.

Sam Goldwyn has several important projects up his sleeve and in his mind—one of which is the picturization of Hall Caine's vivid and vital story, "The Eternal City," which has already been produced as a play. Sir Hall has a faculty for writing real dramatic action in his tales—and furthermore they are always embellished with a significant spiritual quality. We look to see "The Eternal City" being given a New York run—what with a cast including Lionel Barrymore, Richard Bennett, David Powell, Barbara La Marr and Montagu Love. Director Fitzmaurice, who has a gift for opulent display and spectacular effect, has taken his players to Rome. It should be a magnificent canvas—this picture of renunciation.

Hobart Henley, who has created some worth-while productions for Universal, will furnish this company with another in the Frances Hodgson Burnett's "A Lady of Quality." Not much has been heard regarding the picture, but Henley isn't a director who plunges into his work in a haphazard fashion. If you remember Virginia Valli in "The Storm," one of Universal's finest expressions, you will find the reason why she has been elevated to stardom to create the title role in the Burnett adaptation.

Also belonging to the major league is "The Purple Pride" which Norma of the Talmadges will greet you with the coming season. This accomplished actress has a well established clientele. So it is certain that any picture in which she appears is destined to bring home the bacon. The star has enacted costume roles before. Take notice of "The Eternal Flame." "The Purple Pride" thrusts her into a French historic romance of moving color and action.

Associated Authors is a newcomer among the ranks of producers, but they are worshipping ideals. They would do big things in a big way. And they are starting off with "Richard the Lion-Hearted." Here is a story which places King Richard of "Robin Hood" fame right in the foreground. It should make a smashing, dashing subject—one calculated to carry the spectator along the high road of adventure and romance.

Information comes that Gallagher and Shean of "absolutely, positively" fame are soon to make their screen debut in a picture sponsored by Fox entitled "Around the Town." The popular pair have certainly put themselves over with the public—what with their famous song and their antics in the current "Follies." Incidentally, this song is one of the most popular in the music stores. Signing up the team shows William Fox demonstrating his keen eye for gauging the public pulse. We would call it sheer showmanship. We have no inkling of what "Around the Town" will feature—but we venture the opinion that it will have something to do with Broadway and jazz.

Von Stroheim has a knack for turning out selling products. He has certainly sold his name because he is not afraid to attempt something out of the ordinary. Wait for his production, "Greed," adapted from the late Frank Norris' stirring melodrama, "McTeague." We look for Stroheim to make the story just as vivid and vital—just as realistic as the author wrote it. Watch for it and mark off its release in your calendar. Incidentally, Stroheim will have an opportunity to spread himself in the screen version of "The Merry Widow." If the gorgeous score is silenced, at least the director, with his continental slant will make it a picture for the eye and the imagination. Look for sumptuous exteriors and interiors. Look for something radically different from the ordinary production. Brave hussars bedecked in colorful uniforms—gay raiment bedecking the weaker sex—and romance punctuating every scene—should make the film version of the light opera a compelling canvas.

"Merry-Go-Round" will be one of the smashing bits of next season or we miss our guess. Universal is banking heavily upon this picture going over the top like one of our late war loan drives. And there is no reason to doubt its success, judging from the rosy accounts and the colorful photographs which have come under our notice. It's a picture of fascinating adventure, intrigue, romance and all the ingredients which build interesting drama. A New York run is promised for the production, as well as for the other Universal, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Speaking of New York runs brings to mind that Fox's "If Winter Comes" will be housed in a legitimate theatre. A. S. M. Hutchinson's highly popular story has been approached with remarkable fidelity by Harry Millarde. A subtle tale to begin with—a tale relying upon subtleties of humor and tragedy and the exaltation of the wistful and romantic and pitiful figure of Mark Sabre—the sponsors deserve the highest praise for preserving the vital heart note and realizing the psychological values of the book. It is a picture the exteriors of which have been caught against the actual background of the novel. Its atmosphere lends a fine romantic glamour, while its interpretations is treated with true sympathetic feeling.

Another Fox attraction, "Cameo Kirby," has a box-office ring about it. The picture should be listed as big since it is adapted from the play of the same name by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson. It's a character study which is certain to enlist patronage.

One of the biggest stage hits of years will come to the screen in "Captain Applejack," which, we have it, will drop its title for "Strangers of the Night." It should prove a big winner because it, essentially, contains pictorial values—what with its adventurous exploits by the fanciful young dreamer whose slumbers take him on a piratical cruise. Fred Niblo, who directed "Blood and Sand," will give it the qualities of blood and sand—and we predict it will add lustre to any program.

Paramount offers another screen version in "The Cheat," which, when it was first produced, was hailed as the perfect photoplay. Time has wrought marked changes in the technique of screen drama, but we have no reason to discredit this subject, which should even be an improvement upon the original. For one thing the dynamic Pola Negri will appear in Fannie Ward's role—and Pola should create a role which for sheer brilliancy of pantomime ought to surpass her colorful creation of Madame du Barry in "Passion." Paramount, incidentally, should register success with another version of "Ruggles of Red Gap." With James Cruze, of "The Covered Wagon" fame, giving it the treatment which he accorded the Hough story, and with Ernest Torrence in the picturesque role of Cousin Egbert, patrons are certain to be entertained.

Several successes of other years are being given a new screen dressing. Here is Rex Beach's best yarn, "The Spoilers," which is still remembered for carrying the best he-man fight ever recorded on the screen. That was many years ago, but time has not effaced the mighty death struggle in which Tom Santschi and William Farnum were pitted against one another. Celluloid scraps have come and gone, but not until the new version of "The Spoilers" presented a richer melee has the old one ever been eclipsed. We predict that Milton Sills and Noah Beery will have them staring pop-eyed at the scrap which they put over in this exceedingly rugged story of the open spaces. We would advise every exhibitor everywhere (for the picture speaks a language which can be understood the wide world over) to get "The Spoilers" quick. Surely here is one of the big ones.

Warner Brothers came forth with "Tiger Rose," which, as a play produced by Belasco, served a palpitating public for nearly two years on Broadway. As a picture with the star, Lenore Ulric, playing her identical role, it should furnish the picture public with the same strong dramatic thrills. It's a picture which belongs in the big list.

Another smashing stage hit—a play which earned the Pulitzer prize as the best of 1921-1922—is to reach the screen bearing the

Questionnaires Reveal Public Wants

Arts Congress Committee Gleans Valuable Information From N. Y. Patrons

TABULATION of the questionnaires filled out by the patrons of the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion theatres in New York in connection with the International Congress on Motion Picture Arts recently held at the Waldorf-Astoria, reveals some interesting items about what theatregoers think about motion pictures. The Permanent Committee which the Congress nominated to carry on its work until the next annual meeting has been able to form a pretty definite idea as to what fans do and do not like and what remedies they advocate.

George Barr Baker, chairman of the Permanent Committee, reports that a statistical summary of the answers reveals that the story was deemed more important than the star or the direction of a picture by a three to one vote; that two to one preferred seeing literary masterpieces on the screen to stories written directly for the screen; four to one would rather see simple-true-to-life stories than spectacular and fantastic ones and pictures that instruct and provoke thought rather than pictures whose sole purpose is amusement.

Questions regarding their favorite authors, directors, actors, actresses and pictures revealed the following:

That D. W. Griffith is the favorite director, with Rex Ingram second and Cecil B. DeMille third.

That Ibanez is the most popular author, Conrad coming next, and Edith Wharton, Booth Tarkington and James Oliver Curwood being active competitors for third prize.

That Thomas Meighan is the favorite actor, having received twice as many votes as Douglas Fairbanks, who comes second, and three times as many votes as Richard Barthelmess and Milton Sills, who take third place.

That Norma Talmadge is the favorite actress, with Mary Pickford taking second place and Gloria Swanson third.

That "The Birth of a Nation" is still the fans' favorite picture, with "The Covered Wagon." "The Four Horsemen" and "Robin Hood" running it a close race.

Among the suggestions offered toward making better pictures were: "More natural stories—less 'hokum';" "elimination of star system," "too many cooks are spoiling the broth," "omit the false impressions of life," "less concentration on wealthy class and their artistically spectacular life, simpler stories of actual people, with intelligent direction."

Other tabulations will be made by the Permanent Committee of opinions and preferences of theatregoers in Westchester County and Western and Southern cities.

It is interesting to note the general cry for fewer and better pictures, with more emphasis on stories with big themes. The Permanent Committee is planning to keep closely in touch with the fans and to seek their co-operation, as well as that of the authors and producers, in carrying on the work so well begun by the Congress.

Fight Continues Over Showing of "Birth" in Kansas

C. W. Stater, exhibitor of Oklahoma City, who owns the exclusive Kansas rights to "The Birth of a Nation" has carried his fight to Governor Davis of Kansas against interests he contended were attempting to prevent him from showing the picture in Kansas.

The members of the Kansas censor board at Kansas City, Kas., now are involved in the overtures. They did not know the request would be made for a review until they read it in a Kansas City newspaper, they said. Stater, incidentally, is wondering whence came the information appearing in the newspaper, as he had told no one of his intentions. The M.P.T.O. of Kansas has protested to Governor Davis that the film should not be shown in Kansas, in view of the fact that two previous governors and a large number of citizens have disapproved it on the ground that it excited race hatred.

"Bella Donna" Barred in Muskogee, Okla.

A restraining order was granted in the District Court at Muskogee, Okla., June 9, against the scheduled showing there on the following Sunday of the picture "Bella Donna."

The application was signed by County Attorney Green, understood to be acting for Muskogee Klansmen, who previously had protested the picture as "detrimental to morals."

Portland Board of Trade Planning Ball

Portland's Film Board of Trade, composed of representatives of thirteen distributing companies, is backing plans for a monster motion picture ball to be held there in the fall. It is planned now to have every producing company represented at the ball by some one or more of its stars.

Roosevelt Action Pictures Are Requested

Prospectus of the 1923-1924 Season

Thomas H. Ince trademark. We present "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neil. This playwright has an unerring sense as to what constitutes situation, climax and characterization. As the subject matter is unusually strong, with a ringing melodramatic flavor, and records a vigorous slice of life among sailor folk, Mr. Ince will personally direct this feature, and he is approaching the work with the deepest appreciation for its interpretation. The title role, be it said, will be entrusted to an actress who is thoroughly grounded in her art—an actress who will measure out the vitality and feeling which Pauline Lord conveyed in the original. It deserves to be classed as one of the coming pictures which every exhibitor will want to play.

Jackie Coogan stepped high with "Oliver Twist," which proved its right to belong to the "immortals." And the boy wonder is certain to step high again with his first Metro productions, "Long Live the King," which records the adventures of a young crown prince of a mythical kingdom. Tales of mythical kingdoms belong to one of the oldest and most favored formulas. But with Jackie Coogan lending his art and tender appeal, the idea takes on a different color entirely. Enough effort is being expended upon the production to make it assume the aspect of something worth while. Long live Jackie Coogan!

Paramount has a big bet in "Hollywood," which, with the direction by James Cruze and the interpretation taken care of by twenty stars and forty lesser screen celebrities, is surely entitled to a place in the celluloid sun. All the favorites of the Lasky lots and several from other lots are included in the cast. It depicts the life of Hollywood, while its central idea is based upon a girl who tried to get into the movies. It promises to be a distinct achievement and one of the biggest box-office bets ever produced.

We could go on listing picture after picture which deserves mention in this article. Some of them have a favorable box-office appeal, others have art written all over them—yet Commerce and Art can be absorbed in each other—and probably a few of them are bigger than those of which we have written. But in selecting these favored few (it looks like a "costume" year) we have attempted to find Bigness in theme, execution, interpretation and direction. A picture carrying thorough workmanship cannot help but be BIG, regardless of whether we have exploited it here or not. We have tried to pick the winners. It is just as difficult to pick the flops. But who wants to belong to the losing side?

St. Louis King Is Goldwyn First Run House

WILLIAM GOLDMAN of St. Louis will show the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan pictures including Distinctive's output which will be distributed by the recent distribution merger, at his King theatre. The first eleven fall releases have been booked.

The ultimate Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan first run theatre in the Missouri metropolis will be the new St. Louis theatre which is now being built, but in the meantime its product will be shown at Goldman's King theatre.

The first picture to be shown at the King under his arrangement will be Cosmopolitan's "Enemies of Women," featuring Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens. It is scheduled to open there on September 1.

As soon as Goldman's new theatre, the St. Louis, in Grand Avenue, is completed, about January 1, 1924, it will become the Goldwyn first run house. The St. Louis will seat 4,000 persons. It is being built on a magnificent scale and it is expected to be classed among the finest picture theatres in the country.

"Hash" Process Spoils Pictures

Thomas Dixon Advocates More Direct Expression of Authors to the Screen

THOMAS DIXON, well-known author, in a letter to William A. Johnston, publisher of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, expresses himself with regard to developments at the recent Arts Congress. He tells of the need of the authors expressing their thought directly to the screen and attributes the failure of many pictures to the fact that too many diversions are made from the original story.

Mr. Dixon's letter follows:

MY DEAR MR. JOHNSTON—Permit me to express my appreciation of your editorial in the NEWS referring to my new photoplay, "The Mark of the Beast."

You are right as to the trend of thought at the recent Congress. The most interesting address of the session was by our young dramatist, Mr. Elmer Rice. In fact, it was the only sensation sprung on this gathering by any speaker on the regular program. It was greeted by a veritable storm of applause.

The proposition of his remarkably interesting address was simple, bold and startling, viz.:

"That the motion picture has not yet developed into an art, because art is the expression of the soul of an individual artist, while the finished photoplay is at present merely a hash product of many minds."

He wittily demonstrated this by showing that when a great dramatist like Shaw delivers a manuscript to the Theatre Guild for production as a play, it is put on as Shaw wrote it—as only Shaw could write it. Therefore, the soul of Bernard Shaw speaks directly and clearly to his audience. Hence "The Devil's Disciple" is a genuine work of art.

If Shaw had sold the story, however, to a motion picture producer a hack dramatist would have been called in to put the story into shape for the screen. A continuity writer would then have been hired to fix it for the camera. The director would be authorized to add any new touches that occurred to him in the making. The cutter would then join it according to his own ideas. The editor would revise it. The whole staff would again recut it. And the censors would give it a final slash.

All of which is painfully true. The trouble with us is that we lack the courage of our convictions when we dream a work of art. It costs so many thousands of dollars to produce and distribute a picture we are afraid to risk the bold conception of a creative thinker without toning it down. We can't afford to lose a fortune invested in salaries, sets, locations and story.

And so we play safe. We reduce the story to the level of the lowest crowd mind. And we hire the brainiest men we can find to do this reduction—with malice aforethought. We make these editors understand that their salaries depend on the accuracy with which they can figure out sure-fire stuff from the box office point of view.

The time is coming when creative thinkers will make the screen the medium of direct expression. Until this is done, Mr. Rice is right—the motion picture cannot be an art. It will remain a hash.

The author must master the technique of photoplay making and then demand the kind of contract Bernard Shaw gets from the producers of his plays. It may or may not have succeeded in expressing with power my idea in "The Mark of the Beast." But at least I have made a start in the right direction. I have made an honest effort after ten years' study of the technique of motion pictures.

Along this line the picture of the future must and will develop. The motion picture will become an art—one of the greatest the world has ever known.

When I hawked the material of "The Birth of a Nation" around to the producers in 1911, 1912 and 1913, they all rejected it. Even so astute a man as Mr. Zukor thought it too bold, too dangerous to risk. Griffith had the daring to produce it. And he created in this production the greatest piece of theatrical property in history.

When the Theatre Guild was launched five years ago in the old lemon-colored dark house in 35th street, our big managers up town smiled. They said that real creative thinking on the stage would not pay in America.

It has paid:

The Theatre Guild are building their own house. And they have revolutionized the process of thinking in our big managers' offices. They have demonstrated that theatre-goers are not all boobs. That you can appeal to their intelligence through their emotions. And that this kind of appeal not only justifies itself because it is the glory of art, but because it will pay dividends. The past season saw more great plays on Broadway than any year in our history.

Let our authors dare to think and express their thoughts directly for the screen. The millions who go to moving picture houses are sick of the mediocre stuff to which the hash process has reduced the average photoplay. They are hungry for real stories that appeal to their intelligence. And such stories will pay.

THOMAS DIXON.

Shadow Land Productions Enters Field

Shadow Land Productions, Inc., have as their officers William C. Thompson, President, Stan de Lay, Vice-President and Business Manager, Rex Thorpe, Treasurer and Manager of the L. A. Exchange, Thomas Dixon, Jr., Secretary, Dramatic Critic and Editor.

The policy of this company is National distribution. The men in the company are all old picture men and pioneers of the industry.

They have just finished a series of six Saturday Evening Post stories by Wm. R. Leighton. These pictures were made in the natural scenery of Arizona. The names of the productions are "A Man's Fight," "Pals," "Out of the West," "Heads Hit Wins," "The Only Girl." They are now making a picture, "The Branded Man," with Fritzie Ridgeway.

Principal Pictures Corporation is presenting "The Spider and the Rose." These scenes are from the production.

Refuse to Ban "The Birth" in Washington

Efforts of religious leaders and colored sympathizers to have the police ban the further showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Washington, D. C., are doomed to fail says Major Sullivan, police chief. The present run of the picture may continue indefinitely for all Major Sullivan cares to lift a finger.

"This picture has been running for seven or eight years, and, while it has been met with opposition at times, it has received generally the endorsement of representative cities," said the Major.

A strong protest was raised early in the week by International Brotherhood for the Uplift of the Negro Race, from its New York headquarters. Following the complaint the Chief sent Inspector Shelby to review the film again and report on the re-actions of the audience. The Inspector reported in the negative, as to any radical re-action, but policemen have been present at each performance.

Demand for U. S. Pictures in Austria

A large market for good American films in Austria is reported by Trade Commissioner William Ford Upson, of Vienna, under date of April 14.

Outworn film in use in the Austrian republic needs immediate replacement by fresh recent releases of the better class American make, it is reported. The most serious handicap such change will encounter is the fact that distribution rights are held by a number of middlemen, adding materially to the cost of film distribution without materially contributing to the transaction. Therefore the Excelsior Film Company, a leading distributor of American films, feels that if it could establish direct contact with American lessors of film rights it could exhibit first class pictures at a cost within the reach of the Austrian public.

Another book by the author of "If Winter Comes" which has been made into photoplay form is "This Freedom," a novel that was forged to the front in the list of best sellers in the fiction field. It was photographed in Egypt almost in the identical location where the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen has been unearthed. The entire company was taken to Egypt by Mr. Edwards where, augmented by a mob of Egyptians, they went to the Pyramids and the Sphinx and thence up the Nile, where was enacted the prologue to the principal story, showing Moses leading the tribe of Israel out of Egypt. Subsequent scenes were taken in and near Jerusalem.

"Six Cylinder Love," the stage comedy that blase Broadway laughed at for more than fifty weeks, is another of the super-specials. Ernest Truex, the little comedian who created the leading role in the stage success, with three other members of the original cast, have been engaged for this screen version of William Anthony McGuire's comedy hit. Lubitsch Is Engaged by Warner Brothers

ANOTHER notable directorial acquisition has been made by the Warner Brothers with the signing of Ernest Lubitsch, the famous German director, to wield the megaphone on a number of the forthcoming schedule of eighteen features. The signing of Mr. Lubitsch, according to Harry M. Warner, is the forerunner of several other important announcements in connection with the production plans.

Mr. Lubitsch was signed last week, following his completion of "The Street Singer," with Mary Pickford. According to report the German director is now actively engaged in the production of a story for the Warners the title and nature of which has not been divulged. Among the pictures to be directed by Mr. Lubitsch is the David Belasco play, "Deburau."

Gordon Edwards production, story by Rufus King and scenario by Anthony Paul Kelly, is a drama of love, intrigue and the high seas, with a cast including Edmund Lowe, Betty Jewel, Martha Mansfield, Alma Tell, Florence Martin and Bela Lugosi. The climax in this high tension drama is a shipwreck at sea.

A Lincoln J. Carter thriller that Fox believes will surpass even the success of "The Fast Mail" is on the schedule. This is "The Arizona Express," a stage success that had a phenomenal run in the heyday of melodrama. This is a Bernard J. Durning production.

Another Lincoln J. Carter play is "The Eleventh Hour," an up-to-the-minute melodrama of love and pirates. Charles Jones and Shirley Mason are the stars. This is also a Bernard J. Durning production, with scenario by Louis Sherwin.

Flynn directing.

Another outdoor story is "The Plunderer," a tale of gold mining and human hearts, from the novel by Roy Norton, scenario by John Russell. This is a Lambert Hillyer production.

Universal Holds Sales Conference

Comprehensive Sales and Distribution Policy Outlined For Coming Year

UNIVERSAL sales executives and exchange managers east of the Mississippi held an important sales conference in the Hotel Commodore over the last week end. Besides developing the information that Universal is in excellent shape for the coming season, with a number of big pictures ready for screening, the conference outlined a comprehensive sales and distribution policy for the next twelve months.

Instead of the one-a-week schedule of five-reel releases which heretofore have been an important part of the Universal product, that company has found that by cutting down the number of its productions and going to greater lengths to make them out of the ordinary, an improved market has been built up.

After experimenting over a period of many months in the making of program pictures, it has been decided to drop the program or "weekly" aspect of the feature release schedule.

The Universal Sixty, the new annual aggregate of Universal feature productions, is to be made up of twenty Jewel pictures and forty exceptional features.

The Universal Sales Conference convened in the Hotel Commodore Friday, June 15th. In addition to executives from the home office, including Art Schmidt, general sales manager, and N. L. Manheim, assistant general sales manager in charge of short product, the following assistant general sales managers from out-of-town were present: Jules Levy, from Philadelphia; H. M. Herbel, from Pittsburgh; Ned Depinet, from the Southern territory, and Claire Hague, from Toronto. The exchange managers present included E. W. Kramer, of Buffalo; E. F. Dardine, of Charlotte, N. C.; Maurice Strauss, of Pittsburgh; Tom Colby, of Cleveland; A. J. Mertz, of Detroit; R. W. Abbott, of Indianapolis; M. Joseph, of New Haven; F. C. Hopkins, of Albany; Harry S. Brown, of Washington, D. C., and W. C. Hermann, of New York City.

The convention was featured by a sales dinner in the East Ball Room of the Hotel Commodore Friday evening, at which various home office executives, including E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of Universal, were present. In addition to Mr. Schmidt, the chairman of the convention, Mr. Goldstein, and P. D. Cochrane, secretary of Universal, devoted considerable time to a discussion of Universal policies with the assembled field men Friday and Saturday.

As a result of the first hand information of the trend of the motion picture public, as gathered by the division and exchange managers, a number of changes are contemplated in the Universal production plans. It is expected that new stars will be added and new kinds of product projected. The company is not ready to make any announcements along these lines yet.

This week a similar sales convention is being held in the Congress Hotel in Chicago, at which Universal assistant general sales managers in charge of territories west of the Mississippi, and exchange managers from all exchanges between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains will gather to consider the same problems which confronted the Eastern managers last week. Art Schmidt and other executives will join them from New York.

Willard Mack Is Heavy in "Dangerous Maid"

Joseph M. Schenck has just signed Willard Mack to play the "heavy" in Constance Talmadge's next First National picture, "The Dangerous Maid," which will be placed in production this month at the United Studios with Victor Heerman directing.

"The Dangerous Maid" has been adapted for the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan from the novel "Barbara Winslow, Rebel," by Elizabeth Ellis and will follow the release of "Duley."

Conway Tearle, who is now completing his engagement with Norma Talmadge in "Ashes of Vengeance," will play opposite Constance in "The Dangerous Maid."

"Thundergate" Scenes Are Being Made in S. F.

It is planned to take the exterior scenes of First National's "Thundergate" in San Francisco, the true locale of the American sequences of the play. The picture will be in production for several more weeks.

Film Classics Company Launched

New Organization Will Handle Exclusive Distribution of Warner Features

A NEW organization known as the Film Classics Company, with Harry Charnas as president, was formed recently to handle the exclusive distribution of the Warner Brothers forthcoming eighteen features, it became known last week. Film Classics will control the territorial rights in four different key cities and adjoining territory in the Middle West. It is said that the deal involved a figure of $500,000. Abe Warner and Sam Morris represented the Warner Brothers during the negotiations with Mr. Charnas.

"The formation of the new concern," said Mr. Warner, "has nothing whatever to do with Mr. Charnas' other interests. Mr. Charnas organized it so that he could definitely guarantee us exclusive distribution in the four territories. This is simply an instance of the greater growth of the exchange business, and I look forward to the day when the entire country will be handled by a few distributors of feature pictures rather than the large number that are in the business now."

"As far as the Warner Brothers are concerned, we are interested in the new organization only in so far as the distribution is concerned. We have no financial interest in its future welfare, save as it directly affects the selling of our forthcoming eighteen pictures. Exhibitors in those territories, and, in fact, throughout the country, can rest assured that our co-operation in publicity and exploitation will be as great, if not greater, than it has been in the past."

With headquarters in Cleveland, Film Classics will also open offices in Cincinnati, which will cover part of Ohio and all of Kentucky; Detroit, handling the State of Michigan, and Pittsburgh, branching out into Northern Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The Cleveland offices will handle the sales in Ohio. Offices are now being secured in the various cities.

Rotary Clubmen See "Luck" on Special Train

"Luck," Johnny Hines' latest special attraction for C. C. Burr, was selected as the feature production to be shown in the theatre car of the Rotary Limited while en route from Atlanta to the St. Louis Convention, held June 18th, 19th and 20th.

The equipment of the theatre car consisted of three De Vry Projector Machines, mounted in a way which insured stability and absence of vibration under running conditions of the train. Other equipment in the theatre car included special transformer sets and a specially prepared screen which produces a satisfactory picture in a semi-dark room.

The program was completed with a Grantland Rice sport pictorial, "Fore"; a scenic, "Main Street the World Over"; a novelty, "The Romance of a Lemon," and a Larry Semon comedy, "Golf."

First National Establishes Switzerland Exchange

As was announced last week First National has taken over its own productions for the entire world and will distribute direct through its exchanges or through foreign agents beginning July 1.

In charge of the new First National exchange in Switzerland will be Max Stoehr, who has been a leading figure in business in that territory for many years. He was with the organization since its inception.

Four Principals Selected for "Bad Man"

The four principal roles of "The Bad Man," which will be an Edwin Carewe production for First National release, were filled this week and production will start within a few days when the minor players will be selected.

Besides the assurance of big attractions, this gives the promise of personal service to those with whom Truart transacts its business.

The initial production will be put into work the latter part of July, and Associated Exhibitors will be the releasing organization to handle the product, a deal between Mr. Burr and Roy Crawford, vice-president and treasurer of Associated, having just been completed.

The Burr-Sale contract means that Mr. Burr will bring to the screen a man who has made millions laugh by his quaint characterizations of Indiana small-town folk. His act has been a classic for many seasons.

In the feature productions starring "Chic" Sale the noted comedian will play "straight," this fact having been taken into careful consideration in the selection of the first several stories.

C. C. Burr has made careful plans for the production of the "Chic" Sale features. Not only will particular care be given to selection of stories, but the surrounding casts will be chosen with care. Direction will be in the hands of Gregory La Cava, who has recently completed the series of short-reel comedies of Charlie Murray. La Cava will have the assistance of Harry Grindi, who has been closely associated with Mr. Sale for many years and who will act as assistant director. George M. Sharrard, who is the star's personal representative, and well known in the film business, will also be conducted with the production staff.

Production of the "Chic" Sale features will be handled at the Burr studios at Glendale, Long Island, where preparations are already under way for the filming of the interiors for the initial production.

Soon after signing Charles ("Chic") Sale, C. C. Burr closed a contract with Associated Exhibitors to act as the releasing unit for this series of features. Both the producing and releasing organizations will work in close cooperation in planning extensive exhibitor helps, publicity, advertising and other accessories to make available for the theatre manager every conceivable bit of material that will assist him in putting the "Chic" Sale features over.

Brockell, Distribution Chief, Announces Features For Part of Coming Season

TWENTY-NINE productions have been listed by First National as available for the Fall and Winter season.

Floyd Brockell, general manager of distribution, who returned Monday after conducting a series of sales meetings which brought him in contact with the entire First National sales force, this week announced the features which will carry First National through part of the coming season.

The twenty-nine productions now announced will form the first part of the distributing company's 1923-24 release program, which will number sixty-five or seventy pictures.

"Fashion Row" Title for Mae Murray Feature

Metro Pictures Corporation announces that the new title for Mae Murray's next Tiffany production for Metro is "Fashion Row." This is the story by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgins, previously announced as "Conquest."

Miss Murray left for Hollywood last week to commence work upon the production. During the month she spent in New York she did considerable shopping for gown material. At the same time Robert Z. Leonard, her husband and director, was occupied with plans for the entire production.

"Fashion Row" is a Robert Z. Leonard presentation through Metro, and is sponsored by Tiffany Productions, of which Mr. Leonard is director general and Mr. Hoffman general manager.

Selznick Announces Many New Salesmen

THE Selznick Distributing Corporation announces through David R. Blyth, director of sales, the appointment of twenty-one new salesmen throughout the field. All of these men are well known to the exhibitors in their respective territories, having been selected in most instances from the former field forces of Selznick or American Releasing.

Mr. Blyth also announces that the Selznick branch managers have been invested with full authority to select and employ their salesmen, and that in no case will men be engaged by the home office and sent to the different branches. This eliminates any confusion between the branch and the home office, each manager being responsible for his own sales department.

"Love Piker" Scheduled for Early Release

Anita Stewart's first photoplay for Cosmopolitan Pictures Corporation, "The Love Piker," is scheduled for early release. It is a picturization of a story by Frank R. Adams and was directed by E. Mason Hopper. Robert Frazier plays opposite Miss Stewart. Others in the cast are William Norris, Carl Gerrard, Arthur Hoyt, Betty Francisco, Winston Miller, Mayme Kelso, Frederick Truesdell, Robert Bolder, Cordelia Callahan and James F. Fulton.

The continuity was prepared by Francis Marion, and George Barnes was the cameraman.

"Yesterday's Wife" Cast Is Completed

The cast has been completed for "Yesterday's Wife," the first of the series of special Columbia Pictures which the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation will release as part of its Fall program.

It is announced this week that Lewis Dayton and Philo McCullough have been secured for the leading male roles, to play opposite Irene Rich and Eileen Percy.

Actual production is under way, with Edward J. LeSaint directing.

Evelyn Campbell, author of the novel "Yesterday's Wife," from which the picturization is being made, is collaborating with Mr. LeSaint on the continuity and other details of filming for her novel.

Seastrom Making Scenes in San Francisco

Victor Seastrom and all the members of the company appearing in Hall Caine's "The Master of Man," with the exception of Mae Busch, are in San Francisco, where the mountain cliff and road scenes for this picture are being made.

"Gun Fighter" Latest For William Farnum

William Farnum's latest picture produced at the William Fox western studios, is called "The Gun Fighter." The story is by John Frederick. Lynn Reynolds did the scenario and directed the picture. Prominent in support of the star are Doris May and Irene Hunt.

William Fox presents "St. Elmo," with John Gilbert, Barbara La Marr and Bessie Love. These scenes are from the production.

First National Develops Co-operative Ads

Artistic Border for Double Page Truck on "The Girl of the Golden West" an Important Step Forward

A NEW type of co-operative newspaper advertising, of higher class and greater efficacy, is the aim of Associated First National Pictures, which is taking active measures to assist the exhibitor in bettering his direct-to-the-public campaign. The double-page truck, reproduced below from the Indianapolis News shows the first consummation of an ambitious plan which has been worked out by the First National advertising department, whereby the newspaper and exhibitor are supplied with a decorative layout for a double-page advertising smash which has the advantage of being entirely distinctive and highly artistic.

It has been found that co-operative advertising is often the best kind of newspaper copy. The sweep of the eye across two full pages, or 14 columns, has a psychological effect which cannot be equalled by even the finest individual advertising. First National, as well as exhibitors and newspaper advertising managers, has always recognized this principle, but it has been felt that the field of co-operative advertising has never been adequately developed, largely because a plain-type double-page truck does not force itself upon the attention as it should. The local merchants who advertise are often buried in its unattractive presence, and many newspapers, realizing this, have discouraged the idea of double-page advertisements when it was suggested by the exhibitor.

Heretofore the artistry of the page was limited by the facilities of the composing room. The only alternative for the plain-type truck was the use of a three or four column press book mat, which, being designed as individual theatre advertising, did not lend itself to the co-operative idea. The preparation of a special mat for a double-page truck by the exhibitor himself was almost impossible because of the lack of time or of the uncertainty regarding the attitude of local advertisers.

First National, therefore, evolved the plan of offering to exhibitors in mat form an artis-

Details Concerning New Advertising Plan

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has always been glad to sponsor better exhibitor advertising. It has continually preached the doctrine of better copy, and it is happy to publish the following article describing First National's important development of the co-operative newspaper advertising idea. By it the double page truck becomes more accessible—more easily sold to local merchants and to publisher.

Better pictures and better advertising means a more prosperous industry and First National is to be commended for all it has done and is doing to bring about this end.

tic border for a double-page truck, to run around the sides and bottom of the pages, with the title of the picture spreading across the top. The artistic qualities of this truck, its force and its distinctiveness is illustrated by the double-page advertisement of "The Girl of the Golden West."

The plan was originally tried out by First National in connection with the engagement of "Mighty Lak' a Rose" at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis. Immediately concerned with the conception of it was a group of persons of well diversified interests, including Allan Glenn, at that time Indianapolis exploitation representative of First National, and now of the First National advertising department; Tracy Ellis, assistant advertising manager of the Indianapolis News; Ralph Lieber, manager of the Circle theatre, and Ben Caldwell, newspaper artist and journalist.

The first experiment with the artistic truck proved immediately that a new avenue had been opened for the development of this important branch of co-operative advertising. Many of the participating merchants were so impressed with the appearance of the dominating two pages that they ordered slick proofs, and, hand-coloring them to give them even greater appeal, displayed them in their windows, with their own advertising underscored. Thus, as a direct result of the artistic truck, the picture received a score of window displays in important stores.

In isolated instances merchants complained to the newspaper because larger lineage was not allotted to them. Despite its late appearance, the "Mighty Lak' a Rose" truck was widely used throughout the country.

Although "The Girl of the Golden West" proofs have been distributed to newspapers throughout the country less than three weeks, requests for mats have been constant and continuous from newspapers in cities ranging from 30,000 to the 4,000,000. By supplying these mats far in advance, First National is further co-operating with the exhibitor by allowing him plenty of time in which to arrange for and place the truck with the local paper.

In addition to co-operating with the exhibitor, a noticeable amount of good will on the part of the publishers throughout the country is accruing to First National because of its development of the co-operative advertising idea. Many newspaper advertising managers of representative papers have already congratulated First National on its work, stating that "The Girl of the Golden West" truck will be the first ever to appear in their papers. The double-page spread, they state, has always been discouraged by them because its unattractive appearance has made it a bad investment for the local merchant.

Similar mats will be used in the exploitation of all First National Pictures whose titles or subject matter lend themselves to this novel and profitable form of advertising.

"His Children's Children" Cast Being Selected

Sam Wood is gathering a cast for his production of Arthur Train's novel, "His Children's Children," which will be started soon at the Paramount Long Island studio from a scenario by Monte M. Katterjohn.

James Rennie has been signed to play the role of Lloyd Maitland, the young lawyer, and George Fawcett will have the part of Peter B. Kayne, the grand old man of "The Street." Other members of the cast so far chosen include Dorothy Mackaill, Mahlon Hamilton, Warner Orland, John Davidson, Templar Powell and Joe Burke.

The actress who will play the leading role of Diana Kayne has not yet been chosen.

Complete Cast Is Named for "Virginian"

The Virginian, Kenneth Harlan; Molly Woods, Florence Vidor; Trampas, Russell Simpson; Steve, Pat O'Malley; Shorty, Raymond Hatton; Judge Henry, Milton Ross; Uncle Hughey, Sam Allen; Spanish Ed, Bertram Hadley; Fat Drummer, John Steppling.

Educator Sees Film as Textbook

Columbia Professor, Visiting Movie Studios, Praises Educational Value

MOTION PICTURES will be the textbooks of the schools of tomorrow, according to the prediction of Professor R. S. Woodworth, professor of psychology at Columbia University and one of the foremost educators of America, following a visit to Universal City, where he studied in detail the making of pictures, methods of registering salient points in a story, and inspected the settings used for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and other big productions in the big studio.

"Educators," he said, "are coming more and more to realize the value of visual teaching. It is a cardinal rule in psychology that what one sees is affixed more firmly in the brain—literally photographed there. That is why advertisers use pictures to impress their wares on the public's memory—and that is exactly the reason teachers are coming to use motion pictures to impress historic facts and other information on the growing minds of children.

"The vast reproduction of Notre Dame cathedral will make children familiar forever with that masterpiece of architecture, who otherwise never would know it from a personal standpoint, so to speak. When those children study history they will connect incidents about the cathedral with the cathedral they saw—then these incidents will always come back to their minds, recalled by association with that picture. The Universal history plays have the same great object.

"Ordinarily a lesson in history is dry, and easily forgotten. But the child who sees George Washington and the rest of the Revolutionary characters, as in 'Daniel Boone,' comes to know them—and associate the lessons in history with the living personages seen on the screen.

"In other words, the history is retained in that student's mind through a sort of personal experience with the people concerned.

"The motion picture is humanizing education. Gradually more schools are installing motion picture machines, and the idea is only in its infancy. I think Mr. Laemmle is doing a great work for the future in his historical stories, and 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame' setting is beyond belief."

Century Comedies to Be on Leviathan Programs

When the "S. S. Leviathan" left on its trial trip from Boston to Havana, June 19, it carried a two-reel Century Follies Girls comedy, "High Kickers," with it to be shown to its discriminately chosen guests. This Century comedy features Jack Cooper, Doris Eaton and the Follies girls.

Captain Herbert Hartley of this mammoth ocean liner expressed his pleasure when he learned that the comedy was produced along the lines of a girlie show, as many of the other films he showed were along more serious lines.

Later, when the "Leviathan" leaves New York harbor for Europe, a Baby Peggy comedy will be shown as part of the ship's entertainment. The name of the subject is not certain as yet, for Captain Hartley has several Baby Peggy titles to choose from.

Current Kinograms Shows Actress in Parliament

The current issue of the Kinograms, Educational's news reel, is credited with exclusive views of Miss Mabel Russel, the first actress to enter Parliament.

Especially posed shots of England's new Premier, Stanley Baldwin, are also shown in this issue of Kinograms.

Our Gang is at it again, this time in "Dogs of War," a Pathe picture.

Bobbie Vernon's Mother Is New Century Player

Mrs. Dorothy Vernon, an actress of many years' experience, and the mother of Bobbie Vernon, the Christie comedy star, will play Buddy Messinger's mother in Al Herman's current Century Comedy, "Present Arms."

She has had a most interesting and varied career, having appeared in pictures as a character comedienne since 1914. While at the Majestic-Reliance studio, where Griffith made part of "The Birth of a Nation," she played a minor role in this production. Later she played humorous character parts in pictures with Harold Lloyd, when Bebe Daniels was his leading lady, and Snub Pollard appeared in Lloyd's support.

Remarkable Birds Shown in Urban Classic

The current Urban Popular Classic released by Vitagraph is an interesting feature showing strange and remarkable members of the feathered kingdom. Many of them are birds known only in South America. Among them are the spur-winged geese, the swiftest of all flying birds. In addition one of Raymond L. Ditmars' fables, "The Lion and the Fly," is shown in this release.

First Chester Comedy for Vitagraph Completed

THE first of the Chester comedies produced from the Saturday Evening Post stories by Sam Hellman and which will be released by Vitagraph, "A Twosome at Tuara" has been finished and is now being titled. This is one of the most delightful stories of the Sam Hellman series and tells the first adventure of Jem Hargis, the English golfing marvel, on his visit to Tuara where he teaches King Wullambo, otherwise known as Willieboy, the ancient and royal game.

The producer is said to have caught with rare skill the comedy atmosphere created by the author. The locations of the South Sea Islands are most attractive.

Some action stills from the William Fox Sunshine comedy, "Circus Pals."

Langdon Comedies Started for Principal Pictures

HARRY LANGDON has started the first of his series of comedies under Principal Pictures Corporation's banner at Hollywood. Twelve pictures are contracted for. They will be in two-reel length.

Alf Goulding, who for some time has been directing the Baby Peggy series and who has been active in the ranks of comedy directors for a number of years, has been engaged to pilot the new comedy star of films through the series.

Langdon closed his vaudeville contracts last week and intends remaining in California permanently. He has long since been the target for motion picture comedy producers and his knowledge of creating and "putting over" comedy situations is said to be excellent.

Mt. Etna Disaster Forecasted by Pathe News

With theatres in all parts of the country now showing Pathe News' exclusive motion pictures of the latest eruption of the Mount Etna volcano with its crater spouting molten lava, newspaper cables are telling of the resulting catastrophe involving human life and property on Etna's thickly populated lower slopes.

These pictures, released in No. 45 of Pathe News, with their comprehensive views of the whole region and their startling close-ups of the lava-spouting crater of Mount Etna, are now seen to have forecasted, with amazing distinctness the disaster which fills the newspapers two weeks later.

No news reel feat of organization and preparedness, in connection with an event of world wide interest, has equalled this one—the feat of screening the spectacular cause of an inevitable human life catastrophe concurrently with its description in newspaper cabled accounts.

Pop Tuttle Comedy Is Shown at N. Y. Rialto Theatre

The Film Booking Offices announce this week the booking of "Pop Tuttle's Lost Nerve" to the Rialto theatre for the week of June 17. This marks the height of popularity for these two reels which have proven big sellers on the F. B. O. program.

F. B. O. offers another of the Witwer stories of the second series of Fighting Blood, "So this is Hollywood."

"In Hock" is Universal's current single reel comedy starring Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, supported by Gertrude Olmsted.

Low Brice to Star in New Fox Comedy Series

THE signing of Low Brice, famous Broadway comedian and brother of Fanny Brice, was this week announced by the Fox Film Corporation, which has him under contract to appear in a new series of two-reel comedies.

Brice is en route to the Fox West Coast studios where he will start production shortly on "The Missing Link," slated as one of the funniest two-reelers ever planned by the Fox organization.

Brice's long experience on the vaudeville and musical comedy stage has provided him with the characteristics that have made his sister foremost among American comedienne. During the past few years, Low has been appearing as a headliner on the Keith circuit. He is a distinct find in the motion picture comedy field and should produce many new angles in laugh-production.

NEW SY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

ARCHITECTS are preparing plans for two palatial L. & T. theatres, both of which will be of more than three thousand seating capacity. Some delay has been encountered in starting these two projects, owing to building conditions, but it is understood that work will start at an early date.

Despite the hot weather, "The Covered Wagon" did the biggest business of its run at the Woods theatre last week, the seventh of its showing at this loop house.

Theatres with adequate cooling plants are reaping the harvest these hot days, and notwithstanding the high temperatures the big loop houses have not as yet felt the effect of the traditional summer slump to an appreciable extent. The same is true of the neighborhood theatres, which are proving conclusively by such weeks as the Tivoli had when it presented its jazz program and the Stratford jazz festival week, which got away to a big business when the thermometer was the highest of the season, that patrons can be brought in high temperature or low temperature, if offered sufficient inducements.

Dave Dubin, sales manager of Educational's Chicago branch, is contemplating accompanying Max Saxe, manager of the Pantheon Theatre, on a trip to California, starting at an early date.

An important sales convention of Universal officials is planned for Chicago the end of this week. Art Schmidt and Assistant General Sales Manager Joe Freidman, are expected to be present, as well as Assistant General Sales Manager Herman Stern and Sales Manager Lesserman of Chicago. Exchange Managers George Levine, of Milwaukee; F. L. Davie, of Des Moines; Barney Rosenthal, of St. Louis; F. Rosen, of Minneapolis; Roy Alexander of Kansas City; H. F. Lefholtz, of Omaha; W. P. Moran, of Oklahoma City; and T. Schlanger, F. O. Nelson and Walter Hill of the Chicago office.

Metro's sales drive is concentrated on Illinois this week, where the entire local sales force is working. The week before they mobilized in Wisconsin and did a big week's business.

Jack Howland, popular First National salesman, who is heading the central west district in the big national contest, has gone to Rochester, Minnesota, where he will receive treatment from the Mayo brothers for an illness which has been troubling him for some time past. He will probably remain in the northern city for a couple of weeks.

District Manager Shirley, of Metro, was the host this week at a fishing party in the north woods of Wisconsin. His guests, who journeyed with him from Chicago in a special pullman, included, E. M. Saunders, general sales manager of Metro; Assistant Sales Manager T. C. Connors; District Manager W. C.

TODAY & TOMORROW

Bachmeyer, of Cincinnati; Max Balaban, of Chicago; Abe Blank, of Omaha; Eddie Rubens, of Minneapolis; and Frank Newman, of Kansas City. The car, when it left Chicago, was well stocked with bait and other things to assure an ideal fishing trip.

Publicity Director Hill, of Universal, accompanied Salesman Provenger on a trip through the smaller towns and cities of the west central portion of the state last week and reports that conditions are excellent in that territory, especially among the live wire exhibitors, who are using advertising, and from then no complaint of slow business is heard, even in the smaller farming communities.

Metro and Universal are now tied for first place in the Film League baseball race. The league standing following the games played June 16th follows:

Manager Sidney Meyer, of Fox's Chicago exchange, returned from the annual convention of Fox Film Corporation, which was held in New York June 11-17, enthused over the pictures which his company will offer for the 1923-24 season.

Joseph Aller is making a flying trip east. After a conference with Watterson R. Rothacker in Chicago he went on to New York for a few days. July 1st will see him back in harness at the Rothacker-Aller Hollywood Laboratory, of which he is a resident head.

Walter Mittlacher, who performs mathematical gymnastics in the comptrolling department of the Chicago Rothacker organization, sails for Germany in July, to take part in a gigantic gymnastic tournament at Munich. He is one of a team of seven turners Chicago is sending. Turner organizations in other American cities are sending contenders for the prizes, reviving a practice that existed before the war. A number of German municipalities have invited the Americans to be their guests following the turnfest.

Boris Petroff, ballet master at McVicker's Theatre, has been re-engaged for the next season, as has Marjorie Linken, premiere dancer. Petroff, is at present taking a well earned vacation in California and will be back at McVicker's July 1st.

Hopes of Chicago exhibitors that daylight saving in this city would be killed by state law, were blasted by the action of the Illinois House of Representatives, which defeated the Anti-Daylight Savings Measure by fifty-nine to fifty-one, the vote being on the motion by Representative Frank McCarthy to non-concur in the judiciary committee's report, recommending that the bill prohibiting daylight savings within the state boundaries do not pass. The measure originally was introduced in the senate by Senator Wright, of De Kalb, and was passed by the upper house. It is understood that the adverse action on the bill was due largely to the efforts of Representative A. B. Lager, democrat of Carlisle, who may be this party's candidate for governor next year.

Miss Betty Arnold, winner of the beauty contest, staged during the Chicago run of "Only A Shop Girl," will appear in the next C. B. C. film "Pal Of Mine," and she will be given every opportunity to become a star if she makes good. The contest was conducted by C. B. C. Sales Corporation and Greiver Productions in co-operation with the Chicago Journal, and Eugene O'Brien, Jack Cohn and Si Greiver were the judges, who picked Miss Arnold as the winner.

Charlie Pyle, who has been operating houses at Champaign, has now taken over in addition the booking for the Terrace, Fisher and Palace Theatres, at Danville, which are operated by the Home Theatre Company.

An epidemic at St. Charles, Illinois, has caused the health authorities to quarantine that city and the motion picture houses are closed. Film salesmen are advised to keep clear of this city for the present as it is understood that travellers stopping there are not allowed to leave the town.

Mrs. Kate McKee, of Libertyville, it is understood, has again sold her Liberty Theatre.

Paul Busch is back in Chicago after three months spent in Los Angeles. It is understood he has made an excellent connection in this city which will probably take him out of the film business permanently.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

News of First National

Richard Walton Tully's film version of "Trilby," a First National picture, is being cut and edited preparatory to being shipped East for early release.

Myrtle Stedman is said to have one of the greatest roles of her career in Frank Borzage's latest picture, which went into production this week, under the temporary title of "Dust in the Doorway." In this First National picture Miss Stedman plays the highly emotional part of a woman of the world who commits a crime for which her son pays the penalty.

Edwin Carewe is combing the motion picture field for a suitable feminine lead for his next big First National picture, "The Bad Man," camera work on which is expected to begin within the next two weeks.

Most of the exterior scenes for "Her Temporary Husband," a comedy feature to be made by First National, are to be taken in San Francisco. John McDermott is to direct this ludicrous play. Sidney Chaplin, brother of the famous Charlie, will enact the principal comedy role.

First National's own producing unit is "shooting" the exterior scenes for "The Huntress," in one of the most picturesque sections of the California high Sierras near Bishop. The title role of this brilliant comedy drama is being played by Colleen Moore. The picture will be in production for at least four more weeks.

Louise Fazenda has been added to the all-star cast of the new John M. Stahl special, "The Wanters," which is being produced by Louis B. Mayer for First National.

Production has been begun by First National of "Thundergate," a tensely dramatic story, localized in China. The picture will be featured by elaborate, colorful Oriental settings. Film players in the cast include Owen Moore, Sylvia Breamer, Tully Marshall, Virginia Brown Faire and Robert McKim.

Courtney Foote has joined the cast of players now supporting Norma Talmadge in "Ashes of Vengeance," which is being directed by Frank Lloyd. Other new additions to the cast are Jeanne Carpenter, Howard Truesdell, Kenneth Gibson, Mary McAllister and Forrest Robinson.

Tourneur's "Brass Bottle" has been shipped to First National, New York, for general distribution, and will have its world premiere at Balaban & Katz' Chicago theatre on July 15th.

Around Metro Studios

James Marcus will enact the role of Mons. Binet, the manager of the traveling theatrical troupe, in Rex Ingram's production of "Scaramouche" for Metro. With the signing of Mr. Marcus the cast is now completed for this production of Rafael Sabatini's story.

With Paramount Units

William de Mille is back from New York, ready to start work on his picture, "Spring Magic," adapted from the play, "The Faun." Cast is not yet selected.

Herbert Brenon has started work on Negri's "Spanish Dancer"; Moreno appears opposite Negri.

In a chariot race on "Ten Commandments" at location at Gaude-lupe, Cal., six people were injured. Agnes Ayres arrived on the coast this week.

William de Mille's next picture is to be "Mortal Love," from Edward Knoblock's "The Faun."

Agnes Ayres, having completed her work in "The Heart Raider," a Paramount picture directed at the company's Long Island studio by Wesley Ruggles, has returned to the Lasky studio in Hollywood.

Many scenes for Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture, "Homeward Bound," which Jack Cunningham adapted from Peter B. Kyne's "The Light to Leeward," are being filmed on the Thames River at New London, Conn., where the annual Yale-Harvard boat race is held. For these scenes the E. H. Harriman yacht, a 190-foot craft, now owned by Paul De-Fere, is being used by Ralph Ince, who is directing the picture.

Mary Thurman and Riley Hatch have been added to the cast of "Zaza," the Allan Dwan production starring Gloria Swanson in the title role, which will be started in a few days at the Paramount Long Island studio. Miss Thurman will have the part of Florianne and Mr. Hatch will be Rigault.

Warner Brothers Items

Excellent results have come from some fog tests made by Director Arthur Rosson of the "Little Johnny Jones" company at the Warner Bros. studios.

Raymond Cannon has been added to the cast of "The Printer's Devil," the next Wesley Barry production for Warner Brothers.

Louise Fazenda has been selected to enact the role of Mabel in "The Gold Diggers." Others signed include Alec Francis, Gertrude Short, and Wyndham Standing.

Here and There

Helen Ferguson is playing the leading feminine role opposite Henry B. Walthall in "The Unknown Purple," the first of a series of special productions to be made by George Perry for Truart release. The picture is now being made at the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, Cal., under the direction of Roland V. West.

"Nipp and Tuck" has been finished by Roy Del Ruth.

"Pitfalls of a Big City," featuring Ben Turpin, is being cut and titled. Ben Turpin, directed by Roy Del Ruth, started Tuesday on

"Ten Dollars or Ten Days;" cast includes Madeline Hurlock, Dot Farley and Kewpie Morgan.

Tom Forman is now in Nevada looking up locations for "The Virginian." He will be back soon.

Fisher Productions will soon start on a new story not yet announced; distribution of same will be announced within a week or so.

"The Street Singer" has been finished. Mary Pickford in all probability will next make "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

On the Goldwyn Lot

Jobyna Howland has been engaged by Distinctive Pictures Corporation to play the part of Mrs. Benson, the boarding house keeper in "Second Youth." This is the picture being directed by Albert Parker, with Alfred Lunt and Mimi Palmeri in the leading roles.

George D. Baker is making excellent progress on the Achievement Films' production of "The Magic Skin." George Walsh and Bessie Love have leading roles in this picture.

Director Emmett J. Flynn and his company this week moved into the big palace set which has been built for the F. Marion Crawford picture, "In the Palace of the King." More than a thousand extras will be used in connection with some of the palace scenes and a radio system of communication has been installed in the palace so that Director Flynn may reach all parts of the stage with his directions without raising his voice.

The cast of "Greed," the film version of Frank Norris' "McTeague," which Erich von Stroheim is directing in San Francisco, was this week reduced to three. All of the members of the cast with the exception of three principals, Gibson Gowland, ZaSu Pitts and Jean Hersholt, have completed their roles and returned to Los Angeles.

Final scenes were taken this week for "A Gentleman of Leisure," the Paramount picture in which Jack Holt stars, under the direction of Joseph Henabery. This screen story was adapted by Anthony W. Coldewey from the Stapleton and Wodehouse play.

Marshall Neilan will complete "The Rendezvous" within next ten days. This is his third release for Goldwyn. "Eternal Three" has been titled and edited, and is being shipped east this week.

Rupert Hughes arrived on the Coast this week.

Tyrone Power this week arrived from New York to play in "The Day of Faith," direction of Tod Browning.

An entire Russian village has been erected on the Goldwyn lot here for Marshall Neilan's production of Madeline Ruthven's Russian story, "The Rendezvous." The director and the cast have just returned to the studios from San Francisco where they went to film some dock scenes for the picture. Kate Lester has been added to the cast to play the role of Conrad Nagel's mother.

Victor Seastrom has begun production on his first American-made picture, "The Master of Man," from Sir Hall Caine's novel. The first scenes were taken this week. Creighton Hale has been engaged for the role of Aleck in this film. Mae Busch will be the Bessie Collier and Joseph Schildkraut the Victor Stowell.

A ballet episode will be staged for Emmett J. Flynn's picturization of F. Marion Crawford's novel, "In the Palace of the King." Carlos Sebastian, a well-known dancer, has arrived at the studio from New York to direct the ballet. The palace which is being built for this production is about completed.

Director Charles J. Brabin is filming the trench scenes of Elinor Glyn's "Six Days" amid an elaborate system of trenches which have been dug near the studio. Spottiswoode Aitken has been added to the cast to play the role of the priest.

King Vidor, who has just put the finishing touches to his first Goldwyn picture, "Three Wise Fools," has selected Joseph Hergesheimer's "Wild Oranges" for his second production for that corporation, according to an announcement just made at the Coast studios by Abraham Lehr, vice-president in charge of production.

Anita Stewart, who went to California to play the leading role in "The Love Piker," Cosmopolitan's picturization of the Frank R. Adams story, work on which E. Mason Hopper recently completed, arrived back in New York this week.

E. Mason Hopper, Cosmopolitan director, will begin work this week on "Cain and Abel," which Cosmopolitan will picturize from H. C. Witwer's fight story of the same name.

Rupert Hughes' next Goldwyn production will be "Law is Law."

At Universal City

Margaret Landis, sister of Cullen Landis, has been cast by Fred Datig, Universal casting director, for the leading feminine role in "The Love Brand." "The Love Brand" is a romance of the western cattle country in which Roy Stewart is being starred. Stuart Paton will direct.

East and West with Fox

Dorothy Manners, who supported Shirley Mason in "Pawn Ticket 210," is in the Fox production "Snowdrift," and has the role opposite Charles Jones, the star of the picture.

Clot hing Store Ties Up with Boys' "Daddy" Showing

Davenport, Iowa.—Special morning showings were used with good effect to exploit "Daddy" by the Garden theatre. The special morning matinee was turned over to J. H. C. Peterson Sons Co., Davenport's largest department store, through their boys' department, and tickets for this showing could be obtained only through the store.

The deviation from the usual newspaper tie-up on the Coogan matinee meant that there would be less publicity support from the papers, and Manager Ralph Blank met this situation by concentrating on a trailer and a special slide announcing the method of securing tickets, instead of by newspaper advertising.

The department store did its share of exploitation with the result that the special performance was jammed. The run of "Daddy" got its impetus the opening day from the advertising of this special showing and word-of-mouth praises did as much for the rest of the run. At the same time the department store had done newspaper advertising, so the papers were placated to the extent that they gave the special showing a good story.

"Jazz Week" Exploitation for "The Exciters"

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A "jazz week" was a decided novelty at the Stanley theatre, a leading picture house in Philadelphia, recently. Syncopation was the keynote of all the musical numbers, to accord with the first Philadelphia showing of "The Exciters."

There were jazz singers, jazz dancers, and a jazz number by the Stanley Piano Trio.

The store gave an added touch to its method of distributing tickets. The first day (Thursday) the ad called for boys, but on Friday "little sister" was called for. Finally the tickets were given to every child or parent who called at the boys' department.

Barroom Prologue Is Used on "Girl of the Golden West"

Brooklyn, N. Y.—For his special prologue to "The Girl of the Golden West," Managing Director Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand engaged the Criterion Male Quartette.

The setting used by Hyman was a scene from the picture showing the familiar barroom of '49 in the West. A girl made up to represent Sylvia Breamer stood behind the bar, and the singers, made up as cowboys and miners, were draped about the set in various poses of ease and indifference.

The quartette sang the song, "The Girl of the Golden West," and on the second chorus the lights were dimmed out leaving a white spot on the girl only. Through means of a scrim in front of the set the picture was thrown on with the finish of the song and while the girl was still played up in tableau.

"Souls for Sale" Flags Given Local Auction Angle

Lowell, Mass.—Buddy Stuart, Goldwynner, got the citizens of Lowell very much interested in the showing of "Souls for Sale" at the Strand theatre by attaching the name of a local auctioneer to the "Souls for Sale" auction flags which were used to decorate the front of the theatre and posted in other conspicuous places in the city. Having the local man's name attached, the people did not at first catch on to the motion picture angle of the auction flag, and when they did there was a great deal of amusement.

Mr. Stuart also arranged with Sam Torgan, manager of the Strand, to fly a box kite from the roof of the theatre. Across the box kite was pasted a strip carrying the title of the picture in large letters. The title was also carried on the tail of the kite. This was a distinct novelty and had everybody looking up into the sky. A large banner, three feet high and a hundred feet long, was also used across the building which housed the theatre.

"Robin Hood" Aided by Tie-Up with Wenatchee Elks

Wenatchee, Wash.—When Manager Beckman of the Rialto theatre here played "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," he tied up the picture for the entire run with the Wenatchee Elks lodge and put across a run that was more successful and less expensive than if he had attempted to advertise and exploit the picture alone.

One of the biggest features of the tie-up was an eight-page newspaper published by the Elks and sent to all residents of Wenatchee and surrounding territory. The name of the paper was "The Elks' Herding Call," and beneath the caption was printed "This paper is printed every time 'Robin Hood' comes to town." The paper was practically an eight-page advertisement for Robin Hood, because it was filled with cuts from the picture, news stories, press book clippings and other material advertising the feature.

In addition to the publication of the paper, one night at the Rialto was "Elks' Night," and the lodge turned out in full force for the occasion. Special stunts were arranged on the program and the lodge shared in a part of the receipts above expenses because of the part that they had taken in the engagement of the picture.

Use 5,000 Biscuits as Aid to "Lorna Doone"

EASTON, PA.—The National Biscuit Company tie-up on "Lorna Doone" is still going strong. The latest demonstration came in Easton, when the picture played the Colonial theatre.

They not only gave out 5,000 biscuits but wrapped them in sanitary containers, the idea being that it gave them something on which to print the advertising for the theatre, biscuit and picture.

Because of the advertising given him by the Elks, Manager Beckman was enabled to cut down on his regular advertising and spend the extra money in publicity and exploitation of more original lines. A special lobby display featuring scenes from the picture and window tie-ups in the city were a part of the addition advertising that the Rialto used on the Robin Hood run.

Inexpensive Prologue Is Drawing Card on "East Is West"

Sunbury, Pa.—A prologue that was neither expensive nor complicated, but which proved to have excellent advertising and entertainment value was staged by J. M. Blanchard, of the Strand theatre, on "East Is West." A Japanese umbrella dance furnished the main attraction of the number. The steps were simple, but they were executed with mechanical precision. The novelty of the costumes and the fact that such a presentation was an event in Sunbury sufficed to put it over. As an advertising talking point it more than repaid the cost.

The lobby of the Strand left no doubt as to the attraction. Constance Talmadge posters, Ming Toy designs, Chinese lanterns and the cutouts supplied the wordless information. A novel feature of the decorations was a silhouette reproduction of the Chinese loveboat against an old grandfather clock above the box office window.

Drawing Contest Successful as Exploitation on "Daddy"

Chicago, Ill.—Manager Elmer E. Beneser, of the Bell theatre, in exploiting "Daddy," found that a drawing contest had it all over the newsboy parades for getting the juvenile attendance.

It's all due to Mildred, the docile porker of the picture. Until "Daddy" came along the neighborhood artists had exhausted Jackie's possibilities. Mildred, with her family and antics, gave them something to draw upon, though, for exploitation and passes. The Bell theatre pronounced the contest a success and that was what counted.

The drawings were subsequently filmed and shown in the theatre, which was the alibi for the boys' parade that advertised "Daddy" along the boulevards of Chicago.

Bull Fight Publicity Stunt Is Used as "Suzanna" Stunt

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager Willard Patterson, of the Metropolitan theatre, went after exploitation on "Suzanna" in one way and got it in an entirely different way, but probably more effective.

A short time ago there was a flurry of excitement among the "blue laws" of Atlanta regarding a proposed bull fight to be held in Atlanta, and it was finally forbidden by the Chief of Police.

Remembering this and knowing that the picture "Suzanna" carried a bull fight scene, Manager Patterson had signs stuck up all over town advertising a coming bull fight, but giving no details as to when or where, or the participants. There was another flurry of excitement on the part of the "blue laws," but no action taken, as there was nowhere to take action. Finally Ed Danforth's Sport Column in the Georgian came out with the real dope. And inasmuch as Ed featured the fact in his column that there was a bull fight in the picture, it served much better than a sport news item would have, which Manager Patterson was hoping for, at the most.

"Daddy" Trailer Screened at Night on Street

HAMILTON, Ont.—An advance exploitation stunt that blocked traffic, on "Daddy" at the Temple theatre, was the public screening of a trailer on a screen put up on the main street for nighttime display.

The feature of it was that in addition to the trailer, the theatre used about 200 feet taken from the film, depicting one consecutive incident in the picture. It was doubly effective because, in addition to arousing curiosity with a few punch scenes, it transmitted some idea of the picture's heart interest that could be conveyed only through a sequence of footage.

The picture was circused through the town under the slogan: "It is time the whole family subscribed to a present for 'Daddy'" and the line assured merchant co-operation in the exploitation.

"Within the Law" Cards on City Direction Signs

LONG BEACH, Cal.—Manager Frank L. Brown of the Liberty theatre got the utmost effectiveness out of the "Within the Law" safety signs by putting them directly under prominent traffic directions.

He was fortunately located for this because Long Beach has done a thorough job in the dimensions of its signs pointing the way to "Wilmington" or "Catalina." Every passing motorist had to notice the direction sign and, incidentally, the "Within the Law" card. The fact that it gained such prominence made the local authorities and automobile club officers smile auspiciously.

"Ninety and Nine" Tied Up with Fire Prevention

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The showing of "The Ninety and Nine" was tied up by the Tivoli theatre with the Fire Prevention Bureau and the Milwaukee fire department. Throwaways headed "Precautions Against Fire" were distributed during the run of the picture.

A twenty-four sheet cut-out and a lavish display of colored lobby pictures were used and in order to bring out vividly the colors, red-fire was kept burning at the curb at the night shows.

Projector on Truck Exploits "Down to the Sea" Run

Troy, N. Y.—A novel exploitation measure was employed to exploit "Down to the Sea in Ships" at the Griswold theatre, and also at the Albany theatre, Schenectady, N. Y., and the Opera House, Kingston, N. Y.

This comprised a small portable projection machine mounted on a truck with a small screen and everything necessary for a miniature moving picture show. This truck was driven to all the important corners of the town and a 400-foot trailer run off. J. E. Firnkoes, Hodkinson representative in this section, reported that large crowds were drawn wherever shown.

In one place in particular a carnival was in town. Mr. Firnkoes took advantage of this fact and planted the truck near the grounds so that the people going to or coming from the carnival had an opportunity of stopping for a few minutes and watching some of the thrills in the production, "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Prominent windows were rented and the trailer run off in them. In many places the police had to be called to take care of the crowds. Another stunt that Mr. Firnkoes succeeded in doing was to sell various merchants in the town on the idea of running the trailer in the window. In this way they would carry the trailer on the truck from window to window, drawing crowds wherever shown.

Striking yet dignified lobby display on "Bella Donna" prepared by Manager Guy A. Kenimer of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

Lavish Oriental Prologue with Showing of "Bella Donna"

Baltimore, Md.—Thomas D. Soriero, general manager of the Combined Whitehurst interests, presented an impressive and beautiful prologue recently as an introduction to "Bella Donna" at the Century theatre.

The curtain rose disclosing a small set in the center of the stage representing a portico in the seraglio of an Eastern Prince. This set was built on a dais and back of it and to each side curtains of gray covered the whole stage.

At the rise of the curtain, Fernando Guarneri, baritone, was seated on a cushioned divan, draped with dark garnet velvet. He was costumed as an Eastern Prince.

Just under the awning over the divan a light was reflected down, giving very rich tones to the ensemble, the back of which was painted to represent deep garnet velvet draperies.

After the rise of curtain the spot was thrown on Tomasini Guarneri, tenor, who entered at the right, on dais in conventional

"Look Your Best" Good for Merchant Co-operation

MADISON, Wis.—Dr. William E. Beecroft, manager of the Parkway theatre, and W. D. Nealand, Goldwynner, put across a merchant tie-up in connection with the screening of "Look Your Best."

Art Kniseley, advertising manager of the Burdick & Murray department store, largest in Madison, went in heavily with the theatre management on this "Look Your Best" Week. He gave the picture a splendid window display with hand-painted cards and stills, using the slogan "Look Your Best" as a sales aid for their clothing, millinery, hosiery and toilet articles.

In addition to the window display, Mr. Kniseley ran a sixty-eight inch advertisement in both the State Journal and the Capitol Times tying up with "Look Your Best." The title of the picture was used under the store name, and in the middle of the ad announcement was made that fifty free tickets to see "Look Your Best" at the Parkway would be given to the first fifty people to visit the Luxite hosiery department of the store.

costume of white pants and shoes, blue coat and open neck shirt.

Tomasini Guarneri sang a solo. As he finished, the spot was placed on Fernando, and a light was switched on directed over the portico, revealing, in a box effect, behind a transparent screen, a dancer in Oriental costume.

As Fernando sang his baritone solo, the dancer gave a posing dance in the lighted box above which, when darkened, gave the appearance of an open balcony.

As Fernando finished his solo, the dance ended and then as the two Guarneris rendered a duet, five dancers came in and danced the Egyptian Ballet of Luigini.

The lights were subdued during the whole act. The prologue ended with a quick curtain and then as the picture began to fade in the curtains parted and Fernando Guarneri, now behind a transparent screen, sang an introductory song and gradually faded from the stage as the picture progressed.

Navy Hooks Up to Aid Showing of "Masters of Men"

Denver, Col.—The Iris theatre obtained a most attractive lobby display from Navy and Marine Headquarters to exploit "Masters of Men." Machine guns were detailed to the theatre, a miniature of one of Uncle Sam's battleships was mounted in the lobby and there were displays of the work of apprentice seamen.

One unique advertising stunt was arranged by the management with the biggest laundry in Denver. This laundry delivers packages into 7,500 homes every week. Heralds advertising "Masters of Men" were inserted in each package which brought this feature to the direct attention of the household.

Prominent Men "Framed Up" in Campaign on "The Flirt"

Tampa, Fla.—Manager R. C. Frost of the Strand theatre started his campaign on "The Flirt" two weeks in advance. He picked out twenty-five of the most prominent men in Tampa, who were made the recipients of "flirt" letters, and took particular pains to see that the newspapers got hold of it, thereby securing publicity. It goes without saying that he had to "know" his men.

At the same time he began with the "Flirt's Book of Proverbs," using two of these daily incorporated into a two-inch ad in bold type on the society page of the paper. These were also used in the regular program ads, blocked in at the bottom of the ad.

Three weeks in advance teaser slides featuring proverbs were run on the screen of both the Strand and Grand theatres.

A tie-up was secured with the leading book store and Mr. Frost personally superintended the dressing of the window, the center of which was a big, six-foot book, made from wall board by the house artist. On each side were oil paintings furnished by the exchange and displays of the books, arranged in pyramids. This window was in for a week before the opening of the show. It not only helped the show, but the dealer sold entirely out his stock of the novel.

"The Christian" Exploited at Normal School

EMPORIA, Kans.—The run of "The Christian" at the Royal theatre was aided by Goldwynner Homer Gill by exploiting it among the 4,000 students of the Kansas State Normal school. Through Carl Solser, head of the Visual Education Department, he was able to get into the college paper, "The Bulletin," a 3-column picture and story as well as having an announcement on the college bulletin board.

Window displays of the books, posters and stills of the picture were obtained in two stores and Robert Holmes, manager of the theatre, used three 24-sheets in dressing up the front of the theatre. Newspaper advertising space was increased for this showing.

Beaver Board Airplane in "Go-Getter" Display

COLUMBUS, GA.—Manager J. Wright Brown, of the Grand theatre prepared a striking lobby display recently for "The Go-Getter." In keeping with the theme of the story and emphasizing the idea of thrills, a large aeroplane was cut out of beaverboard, painted with pilot and passenger in their seats, and suspended from the center of the lobby. "The Go-Getter," presumably the name of the plane, was painted on the cut-out.

Further carrying out the theme of the picture, large blue vases made of beaverboard were placed on each side. On these were mounted stills from the picture, with appropriate sales talk, calling attention to the Cappy Ricks story and mentioning T. Roy Barnes as the original "go-getter."

"Sunshine Week" Is Stunt to Exploit "Daddy"

LORAIN, Ohio.—"Sunshine Week" was the feature that exploited "Daddy" at the Wonderland theatre.

Manager Ilg sold the newspaper on the idea of an optimism week. The rest went automatically. It was called a Sunshine Week and was tied up with the juvenile star.

In addition to cashing in on his exploitation, Ilg got credit for putting over something that was a constructive move for his home town and won merchant good will as the result of his energy and persistence.

Shoe Merchants Tie Up Ads to "Souls for Sale" Showing

HAMILTON, Ohio.—Ten shoe merchants were interested in the showing of "Souls for Sale" at the Palace theatre by Fred S. Meyer, managing director, and Goldwynner H. T. Snowden.

The ten dealers took a page of advertising in the local newspaper. The heading across the top of the page read: "The following merchants have soles for sale. The Palace theatre has 'Souls for Sale.' If you are seeking real values in footwear, patronize the merchants listed below. If you are seeking something entirely new in amusement, see Rupert Hughes' 'Souls for Sale' at the Palace." In addition to this large heading across the page each individual advertiser carried a "Soles for Sale" heading.

The newspaper campaign started out with a ten-line teaser ad on Monday, continuing up to and including Thursday, and Friday a twenty-inch ad was used, and on Saturday a 44-inch ad.

Two thousand teaser envelopes were distributed among high school girls and employees of department stores. One thousand soles were pasted on the sidewalks and distributed in offices and stores. Sixteen of the Goldwyn studio streamers were placed in prominent shop windows.

Teaser Stunt Builds Interest in "The Go-Getter"

Gadsden, Ala.—Manager A. L. Snell of the Imperial theatre used a teaser campaign to good advantage in exploiting "The Go-Getter."

Two days in advance of opening, the town was placarded with signs reading—"Are you a G—G or a S—S?"—"Be a G—G." "What is a G—G?"—"Join the G—G's right now!"—"Every red-blooded man in town will want to be a G—G—Phone 133 for particulars."

When Gadsden woke up and saw these signs they began to associate them with some of the mysteries of the K. K. K. who, by coincidence, had paraded the town the previous evening. And so much curiosity was aroused that the telephone was kept busy all day. And so it became a by-word in Gadsden—"Are you a G—G?"

The day before showing the same ground was covered and the necessary letters filled in so that the signs read—"Are you a Go-Getter or a Stand-Stiller?"—"Be a Go-Getter"—"Join the Go-Getters."

In addition to this, a street ballyhoo of boy in dress suit and silk hat excited the interest of the crowds. He distributed cards reading—"You will find The Go-Getter at the Imperial today and tomorrow."

"Trail of Lonesome Pine" Lobby Is Attractive

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Manager W. A. Doster of the Strand theatre used an effective and inexpensive lobby display for "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

In the center of the lobby, in a space about 6 inches by 6 inches, branches of pine trees were set up on a green grass mat—a good imitation of miniature pine trees. In the midst of these little pines, a path or trail was made of white sand, and bordered on each side with stones. In front of this display, and a little to one side, a sign board bore the title, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

Attractive Lobby Shadow Box on "The Ne'er-Do-Well"

Waco, Texas.—In addition to a splash in the newspapers and a well balanced outdoor campaign, Manager J. P. Harrison of the Hippodrome theatre used a lobby display on "The Ne'er-Do-Well," which attracted unusual attention.

In the lobby of the theatre was a shadow box made of two panels. The front panel was nothing more than a frame which carried an announcement about the star and the picture. The head of Thomas Meighan which was taken from the poster paper and mounted on beaver board formed the back panel. The cut-out of Thomas Meighan showed the star dressed in his Tuxedo with the bosom of his shirt carrying the names of different show girls and their 'phone numbers.

These names and 'phone numbers were cut-out of the beaver board so that when the different colored lights were turned on back of the cut-out, numbers and names stood out plainly. Just in front of the shadow box was a telephone and by means of an electrical device the bells to the 'phone were made to ring every thirty seconds. The ringing of the bells and the flashing of the names from the bosom of Meighan's shirt attracted considerable attention.

The lobby was made considerably cooler for the Summer time by means of lattice frames built around the regular three sheet stands.

Well Rounded Campaign Used for "Hunting Big Game"

Fort Smith, Ark.—Manager Hugo Plath, of the Palace theatre, began advertising "Hunting Big Game in Africa" on the screen some two weeks in advance of the play date by running a series of typewritten slides.

Five days in advance of the opening 500 window cards were well located about the town. Two thousand of the sensational heralds were distributed into the homes.

The lobby was transformed into a jungle scene by means of palm trees, by hanging vines and shaded lighting effects. A local taxidermist loaned Mr. Plath enough stuffed animals to make his lobby front unusually interesting. In the center of this jungle effect was a large cage in which was a live monkey.

The man who loaned the theatre the monkey also co-operated further by bringing the children from a local orphans' home to see a special children's matinee. A large four-seated, old-fashioned rig, pulled by horses, brought the children to the theatre, carried large signs.

British exhibitors are gradually adopting lobby displays, as shown by this on "East Is West" at the Globe theatre, Bristol, Eng.

"Safety Last" lobby display, with plenty of action, at the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., by F. J. Miller

Music Lovers' Night Is Staged on "Mighty Lak' a Rose"

Victoria, B. C.—An exploitation stunt that has the merit of being on a high plane and also is entirely appropriate was used by Manager Cliff Denham of the Royal Victoria theatre on "Mighty Lak' a Rose."

For the opening of "Mighty Lak' a Rose," Manager Denham instituted a Music Lovers' Night. The orchestra was augmented by 20 pieces for that night, making a total of 50. Special music was given the opening evening, including a rendition of the favorite old time selections and requests for favorites were made of the audience.

The event had been duly advertised in the papers. It brought out members of the elder generation who seldom, if ever, attended pictures.

During the remaining six days he popularized the success of Music Lovers' Night by instituting an "Old Melody Week." The last two days a dancing attraction by the local kiddies was added to the bill and proved an immense drawing card.

Cashes In on Opposition to "The Pilgrim"

SACRAMENTO, CAL.—When "The Pilgrim" was announced for the T. & D. theatre, the Church Federation of Sacramento duplicated its predecessors in other cities by issuing the stereotyped protest. Instead of hoping to minimize the effect of this disagreement with his booking, Manager M. S. Hustler lived up to his name by coming out in the open.

He took the protest to the Sacramento Bee, the strongest paper in northern California. Very seldom does unpaid publicity get on the front page; but the newspaper personally undertook to exploit "The Pilgrim" by calling a committee of the Women's Council, the Better Film Board, the Church Federation and the press, to pre-view the picture. The showing completely vindicated the picture.

"Prodigal Daughters" Tied Up with Dance Marathon

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The laurels for being the first to tie up with the Dance Marathon craze go to Herschel Stuart and Ed Olmstead of the Missouri theatre, who announced one for "Prodigal Daughters," with Gloria Swanson offering a prize.

It almost got them into a jam, because the anticipated protest from doctors and ministers did not come off. So they had to get to work and put some reformer to crabbing the stunt, or they might be dancing at the Missouri yet. As it was it cracked open the front pages of all the newspapers.

Duplicate of Star Costume For "Souls for Sale"

MANHATTAN, KANS. — Manager Harry Wareham, of Wareham's theatre and Goldwynner Homer Gill put over an excellent campaign with the means at hand on "Souls for Sale."

A tie-up was obtained with Coles Dry Goods store. There was placed in its island showcase window an exact duplicate of the gown worn by Eleanor Boardman as shown in a still from the photoplay. The window contained nothing but the model wearing this gown and a special card calling attention to the dress and the showing of the picture at the Wareham theatre.

A special showing of the film was arranged for leaders of the clubs and for the staff of the Kansas State Agricultural College. Nearly a hundred persons attended the screening and gave out valuable word of mouth publicity.

The leading book store in Manhattan gave a display of the photoplay edition of the book with posters, stills and special cards. The billing and newspaper advertising were increased for the showing.

Navy Stages Parade to Boost "Masters of Men" Showing

Milwaukee, Wis.—When "Masters of Men" played at the Rialto theatre, the Naval Training Station of the Great Lakes cooperated with the theatre management in exploiting the picture. The Marine Band lead the parade which included the Naval Reserves, under command of Lieutenant Commander E. A. Lichtenstein, of the U. S. Hawk. The city Government provided a motorcycle police escort. The paraders later were the guests of the theatre management. Banners were carried by the marchers.

After the parade the large banners were hung from the masthead of the U. S. Hawk. Pennants for a splendid lobby display were furnished by the ship. Members of the Naval Reserve sold tickets for the theatre as did members of the posts of the Spanish War Veterans.

This is the first of the new Hal Roach one reel animal comedies called "Dippy Doo Dads," which are directed by Len Powers. A goose and her sweetheart go swimming together which causes the "old hens" to talk. They go to the paternal gander who in turn gets the law, in the shape of Mr. Monkey, on the young blade who is properly chastized, and driven from town. S TAN LAUREL proves himself considerable comedian in this snappy comedy whose scenes are laid in a planing mill. There is not a dull moment from the time he gets the job until the foreman is fired for the troubles Laurel implicates him in.

Laurel is stupidity personified. He is everything he should not be on the job. Planks carried by him innocently catch the foreman under the chin and bags of lime, etc., dropped by him constantly find a resting place on the dome of his superior. A policeman who is summoned shares many of the same fates as the foreman and because of the manner in which the incidents are evolved the comedian is always exempt from punishment.

There is no end of opportunity for humor in the fast moving action and there are probably few screen comedians who could get as much real humor out of the action as Laurel does. It is a highly amusing picture.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Re: Gloversville

Dear Mr. Bruner:

You ask "Why I Run Patheserials"?
The answer to this is very simple, namely, that Pathe has had years of experience in producing serials and has made serials which are consistently good.

In playing serials, one cannot be too careful to make sure that the serial will stand up, because of the length of time it takes to play the episodes. An exhibitor may be unfortunate enough to buy a poor feature, but his salvation lies in the fact that it only plays one, two or three days and is soon forgotten by the public, and the exhibitor pockets his loss. With a serial it is different. If it does not stand up and hold the interest of the public from episode to episode it can result in ruining a valuable patronage.

In buying serials I very naturally have this in mind and must take into consideration the past performances of the producers, and I find that Pathe has been producing consistently good serials. This is why I run them.

Dear Mr. Heller:

I am going to do something I have never done before to my knowledge, and that is, say a few words in regard to a picture. Don't get me wrong now, I am not going to holler my head off as is usually the case, but I am going to say a few NICE things for a change. How's that?

The picture I have in mind, is the Pearl White serial "PLUNDER". As you know I booked this picture and dated it for one of my best houses here, namely the Savoy. I was a bit afraid of it at first, but am more than glad to state that it is going over GREAT. The picture received quite a lot of exploitation, window displays, lobby display, personal letters were sent to selected ones, in fact, I exploited "PLUNDER" the same as I do a Big Serial, and I can't say that I am sorry, as the business has more than justified the work.

Thought you would appreciate a few lines regarding this subject, and all I can say is I hope all of the exhibitors in the territory are having as good luck with it as I am.

MARK

The Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., prepared this pleasing lobby display on "The Isle of Lost Ships"

Revives Volunteer Firemen's Day on "Third Alarm"

Macon, Ga.—In exploiting "The Third Alarm" Manager George A. McDermitt revived a custom in Macon that has not been in vogue for over 37 years, that of a Volunteer Firemen's Day. To celebrate this day a big parade was planned, the mayor and council were for it and the chief of the fire department was heartily in favor, being an old volunteer himself. Public interest was worked up through front page and editorial publicity, laying stress on the fact that it was an old custom and civic pride demanded honoring the old fire-fighters. One hundred and seventy-one inches of free space were secured in two papers prior to play date. All of these articles were tied up with by inviting the mayor, council and old volunteers to see the picture at the Capitol after the parade.

The local high school band donated its services and headed the parade, the Boy Scouts acting as a guard of honor. Local automobile dealers donated cars and decorated them.

For the lobby a display of cut-outs depicting various fire-fighting implements, such as axes, hand grenades, hats, etc., were used. Also used a number of old-time photos of fire companies and famous local fires. These were obtained gratis from the photographer who took the pictures of the volunteers. On the "Human Wreckage" Float in Industrial Parade

NEW YORK, N. Y.—New York's Industrial Parade, held recently on Fifth Avenue, furnished several companies an outlet for exploitation on their current pictures. Among those to take advantage of the opportunity offered was the Film Booking Offices, who entered two floats on two of the forthcoming productions.

Almost at the beginning of the parade, which was witnessed by over 900,000 people, the F. B. O. was represented by a spectacle representing Mrs. Wallace Reid as Joan of Arc. Eleven girls, five of whom were mounted, were used in this and all carried banners advertising "Human Wreckage," Mrs. Wallace Reid and the Lyric theatre, at which house the picture plays.

In addition to this, the Film Booking Offices presented a car full of pretty girls advertising "Daytime Wives."

street in front of the theatre were two cut-out fire plugs and an old-time hand fire engine. On each side of the box office was a cut-out of a fire alarm box.

Teasers for three days were terminated by the following stunt: The teaser: Watch the Sky Monday Evening—If yellow, look for a tornado; if green, look for an earthquake; if red, a great event will take place near the Capitol.

On Monday evening, on three of the highest places in Macon, red signal lights, such as used by railroads to flag trains, were burned. Six of these same flares were burnt on the Marquee of the Capitol also, and, as each one burned about 10 minutes, a continual flare was kept up for about an hour.

Kiddie Cartoon Contest Used to Exploit "Daddy"

New York City, N. Y.—A Jackie Coogan "Kiddie Cartoon Contest" was used successfully by Keith, Moss and Proctor houses, in New York City in conjunction with the showings of "Daddy." The cartoons were all drawn by youngsters under the age of 12 and displayed an amazing range of artistic expression. To the best cartoon each theatre awarded a prize of $10 in gold, and the next nine best recognized by autographed portraits of the child millionaire film star.

Cartoons were being accepted as late as Wednesday, May 30, and the winners were announced during the week of June 4, when reproductions of the prize winning cartoons were shown on the screen. The prizes for the contest were given out at the Saturday afternoon matinee on June 9.

An exceptionally good entout was used at the Coliseum theatre for the Coogan picture. It was a life-sized picture of Jackie sitting upon the farm fence and smiling roguishly at passers-by, and was lighted and painted in unusually realistic and attractive fashion.

Brilliant Directors Named For Fox Specials

DIRECTORIAL craftsmen of the first order are engaged in filming the big array of special feature and comedy productions which will comprise the schedule of release for 1923-24 by William Fox.

In addition to the capable staff of directors permanently on the Fox list is a large assemblage of talent, recruited from the first ranks of motion picture production, who have already completed or are now devoting their attention to pictures for the coming season's program.

Some indication of the quality of the promised product can be gained from the knowledge that these adroit workmen have been given unlimited resource for the completion of their tasks.

Among the directors is Harry Millarde who has to his credit "Over the Hill" and "The Town That Forgot God," said by critics to be the greatest flood picture ever filmed. Mr. Millarde will offer on the new schedule "If Winter Comes," the screen version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's famous novel, and "The Governor's Lady," an adaption of David Belasco's successful Broadway stage production.

J. Gordon Edwards in his long career as a director has made 40 special features, the last of which was "Nero" one of last year's Fox releases. Among the productions assigned to Mr. Edwards for the coming year are: "The Silent Command," a tale of the seas and adventure from the pen of Rufus King and adapted to the screen by Anthony Paul Kelly; "The Shepherd King," a spectacle film at the Fox studios in Rome and adapted for the screen from Wright Lorimer's literary classic; and "The Nest" from the New York stage presentation of that name which was dramatized from Maravene Thompson's best seller, "The Woman's Law." In these three specials, Mr. Edwards is said to have accomplished some of the best work in his extended experience with pictures and in each has assembled a cast of performers who are celebrated for their ability and popularity among the fans. "The Shepherd King," it is claimed, will be the crowning glory of Mr. Edwards' attainments.

Bernard Durning, who made "The Fast Mail" from Lincoln J. Carter's renowned melodramatic success, will bring to the celluloid two more Carter melodramas and another feature starring the famous Follies team of Gallagher and Shean. "The Eleventh Hour" by Carter has been adapted by Louis Sherwin. It is an honest thriller which it is claimed surpasses its predecessor for very element of excitement. "The Arizona Express," another Carter writing, is the third picture of this type that Durning has attempted. "Around the Town" is the title of the Gallagher and Shean film. The clever duo of comedians thus make their bow in motion pictures under this skilled director's guidance.

Elmer Clifton, whose "Down to the Sea in Ships" took Broadway by storm, will direct Ernest Truex and Florence Eldridge in "Six Cylinder Love," William Anthony McGuire's record-making Broadway triumph. This comedy-drama ran for more than a year and a half at the Sam Harris theatre in New York and was acclaimed by critics one of the best of the theatrical season.

John Ford is also on the list with three productions. Mr. Ford who helped make "The Village Blacksmith" and "Silver Wings" with Mary Carr has either completed or is engaged in the making of the following specials: "Cameo Kirby," adapted from the stage play by two leading American authors, Booth Tarkington and Henry Leon Wilson; "Hoodman Blind" by Henry Arthur Jones; and "North of Hudson Bay," an original story by Jules Furthman.

To Roland V. Lee, screen veteran, has been detailed the direction of Booth Tarkington's "Gentle Julia," "Shadows of the East" from the novel by E. M. Hull, author of "The Sheik," and Gouverneur Morris's "You Can't Get Away With It."

Charles Horan is scheduled to produce at least two of the specials, "Does It Pay?" with Hope Hampton and "No Mother to Guide Her" by Lillian Mortimer.

Henry Otto will direct "The Temple of Venus" and a number of star series features.

Among the other notable directors are: Lambert Hillyer, Lou Seiller, Jack Blystone, George Somerville, Thomas Buckingham, Scott Dunlap, William A. Wellman, James Flood, Erle Kenton, and Denison Clift who directed "This Freedom," Hutchinson's successor to "If Winter Comes."

Fox Advertising Insert Shatters All Records

WITH a huge, striking, three color advertising insert of 72 pages, announcing their entire release program for the coming season, William Fox this week shatters to the proverbial smithereens all records for a single trade announcement. Never before, in the history of advertising in the motion picture industry or any other industry in the country, has such a gigantic and artistic announcement been made by an individual corporation.

It is a stupendous and supreme achievement in advertising and exploitation and it heralds one of the most noteworthy and ambitious programs of motion picture production ever placed before the trade. The vigor of its content and the lavishness of its proportions and presentation not only bespeaks the enterprise of William Fox and his associates but sounds a glowing note of optimism for and to the entire industry right at the opening of the new season.

The preparation of this record breaking trade announcement is additionally interesting from the point of effort involved in its making. It entailed weeks of labor by scores of artists, writers, printers, engravers, lay-out experts and the whole large staff of the advertising and publicity forces of Fox, under the supervision of Vivian M. Moses, director of advertising, and Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the company. When the Fox art department found themselves taxed, Mr. Moses sought and engaged all the best available artists in New York City and outside to aid in its completion.

Working under the admonition from Mr. Sheehan "to spare neither time nor expense to make it the greatest announcement ever," Mr. Moses, with his augmented forces, worked tirelessly almost night and day to finish the huge undertaking. The first step was the laying out and completion of the art work. The making of the plates with which to print the insert was the next job. All of the leading color plate engravers of New York, and again some from the outside, were recruited. This was done by one of the most modern and perfect reproductive mediums known to engraving—the process method—by which the three colors and tones that form the scheme of the insert were exactly reproduced for printing.

The next big task was the printing from these plates of the inserts to be used in the trade press. For this purpose 60,000 inserts, with a content of 72 pages each, was needed. The job was given to one of New York's leading and largest printing establishments. Again scores of persons to handle the task were necessary—printers, skilled pressmen, feeders, cutters, binders and other types of help. Practically the entire force and equipment of this great printing plant was pressed into service.

To fill this monster printing order enough paper was used to carpet a path from New York to Boston by laying each page of the total quantity of inserts end to end. Colored ink enough to paint a good sized town all the hues of the rainbow was used. Three hundred reams of paper, totaling nearly 220 tons, was the exact amount used to fill the order. For the actual printing 5,000 pounds of colored inks were used.

A battery of ten big color presses, working night and day for a week, finally finished the huge order.

The announcement is gigantic and unsurpassed also in the product in heralds. Chief in this is the list of 25 big special productions to be released by Fox during 1923-24. To these specials alone was devoted 49 pages of the insert. The remainder of the advertisement exploits a Star Series of 27 pictures, made by the seven well known Fox stars and a list of short subjects, comedies, educational entertainments and the Fox News reel.

Rowland Lee Returns to Fox Organization

Rowland V. Lee has returned to the Fox organization to make a number of the specials on the soon to be announced list for 1923-24.

Among the pictures Mr. Lee will produce at the West Coast studios are Booth Tarkington's "Gentle Julia" and "Shadows of the East" by E. M. Hull, author of "The Sheik."

June Elvidge Given Role in "Eleventh Hour"

June Elvidge has a prominent role in "The Eleventh Hour," the Lincoln J. Carter melodrama in which Charles Jones and Shirley Mason are featured and which Fox Film Corporation has announced among its list of specials, for the screen of 1923-24.

Edwards Directing "Silent Command" For Fox

"THE SILENT COMMAND," the William Fox feature picture which Gordon Edwards is directing is said to be a melodrama of novel plot. The scenario was written by Anthony Paul Kelly and the leading characters are played by Edmund Lowe, Bela Lagos, Alma Tell and Martha Mansfield.

Louis Sherwin Will Adapt "Eleventh Hour"

LOUIS SHERWIN, author and scenarist and former dramatic critic of the New York Globe, has been assigned by Fox Film Corporation to adapt for the screen Lincoln J. Carter's melodrama, "The Eleventh Hour," which will be released on the special for the coming season.

Charles Jones and Shirley Mason, both Fox stars, will be the featured players. Bernard J. Durning is the director.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"In the Days of Daniel Boone" (Universal Serial—Fifteen Episodes)

UNIVERSAL is at it again recording vital chapters of American history. Certainly there is enough adventure, romance and excitement packed away in the lives of our most picturesque figures to supply serial stories for several years to come. And this company is to be praised for sensing the entertainment values to be found in the colorful pages of history. Every youngster has at some time or other read of Buffalo Bill or Daniel Boone or Kit Carson. These vital personages have been held up as real, live Americans—intrepid and chivalrous—real men in every sense of the word. But these figures will appeal to the grown-ups who have a taste for adventure—who, being Americans, will delight in seeing these historical favorites glorified and humanized. They lived in a day when living was a task. Danger and death lurked ever in the shadows.

Take the newest serial for example. "In the Days of Daniel Boone" records in a fascinating fictional manner the dangers which this colorful scout and pioneer encountered. It is crisp with action and incident and judging from the first three episodes which are filled with adventure and excitement, the serial is destined to create a deal of interest in its favor—netting the exhibitor and the producer considerable coin of the realm.

As everyone knows the story deals with the efforts of Daniel Boone to establish a colony on the Indian frontier prior to the Revolutionary War. We follow his exploits with rapt attention, giving no thought that we are looking at a picturized version of his life. In fact we feel ourselves actual participants. Thus does the director keep to his scenes, emphasizing all the adventurous incident. Naturally much villainy is afoot. And conflict and passion and romance and intrigue are balanced with the major theme.

It is all quite spectacular and often thrilling—what with the Indian attacks, the Tory intrigues and the Colonial shots of Washington, Jefferson et al. If these historical figures do not meet with proper approval, nevertheless the characterization is unimportant compared to the vital factor toward the picture's success—action. It is well staged and acted competently by Charles Brinsley as Boone.—LAURENCE REID.

"Fresh Eggs" (Pathe—One Reel)

THE efforts of an awkward hired man to increase the production of eggs on a farm provides most of the situations in this Paul Parrott comedy. He has a genius for doing the wrong thing at the right time and is continually in trouble, from which he is rescued by Marie Mosquini, as the owner of the egg ranch.

She finds a mash which is guaranteed to make hens lay twelve times a day, except Sundays and holidays, and when the hens are fed this the ground becomes so cluttered with eggs that they have difficulty in crating them up, giving rise to many laughable complications. A number of other good situations center about the rivalry of the two hired men for the girl's hand, in several of which farm animals figure. It is a typical comedy of its type, neither especially above nor below the average.—L. C. MOEN.

"The Courtship of Miles Sandwich" (Pathe—Two Reels)

TRAVESTIES on features seem to be flourishing these days, and in this case we have a burlesque version of "The Courtship of Miles Standish" in advance of the release of the feature.

Where a story of another day is travestied, there are many opportunities for the humor of incongruity—as was used by Mark Twain when he wrote "A Connecticut Yankee." In "The Courtship of Miles Sandwich" we have typewriters, flivvers, cigarettes, and the like, introduced into the story of the Pilgrim Fathers, and the humorous incidents which develop are many.

The picture opens with a youngster demanding to know the reason for Thanksgiving Day. His mother refers him to dad, played by Snub Pollard, who, when he can no longer hold out under the barrage of questions, proceeds to relate a highly "jazzed up" version of the story of the Pilgrims, which is shown as a picture within a picture, Pollard being seen as John Aldone and Marie Mosquini as Prissy.

We see the Pilgrims landing in true slapstick style, the Pilgrims looking for hotel accommodations, Prissy at her spinning, the bashful Miles Sandwich asking John to propose to her for him, with the well known result; the Captain's anger and his pursuit of John, the attack by the Indians under Chief Whatadamat, the smoking of the pipe of peace, the Chief's determination that John shall marry his daughter, John's ruse in turning the matchmaking efforts on the Captain, and many other incidents, after which the action shifts back to the modern story, with the youngster "giving the razz" to his father's story.

There is a goodly supply of laughs here, and it is a very well made subject of its kind.—L. C. MOEN.

"Don't Get Fresh"

(Century Comedy—Two Reels)

A SPIRITED little two-reeler which, while containing an idea which has often been used, manages to entertain because of its zippy action is "Don't Get Fresh," featuring Buddy Messenger. The star has considerable trouble taking care of his infant brother whose mother is so poor that she is unable to buy any milk. So Buddy hits upon the bright idea of putting water in the milk bottle and painting the outside of it with white paint.

The idea presents a conflict with the installment collector who arrives to take away the furniture. The boy employs his gang to help him and through the use of a rope which is tied to the pieces and a nearby telegraph pole the furniture stays on the sidewalk. Buddy next rescues a little girl from an auto accident and to show her gratitude he is invited to her party. But his enemy, the installment collector, has discovered him and the inevitable chase is introduced. In the meantime the girl's father is told of the boy's rescue act and he comes across with the necessary funds to save the furniture.

A true enough story and calculated to please
LAURENCE REID.

"Tom, Dick and Harry" (Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS picture impresses us as a sincere, straight-from-the-shoulder western drama of real excellence, compressed into two reels. The story, to be sure, is relatively slight, but it is out of the beaten track a bit and is just as good as that of most five-reel westerns, which makes it thoroughly acceptable by virtue of the length.

Leo Maloney appears in a typical characterization, supported by a clever dog and horse, the three of them comprising the "Tom, Dick and Harry" in question. He is seen as a young rancher in love with a neighbor's daughter. The neighbor is a highly "hen pecked" individual and his wife runs the ranch. She refuses her consent to the young people's marriage, until the hero, after a sensational ride, beats up the villains and recovers her fur neckpiece, in the lining of which she had sewed $200. In the end, the husband asserts his authority, resumes his habit of chewing tobacco, and gives his consent to the marriage, which his wife meekly accedes to.

The pleasing feature about this picture is that it moves. One does not have to sit through a great amount of padding to get at the meat, and there is a display of real horsemanship and a first rate fight, together with just enough romance to balance things up.

We strongly recommend this for summer programs, and any exhibitor who wishes to use short subject programs will find this excellent as a dramatic subject.—L. C. MOEN.

"Three Strikes"

(Educational Comedy—Two Reels)

A COMEDY based upon a burlesque of the national pastime as it is played in a "hick" college furnishes some bright wheezes throughout its two reels. Some of its high jinks are old and rather labored. If less attention was paid to pepping up the captains it would prove more satisfactory. After a deal of preliminary incident the piece gets down to the ball game—and this is its high spot.

Out in center field is Lige Conley who gets all "messed up" with the ball. He would catch the "ol apple" with his hat; he would catch it with mucilage—and the game is fast going against his team. Then comes the fatal ninth inning—when he knocks out a home run and sprints and turns cart wheels and hand springs himself over the plate. In the grandstand are the collegiates and their girls—and there is quite a campus spirit about the atmosphere. But the ball players in the few close-ups look and act like leaguers.—LAURENCE REID.

(Pathe—One Reel)

AN interesting collection of novelties is to be found in this release. The Pathecolor section, "Carthage, the Murdered City of the Punic Wars," is both beautiful and impressive, showing the ruins of Carthage as they are today. A section called "The Lens Liar" in which a split-stage attachment has been used to get some weird effects, such as waterfalls where none exist, tops of busses riding along in mid-air, and the like. "The Camel People" provides interesting shots of desert people and camels, pictorially beautiful and bringing out some little known facts.—L. C. MOEN.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"Daughters of the Rich"

Preferred-Al Lichtman—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A REGULATION formula which is surrounded by an opulent display does not carry this picture to the heights. All the customary ingredients are present and they are of such stock calibre that the everyday filmgoer will remark: "Where have I seen this plot before?" A desire to give it a lavish background has guided the sponsors and perhaps they were wise in this respect, seeing as how the story is cut and dried. Certainly, no fault may be found with the trimmings and trappings of the picture. Hand-carved furniture, bizarre bedrooms, immaculate evening clothes and gowns, and exotic scenes of wild orgies—these furnish the properties for a story based upon high life among the fast set.

The development of the sequences is easily anticipated. Once the daughter of a wealthy family is bartered off to a degenerate Russian duke the usual complications are under way—and before the picture is over we see a couple of ill-fated marriages, a suicide and a much emphasized moral—not forgetting an embrace against a dying sunset.

The story is shallow and far-fetched. Its best points are found in the early scenes when the characters are being planted. Yet we must say that the villainy exposed by Stuart Holmes is rather compelling. At least he keeps in character and refrains from delving in thought like the majority of the other figures. The American girl is compromised by the dissolute duke and this precipitates a duel between him and the Yankee lover. Thinking himself "checked out" by the girl, the youth encourages the advances of a mercenary maiden and eventually they are married. But he comes across some fatal love letters which results in a "scene." The suicide of the wife follows, the husband is jailed because he was overheard declaring that he would kill her, and he is freed when the case falls to pieces. Thus his reconciliation to the rich girl, who teaches a dressmaking class, brings on the happy ending.

The picture does not hold the interest throughout. It sags when Gasnier places his characters in deep thought. There are several compelling scenes. They compel through their lavishness and not through any sequence of story. The title, cast and opulence will appeal, however, to certain audiences.

The Cast

"Sawdust"

Universal—4910 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S been some time since Gladys Walton has had a more appealing role than that of the little circus performer in "Sawdust," a picture destined to be popular because it depicts romance and adventure 'neath the big top. There may not be much originality about the idea, but it furnishes a happy surprise in its climax—and there is incorporated sufficient incident and heart interest to get by most anywhere.

Any exhibitor catering to a baldheaded row will find his front seats well occupied, the reason being Miss Walton's pleasing figure in her spangles and tights. The star is perfectly at home in her role and plays with commendable spirit.

The story begins along familiar lines, showing the personable acrobat in conflict with the ringmaster whose cruelty toward her and a couple of clowns has made him unpopular with the show people. There is good atmosphere here because a real circus is employed. When the plot introduces an elderly couple visiting the show to discover, if possible, whether their girl, who disappeared years previously, is with the troupe it develops into the missing child formula. The spectator naturally guesses that the star is the long-lost daughter.

But the author furnishes a surprise by showing her as bearing no relationship to the old people. She runs away from the circus and passes herself off to them as the missing child. But their lawyer, in a temporary spirit of revolt against the girl who has become his sweetheart, informs the "father" that she is an impostor. She is saved from a suicide's watery grave by his timely arrival and everything ends happily.

Rather frail after the circus background is left, but, withal, a story which is definite in its appeal regardless of its conventional plot and incident. There is a dog in the picture who reveals a bag of tricks—and the others in the cast are satisfactory.

The Cast

Nita Moore.....Gladys Walton
Philip Lessoway.....Niles Welch
Mrs. Nancy Wentworth.....Edith Yorke
Ethelbert Wentworth.....Herbert Standing
Runner Bayne.....Matthew Betz
"Pop" Gifford.....Frank Brownlee
"Speck" Dawson.....William Robert Daly
By Courtney Riley Cooper, Scenario by Harvey Gates. Directed by Jack Conway.

The Story Tells of circus performer who is cruelly treated by ringmaster—her foster-father. Runs away and joins family whose daughter had presumably joined a circus years before. The girl finds happiness, but a quarrel with her sweetheart compels her to admit the fraud which she has perpetrated—that of being the real daughter.

Production Highlights The circus incident. The sawdust atmosphere.

Drawing Power Will draw in second and third class and neighborhood houses.

"The Woman With Four Faces"

Paramount—5700 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE improbabilities attached to this crook story are, naturally, its shortcomings, and because of them one cannot become really excited over it, although one will follow it with interest since it carries a lively line of action. The gaps are so noticeable, however, that it is surprising that an experienced playwright like Bayard Veiller could fashion a plot which contains so many loose ends.

Here we have the quartette of crooks signing an agreement to help the dope ring, but the gap is visible when the paper is put away for safe keeping instead of being destroyed. Prosecuting attorneys, nowadays, are supposed to work in collusion with a feminine crook to get their evidence against the men higher up. This is another improbability. But the biggest gap arrives when it is ascertained by the prosecutor that the only man capable of cracking the big chief's safe is a convict in prison. So an airplane sails over the prison yard and Mr. Safecracker hops aboard the dangling rope ladder and is carried away. This defies logic.

But the subsequent action which shows him as untrustworthy and turning on the disciples of righteousness makes the preceding prison delivery appear futile. It was doubtless executed to exact a thrill and only seems possible because it was done for the purposes of entertainment. Another touch which is incredible presents the co-operation of a district attorney with a crook—the former using the latter to become a better crook for the sake of the law.

Yet it is these improbabilities which give it a value of novelty, otherwise it would have followed along in the same old familiar groove. The picture has been directed with emphasis placed upon its speed and the careful execution of each scene—all of which have been deftly put together.

Betty Compson, who uses an assortment of expressions to get into her character, acts with a good display of feeling and color. After all, she is at her best in the delineation of crook roles. Richard Dix is an adequate prosecutor, while George Fawcett as the judge and Joseph Kilgour as the arch-criminal play their parts with their customary poise and finesse.

The Cast

Elizabeth West—a crook.....Betty Compson
Richard Templar—district attorney.....Richard Dix
Judge Westcott.....George Fawcett
Jim Hartigan—a convict.....Theodore von Eltz
Judson Osgood—a narcotic peddler.....Joseph Kilgour

Classification Crook melodrama with redemption angle.

Production Highlights The lively action. The work of Betty Compson. The escape of the prisoner via airplane. The suspenseful value. The competent acting by George Fawcett and Richard Dix. The crook incident.

"Wandering Daughters"

First National—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Frank Shelton)

MUCH ado about nothing for 6,000 feet. A good cast wasting its time on an inconsequential story dealing with the frivolities of the flapper—something we have seen again and again on the screen of late and a subject on which folks are no doubt getting much "fed up."

Somehow or other this production doesn't seem to measure up to modern requirements. The action for the most part seems nothing more than a series of poses. There are sharp breaks. The characters walk into the scene, do their stuff and abruptly walk off.

Marguerite de la Motte has the leading role, but her work does not measure up to that which we saw her register in "What A Wife Learned," "Scars of Jealousy" and other pictures. It is a very different Marguerite here. Every one of the characters is overdrawn. There is a lot of bunk comedy introduced for no reason whatever, but Alice Howell may get some laughs with her "business." Noah Beery is miscast as a strict pater of the "400." Allen Forrest is a good selection for the artist or parlor hound. He is at least convincing, but his acting is mediocre. Pat O'Malley is one of the bright spots in the picture. Pat is natural. That is the secret of his good characterizations. Marjorie Daw poses too much. William V. Mong as the father and Mabel Van Buren as the mother are adequate.

There are some attempts to inject the risqué into the action, strip out and take and the like. But it is all very tame. Some of the dancing scenes could well be toned down. The feature attempts to show the menace of "this freedom." It's not the "wandering boy" any more—it's the wandering girl, declares a subtitle. But the story then goes on to show that it is the wandering boy who produces the wandering girl.

There may be a demand for pictures of this kind in smaller houses in some towns, but we doubt the advisability of showing it to sophisticated folks.

The Story—Deals with the adventures of Bessie Bowden, who, brought up in a strait-laced household, is attracted to the social life of the fast set. She is infatuated with a parlor hound. John Hargraves, a hard working youth, conspires with her father to adopt the ways of the "400" in a hope that this means of attack will keep the girl interested in her own home. Dad transforms the old home, but goes broke doing it. However, in the end, the parlor lizard is unhorsed—too many women being his downfall—and John and Bessie are married.

Classification—A comedy-drama dealing with the gayeties and sorrows of our present day flapper.

Production Highlights—The party given by the "socially elect" at the country club. The race between the cop and the autoist. The comedy supplied by Alice Howell. The meeting of the two girls in the artists' studio, the discovery of the man's perfidy and his punishment. The wedding under difficulties.

Exploitation Angles—The title. Might give a private screening for the local mothers' club and then get the women to give you their ideas on flapper activities for use in a tie-up campaign with your newspaper. Put the screening on in co-operation with the paper.

Drawing Power—Might go over in second class downtown houses, but not suitable for high class neighborhood theatres with family patronage, or houses attracting a clientele that insists on some sense in their picture farc.

"The Mysterious Witness"

F. B. O.—4350 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is nothing original or unconventional about this western except a slight novel touch in the climax when a horse is introduced as the character of the title. Otherwise it presents the stereotyped line of action between an honest cowpuncher and the in his office of ranch foreman. The hero is ornery villain who makes him toe the mark not the customary "up and at 'em" type of cowboy. He takes his "medicine" without a whimper because he is forced to support his aged mother back in the old home town. Thus for husbanding his resources the rest of the boys pick on him.

The characters are all familiar. There is the elderly prospector who befriends him and who is eventually murdered so that suspicion might fall upon the hero; there is the wealthy ranch owner's daughter, who, true to form, is infatuated with the most humble of the cowboys—and there are the cows and the open country.

The action furnishes some liveliness even if it is orthodox. The girl is saved from a serious accident by the hero and is forced to spend the night with her in a cave. Naturally the foreman registers jealousy over this turn of affairs—for he would marry the girl if she would have him. So he gets rid of the youth, who stops off to see the prospector.

At which point enters the heavy villainy. The foreman has been intercepting letters mailed by the hero to his mother and pocketing the money. So the young man develops some courage and starts in pursuit. To place him clearly under suspicion the old miner is murdered and the boy is locked up. It looks like sure conviction for him and a subsequent necktie party, but at the last minute his horse—the "mysterious witness"—is introduced. He proves to be so gun shy that it would be impossible for his rider to fire the shots from his back as the foreman had testified. The prospector's "poke" is found among the villain's cohorts and the hero is exonerated.

The Cast

However, the boy receives sympathy from old prospector. The ranchman has a daughter, who becomes infatuated with him, thus arousing the ire of the foreman. The cowpuncher learns that the villain is stealing money sent to his mother and starts in pursuit.

Classification—Conventional western melodrama.

Production Highlights—The conflict. The atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Play it up as an "up and at 'em" melodrama. Feature the horse.

"The Rapids"

Ernest Shipman-Hodkinson—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture does not live up to the expectations which the title suggests. One would naturally think that much action and stirring incident would be realized—action and incident of life in the raw out there in the open spaces. But these elements never develop beyond a little excitement in the climax. The idea is based upon harnessing the water power of a Canadian town and putting it on the industrial map. Thus it may be called a story of capital and labor.

There is much to be explained in the sequences. For one thing we are puzzled over the project being financed by Wall Street promoters. Subtitles cover the ground in telling of the feud between an honest capitalist determined to "get" two crooked capitalists. He "gets" them through stock manipulation. And the story suffers because the action is eliminated. We see a stranger arrive in the town and through the power of his eloquence interest the natives in the undeveloped resources of the community. The next scene shows a pulp mill in complete operation—with the stranger in charge.

For the purposes of conflict his engineer loves a girl who has aroused the admiration of the hero. And she, in turn, idealizes him.

The action never gets anywhere. When the honest capitalist brings the "crash" the mill is forced to close. Which introduces the time-worn strike of the employees. A poorly handled scene which doesn't ring genuine. With Wall Street forced to take the count, the mill reopens and the stranger, his work completed, leaves for other parts. What he has gained out of his project is not shown. He would have remained had the girl really loved him, but the engineer, fighting for his life in the rapids after being shoved off a bridge by a dissatisfied workman, arouses the heroine's sleeping passion. So the stranger walks away disconsolate, yet with a feeling of happiness because he has his little adopted daughter with him.

The scenes are not dovetailed in a very admirable manner. And the wide-awake spectator will surely recognize a billboard with the name of Long Island city upon it. However, it is an adequate picture for program houses. It is sincerely acted by Harry Morey and a competent cast.

"Circus Days"

Sol Lesser-First National—6500 Feet

(Reviewed by J. C. Jessen)

IT was bound to happen that Jackie Coogan would appear in a circus story—for circuses and small boys are inseparable when the big top is put up in the cities and villages of any country, anywhere. Some will call this Jackie's best picture because it does feature circus life. We will say that it outclasses any production in which he has ever appeared with the single exception of "Oliver Twist." Certainly, it affords the spectator with plenty of adventure and atmosphere. The kids will flock to see it—and the elders will not be able to remain away.

One thing about this picture is the fact that it is essentially a vehicle for the star's childish appeal. Adapted from the story, "Toby Tyler"—a very free adaptation, incidentally, it is redolent throughout of the atmosphere of the circus lot. Much time and money has been expended to make the production genuine—right down to the smallest detail. Circus pictures have come and gone, but this one outclasses them all with its background.

The director who helped to fashion the scenario has worked with an eye upon catching the true circus spirit. Yet he has not forgotten that Jackie Coogan is an actor. Thus the youngster is presented with opportunities to express pathos and heart interest—qualities in which he is supreme—qualities which very few of his matured rivals are able to suggest. Sol Lesser has given the director free rein. The result is lavish scenic effects are provided. The entire personnel of a circus has been employed—a circus which was wintering on the Coast.

The story starts off on a human interest angle, showing the youngster and his mother being abused by the boy's uncle and compelled to do the drudgery of the farm. A circus comes to town and little Toby is prevented from seeing it. And, boy like, he puts on a circus of his own which ends in disaster and disgrace for him. So he runs away and joins the big show in the next town. His job is with the lemonade and peanut concession and hard luck still pursues him, for his taskmaster is nearly as stern as his uncle. But the sideshow people and the clowns show a real friendship and before long he is allowed to "double" for a tiny equestrienne. And his star is in the ascendant when he is made the feature clown with bareback riding thrown in for good measure. When his mother is reunited to him his troubles are ended.

The production takes rank with the best. It is essentially all Jackie, yet the supporting cast is highly competent. It's a great audience picture and certain to turn the crowds away. It offers unlimited exploitation possibilities.

The Cast

Toby Tyler..... Jackie Coogan
Ann Tyler, his mother..... Barbara Tennant
Eben Holt..... Russell Simpson
His wife, Martha..... Claire McDowell
Luigi, the Clown..... Cesare Gravini
Jeanette, his niece..... Peaches Jackson
Mr. Lord, the Lemonade Man..... Sam de Grasse
Mr. Daly, the Circus Owner..... DeWitt Jennings
World's Fatthest Woman..... Nellie Lane
World's Skinniest Man..... William Barlow
By James Otis. Scenario by Eddie Cline and Harry Weil. Directed by Eddie Cline.

The Story—Boy is mistreated on uncle's farm and rather than face a whipping runs away and joins a circus. The circus had been in the town the day before, but he was prevented from seeing it. He has a hard task with the show, but his friends in the side-show save him from persecution. The boy gets a chance to "double" for a little equestrienne and makes good.

Classification—Drama of human interest featuring life with a circus.

Production Highlights—The heart appeal. The circus atmosphere. The excellent performance by Jackie Coogan.

Exploitation Angles—Presents several ideas. Link up with your own circus day. Put on atmospheric prologue suggestive of the big top.

Drawing Power—Will succeed anywhere.

"The Law of the Lawless"

Paramount—5700 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S a fine old melodramatic ring in this title which adorns a story carrying a deal of adventurous color and romance. The plot is not original nor important. What is important is the fact that gypsy life and love forms a subject which has not been used extensively on the screen. The idea itself has served time and again in many of our westerns. Here it is used to stir up a little conflict between Tartar tribes of the lower Danube and gypsy nomads—who are costumed according to the best theatrical traditions.

Certainly, the author, a native of the lower Danube, has employed a background which serves as a distinct relief—for there isn't a hint of American scenery or characterization in the tale. This gives the picture an exotic flavor. Yet how obvious it is! One can spot the ending once the three important figures are introduced—and nothing transpires to furnish a single moment of surprise.

However, there is a novelty about certain incidents which carry it away from the conventional, rubber-stamp hokum. Certainly novel is the wedding of the gypsy chieftain and the Tartar maid who sells herself on the auction block to save her father, whose weakness is his huge debt to a wily usurer. The gypsy carries her off in cave-man fashion and the marriage ceremony is truly colorful. Their arms are slightly cut to allow the blood to flow and a piece of cloth is bound around them. The priest says something about their life fluid being mixed and it is over. And, true to custom, there is much celebration by the observers. The girl learns to love him gradually, principally because he displays some prowess in bulldozing a steer and riding an angry horse.

The fireworks begin when the disappointed Tartar lover rides to rescue her. The gypsy is kidnapped, but the girl effects his rescue and the discarded sweetheart perishes in the flames of the minaret. No gun-play here, instead the weapons are whips—and the gypsies use them with good effect upon the Tartars. The picture drags quite a bit, especially in the romantic scenes and again in the climax when the flames race up the stairs to the minaret.

Nevertheless it is the most colorful role Dorothy Dalton has had in some time. There is no reason, though, why she should attempt to express fear. Hers is a personality which wouldn't be scared at anything. Charles de Roche, making his American screen debut, is rather colorless in an equally colorful role. Any one of a dozen Americans gifted in the saddle could have gotten away with it. Theodore Kosloff, being a Russian is able to suggest the Tartar with commendable spirit. His is the truest character.

The Cast

Sahande, a spirited Tartar maid..... Dorothy Dalton
Sender, a faint-hearted musician..... Theodore Kosloff
Costa, a gypsy chief..... Charles de Roche
Ali Meechmet, a money lender..... Tully Marshall
Osman, father of Sahande..... Fred Huntley
Fanutza, a gypsy..... Margaret Loomis
By Conrad Bercovici. Adapted by E. Lloyd Sheldon and Edfrid Bingham. Directed by Victor Fleming. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Treats of spirited Tartar maid, whose father's misfortune places him in power of village usurer. Is about to be sold as a slave when the girl takes his place and offers herself to the highest bidder. A musician and a gypsy chief bid for her, the latter winning. Then he learns that he has not gained her love until he proves himself worthy of winning her.

Classification—Romantic adventure drama.

Production Highlights—The spirited acting by Dorothy Dalton and Kosloff. The good atmosphere. The fights and thrills.

Exploitation Angles—Play up star and cast, mentioning screen debut of Charles de Roche. Put on atmospheric prologue with gypsy background. Music from Herbert's "The Fortune Teller" would be appropriate. Use vocal number.

Drawing Power—Will please majority of picture-goers anywhere.

"The Spoilers"

Jesse D. Hampton-Goldwyn—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Frank Shelton)

"I TLL drag 'em to the edge of the seats!" You have heard that before. You know that when it is used, it is usually the bunk. But, boys, that is the one and only phrase we can think of after viewing this stirring story.

The thought uppermost in our mind, and perhaps it has been in yours, was: Can Milton Sills equal the battle put up by Bill Farnum and Tom Santschi in a former screen version of this vibrant Rex Beach tale. Sills undoubtedly had some thoughts along this line also. So did Noah Beery. Well, rest assured that these two put up a battle in this picture that is as close to the real thing as it is humanly possible to make it. We have it on high authority that Sills was laid up for three weeks after this fight. We believe it. So will you when you see these two characters exchanging knockout blows, jumping from tables on top of each other, going through windows, through partitions, through furniture. It's terrific. Everyone who sees this fistic tournament is going to revel in it. It's the best fight seen on the screen this year. It is better than the Farnum-Santschi battle, in our opinion.

And this is not the only battle in this wonderful screen version. It opens with one and the male characters seem to be continually at each other's throats. Action! Why, man, it comes so fast your poor old spine will be worn out from quivering. Here is a feature in which the primeval passions of man are given full play. Realizing that it was up to them to make a bigger and better picture than any that had gone before, the characters have lived—not acted—their roles.

There is no hokum. It's all real, big, throbbing drama. The blowing up of the mines, the robbing of the sluices of the Midas mine, the attempt to arrest Glenister for the robbery, the riding of the Vigilantes, the crooked roulette game, the escape of Glenister from the dance hall, his rushing to the rescue of his sweetheart, his dive from the bluff into the rushing stream on horseback—and then the greatest battle in screen history—these are a few of the things that "will drag 'em to the edge of the seats!"

Technically, the production approaches 100 per cent. Lambert Hillyer has directed masterfully. The settings are unusually fine and all convincing. We predict for "The Spoilers" unusual success at the box office. If ever a picture deserved support from exhibitors, this is IT.

The Cast

Milton Sills..... Anna O. Nilsson
Noah Beery..... Barbara Bedford
Robert Edeson..... Ford Sterling
Robert McKim..... Mitchell Lewis
Sam de Grasse..... Wallace MacDonald
Rockliffe Fellows..... Albert Roscoe
Jack Curtis..... John Elliott
Louise Fazenda..... Kate Price
Gordon Russell..... Nick Cogley

By Rex Beach. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Scenario by Fred Kennedy Myton. Photo-

The Story—Deals with the adventures of Roy Glenister, Joe Dextery and his friends in the Nome, Alaska, country, where they go in search of gold, but find instead, romance and adventure. The fight against McNamara, a crooked politician, who seeks to jump every good claim in the country, and his gang of ruffians, takes up most of the action. There is a happy ending. Glenister wins the fight and the girl.

Classification—A dramatic thunderbolt of the great outdoors in the Nome mining country, bubbling over with red blooded action.

Production Highlights—The battle between Sills and Beery. The thrills. The suspense. The fine sets, both interior and exterior. The wonderful cast.

Exploitation Angles—Borrow, steal, get money somehow to bill this one like a circus. The more you spend the more you'll get back. Play up the big battle. Tell them about the real all-star cast. Dress a couple fellows like miners and put them out as ballyhoos.

Drawing Power—It'll fill your house, no matter how big, if you exploit it right.

Photoplay Personals and Events in Southeast

MOORE county, North Carolina, boasts of the two finest theatre pipe organs in the South, and it is a rural community at that, without a single large town. When Leonard Tufts, millionaire developer of the winter resort at Pinehurst, built his commodious Carolina theatre a year ago he installed at that time the finest theatre pipe organ in this part of the country, the theatre being under the management of Charles W. Piquot, one of the best known showmen in the South, who, catering to an almost entirely millionaire clientele, presents first runs on a majority of the bigger pictures. Now, O. L. Aufer Heide and Dr. G. G. Herr, are starting the building of a half million dollar theatre at the neighboring resort of Southern Pines and intend to install a pipe organ that will even excell the one in the Carolina theatre.

Harry S. Allen formerly of the Howard-Wells interests in Wilmington, spent a greater part of the past week on Charlotte's Film Row buying pictures for his new theatre at Sanford, which will open Friday, June 22nd, with a big gala formal event and expensive favors to all patrons.

Nat L. Royer, well known film man of the South and formerly publisher of Southern Picture News, Atlanta, Ga., has been made managing director of the re-christened Capitol Theatre, in Birmingham, Ala. Albany Notes and Eastern New York Briefs

ABOUT everyone worth while in this section of the state is attending the convention in Syracuse this week. Frank Bruner, manager of the Pathe exchange here, took a party in his car Monday, which included Edward Eschman and Will Raynor, who came on here from New York. Vic Bendell, of the F. B. O. exchange, also went up Monday afternoon, while Charles Walder, of the Goldwyn exchange, Alec Herman, of the First National, Marvin Kempner, of the Paramount exchange, and Ben Apple, owner of the American and Griswold theatres in Troy, also left early in the week for Syracuse.

Harold Rodner, who hails from 16 Broadway, dropped in at the Mark Strand in Albany the other day and renewed acquaintance with Manager Vineberg.

"Al" Lourie, special representative for Timely Films, out of New York, was in Albany for three or four weeks.

There was one man who arrived in Albany this past week who received a royal welcome from everyone. His name is Bert Moran, now manager of the Pathe exchange in Pittsburgh, and who handled Pathe's exchange in Albany for several years, and numbered his friends by the thousands. Accompanied by Mrs. Moran, Bert is on his way to Burlington, Vt., for his vacation.

The Mark Strand in Albany is meeting the usual summer lull in business by doing away with soloists.

Otto Eigen, of the Academy in Sharon Spa, was seen along Film Row the past week.

Frank Bruner, manager of the Pathe exchange in Albany, spent a day or so this week at headquarters in New York.

There is a rumor to the effect that the Astor, in Troy, may close within a few days.

The street car strike is still on in Schenectady, and as a result the theatres in that city are playing to small houses. In fact, at one matinee in a rather large house, there were only six persons.

Someone from Brooklyn gave Herman S. Vineberg, the new business manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, a handsome mahogany cigarette humidor during the past week. The donor forgot to enclose his card and should this item meet his eye, Mr. Vineberg would like to hear from him.

Robert Bendell, manager of the Selznick Distributing Corporation, in Albany, had a profitable trip to Gloversville this week, when he closed a contract with Myer Schine for all houses in the latter's circuit.

Some of the managers in Albany, realizing the many changes that have taken place in the exchanges during the last few months, are rather on pins and needles these days. The situation was well expressed one day last week when the manager of a local exchange, meeting a friend on the street, remarked that he was on his way back to the exchange "to see who he was still with."

Bob Bertchy, who used to manage the Federated exchange in Albany, but who is now handling the Metro in Boston, was a welcome visitor in Albany the past week.

H. W. Martell, of the motion picture division of the U. S. Army, was along Film Row last week, booking up for army posts in northern New York.

E. Dopp, of the Electric, in Johnstown, and Louis Schine, of Gloversville, were well known exhibitors of central New York in town last week.

Talk about young women being good film salesmen! Jane Holloran, who is employed in the Selznick Distributing corporation exchange in Albany, went to Pittsfield the past week and closed a thousand dollar contract with the Capitol theatre of that place. Incidentally, Miss Holloran has just bought a new car.

A committee has been named by the Albany F. I. L. M. club to look for permanent headquarters.

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange in Albany, and Marvin Kempner, manager of the Paramount exchange in the same city, were in New York the past week, with Nate Robbins, and Barney Lumberg, of Utica, well known exhibitors. Mr. Robbins will use stock at the Avon in Watertown this summer.

Miss Rene Craven, first assistant to the manager in the First National exchange in Albany, is enjoying a short vacation at Silver Bay on Lake George.

Alec Herman is still leading in the managers' contest staged by First National. Mr. Herman's windows, by the way, are the best decorated of any exchange in the Capital city.

There is one exhibitor in the Capital District who swings a cane. He is Captain Boone, who has just been made manager by the State, in Schenectady.

Rev. George Smith, of Bolton Landing, who uses pictures along with his preaching, and does his own booking, was in town last week.

William Shirley, of the Strand, in Schenectady, was in New York last week.

There is talk to the effect that Paul Alberts, owner of the Albany in Schenectady, is working quietly in the hope of acquiring the State theatre. This latter house has just started in with double features, and furthermore, with the hoped for stimulating business, advertised the past week that children would be admitted free of charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Seguin, of Rouses Point, well known exhibitors, drove to Albany last week, and booked up a summer supply of film.

On account of conditions, the Pythian at Port Ewen will close indefinitely in the near future.

Ollie Stacey, manager of the Majestic in Albany, uses a medicine ball every day with one of his doormen to keep in condition. Mr. Stacey has been in the business for many years but still looks like a youngster, but when it comes to booking pictures he is "the daddy of them all."

Portland, Ore., Exhibitor and Exchange News

C.S. JENSEN, head of the firm of Jensen & Von Herberg, sprung a surprise on his friends and upon attentive motion picture fans when he announced the resignation of Paul F. Noble as manager of the Liberty theatre and his succession by A. C. Raleigh. Noble, who has had charge of the Liberty, probably the most important link in the long chain of J. & Von H. houses, for nearly five years, was absent on a vacation in California when his retirement was made known by his employer.

Noble is said to have been one of the highest salaried picture house managers on the Coast and his exploitation methods, especially in handling prologues, have given him a wide reputation. It is probably, according to Jensen, that Noble will remain in Southern California. His resignation as secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was a forerunner of his retirement from the Liberty, but even his friends did not suspect the one would follow the other.

A. C. Raleigh, new manager of the Liberty, has been with Jensen & Von Herberg for seven years, except for the time he spent in Salem in charge of the Guthrie chain of houses and later as manager of the Portland Blue Mouse. He is best known here as former manager of the Columbia theatre, now owned by Carl Laemmle and operated by Universal. He is also editor of Screenland the J. & Von H. house organ and was editor of Screenland News, a film weekly.

Jacques Bergues, whose motion picture experience has been gained chiefly in France, has discovered mountain locations that, he declares, vie with anything in Europe in the Canadian Rockies. He is here while a story is prepared for him to shoot with these huge mountains and great rock formations as backgrounds. He will use a small cast, making the story tie into the backgrounds, after the fashion of the Bruce Wilderness Tales. Incidentally, the Robert Bruce Company, making the first of the summer's series of Wilderness Tales, is expected back next week from the Oregon coast country.

Manager John Stille at the Rivoli will present in a special dance number throughout next week Malveson Parker, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Parker, as Norman Mendelsohn. The Parker girl and her partner are popular as dancers. The father of the former, J. J. Parker, is the owner of the Majestic and Peoples theatres.

As a result of his "discovery" concerts, by means of which he had introduced to Columbia theatre audiences a number of heretofore little known singers and musicians, Manager M. H. Newman himself has discovered Bernarda Harry Henderson, dramatic soprano, and on the strength of her popularity at the concert last Sunday, has engaged her for a two weeks season. Mrs. Henderson was richly rewarded with applause at her first appearance. She is a sister of DeWitt Harry, who is doing publicity for the Columbia.

Portland's annual Rose Festival did not cut in on picture house receipts as severely as was expected, since poor weather conditions prevailed for the first two days of the big outdoor carnival. The theatres drew even more than their usual early week business. On Thursday, however, almost everyone in town, it seemed, and all their friends from the villages, stood on the sidewalks for hours waiting for and finally viewing the great floral pageant.

Film Flashes From Florida Territory

GEORGE Almon, representing the Southern States Film Co., of Atlanta, rolled into Tampa last Saturday in his classy coupe, closed up contracts for his company's output, and left Tuesday for Clearwater.

Stanley E. Myer, of the Highland theatre, Frostproof, was a Tampa visitor this week. Stanley has been showing only two days a week this summer, but says that business was so good he had to put on another day.

Last week, while the Jackie Coogan picture, "Daddy," was playing at the Victory, Tampa, Manager Jno. B. Carroll thought of the kiddies out at the Children's Home, and how they would enjoy it. So, Saturday afternoon he reserved a portion of the house and had them all there as his guests. Did they enjoy it? I'll say they did.

Manager Jno. B. Carroll, of the Victory, Tampa, is now providing continuous music for the patrons of this popular theatre. He has engaged Miss Vatterlin, the organist, and she is alternating with the orchestra.

E. J. Ammes, a theatre inspector of New York, was in Tampa recently, and said the Tampa theatres were far above the average. He thought them up to anything in the South for cleanliness, appearance and ventilation.

Jottings from Kansas City and Vicinity

DESPITE the fact that seventeen friends in the film industry offered themselves for blood examination in an effort to save the life of Henry Taylor, Universal representative of the Kansas City branch, it was in vain, Mr. Taylor dying Friday morning. He had undergone an operation Sunday at St. Joseph's hospital, but did not improve. Wednesday his condition became critical and an infusion of blood was necessary. Of the applicants who offered themselves for the transfusion Billy Bannister, formerly Universal representative, was selected. Mr. Taylor leaves his widow, two brothers and two sisters.

The Kansas City Goldwyn office records are being examined this week by O. H. Lambert and James Merian, traveling auditors for the home office at New York City.

W. T. Yoder, Pathe Southern District manager, is experiencing the trials and hardships of an exchange manager this week. Mr. Yoder volunteered to take charge of the Kansas City Pathe office while Harry Graham, branch manager, takes a vacation.

A verdict of $76,070.83 was awarded against the Orpheum theatre and Realty Company of Kansas City in the Federal court at Kansas City last week. The verdict was in favor of the Clarke Estate Company, which sued for $115,000 damages, involving the alleged neglect of the old Orpheum theatre. Included in the net verdict was $2,249.76, which represented the rent on a box at the old theatre. The box in the original lease was to be set aside for the heirs of Henry T. Clarke who leased the property in 1911 to the Orpheum Company the new house featuring vaudeville and motion pictures. A new trial will be asked by the Orpheum company. Should this not be granted an appeal will be taken from the jury's verdict for damages. E. A. Neel, one of the attorneys for the Orpheum company, said.

A new theatre in Moran, Kas., is being constructed by B. Larson. The house will be equipped to accommodate small road shows, in addition to motion pictures, having a small stage and sloping floors. The Garden theatre, Colony, Kas., being constructed by F. V. Denton, is nearing completion. The Palace theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., owned by F. L. Dyson, has been sold to C. M. Piper. Mr. Dyson also has disposed of his interest in the Park theatre to George Montray and will take a summer vacation.

Exhibitors who complain of summer slumps lend your eyes a moment:

In Aliceville, Kas., there are 110 persons. The motion picture theatre seats 250, showing once a week. The manager is a blacksmith, representing a number of citizens who guarantee the operation of the theatre. And it more than pays expenses.

The management of the Pastime theatre, Protection, Kas., operates under the theory that the manner in which a theatre is conducted is even more important than the pictures shown. On certain nights the Pastime admits entire families on two adult tickets, while in connection with Lloyd comedies, colored photographs of Harold Lloyd are given away. Each day five women of the town are called on the telephone and asked to guess the Pastime's program for that night, a correct reply being followed by an invitation to attend the show as guests of the management. It simply is a different method of keeping the public mind constantly on the theatre and box office results reflect this.

"The bicycling and subrenting of film is just a matter of stealing and it is hardly conceivable that any exhibitor would stoop to such a practice, but so many instances of this have been brought to the attention of the Film Board of Trade that arrangements have been made for investigators to be maintained throughout the entire territory, and drastic action will be taken in all cases in an effort to correct this deplorable condition," reads a notice issued by the Kansas City Film Board of Trade issued this week.

The announcement also states that exhibitors will be expected to return their film not later than 9 o'clock the morning following their show.

The interior of the Royal theatre, Cameron, Mo., has been redecorated, while the theatre's cooling system has been perfected, according to A. E. Jarhoe, manager.

JOHN J. MURRAY, circus man, showman and exhibitor of Warren, agrees with the chaps that say a man's as young as his arteries. That's why he keeps on going when others quit, who have kept up a steady grind as long as he has. Murray has been contented with the one big Warren motion picture house; the Opera House, until recently. Now he owns the Hippodrome as well. And last Sunday was the official opening of the Hippodrome under his management. His first feature was "Within the Law." In honor of the occasion, the local First National family motored down to Warren to help celebrate. Among those present were District Manager and Mrs. H. A. Bandy, and Exchange Manager and Mrs. George W. Erdmann. Flowers were in profusion in the lobby, and everyone turned out to wish Murray well in his latest venture.

The response was a packed house. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Star Spangled Banner" were displayed on the screen. A holiday was declared in the public schools for the day.

C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests, was the subject of a humorous anecdote printed in the Harrisburg Telegraph on June 15. Mr. Hopkins, it seems, acted as treasurer of a large fishing party from Harrisburg that went to Tuckerton, N. J., the week before. "He stopped in Philadelphia," the story continues, "to take aboard a lot of shredder crabs to use as bait. Shredder crabs are expensive. 'Eighteen dollars,' said the dealer to the astonished theatre man. 'Eighteen dollars to feed the fishes,' commented Hopkins making a hurried examination of the remainder of his roll. 'That leaves thirteen cents a meal to feed the fishermen. It looks to me as though it would be better to eat the crabs and feed the hotel stuff to the fishes.'"

The Pennsylvania delegation to the recent exhibitors' convention in Chicago traveled in two private cars which left Philadelphia over the Lehigh Valley Railroad for Buffalo, going from there to Chicago by way of the Michigan Central. Before returning the party went to Detroit and returned by boat as far as Buffalo where they were the guests of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company.

To engage in the contracting and building business, R. E. Wallace has retired from the motion picture film exchange business in Wilkes-Barre. He dealt in commercial films for many years and he disposed of his business to Brandenburg, of Philadelphia.

It is reported from Pottsville that Al Gottesman, manager of the Strand motion picture theatre in Shenandoah, has relinquished the option he held on a property in Pottsville where he had been considering the erection of a new theatre.

Boston Flashes and New England Bulletins

SAM GRAND has been quite a stranger in Boston recently, but the other day he showed up from the Pacific Coast after a two months' absence. However, he did not stay very long, ten days in fact, and is again on his way to the place where the movies are made.

George F. Dembow, well known in film circles and who until recently was with Fox, has taken over the New England district for the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange as district manager. The only kick that he has offered is the trouble in finding suitable quarters for the impending exchange move. As for being here he is mighty glad he is, and has already decided that the New England exhibitors are as fine a bunch as he has seen. He was with Fox from its inception, opening the Philadelphia office and later supervising Pittsburgh in addition.

Speaking of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, Mr. Dembow took the place of Arthur Lucas as New England manager, Mr. Lucas having returned to the Southern division. Before he went, however, he presented a gold watch and chain to J. Norton Klein, in addition to the money prize offered by Goldwyn, as first prizes in a six weeks' telegraphic selling campaign. The second prize, offered by Charles Perry, Boston office manager, went into the roll of Salesman Resnick in the shape of $25.

The Allston theatre, for many years a landmark in that popular Boston residential suburb, is fast undergoing many changes since it passed into the hands of the Beacon Theatre Company. The whole interior is being remodeled, and the large lobby, which is considered waste space for a neighborhood house, will house two or three stores when the job is finished.

The Cameo theatre of New York is serving as a model for the new interior that is being put in the Globe theatre of New Haven. The entire plant is being renovated and remodeled, and when alterations are completed it will be run as a first run house.

Eastern Feature Films are having one of the biggest weeks on Film Row this week, getting in eight features in a bunch for immediate release. They will all be in by Tuesday. From Truart comes "Patsie," "Are the Children to be Blamed," "The Prairie Mystery," and "Riders of the Ranch"; while Sanford Productions furnish "Making Good," and Boyd

Nichols Productions come through with "Sunken Rocks," "Bargains," and "Tansy."

Since Metro's Boston exchange added Leon J. "Ruby" Rubenstein to their force as exploiter, they have opened up an ambitious department for that end so necessary to putting the picture before the public, have announced it in large and unavoidable letters on the windows of a rear and roomy room in the Metro building where "Ruby" holds court, and even have a private entrance.

Mary Amusement is the name of a young lady who is much on the public tongue in Boston nowadays. She claims in huge ads that take up two columns half a column deep in all the papers, that she is summering at Braves Field. As a matter of fact she makes her debut June 25 under the auspices of Marcus Loew, Christy Mathewson, and Emile Fuchs. That morning Mr. Loew arrives with 40 stars of stage and screen, many cameramen. They parade and get "shot" by the cameras. That evening all appear at Braves Field, for the opening of movie, dance, fireworks, and vaudeville. To give an idea, the dance floor holds 10,000.

In and Out of the Omaha Branch-Offices

E. N. McFARLAND, United Artists branch manager, upon his return from a two weeks' trip through Iowa, stated that his observations corroborated the belief that there usually is a reason when an exhibitor complains of poor business when the good old summer time comes again. In several cases which he analyzed he learned that the exhibitors made cheaper selections of pictures because they anticipated a slump of patronage. When they should be girding their loins and promoting business, they sat down, held their heads in their hands and said, "Woe is me." These, of course, are the exceptions.

Manager Harry Watts of the Strand theatre put a snappy stunt over the other day when he directed the filming of Barney Google and his nag of cartoon fame, "Spark Plug." The filming was done at 11 a. m. and at 7 p. m. the reel was shown at the Strand in connection with the regular program. This tie-up was made by The Omaha Bee in connection with the Ak-Sar-Ben races.

F. M. DeLorenzo, charge d'affaires of the Omaha branch of the Selznick Distributing Corporation, announced the appointment of these new field men: Harry Melcher, formerly manager of the Hodkinson Omaha branch; Gus Diamond, formerly office manager here for Selznick, and H. Lloyd Harris.

L. R. Puerce has transferred his interests as salesman from Universal to United Artists, retaining headquarters in Omaha.

J. Douglas, of Fremont, Neb., has bought the Strand theatre at Pierce, Neb., where he will engage in the business of exhibitor.

The Omaha Film Club has been organized to promote a closer relationship between branch managers, salesmen, exhibitors and others identified with the film industry. It will function in a social way.

F. C. Croson, Universal exploitation man, has been transferred to the Sioux City branch.

J. L. Stern, formerly identified with Fox Film Corporation, has established a state rights exchange here under the name of the Independent Film Company. He closed a deal with the Tri-Stone Corporation for exclusive distribution rights in Nebraska and Iowa.

Kenneth Tool recently opened the first motion picture theatre in Murdock, Neb.

H. B. Dent has been added to Metro sales staff, his assignment being Southern Nebraska.

News Briefs From Iowa Territory

Mr. R. S. Shrader, central district manager of the Pathe exchange, who has been visiting in town for the first part of the week, has left for Omaha.

Leo Wedertz, booker of the Pathe exchange, will leave for Burlington, Iowa, the twenty-fifth of this month, where he will spend his vacation.

R. S. Ballentyne, branch manager of the Pathe exchange, will soon be joined by his wife and two daughters who are moving to Des Moines from Norfolk, Nebraska.

Universal Ready For 1923-1924 Season

"UNIVERSAL is in a better position for the 1923-24 season than any other company in the entire industry," is the announcement of Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

"While the exhibitors of the country are being bombarded by annual announcements, and importuned to sign up for product that consists mostly of a list of titles, representing pictures yet to be made, if ever, Universal actually has a large percentage of its next year's product on hand and ready for exhibition.

"Universal is not offering a phantom product for the coming year, but a product that consists of many pictures already made, and many others nearing completion. Exhibitors don't have to gamble with our product. They can look before they book.

"We now have in our exchanges several of our big Fall Jewels, and within thirty days several more will be available for showing to the exhibitor. I challenge any other film organization to have such a large percentage of big pictures ready for screening so far ahead.

"Universal has thrown its hat in the ring for the 1923-24 season and will take second place to none in the quality of its big box-office attractions. We will make no more program pictures, but on the contrary will concentrate on Jewel productions and on other groups of high-class pictures suitable for any screen.

"The same improvements in quality that I am promising for feature productions, also will apply to short subjects and serials. I am a firm believer in the increasing value of short features, and the entire trend of Universal's one and two reel productions units is pointed towards making short subjects with the same care and proportionate expense in production as any Jewel.

"The major part of our product for the next year will consist of the Universal Sixty, which will include twenty Jewel productions and several series of excellent five or six reel pictures grouped according to the stars who take them. Among these groups will be Hoot Gibson Productions, Gladys Walton Productions, Jack Hoxie Productions and Herbert Rawlinson Productions.

"It is of especial note that our Jewel list has been extended from twelve pictures a year to twenty. This is more than three times the number we put out annually several years ago. We have increased the number of big feature productions because we have learned that the public wants more big feature productions, and it is Universal's constant policy to keep well abreast of public opinion.

"The Universal Jewel schedule has been increased by eight pictures, to be made by two new Jewel stars. Reginald Denny will make four of them, to be released in alternate months, and Mary Philbin will do likewise. Denny has come to fame through 'The Leather Pushers,' and 'The Kentucky Derby' and 'The Abysmal Brute.' He has grown to be one of the most popular male stars on the screen. Miss Philbin will blossom forth as a star of the first water when 'Merry Go Round' is shown to the public. Although almost a newcomer to the screen, her work in this Super Jewel has been likened to the emotional ability of the Gish sisters.

"Three of the first half year's supply of Jewels already are in the Universal exchanges or on the way to them from the laboratory. They are the big Super Jewel 'Merry Go Round,' an elaborate spectacle drama directed by Rupert Julian with an exceptional cast headed by Miss Philbin and Norman Kerry, 'A Chapter in Her Life,' a Lois Weber Production based on Clara Louise Burnham's story 'Jewel,' and finally, 'Drifting,' Priscilla Dean's latest screen sensation, adapted from John Colton's great stage success, and directed by Tod Browning. It is the best picture Miss Dean ever did.

"By the fifteenth of July, so my producing staff reports, several other Jewel productions will be in the East and ready for screening before any exhibitor. The first of these will be 'A Lady of Quality,' starring Virginia Valli. This is Miss Valli's finest screen work and is said to be even better than her work in 'The Storm.' 'A Lady of Quality' is from Frances Hodgson Burnett's celebrated novel and play, and it has been made into a Hobart Henley Production by that 100 per cent director of 'The Flirt' and other similar successes. Also, the new Baby Peggy Jewel picture, 'Whose Baby Are You?' now nearing completion at Universal City under the direction of King Baggot, soon will be in the exchanges.

"Of the Hoot Gibson Productions, the Gladys Walton Productions, the Jack Hoxie Productions and the Herbert Rawlinson Productions, each of these stars has at least two or three of the eight pictures in each group completed or due for completion before the beginning of the 1923-24 season.

"Thus, the exhibitor who is now planning his next season's showings, does not have to work in the dark with respect to Universal pictures. Before the new season starts he will be able to see almost half of the entire year's list of jewels, or, if he plans his showing for six months at a time, he will be able to see almost the entire Jewel product for the first half year.

"I believe this is constructive co-operation with the exhibitor of the best kind. Universal does not believe in selling 'promissory notes' to its exhibitor patrons. It believes in showing them the goods, or as much of the goods as it is humanly possible to show. Then the exhibitor knows what he is getting. He doesn't have to lie awake at night wondering if the pictures he has signed up for are going to be successes or flivvers.

"Universal has gone to great extremes to make its product the peer of any screen offerings for the coming year. Unlimited money has been spent in the acquisition of big stories and plays by popular authors. The directorial staff has been enlarged by the addition of some of the best directors in the industry. Players and stars of the highest ability have been signed. Production facilities have been increased. Last, but not least, a much higher standard has been set for all Universal Pictures.

"I also want to call your attention to the greatest thing Universal has ever done—'The Hunchback of Notre Dame.' It is rapidly approaching the screen and will be seen early in the fall. It will immediately take its place at the top of all screen productions—present, past and, I venture to say, for a considerable time in the future. It is an artistic and gripping screen epic of a vivid story from the pen of a master writer—Victor Hugo. Just as the book has become the cherished possession of the ages, just so will the picture go down into history."

"Merry Go Round" Premiere Aboard Leviathan

"MERRY GO ROUND," the Super Jewel spectacle drama soon to be released by Universal, will have its official world's premiere aboard the U. S. S. Leviathan, when that monster ship starts, July 4, on its first trip to Europe in the American Shipping Board service. The trans-Atlantic showing of "Merry Go Round" also will inaugurate the installation of Uncle Sam as one of the biggest exhibitors in the world.

Beginning with the first trip of the Leviathan, a regular moving picture show will be a part of the daily service aboard each passenger vessel under the jurisdiction of the U. S. Shipping Board.

Most of the credit for this organization goes to Lowell E. Stark, manager of the newly created Motion Picture Department of the Shipping Board.

Carl Laemmle, president, and R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, are guests of Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board on the trial trip.

Universal Feminine Stars: Gladys Walton, Priscilla Dean, Baby Peggy, Mary Philbin and Virginia Valli.

Elaborate Schedule of Century Comedies

PLANS are in full swing to make the fall quota of Century Comedies the best in the history of that company's picture making. Julius and Abe Stern, officials of the Century company, state as the 1923-24 season is nearing, that comedy talent of the first order, comedy directors of prestige, and published and original stories of merit will be incorporated into the making of every new picture to be released as a Century Comedy.

The outline of the elaborate schedule calls for fifty-two two-reelers, to be distributed by Universal. This number will be divided among five or six featured and advertising drawing cards, something along this order:

- 6 to 8 Baby Peggy classics, of two reels each.
- 12 with Buddy Messinger, the boy star.
- 12 with Jack Cooper and the Century Follies Girls.
- 12 with Pal, a new wonder dog.
- 10 with Jack Earle (the giant) and Bill Engle as a team.

Before Julius Stern left for Europe, Earle and Engle signed a contract whereby this team will appear in fast, clever films. Al Herman and other well known directors will produce this series. Two men who have written many comic song lyrics will be engaged as gagmen for the Earle-Engle unit.

Pictures along the lines of "Down to Earth" and "Hold On" will be made by this team.

"Golfmania," "Two of a Mind," "Don't Kick" and several others will make up the beginning of this series.

Baby Peggy has six new comedies ready for release through Universal. They are "Nobody's Darling," "Hansel and Gretel," "Miles of Smiles," "Peg o' the Mounted," "Such is Life" and "Little Miss Hollywood." "Hansel and Gretel," based on the famous fairy tale, is the only one of this group that is not considered a comedy as Stern Brothers followed the story minutely, giving it only a touch of humor here and there. "Such is Life" is adapted from "The Little Match Girl," another fairy tale, although this one has been enriched with a great deal of humor. Several others will follow these. Among those that will follow, most likely will be "Little Red Riding Hood."

Buddy Messinger is the thirteen year old boy star whose work in Universal-Jewels brought him stardom with Century. A special writer for the Messinger unit has been called in and two new stories are in readiness for production. Of the new series "So Long Buddy," "Buddy At The Bat" and "Present Arms" will head the list. Several published stories have been negotiated for, and will be transferred to the screen as part of the series of twelve comedies. Two published stories include the last of the stories bought from Adolph DeJong, the French-Canadian author. These are "Only A Boy" and "Swifter Than Glue." The Messinger series will all be along situation comedy lines.

Al Herman and Archie Mayo, it is expected, will handle all of the Messinger comedies.

Jack Cooper has been re-signed, and will head the cast of twelve comedies in which the Century Follies girls will appear. All of these comedies will be produced along the order of legitimate girlie shows. Each of the Century girls has had musical comedy experience. Cooper, who won fame in the English music halls about the time Chaplin left for America, has appeared in several Centuries this year, among them being "High Kickers" and "Round Figures," the first two of the Follies series. "Sea Swells," "Pools First," "Enter, Girlies" and "So This is Neptune" are among the first to be produced when Julius Stern returns to the studio.

Pal, a new canine comedian, is scheduled to appear in twelve, the first two having been made. "Lots of Nerve" and "His Master Breath" are his first Centuries. One other is in readiness, and will go into production in a few days. Noel Smith has directed Pal's pictures to date.

Al Herman, Archie Mayo, Herman Raymaker, Noel Smith and Harry Edwards are all slated to produce for this new schedule of comedies. Abe and Julius Stern will supervise all the pictures to be made by them.

Eight Directors Making Jewel Productions

IN the line-up of directors for the 1923-24 supply of Universal-Jewel pictures are Hobart Henley, Rupert Julian, Tod Browning, Clarence L. Brown, Lois Weber, King Baggot and Harry Pollard.

Henley, who makes Hobart Henley Productions for Universal-Jewel release, will contribute at least two super pictures to the 1923-1924 screen field. The first "A Lady of Quality," based on Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel, with Virginia Valli in the title role, is nearing completion. It is expected in New York in two or three weeks, and is said to be a worthy successor to "The Flirt."

Henley's second Jewel will be a screen adaptation of "The Turmoil," Booth Tarkington's novel.

Rupert Julian made "Merry Go Round," the super spectacle drama soon to be ready for pre-release showings, and which will have its premiere as the feature film on the first trip of the U. S. S. Leviathan, July 4th. The picture was made with a cast of more than twenty leading screen lights, besides the hundreds of extras. The featured players, headed by Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry, are George Hackathorne, George Seigmann, Dale Fuller, Maude George Edith Yorke, Spottiswoode Aitken, Dorothy Wallace, Sidney Bracey, Anton Vaverka, Lillian Sylvester and Albert Conti.

Tod Browning, remembered for his Universal-Jewel pictures starring Priscilla Dean, will contribute two pictures to the coming year's offerings. The first will be "Drifting," a Priscilla Dean Jewel adapted from John Colton's stage success. Wallace Beery, Matt Moore and Anna May Wong are featured. Browning also will have "White Tiger," a melodrama starring Miss Dean, made from a story written by himself. Wallace Beery, Matt Moore and Ray Griffith are featured in it.

Clarence L. Brown, a newcomer to the Universal Jewel directorial staff, now is at work on "The Acquittal," the Universal adaptation of Rita Weiman's stage success. It is being made with a feature cast, headed by Norman Kerry and Claire Windsor (by courtesy of Goldwyn).

Lois Weber, who several years ago made a number of photodramas for Universal, has returned to make "A Chapter in Her Life," the screen adaptation of Clara Louise Burnham's novel, "Jewel." This picture, now completed, and which is scheduled for early fall release, was made with a cast which includes Claude Gillingwater, Jacqueline Gadsden, Jane Mercer, Frances Raymond, Eva Thatcher, Ralph Yearslev, Beth Rayon and Robert Frazier.

King Baggot is making a Jewel production with Baby Peggy, the popular child star, in the leading role. It is her first feature production. Supporting Baby Peggy under Baggot's direction are Betty Francisco, Dorothy Hoggan, Pat Hardigan, Carl Stockdale, William Conklin and Frederick Esmelton.

Harry Pollard, the director of "Up the Ladder," Universal's forthcoming Jewel adaptation of the Owen Davis stage play, is the man who made "The Leather Pushers."

Mary Philbin Will Star in Four Jewels

MARY Philbin will be starred by Universal in four Jewel pictures during the coming year.

Miss Philbin's work in "Merry Go Round" was so remarkable, it is said, that she immediately was assigned by Mr. Laemmle to make Jewel pictures exclusively. Not only will she make them,—she will be starred in them.

Male Stars of the Universal "Sixty": Reginald Denny, Herbert Rawlinson, Hoot Gibson and Jack Hoxie.

Big Plans for International News Reel: : :

"ONE of the most striking conclusions that has come to the executives of the International News Reel Corporation, makers of the International News Reel, distributed by Universal, is the fact that the reel has become a nationally known product, just as a well advertised commercial article," was the recent comment of E. B. Hatrick, general manager of the corporation.

"We have found that people go into a motion picture theatre and ask for the International News just as they go into a drug store and ask for a nationally known toilet article or other household necessity, just as they go into a grocery store and ask for a popular food product.

"In analyzing this remarkable situation, we have traced it to two causes—the growing popularity of the International News reel because of its general excellence, and its country-wide exploitation in the Hearst newspapers.

"It is the most exploited one-reel subject in the motion picture industry. Every Hearst newspaper has a special section devoted to pictures and news of the International News Reel. These papers are read by more than one-fourth the entire population of the United States, or from 35,000,000 to 40,000,000 people daily. These papers cover the country and include such representative dailies as the New York American and New York Journal, the Chicago Herald-Examiner and the Chicago American, the Atlanta Georgian, the Boston Advertiser, the Boston American, the Rochester Journal, the Syracuse Telegram, the Detroit Times, the Los Angeles Examiner and the Los Angeles Herald, the Wisconsin News, the San Francisco Call and the San Francisco Examiner, the Oakland Post-Intelligencer, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the Washington Herald and the Washington Times and the Baltimore News and the Baltimore American.

"The fact that advertising a news reel is cumulative and is good for all successive news reels, as compared to single picture advertising, has gone far to make International News the standard product it now is. The other factor, mouth-to-mouth advertising, has been built up by the long list of news beats and special and exclusive subjects which International News, by reason of its vast and world-wide organization, has been able to get.

"The extent of the news reel field, and the great demand for International News is best indicated by a few figures concerning the output in the last twelve months. For the 104,000 feet of negative film finally used in the 104 issues, more than one and a half millions of feet of negative film were exposed. This means selection and concentration of real news pictures to a great degree. In other words, the finish news reels have contained only the very choicest of the many subjects sent in by our many cameramen."

To Start New Hoot Gibson Drama

Casting of the players for Hoot Gibson's next starring vehicle for Universal has been completed by Fred Datig, casting director, and Edward Sedgwick, director of the Gibson unit, and production is due to start on the play soon.

The Gibson play will be a screen adaptation of the western novel, "The Ramblin' Kid," by Earl Wayland Bowman. E. Richard Schayer wrote the screen transcription.

"The Ramblin' Kid" is the third of a new series of Universal-Gibson Productions and will afford the versatile star one of the biggest roles of his career.

Gibson's growing popularity and the strength of his last two pictures led to his new contract with Universal, to appear in Hoot Gibson Productions. The first of these was "Blinky," a story of cavalry life along the Mexican border. Production was recently completed on "Out of Luck," a comedy drama, built around the adventures of a cowboy who joined the navy.

Laura La Plante, who played the feminine lead in "Out of Luck," has been chosen to support Hoot in the coming production.

Others in the cast are William Welsh, Harold Goodwin, W. J. McCulley, Charles K. French, Carol Holloway, C. Raymond Nye, George King, John Judd and Gööber Glenn.

Harold Goodwin will be remembered as the boy who took the leading juvenile role in "The Flirt." He took a big step upward in his career by his sympathetic portrayal of that role. William Welsh is a veteran character actor and has been in strong roles in many Universal productions.

The new Hoot Gibson Productions are to take a new place in the film firmament, it is promised. He won his promotion to special production by reason of the great success of his recent pictures and the rapidly growing popularity of Hoot as one of the leading western actors of the screen.

Edward Sedgwick, whose direction of these successes won for him the leadership of the Gibson production unit, was the man who brought to light Hoot's latent talent for high-class comedy. This comedy ability of the western star was a surprise. Known as a daring rider, a fearless producer of stunts, and a clever actor, Gibson happened on a role where he could work in a little comedy. Filmdom was immediately surprised to find he had a line of comedy of his own.

This comedy, mingled with daring stunts, has made "Blinky" and "Out of Luck" famous with those who have seen pre-reviews of these two Hoot Gibson productions. The other six productions to be made by Gibson for the coming Universal Sixty will be similarly treated from a comedy angle.

Baby Peggy Reaches Feature Stardom

BABY Peggy, four year old starlet of Century Comedy fame, has become a full-fledged feature star with the finishing of "Whose Baby Are You?" This picture, which will go to exhibitors as a Universal-Jewel, will go down in history as Baby Peggy's first full length production. It was sponsored by Julius and Abe Stern, the producers of her two reel comedies, and Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

King Baggot, co-author and director of this production, has gone on record as having said Baby Peggy is one of the most capable "trouper" he has directed to date.

Among the more famous in the supporting talent given Baby Peggy are Gladys Brockwell, Sheldon Lewis, Max Davidson, Frank Currier, Betty Francisco and Carl Stockdale, as well as J. Gorman Rex.

With "Whose Baby Are You?" now in its editing stages, a recently purchased story, "Edith's Burglar," is now being whipped into script form. It is believed a very fine light comedy director will be assigned to this story so that director King Baggot and Ray Schrock, who collaborated on the first Peggy story, can follow their picture through to its complete finishing. Other stories are being read. Several features will be made.

When "Whose Baby Are You?" is released as a Universal-Jewel it will make the first super-feature in the annals of the motion picture industry in which a mere baby is starred.

Universal Directors: Tod Browning, Hobart Henley, King Baggot, Harry Pollard, Wallace Worsley, Lois Weber and Rupert Julian.

Extensive Short Subject Program Mapped Out

CARRYING out Carl Laemmle's recently announced policy for Universal Short Subjects, that they must be of sufficiently high quality to make them suitable for showing in any first run house, the Short Subjects department at Universal City has mapped out its program for the year 1923-24.

Mr. Laemmle has completely reorganized this department of his organization, it is announced. He has engaged new stars, acquired bigger stories, signed up better directors and given a freer rein to production.

Universal's new short subject releases will be divided into four classes. They will be two-reel Westerns; special two-reel series, such as the Leather Pushers; two-reel comedies and one-reel comedies. In addition to these there will be the usual two issues of the International News Reel and a special program of Universal Super Chapter Plays.

Heading the short subject releases will be a fourth series of the "Leather Pushers," starring Reginald Denny. Harry Pollard who directed the other three series will direct. Universal reports that the Leather Pushers have played in every section of the country and have had first runs on Broadway for each series.—The first at the Central, the second at the Rialto and the third, recently, at the Rivoli.

A special series of high class two-reel comedies from the newspaper comic strip by Sidney Smith called "The Gumps," is in production with Koe Murphy as "Andy" and Fay Tincher as "Min."

For the special series of two-reel westerns, the Universal company reports that they have engaged Jack Dougherty, Jay Morley, Pete Morrison and Edmund Cobb. These it is understood will be directed by William Craft, Frank Grandon and Jay Marchant. Esther Ralston, Elinor Field and Laura LaPlange will play the feminine leads.

Neely Edwards and Bert Roach will star in their own one-reel comedies. Edwards will continue as "the gentleman of the road." Roach will be seen in a new special character for his comedies. He became very popular while playing with Edwards in one-reel comedies depicting the adventures of "Nervy Ned" and his valet. In addition to these two comedians the Universal office announces that they have signed Chuck Reisner for a special series of one-reel comedies to be known as "The Reporter Series." He will be sent out on various assignments which will take him to different parts of the country. Risner played in most of the Chaplin comedies as well as being their co-director and co-author. He also played in the Bull Montana comedies.

Universal will continue to release two issues of International News reels each week and a series of Century Comedies.

Universal Serial Stars: Jack Mower, Edith Johnson, Eileen Sedgwick, Fred Thomson, Ann Little and William Duncan.

Seven Serials to Be Released by Universal

CONFIDENT in the future of the super chapter play, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, has authorized the inauguration of a serial program that calls for the production of seven big super serials of fifteen chapters each for release during the 1923-24 season.

The serial department at Universal City has undergone the greatest change in its history. In addition to acquiring a group of new stars and writers the company has greatly enlarged its studio force and equipment and will produce nothing but the very highest class chapter play, it is announced.

The schedule calls for another historical serial of the same standard as "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," "The Oregon Trail" and "In the Days of Daniel Boone." There will also be two stunt serials, three westerns and one South Sea Island chapter play.

In selecting the stars for these chapter plays, Mr. Laemmle has secured William Duncan, Edith Johnson, Ann Little, Fred Thomson, Al Wilson, Jack Mower and Eileen Sedgwick.

In addition to these stars, Fred McConnel, serial manager for the company, has been given a free rein in selecting the strongest possible cast for each of these chapter plays. Additional scenario experts have been engaged and the directorial and technical staffs greatly augmented.

The first of the new super serials, scheduled for release on August 27th, will be "The Steel Trail," starring William Duncan and Edith Johnson. Duncan will also direct. It is the story of a successful construction engineer who goes to the assistance of a railroad builder and defeats the efforts of an unscrupulous gang to delay operations.

The second is "Beasts of Paradise," starring Fred Thomson and Ann Little. It is an adventure story of the South Seas, said to be particularly fitted to Thomson's prowess as an athlete. The story was written by Ewart Adamson who spent five years in the locale and is said to know his subject better than any writer since Robert Louis Stevenson. It is scheduled for release October first.

Others scheduled are "The Ghost City" with Jack Mower and Eileen Sedgwick, "The Fast Express," "The Last Submarine," "By Right of Conquest," an historical serial from the story by G. A. Henty, and "The Arm of the Law."

Production-Distribution Activities

U. S. Sailors Approve "Counterfeit Love"

That the "sport of Kings" is also the "sport of Jacks" is the latest discovery of those whose mission it is to provide entertainment for the boys of Uncle Sam's navy. Down in Panama, where several thousand Yankee tars are stationed as the first line of defense in the protection of the inter-oceanic waterway, a motion picture popularity contest was held recently. Many photoplays had been submitted to the men, but, by an overwhelming majority, "Counterfeit Love," the Playgoers Special, an early print of which had been sent to the Isthmus, was voted the best, according to Playgoers.

The feature in this entertainment which made the greatest appeal to the jackies was the thrilling horse race which is its climax. Not only did the sailors vote "Counterfeit Love" the year's best picture, but they took occasion to proclaim the turf game only second to baseball as America's greatest sport.

Rebuild Paris Streets For "Scaramouche"

Three hundred carpenters, many of them working double shifts, have been busy two weeks on the construction of a mile of Paris streets at the Metro studios to be used in filming "Scaramouche," Rafael Sabatini's famous historical novel, which is serving as Rex Ingram's newest production. It will be at least three more weeks before the street is completed. Besides the carpenters there are between 40 and 50 plasterers and about 75 painters and scenic artists.

"Scaramouche" is a Rex Ingram production for Metro Pictures Corporation by arrangement with Charles L. Wagner. It was adapted for the screen by Willis Goldbeck and photographed by John F. Seitz.

Massive Sets for Jackie's Next First Production for Metro Is Being Conducted on Lavish Scale

SOME marvelous exterior sets are being erected for Jackie Coogan's first picture for Metro, "Long Live the King," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. First of all is the great palace, which is said to be an exact duplicate of the castle of Neuschwanstein in Bulgaria. The set will occupy 240,000 square feet of ground, built up to a height of 70 feet, with battlements 20 feet higher, according to Metro.

The castle fronts on the central square of the city of Lavonia, which will show the intersection of two streets lined with buildings and shops of various kinds. There is also a huge viaduct, and fountains that splash before the opera house and the cathedral, which also front on the square. The opera house is modelled after its prototype in Dresden, and the cathedral after the famous one in Herzegovina.

This cathedral is located on a ramp or up-hill street, which leads to a height of 30 feet above level. The cathedral rises to a height of 60 feet above this hill, and its spires are 60 feet higher. Another important building which fronts on the square is the inn, where several of the principal characters dwell, and in whose cellars the conspirators hold their secret meetings.

Some idea of the vastness of these sets can be gained from the fact that over 350 men in all are employed just on this production; electricians, carpenters, plasterers, tanners, plumbers, modellers, prop-makers, set dressers, painters, landscape gardeners and general laborers. On the interior sets the average number of men employed from day to day includes 50 carpenters, 25 painters, 25 electricians, and 10 helpers and property men.

"Long Live the King" is being directed by Victor Schertzinger under the personal supervision of Jack Coogan, Senior. G. Gardner Sullivan made the screen adaptation, and Eve Unsell prepared the scenario. J. J. Hughes is art director and Frank Good and Robert Martin are at the camera.

"Main Street" Meets Approval Reviewers Comment Favorably Following New York Strand Showing

NEW YORK newspaper reviewers commented favorably on Warner Brothers' picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Main Street," following the opening engagement June 10 of the two weeks run at the Strand Theatre. The picture is to be held over for Fall release.

Excerpts from the criticisms follow:

Telegram: "One of the most interesting cinema's of the season. It is not only true to life but it has a rich vein of humor and through the story runs a pretty romance in which Florence Vidor and Monte Blue share the honors. If you want a good laugh go up to the strand."

Sun: "'Main Street' is an admirable picture. The types are perfect. It is beautifully acted, and it follows the book to a greater extent than Sinclair Lewis had any reason to hope for."

Morning Telegraph: "There are many factors in the screen version of 'Main Street,' to recommend it as a fine picture. On the whole it is a well presented."

Evening World: "Frankly, we like 'Main Street' as a photoplay and really think we did more so because of Harry Beaumont's direction and the acting of Florence Vidor, Monte Blue, Harry Myers, Noah Beery and Alan Hale than because it was written by Sinclair Lewis."

Evening Journal: "As a picture, 'Main Street,' is one of the most significant character studies that the screen has had in months."

Tribune: "Why, at the end you realize that the picture has been made for residents of Gopher Prairie all over the world, and they are going to love it and say, 'Isn't it true to life, the way those city girls have such crazy ideas!' The cast is splendid."

American: "Palatable and entertaining. It is as if the film literally enveloped the story much as a capsule envelopes quinine, eliminating the objectionable irritation."

World: "The stage version never could have approached the picturization in its completeness."

"Penrod and Sam" Has Unique First Run

According to First National, "Penrod and Sam" has been given the only first run in the history of the industry for which protection was not demanded. The exhibitor in this case was the United States Shipping Board and the theatre was the grand saloon of the reconditioned S. S. Leviathan, which left on June 19th from Boston for a trial trip to Cuba.

"Penrod and Sam" was selected by the officials as part of the entertainment program for the several hundred guests aboard the ship. Incidentally this marks the first time that a production has received its world premiere on shipboard.

"Alice Adams" Winning Much Praise

Florence Vidor's picturization of Booth Tarkington's prize-winning novel, "Alice Adams," is winning encomiums from authors and others as one photoplay whose outstanding merit is its fidelity to the original, according to Associated Exhibitors. Critics agree that in this feature the word picture which Mr. Tarkington painted is accurately reproduced on the screen.

The Herald, of Lexington, Ky., says:

"The service the screen does to art and literature has never been more strikingly demonstrated than in the production of 'Alice Adams,' which was seen at the Alamo Sunday, and which delighted and impressed the crowds that beheld it."

The Kansas City Star commented, "'Alice Adams,' as the heroine of Booth Tarkington's novel by that name, was a delightful sort of person. Florence Vidor makes her just as delightful on the screen."

The Kansas City Post said: "'Alice Adams' is the best photoplay on display this week."

Burr Completes Sale on "You Are Guilty"

Skirboll Brothers, of Gold Seal Productions of Cleveland, closed a contract last week with C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., for the territorial rights on "You Are Guilty" for the states of Ohio and Kentucky. "You Are Guilty" is the Edgar Lewis production produced for Mr. Burr in which James Kirkwood, Doris Kenyon, Edmund Breeze, Robert Edeson, Mary Carr and little Russell Griffin play the leading roles.

Twenty Units in Sets for Jackie Coogan

THE Jackie Coogan forces have worked out a new system of building sets for the little film star's Metro production of "Long Live the King," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. Following a conference among Jack Coogan, senior, Director Victor Schertzinger and Art Director John J. Hughes, it was decided to have the sets erected in sections off the lot; the numbered pieces to be brought to the studio stages and put together after the fashion of skyscrapers. This permits continuous action by the players, in addition to effecting economy in the cost of production.

The interior sets for "Long Live the King" are grouped in twenty distinct units, representing an expenditure of over $400,000 for material and labor, it is claimed.

"Long Live the King" was adapted for the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan, with scenario by Eve Unsell. Frank Good and Robert Martin are at the camera. The entire production is under the personal supervision of Jack Coogan, Senior.

Missionary Commends "Nanook of North"

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, whose "Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund" shares the profits of the successfully exploited run of "Nanook of the North" at the Pershing theatre, prints a high tribute to the picture's value from Dr. Frank H. Spence well known missionary authority on the life of the Eskimos.

The Post-Dispatch of June 6 tells of the lecture tour of Dr. and Mrs. Spence on their nine years' experience among the Alaskan Eskimos, conducted under the auspices of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, which supports a hospital at Port Barrow—the only source of medical aid within a radius of 600 miles. It prints the following statement from Dr. Spence, following his attendance at a "Nanook" performance:

"We enjoyed 'Nanook' very much—we never saw as good photography of the ice regions and particularly the dogs, as contained in this picture."

"Trifling with Honor" Praised by Ruth

As the principal guest of the New York Newspaper Club, last Friday night, George Herman (Babe) Ruth witnessed a showing of "Trifling with Honor," the Universal Jewel production of William Slavens McNutt's baseball story, directed by Harry Pollard, director of "The Leather Pushers."

The home run king expressed himself as having enjoyed the film immensely and said he thought it was a great picture.

Several hundred members of the club were in attendance and found great enjoyment in the film.

Los Angeles Stages F.B.O. Week

Four Productions Open On Consecutive Days, With the Fifth Possible

F. B. O. WEEK in Los Angeles is on. With the showing of the fourth installment of the "Fighting Blood" series, the picturization of H. C. Witwer's popular Collier's Weekly stories, at the Metropolitan, F. B. O. productions will bob up on local screens for four consecutive days, with a remote possibility of a fifth production being added to the list.

Sunday, "Westbound Limited," Emory Johnson's latest screen opus, glorifying the humble heroes of life, opened at the California.

Monday, Johnnie Walker's latest starring vehicle, "The Fourth Musketeer," was flashed on the screen at Pantages for a week's run.

Tuesday, "Divorce," Chester Bennett's latest production, starring Jane Novak, entered upon an extended engagement at the Rialto.

Announcement of the opening date of an extended run of Mrs. Wallace Reid's "Human Wreckage," scheduled to play at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, is expected momentarily.

Judge and Mrs. J. W. Summerfield and many notables of the screen world attended the opening of "Divorce" Tuesday night as guests of Miss Novak and Mr. Bennett.

Plans are under way to make the opening of "Human Wreckage" one of the most distinguished premieres attending a screen production. The picture is to be presented under the auspices of the local Anti-Narcotic League, and Mayor Cryer, Chief of Police Oaks, Judge Benjamin Bledsoe, Bishop John J. Cantwell, Brigadier Boyd of the Salvation Army and many other leaders in civic life are expected to be the guests of the League. It is possible that Mrs. Reid will be present to witness the presentation of her great work in behalf of the movement to arouse the public to the growing danger of narcotic addiction.

"Human Wreckage" Wins S. F.

Mrs. Wallace Reid's Production Highly Praised at World Premiere on Coast

MRS. WALLACE REID'S "Human Wreckage" had its world's premiere at the Ackerman-Harris Century theatre in San Francisco June 9 and was warmly commended by the newspaper critics. Gleaned from these criticisms were the following:

Currant D. Swint, photoplay critic of the Call and Post, stated "Human Wreckage" is in a class by itself. It registers overwhelmingly."

George C. Warren, Chronicle—"Good entertainment, a power in the war against narcotics."

Fulton Gillaspay of the Bulletin—"Convincing and holds the attention from start to finish."

Thomas Nunan of the Examiner—"The most important motion picture ever made."

Preceded by a gigantic publicity and exploitation campaign, the basis of which was the Narcotics Educational Week proclaimed by acting Mayor Ralph MacLeran, "Human Wreckage" got away to a smashing opening.

Of greatest satisfaction to Mrs. Reid was the unanimous agreement among the local critics as to the artistic content of her production. The gist of their criticism pointed out that "Human Wreckage" is not just a "dope" picture; that it is not a sordid and revolting depiction of the evils of drugs; but a brilliantly dramatic photoplay sumptuously produced, skilfully created by John Griffith Wray, the director, and splendidly rounded as to continuity by C. Gardner Sullivan.

Mrs. Reid personally opened the campaign when she arrived in San Francisco from her home in Hollywood on Friday, June 8. She was greeted by a delegation of more than fifty prominent club women of San Francisco, who escorted her to the office of acting Mayor Ralph MacLeran. The same day she adressed 3,000 members of the San Francisco Center at the St. Francis Hotel, delivering a ringing speech against the menace of narcotics.

Her first personal appearance took place on Saturday night, when crowds are said to have stormed the doors of the Century and blocked the streets outside to get a glimpse of the courageous little woman, who is taking up the cudgels in her fight against dope.

"Little Church" Praised by Chicago Critics

That the Warner Brothers' "Little Church Around the Corner," adapted from the play by Charles E. Blaney, with story and scenario by Olga Printzlau, is meeting with approval throughout the country was again demonstrated during its recent engagement at the Chicago theatre, Chicago.

The Herald-Examiner said: "It is a strong story, well worked out and a good production in every way. The scenes of the mine disaster are well worked out and exceedingly thrilling."

Chicago Journal said: "The Little Church Around the Corner" is embellished with all the sure-fire situations that have made many a successful film play."

American said: "Tugs at the heart strings are many, coming thickest when are presented the scenes taken in and at the mouth of the mine disaster in which a party of men were entombed."

Tribune said: "It is a melodramatic picture, not without interest, and exceptionally well directed in those scenes where the women of the coal mines are waiting for their men to be brought out of the shaft."

Deliver by Airplane During Floods

AEROPLANES were pressed into service for the delivery of prints of First National Pictures during the floods which covered the greater part of Oklahoma during the past week. When train service out of Oklahoma City was interrupted because the bridge had been washed away, Tom H. Boland, First National franchise holder in that territory, organized the aeroplane service for the delivery of prints.

The situation was made more difficult by the absence of salesmen in New Orleans, where the Southern District sales meeting was being held. However, by careful management and arduous work the office force of the First National exchange handled the situation so competently that there was not one instance of delay in the delivering of prints.

Leah Baird Is Making Many Appearances

Leah Baird is now on one of the most extensive personal appearance tours ever made by a screen artist. During the present week "Is Divorce a Failure?" and its star have been the attraction at the Newark theatre, Newark, N. J., and have drawn large and highly appreciative crowds daily, according to Associated Exhibitors. Last week Miss Baird was in Boston.

"Is Divorce a Failure?" the feature picture at Loew's Orpheum theatre this week, is made deeply interesting because its star, Miss Leah Baird, appears in connection with the showing and reveals the secrets of the 'shooting' of this picture," said the Boston Post. "Miss Baird off the screen is even more attractive and charming than on."

"Leah Baird, the movie star, was seen at Loew's Orpheum yesterday in actuality as well as in the picture on the screen," said the Boston Globe. "She appeared both afternoon and evening before large audiences and will do so again today and tomorrow."

The Boston Herald said: "The appearance of Leah Baird, moving picture star, upon the stage in person at Loew's theatre, preceding the presentation of her picture, 'Is Divorce a Failure?' gave satisfaction to large audiences yesterday. Miss Baird gave an interesting talk."

U. S. Admiral Aids Johnson "Mailman" Feature

Emory Johnson and his F. B. O. motion picture unit have returned from San Francisco, after a week's coastwise tour aboard the New Mexico as the guests of Admiral E. W. Eberle, commanding the Pacific squadron.

Admiral Eberle is said to have posed on the bridge of the flagship for several scenes which are to appear in the new Johnson production, which will be entitled "The Mailman."

Fisher to Develop New Screen Talent

THE plea for new faces in photoplays which has become widely evident in the press throughout the country has made itself felt among motion picture producers.

Victor B. Fisher, independent producer of "Youth Triumphant" and other productions, will introduce new faces in his future productions.

While the cast of Fisher pictures to come will include players of wide popularity, the producer will include at least one new player in an important part with the hope that other producers will do likewise.

"While it would be suicide to attempt to produce pictures with an entire cast of unknown players yet, by using one or two new faces in every cast of prominent artists, the happy medium would be reached," said Mr. Fisher.

Praise for Burlingame Adventures

Truart Film Corporation, which is handling the distribution of Burlingame's Around the World Adventures, continues to receive unsolicited assurances that these short reels, wherever shown, are meeting with deserved popularity, according to the Truart offices.

Floyd St. John, manager of the Co-operative Film exchange, San Francisco, which is handling this series for the entire West Coast, writes:

"I am highly delighted with my purchases and exhibitors here seem to be happy with Burlingame releases. It is a pleasure to have such service as this in a State Right exchange. Each release is better than the one preceding and the last one, 'Suwance River' is, in my opinion, the best of all.

The Burlingame series, which includes his adventures among the Wild Men of Borneo, are now available also through the Commonwealth exchange of New York, Nu-Art, Buffalo, Renown exchange in Chicago and Consolidated Film exchange, Philadelphia.

Police Chiefs Endorse "Human Wreckage"

The International Police Chiefs' Association, in convention at Buffalo, voted on the last day of their meeting to assist Mrs. Wallace Reid in every possible way in her campaign against narcotics. A resolution to that effect, presented by Chief of Police Daniel O'Brien of San Francisco, was carried by an overwhelming vote.

"Daddy" and "Circus Days" Sold in Africa

The rights to "Daddy" and "Circus Days" have been sold for all of Africa south of the equator, according to an announcement from Associated First National Pictures, to Jack Sneider, of Johannesburg, South Africa.

"Michael O'Halloran" Approved

St. Louis Motion Picture Council Gives Endorsement to Production

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. Ira L. Bretzfelder, president of the St. Louis Motion Picture Council, following a preview showing of Gene Stratton Porter's "Michael O'Halloran," soon to be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, in which the St. Louis Motion Picture Council spoke in glowing terms regarding the production.

The letter reads as follows:

"I want to tell you that the picture 'Michael O'Halloran,' distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has the unqualified endorsement of the St. Louis Motion Picture Council.

"It is an interesting picture of great beauty and is thoroughly appropriate for people of all ages and for any type of entertainment. We hope there will be more like it."

This organization acts as a reporting body for various civic bodies in St. Louis and pre-views many of the best productions appearing in this territory.

An unusual tie-up is made by the St. Louis Motion Picture Council on all productions that they endorse. Not only is a list of productions passed by them sent to every club and organization in the community but a letter is also sent giving date, theatre, and other information of value to the average motion picture fan.

C. D. Hill, branch manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in the St. Louis territory, reports that many inquiries have been received from exhibitors relative to "Michael O'Halloran."

"Enemies of Women" Praised

London Reviewers Unanimous in Approval of Cosmopolitan Feature

"Enemies of Women" met with much favorable criticism following its showing in London. Both the Cosmopolitan production and Alma Rubens and Lionel Barrymore were praised by the critics in the following terms:

The Daily Telegraph: "In the works of Ibanez it seems that at last has been discovered something close to the ideal for which the screen has long been groping. Rarely have the honors and majesty of war been more impressively and realistically depicted."

The Daily Graphic: "The scenes of Monte Carlo, Paris and Russia are exceptionally beautiful. Barrymore is a rake without an equal. Alma Rubens greatly enhances her reputation as an actress of imagination and emotional strength."

The Daily News: "It is a film full of interest and excitement."

The Daily Herald: "It is a picture with one big quality—it never bores. It is a first class entertainment."

The Daily Express: "Ibanez's crowded story of cynical French Duchess and a rascally Russian Prince regenerated by the wars is enriched by superb photography. The battle scenes introduce a complete panorama of warfare on land, on the sea and in the air."

The Westminster Gazette: "'Enemies of Women' deserves the distinction of being called a super-film."

The Daily Chronicle: "'Enemies of Women' vividly portrays a story that grips and is strong in thrills and sustained fascination."

The Evening News: "If lavishness of production can win popularity, 'Enemies of Women' is assured of public favor."

The People: "The war episodes in 'Enemies of Women' are superior to those of 'The Four Horsemen.' It contains many beautiful scenes."

News of the World: "'Enemies of Women' is an extremely fine bit of work, unfolding a gripping story. It is splendidly acted in magnificent settings. The war scenes are thrilling."

The Sunday Express: "'Enemies of Women' is a sensational triumph. It introduces a thrilling war film and presents a complete panorama of fighting on land, sea and in the air."

The Referee: "For weeks yet uncounted 'Enemies of Women' should draw London and many from the provinces to the Empire theatre. This super-picture is beyond newspaper criticism. The setting are most beautiful."

The Sunday Pictorial: "'Enemies of Women' should come near breaking the West End record established by 'The Four Horsemen.' The performance would be difficult to parallel in its power and artistry."

The Sunday Illustrated: "There is no doubt about the popular success of 'Enemies of Women.' Lionel Barrymore is magnificent. Alma Rubens is beautiful, and the whole film is a gorgeous spectacle."

English Author Lauds "The Beast"

H. B. Maxwell, who has supplied the English and American reading public with some of the recent "best sellers," was the guest of Thomas Dixon at a private showing of the picturization of Mr. Dixon's "The Beast," under the title of "The Mark of the Beast," in the projection room of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, last week.

Mr. Maxwell and a few of his guests, after a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria, attended the showing for the purpose of viewing Mr. Dixon's own efforts as a motion picture producer. Mr. Maxwell was very enthusiastic over "The Mark of the Beast" and considered it a story of unusual dramatic strength.

Foreign Sales Announced by First National

THE following First National pictures have been sold to the Societa Anomima Stefano Pittaluga, of Turin, Italy, for the territory of Italy, Sardinia, Italian African Protectorate and the Italian African Colonies: "Oliver Twist," "Daddy," "The Hot-tentot," "The Dangerous Age," "Brawn of the North," "Fury," "The Eternal Flame," "Smilin' Through," Loma Doone," "Hurricane's Gal," "The Bond Boy," "Sonny."

Thirty-five First National pictures have also been sold to France and Goulette, of Manila, for the Philippine Islands, according to the First National announcement.

Renown Exchanges Make Plans for Fall

Renown Pictures, Inc., operating the Renown exchanges in New York, Chicago and Buffalo, by means of a special advertising force, is already actively engaged in bringing its fall releases to the attention of the exhibitors in the respective territories.

Among the important pictures which are announced are Elaine Hammerstein in "Broadway Gold" and four additional productions with this star during the 1923-24 season. "The Unknown Purple" with Henry B. Walthall, Alice Lake, Ethel Grey Terry, Stuart Holmes, Helen Ferguson, James Morrison and Frankie Lee, "East Side, West Side" with Eileen Percy and Kenneth Harlan, "The Spider and the Rose" with Alice Lake, Gaston Glass, Richard Headrick and a star cast, Richard Barthelmess in "Just a Song At Twilight," "Bright Lights of Broadway" with Lowell Sherman, Doris Kenyon and the New York Hippodrome Chorus, Guy Bates Post in "Gold Madness" by James Oliver Curwood, "Temporary Marriage" with Kenneth Harlan and Mildred David, and the series of three feature length comedies starring Larry Semon.

The entire Truart product is handled through the Renown exchanges.

Orphans See "Down to Sea in Ships"

The Buffalo "Evening News" sponsored a monster theatre party for the orphans of Buffalo, with an overflow of newsboys, last Saturday morning at "Down to the Sea in Ships." Upwards of 2,400 youngsters were thrilled by the whale chase in the Elmer Clifton production for the Hodkinson Corporation.

The "News" and the "Times" gave the picture extra news and picture space, and several book stores and window tie-ups were arranged. "Down to the Sea in Ships" was also presented this week for initial showings in Syracuse and Utica.

"Safety Last" Raises School Funds

ANOTHER was added last week to the long list of educational and other institutions which have profited from showings of the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors' attraction, "Grandma's Boy," when two entertainments with this photoplay as the central feature were given at St. Vincent's School, Madison, N. J. The showings were under the auspices of the Eighth grade, and, according to a report received by Associated Exhibitors, "netted a large amount to the fund being raised by the class to present the school with a gift at the close of the present term."

Mae Murray Starts on "Conquest"

Although her present visit to New York was undertaken with the obvious intent of securing relaxation from the arduousness of her work in "The French Doll," recently completed in Hollywood, Mae Murray and her director-husband, Robert Z. Leonard, have nevertheless reverted to type. During the past several weeks Miss Murray and Mr. Leonard have taken advantage of their presence in New York and have shot many exterior scenes of metropolitan atmosphere which figure prominently in Miss Murray's next picture, "Conquest."

Miss Murray and Mr. Leonard will leave New York at the end of next week for Hollywood where they will continue the production of "Conquest" at the Metro studios. "Conquest" was written by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgins and will be one of Miss Murray's most elaborate productions of the coming Fall season.

"The French Doll," which Miss Murray brought with her to New York, is from the famous Paris and New York stage success acted here in Miss Murray's role by Irene Bordoni. It was adapted from the French to the English stage by A. E. Thomas and scenarioized for Miss Murray by Frances Marion. It is a Robert Z. Leonard presentation through Metro and is sponsored by Tiffany Productions of which Mr. Leonard is director general and M. H. Hoffman, general manager.

Estelle Taylor Signs With Thomas

Estelle Taylor, who has the feminine lead in Richard, Thomas' production, "Phantom Justice," will have one of the stellar roles in Mr. Thomas' next "special," which is now being put in continuity by Burnell Manly, who adapted Daniel Frederick Whitcomb's story of "Phantom Justice" to screen purposes.

Miss Taylor will return to the Thomas' banner when she completes her role, a highly emotional characterization, in Paramount's "Ten Commandments," which Cecil DeMille is filming.

C. B. C. Lining Up Feature Casts All Around Strength Plan of Joe Brandt For Next Three Productions

THAT the casts of the next three productions on the C. B. C. special series will be distinguished by a uniform strength throughout, is the announcement from Joe Brandt, president of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, who is now at the company's West Coast studios lining up the plans for an extensive Fall program.

They will follow the policy established by the casts of "More to be Pitied," "Only a Shop Girl," and "Temptation." In each of these casts that were strong in name and personality, and picked especially for the roles, were the rule.

On his way to the Coast Mr. Brandt stopped off at various key cities to interrogate franchise holders and exhibitors regarding casts of this kind as against the "single star" cast and found the majority overwhelmingly in favor of the generally strong casts of corresponding prominence.

"With the wonderful bookings I found all along the line I was convinced we were on the right track," he said. "The biggest theatres everywhere—houses that never before were open to Independent pictures have played our features this year—because of the big stories, big casts, big ideas that have gone into their making."

"Kunsy's in Detroit, The Stanley Company in Philadelphia, The Chicago in Chicago, and many other big people who have run our 'Temptation' and 'Only a Shop Girl' this year have given us confidence that we were right. We are going along on the same plan for the Fall in planning the next three features—except that our plans call for bigger stories, bigger casts, bigger sets, and a greater artistic and monetary expansion."

"Star Pictures Over"; Schulberg Train New Talent Like Minor Leaguers, Says Preferred Pictures President

IN a statement made this week B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, says that the day of the star picture is over. "The public," said Schulberg, "is no longer interested in seeing a story manhandled so that the star can have the stage to himself (or herself). The public is no longer interested in the star's curls alone; what it wants is a logical coherent story, with skilled actors interpreting the necessary roles. One star and ten extras no longer make a picture."

"This new situation undoubtedly means better pictures; but it also means extra difficulties for the producer. There are to-day only some thirty-odd players who can be classified as stars. With the bidding for their services constantly going on, there arises the problem of training new stars."

"It would be splendid if we had minor leagues, so to speak, whence we could draw upon new material. That not being the case, each producer will now be compelled to develop his own stars."

"As the nucleus for coming productions, I have three players under long-term contracts; Gaston Glass, whose work in 'Humoresque,' 'The Hero' and 'The Girl Who Came Back' have established him, Kenneth Harlan, who has just signed up again with me; and Ethel Shannon, who is my own find."

"For Glass and Harlan, I can claim no credit; both were established players long before they appeared in Preferred Pictures. But Miss Shannon was only an extra when I found her. I watched her carefully, much as a big-league scout watches a new player, and then signed her to a five-year contract."

"And then I nursed her along as carefully as John McGraw would nurse a young busher whom he hoped to make a Ty Cobb of. I let her 'sit on the bench' for a few productions and just see what the regulars were doing. Then I gave her a small part in 'The Hero.' She caught on at once with exhibitors and the fans, and my mail showed me that I hadn't made a mistake. In 'The Girl Who Came Back' I gave her a slightly bigger part, which she handled more than competently."

"Figuring her almost ready to take her place in the regular line-up, I gave her one of the most difficult and important roles in 'Daughters of the Rich,' the first production in which she was featured."

"And now I am entrusting her with the leading female role in 'Maytime.' She has earned her success, and I no longer need worry about her."

"What I am looking for now is new screen material—men and girls who aren't looking for instantaneous success, who are satisfied to 'warm the bench' until I am satisfied they are qualified to play with the regulars."

Various featured players who will support Glass, Harlan and Miss Shannon in next season's fifteen Preferred Pictures, include Miriam Cooper, Ruth Clifford, Crauford Kent, Walter Long, Edith Yorke, Colleen Moore, Josef Swickard, Vola Vale, Priscilla Bonner, James Corrigan, Myrtle Vane, Kid McCoy, Richard Tucker, and Miss Dupont.

"Accidental Husband" Sale Reported

"Her Accidental Husband," the Edward Belasco Production, which C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation is distributing, was sold this week to Superior Screen Service of Salt Lake City.

Superior will handle the picture, which features Miriam Cooper, Forrest Stanley, and Mitchell Lewis, in the Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and South Idaho territory.

"Divorce" Is Booked for Grauman's Rialto

"DIVORCE," starring Jane Novak and directed by Chester Bennett, has been booked to Grauman's Rialto theatre for an eight-week run, commencing Tuesday, June 5. With this announcement also comes word from the Powers studios of the starting on Miss Novak's next starring vehicle, titled, "The Lullaby." "The Lullaby" is based on a story by Lillian Ducey in the May first issue of Saucy Stories. Bennett started work on this production Thursday, June 7. So far engaged are Robert Anderson, who played Mons. Cuckoo in "Hearts of the World," and Frederick Maletesta as heavy of the production. The story is an adaption for the screen by Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton.

"Breaking Home Ties" Praised by Pastor

Associated Exhibitors is receiving frequent and repeated evidences that its feature, "Breaking Home Ties," though based, in part, on a cherished Jewish song-prayer, is making much more than a merely sectarian appeal.

Rev. Carl A. Reetz, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Fort Atkinson, Wis., wrote:

"I want to thank you for calling our attention to the picture, 'Breaking Home Ties.'"

A parade of wooden soldiers is being incorporated in the circus scene. Mr. Neilan is nearing completion of the photography on this production.

Grainger Likes "Palace of King"

Goldwyn Sales Manager Enthusiastic After First Glimpse of Feature

JAMES R. GRAINGER, general manager of sales for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, who knows pictures as well as any man in the industry, it is claimed, has been at the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, Cal., for several days looking into the new productions and consulting with Abraham Lehr and other studio executives about future productions.

While there he saw the "rushes" of Emmett J. Flynn's first Goldwyn picture, "In the Palace of the King," from F. Marion Crawford's novel of adventure in Spain in the sixteenth century. He was so impressed by the nature and the bigness of the story and the production that he telegraphed the home office that the production "is going to be one of the year's biggest and greatest pictures."

Regarding the mere physical bigness of the production he wired: "The sets are bigger than those of 'Robin Hood.' There are more people in it, and the story is a great one of unusual possibilities." His judgment of the artistic and box-office value of the production is summed up as follows: "The picture is worthy of a long Broadway run and of extended engagements in the key cities."

The continuity for "In the Palace of the King" was prepared by June Mathis, editorial director for Goldwyn, and Director Flynn has been given a free hand to develop the picture on a scale commensurate with its worth.

The palace set is the biggest that the Goldwyn studios has ever turned out, it is said. The palace itself is 280 feet high and the interiors are on a magnificent scale. Thousands of extras were used in some of the sequences.

Heading the cast are Blanche Sweet, as Dolores, and Edmund Lowe as Don John. Hobart Bosworth appears as General Mendoza and Pauline Starke as his daughter, the blind Inez. Sam de Grasse acts the role of King Philip of Spain and Aileen Pringle is the Princess Eboli. Others are Charles Clary, William V. Mong, Ena Gregory, Lucien Littlefield, Tom Bates, Charles Graham, Harvey Clark, H. N. Clugston, Jack Pitcairn, David Kirby and Bruce Sterling.

"Fighting Blade" Is Completed

First National Busy With Production Activities at Eastern Studios

FIRST NATIONAL producers in the East, while not as large in numbers, are just as busy as their co-workers on the West Coast. No sooner did the Richard Barthelmess company move from the old Universal studio in Fort Lee after filming "The Fighting Blade" than Samuel Goldwyn's company, producing "Potash and Perlmutter," moved in.

Residents of the New Jersey town were reminded of old times during the filming of "The Fighting Blade," which was made under the direction of John S. Robertson, the Inspiration director. Hundreds of extras, dressed as Cromwellian soldiers, roamed the town during the "shooting" of the big battle scenes, which occupied a full week. An elaborate street scene was constructed on the lot and another big set, an old English castle, will play a prominent part in the picture. These sets were designed by Everett Shinn, art director, who served in the same capacity during the production of "The Bright Shawl."

"The Fighting Blade" is a story of England of the early seventeenth century. Barthelmess is cast in a romantic role as a soldier of the Cromwellian army, with beautiful Dorothy Mackail, featured player of "Mighty Lak' a Rose" in the picturesque role of the heroine. Eighty thousand feet of film were "shot" on this picture and the work of cutting and editing is now in progress under the direction of Mr. Robertson.

Director Clarence Badger was well under way on "Potash and Perlmutter" when the scene of his activities was transferred from the Paragon to the Universal studios in Fort Lee. A massive modiste shop set had been erected at the latter studio and work was uninterrupted by the change. "Potash and Perlmutter" is being filmed with the same featured players who starred in the stage production—Barney Bernard as Potash, and Alexander Carr as his beloved partner, Perlmutter. Others in the cast include Vera Gordon, Hope Sutherland, and De Sacia Mooers.

Goldwyn Boasts Largest Picture Stage

What is said to be the world's largest motion picture stage is now at the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, California. The structure covers an ordinary city block, being approximately 300 feet long and 175 feet wide. Fifty average motion picture sets can be built on it at the same time. The new stage, known as No. 6, covers more than an acre and a half of ground and contains 52,500 square feet of floor space.

Lowe Cast for Hero "In Palace of King"

Edmund Lowe will play Don John, the dash-lover of "In the Palace of the King" as his first role under a recently signed Goldwyn contract. Lowe has been in Panama, appearing in a picture directed by J. Gordon Edwards, but returned to the Goldwyn studios at Culver City to start work in Emmet Flynn's picture.

In "In the Palace of the King" Lowe will play opposite Blanche Sweet.

Principal Super Five Deal Completed

MICHAEL ROSENBERG, the energetic Secretary of Principal Pictures Corporation, has returned to Los Angeles from Seattle whither he journeyed to try his persuasive selling powers on his brother, Al, who is the G. M. of the De Luxe Film Co., which maintains offices in both Seattle and Portland.

A deal was consummated whereby De Luxe acquired the rights for Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Alaska for Principal's Super Five series and "Mind Over Motor." They have handled all of the Principal output in the past, as well as Lichtman's Preferred Pictures.

The Super Five consists of Bennie Zeidman's "The Spider and the Rose" and "Bright Lights of Broadway," and "Temporary Marriage," "East Side, West Side," and "Gold Madness," the latter being the screen title chosen for the adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's magazine story, "The Man from Ten Strike."

Blackton Is Busy with First Production

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton is making preparations for the first of the Blackton Productions which will be released by Vitagraph. These specials will be among the twenty-six super-features announced by President Albert E. Smith recently.

It is understood that Commodore Blackton will produce at the Brooklyn studios of Vitagraph where he made the Blackton Productions. The Commodore is now busily engaged in outlining the scenario of his first production.

"To Last Man" Being Made in Arizona

"To the Last Man," a Zane Grey production adapted for the screen by Doris Schroeder from the author's well-known story of a feud among frontiersmen, is being made in the wilds of Arizona for Paramount. The exact location of the famous old battles of this feud are being used in the picture.

The featured players are Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery, Robert Edson and Frank Campeau. Victor Fleming is the director.

Bert Lubin to Start New Feature

BERT LUBIN, responsible for "Partners of the Sunset," starring Allene Ray and producer of other independent films, will start work shortly in Hollywood on a new feature.

The story is "Dangerous Innocence," written by Willard Mack and presenting a big cast of well known names. Announcement concerning director and the studio to be used will be made in the near future.

Derelys Perdue, F. B. O. star, whose first starring vehicle, "Daytime Wives," has just been completed.

Production Under Way on "Gold Diggers"

Actual production of the Warner Brothers screen version of David Belasco's stage play, "The Gold Diggers," was begun last week at the Warner Coast studios, according to announcement. The feature is being made under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

The leading roles will be portrayed by Hope Hampton, Windham Standing and Louise Fazenda, with a supporting cast which includes Claude Gillingwater, Johnny Harrin, Ann Cornwell, Joseph Dowling, Gertrude Short, Alex Francis, Jed Prouty, Barney Barnett, Areta Gillman, Eleanor Montgomery, Peggy Brown, Trixie Andrews, Michael Dark.

The scenario was written by Grant Carpenter; Frank Strayer is assisting Beaumont in the direction, and Dave Abel has been engaged to turn the crank.

Preparations for the production of "Tiger Rose," to be made by special arrangement with David Belasco and featuring Lenore Ulric, are now under way at the Warner Coast studios. From present indications first scenes for the production will be filmed on June 20 under the direction of Sidney Franklin.

U.S. Publicity Bureau Aids "Loyal Lives"

THROUGH bulletins being sent out by the Government publicity department at Washington, the 52,000 postmasters in the United States Post Office Department are being officially enlisted in the support of Whitman Bennett's mail man melodrama, "Loyal Lives," it is claimed.

The Post Office Department is keenly interested in this Vitagraph release, and every member of the postal service is expected to give the production invaluable support when it reaches the theatre next month.

Principal Plans Big Campaign Will Back Super Five Series With Advertising Through All Mediums

IN accordance with their well known policy of backing up the exhibitor, Principal Pictures Corporation is on the eve of launching a comprehensive and intensive advertising campaign, nation-wide in scope, to further the interests of their Super Five series and "Mind Over Motor." The former includes "Bright Lights of Broadway," and "The Spider and the Rose," both B. F. Zeidman productions, "Temporary Marriage," "East Side, West Side," and "Gold Madness," the last named being founded upon the James Oliver Curwood story, "The Man from Ten Strike," and starring Guy Bates Post.

This advertising campaign, which is the idea of Irving Lesser, general manager of distribution, and under whose supervision it is being engineered, will utilize practically every known medium and method of reaching the vast army of American Movie Fans, including, as it does, newspapers, trade papers—both national and regional—billboards, fan magazines, syndicated rotogravure sections appearing in the Sunday papers throughout the land, special exploitation feats, and, finally, the columns of many of the leading national magazines.

This tremendous advertising "splash" is one of the results of the increased quantity and quality of the coming season's quota of Principal output, which, in turn, is the result of a competitive spirit which has been engendered between the New York offices of Principal and those in Los Angeles.

The first of the eastern made pictures is "Bright Lights of Broadway," produced by Bennie Zeidman under the supervision of Irving Lesser. Its cast includes Lowell Sherman, Doris Kenyon, Harrison Ford, Effie Shannon, Tyrone Power, Elmund Breese and Claire Dolores. Webster Campbell directed. Among the players listed in the other four pictures of this group are Guy Bates Post, Alice Lake, Gaston Glass, Mildred Davis (now Mrs. Harold Lloyd), Kenneth Harlan, Eileen Percy, Cleo Madison, Mitchell Lewis, Grace Darmond, Tully Marshall, Myrtle Steadman, Robert McKim, Maude George, Joseph Dowling, Frank Campeau, Louise Fazenda, Noah Beery, Hector Sarno, Alec Francis, Edwin Stevens, Stuart Holmes, little Richard Hedrick and Wally Van.

"Temple of Venus" at Fox Coast Studio

Announcement has just been received from the William Fox offices to the effect that work has started at the Fox West Coast Studios on a special titled "The Temple of Venus," under the direction of Henry Otto. The story is an original by Katherine Carr, who also adapted it for the screen.

The cast is headed by Phyllis Haver and David Bulter. William Boyd is the juvenile lead. Others included are Jean Arthur, Leon Barry, Fred Erie, Marlan Harlan and Duchess Dilant.

"The Temple of Venus" will be among the early releases from William Fox.

Lasky Enthuses Over 'The Cheat'

Paramount N. Y. Executives See First Print of Pola Negri Starring Vehicle

THE first print of George Fitzmaurice's production of "The Cheat," starring Pola Negri, has arrived at the Paramount home office in New York and has been seen by the company's executives, all of whom are enthusiastic over its entertainment qualities and its perfection of technical detail. The result is that Jesse L. Lasky, at his office in Hollywood, has received many congratulatory messages from New York on the excellence of this new adaptation of Hector Turnbull's famous screen drama.

In Mr. Lasky's estimation there has never been a more appealing or more perfectly produced picture made under the Paramount banner. "Miss Negri comes into her own in 'The Cheat,'" he said. "Nor must the splendid work done by Jack Holt and Charles de Roche be overlooked. Beautiful women, gorgeous gowns, sumptuous settings, flawless direction, superlative acting and a tremendous story all combine to make it the ideal picture."

"It is the type of picture the public is clamoring for, and no effort was spared, nothing left undone, to make 'The Cheat' a triumph for both the star and the producer. The compliments I have received from the New York office strengthen my belief that we have succeeded."

Ouida Bergere's adaptation of the screen play in which Fannie Ward and Sessue Hayakawa scored such a great success eight years ago follows the original theme almost to the letter, it is said. Only in detail of treatment has the story been changed, the most important alteration being the elimination of the Japanese character originally played by Hayakawa.

The villain in Miss Bergere's version is a white man who, for the purpose of dealing in Indian treasures, assumes the clothing, make-up and personality of an East Indian nobleman in order that he may trick the public for business reasons. This is the part played by Charles de Roche, the French actor who has just made his American debut in support of Dorothy Dalton in "The Law of the Lawless."

'49 Days Restored for "Salome Jane"

Boulder Creek Canyon has become a show place for tourists from San Francisco and other parts of northern California, for there a complete mining settlement of the wild days of '49 has been restored. Cabins built of redwood logs, open barns, the general store, the saloon and that indefinable atmosphere which harks back to the old days of the gold rush is faithfully reproduced.

It's all part of the huge set constructed by Paramount for the filming of the George Melford production, "Salome Jane."

Johnnie Walker to Start "The Worm"

Johnnie Walker, the Robertson-Cole star, will shortly begin work on his next independent production, "The Worm," from the story by Frederick Stowers under the direction of William Worthington.

"Enemies of Women" Has Long Runs

COSMOPOLITAN'S production of "Enemies of Women," is out after more long run records. Not being satisfied with shattering the record of the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, it has now captured the same record for the Imperial theatre, San Francisco, where it has just completed a six weeks' booking, it is claimed. It ran for seven weeks at the Roosevelt in Chicago and has been booked for a second-run extended showing at Jones, Linick & Schaeffer's Orpheum theatre. It will show at all of the Jones, Linick & Schaeffer houses.

"Enemies of Women" is now in its ninth week in New York, being at the Cameo theatre, after showings at the Central, the Rivoli and the Rialto. It will be shown at Goldman's King theatre in St. Louis in the fall.

Music Box Scenery Used in Fox Production

THE diamond horseshoe scene in The Music Box Revue will be shown in the screen version of "Six Cylinder Love," which William Fox is making at his New York studios. Elmer Clifton, director of the picture, with the help of two hundred and fifty stage mechanics, turned the theatre into a studio the other day and "shot" the scene.

Derelys Perdue Feature Is Completed

The Film Booking Offices announce the completion this week of the first production they will release on their program featuring Derelys Perdue. The title of Miss Perdue's first picture is "Daytime Wives" and is from the pen of Lenore Coffee and John F. Goodridge. The adaption was made by Wyndham Gittens and Helmer Bergman and it was directed by Emile Chautard.

In addition to Miss Perdue the cast includes Grace Darmond, Ward Craig, Richard Tucker, Jack Mower, Kenneth Gibson and Catherine Lewis.

Cast Announced For E. K. Lincoln Picture

Recent announcement has been made from the Coast that E. K. Lincoln's super-feature, "The Right of the Strongest," produced by the Zenith Pictures Corporation from the novel by Frances Nimmo Greene, author of "One Clear Call," was fast nearing completion.

A number of remarkable photographic effects are secured, chief among them striking storm scenes.

Helen Ferguson who has been playing leads with Goldwyn and Universal, has the principal feminine roles, opposite Mr. Lincoln.

June Elvidge, old-time World Film star, plays the part of a society "vamp."

Among the men, who are prominent in the cast, are George Seigmann, Tom Santschi, Tully Marshall and Robert Milosch. Niles Welch and Winter Hall also have interesting roles.

Ernest Torrence, who will play Cousin Egbert in Paramount's "Ruggles of Red Gap."

Busy Summer at United Studios

Eleven Producing Companies Will Be in Full Action Within Next Month

WITH the $800,000 improvement program now nearing completion at the United studios, arrangements are being made by M. C. Levee, president of the plant, to handle the greatest summer producing activities in the history of the studio.

Contracts have already been signed by Mr. Levee to house the producing of eleven companies this summer and negotiations with five other producers of prominence are practically closed. This will mark a new summer producing record for any leasing studio in the industry and is made possible through the building improvements and enlargements in the big leasing plant, which have been under way for the past two months.

This announcement is another definite indication that the present producing boom in Hollywood will continue through the summer, contrary to the usual July and August let-up in production evident the past four years.

Foremost in producing activities at the United studios this summer will be Joseph Schenck and Associated First National Pictures with the largest number of companies. Among the producing organizations other improvements on the United during the next three months are the Norma and Constance Talmadge companies, Maurice Tourneur, Sam De Grasse, Jack Dillon, Lynn Reynolds and John McDermott.

As soon as the new buildings and other improvements on the United lot are completed, the eleven organizations already signed, will be in full operation. Others will closely follow as soon as additional studio facilities now in work are provided.

Arrow Inaugurates Big Campaign

Proposes to Select New Personalities For Future Screen Productions

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, announces the inauguration of a nation-wide publicity and advertising campaign, starting effective with the July first issue of "Mothers Home Life Magazine."

This publicity campaign will take the form of a contest, to be conducted by the magazine, for new personalities for the screen, and, according to the terms of the contract, ten people will be selected from among the contestants and will be sent to California, all their expenses to the Coast and return being paid. The Arrow Film Corporation will give these ten people a test and from among them select one or more who will be given a part in the big special, "Gambling Wives," to be produced in the Fall.

The contest will be advertised in large advertisements in practically all the leading newspapers of the United States, it is said, and will feature the Arrow Film Corporation and its productions as well as the story "Gambling Wives." "Gambling Wives" will run serially in Mothers Home Life Magazine coincident with the start of active production and will be illustrated with scenes of the play. It is planned to release the picture while the story is still running in the magazine.

It should result, from the standpoint of the Arrow Film Corporation, in great benefit to the exchanges handling Arrow product, as over a period of months not only the magazine but newspapers generally will be "selling" Arrow pictures to the public.

"Queen of Sin" Release Date Set

Selznick Distribution Director Sets Distribution Date For June 23

DAVID R. BLYTH, director of sales for Selznick Distributing Corporation, has scheduled "The Queen of Sin" for release on June 23. The original 14,000 feet of the Viennese version has been thoroughly Americanized and cut to six reels. It depicts the fall of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah.

"The Queen of Sin" was chosen from forty-three pictures offered, according to Mr. Blyth, on account of its ready adaptability to American ideals, and because in addition to being a spectacle picture it is backed up with a real story.

Consistent with the new policy of Selznick, that of encouraging independent producers to make nothing but the type of pictures demanded by the public and the exhibitor, Mr. Blyth also announces that in conjunction with "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Common Law" and "Modern Matrimony," all of which are for early fall release, several other big pictures will be released, the titles of which will be announced later.

"These new pictures" adds Mr. Blyth, "were not bought as the 'easy to give the exhibitor' kind or easy selling kind, but after a careful survey of the independent market, they were carefully selected as the type that create audience enthusiasm and send patrons away well pleased."

Preferred Players Aid Nurses' Drive

AUTOGRAPHED photographs of Gaston Glass, Kenneth Harlan and Ethel Shannon, three Preferred players under contract with B. P. Schulberg, are being used to stimulate interest in the drive now being made in Putnam, Conn., for the construction of a Nurses' Home for the local hospital.

Employees of Metro Win Identification Prizes

Four young men and one young woman employed by Metro Pictures Corporation won an aggregate sum of $2,200, it was announced several days ago by the N. Y. American following the completion of its Movie and Stage Identification Contest. The two highest honors fell to the Metro contestants and the other three also received large monetary rewards.

To Alebrt Sarno, nineteen years old, Metro winner of the first prize, $1,250, goes an additional award of $100 for the highest contestant in his section, the Borough of Manhattan.

The winner of the second prize, $500, is Paul Stempel, also a Metro employee. As he is second in his section, he is also receiving the $100 award that goes along with this honor.

William Ornstein was winner of the fourth prize, $150.

Miss Alice Goodman, who works for Metro in the Scenario Department, is among the winners of $50 prizes.

Leo Zarembo, who also works in Metro's scenario department, won a $50 prize.

"Dust in Doorway" Cast Is Completed

Arthur H. Jacobs, producer of Frank Borzage productions for First National, has completed his cast for the next First National picture the temporary title of which is "Dust in the Doorway."

The cast now includes Myrtle Stedman, Mary Philbin, Wm. Collier, Jr. Josef Swickard, Frederick Truesdell, Aggie Herring and J. Farrel MacDonald, with a short juvenile cast of Frankie Lee, Mary Jane Irving and Baby Bruce Guerin.

Bunny Dull, production manager, and Lew Borzage, new assistant director, have started technical activities, while Frank D. Ormston, formerly Mary Pickford's art director, is designing many settings for his Borzage production.

Faire Binney Engaged for "Second Youth"

Distinctive Pictures Corporation has cast Faire Binney for the role of Helen Remick, the flapper, in its new production, "Second Youth," featuring Alfred Lunt and Mimi Palmeri. Miss Binney has played in "What Fools Men Are," "The Girl from Porcupine," "Here Comes the Bride," with John Barrymore, and "The Frontier of the Stars" with Thomas Meighan.

Albert Parker is directing "Second Youth," which will be distributed by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

Choosing a Good Carpet for Theatre Use

Salient Points to Be Considered by Exhibitors When Making Selection

By A. Raymond Hopper

WHETHER it was who said "beauty is only skin-deep" would have been perfectly correct if he had been referring to carpets. For a beautiful pattern is no more a definite indication of quality in a carpet, than a pretty face is the certain expression of fine character in a girl. Also, the comparison might be carried this much further: the permanence of the surface beauty of the fabric is just as dependent upon what lies beneath, as is the permanence of facial beauty dependent upon a sound constitution.

Certainly, one every strong reason for the use of carpets in theatres, is to enhance the effect of beauty and luxury. No other floor covering can compete with fine carpets in the ability to impart this effect. Another reason is to secure quietness during the performance. But a still stronger reason for buying a good carpet, is that the installation of any floor covering involves a fair-sized investment, and the slower the rate of depreciation, the better the return that is received on that investment. Also, it is worth remembering that when a carpet begins to wear out, its shabbiness no longer imparts the air of luxuriousness for which it was purchased, but quite the opposite.

How long should a carpet last? Well, every reader probably knows how long some carpet he has had did last. There are several kinds of fabrics, and many grades of each kind, and different managers treat their carpets very differently.

Any prediction should take into consideration the amount and kind of traffic over the carpet, how often and how the carpet is cleaned, how much and what kind of lining is used, and, most important of all, of what type is the carpet and how good a grade of that type. It is much easier, however, to show what kind of service certain typical theatres are getting out of their floor coverings.

There is the magnificent Chicago theatre, Chicago, and the beautiful Tivoli, in the same city. The first uses a standard first-grade Wilton. In a year and a half, nine-and-three-quarter million people passed in and out over this carpet, and it is still good. The other uses Bigelow Axminster, a very different type of fabric, as I will point out later, yet this supported a traffic amounting to 7,280,000 people in twenty-six months.

Let's take another city, say Buffalo. The Shubert-Tech theatre has the same kind of carpet as is used in the Tivoli, in Chicago. This already has stood up for eight years, and is still good. The Lafayette, in Buffalo, has a "Hartford-Saxony" carpet, over which two-and-a-quarter million people have passed, in and out, during the last year, and that, too, is good for a great deal more.

San Francisco has two fine theatres, the California and the Imperial, first-run Paramount houses, the floors of which are covered with Bigelow Astoria Axminster. These houses have a combined weekly attendance of seventy-five thousand, which, roughly, amounts to about two million apiece in the year.

So we could go on at length, but this serves to show that carpets for theatre use must be made to endure a remarkable amount of hard wear, and that some carpets are made that are able to meet the demand. To know what kind they are, so as to be able to select them intelligently, presupposes at least a general knowledge of the difference between the most generally used weaves, and this I shall undertake to explain in a moment. But always, beyond this, it must be remembered that the user can get out of a carpet only what the manufacturer puts into it, in the form of quality, materials and skillful manufacture.

The quality of the raw materials, and here I refer principally to the woolen yarns, begins at the sheep's back. The wool used in making carpets is very different from that used in clothing—coarser, tougher, more resilient. This usually comes from China, India, South America, Russia, Scotland, Persia, and other foreign countries. When received in the carpet mills in this country, it goes through various cleaning processes, and then is blended. Maybe that makes you think of tea, and it is pretty much the same thing. The wool from one country may be noted for its lustre, that from another for its length of fibre, other wools are especially tough, springy, and so on. The wetness or dryness of the season just preceding the shearing of the wool materially affects its nature, as also does the mildness or severity of the weather. Rough, cold winters bring long-fibred, harsh wools; better for carpet use than the silkier kinds. All of these things must be determined, and given proper consideration in blending the different wools for a given grade of yarn.

Some manufacturers use nothing but the finest quality of wool for their carpet yarns. Others form a yarn of two strands of wool twisted around a strand of cotton. Some carpets are woven with a certain amount of jute in their backs, as a filler. Others have no jute at all. One very excellent carpet has a strong cotton filler, or "bump," woven in the back, which acts as a wear-resisting cushion and adds to the life of the fabric. Carpets may be woven of two-ply, or three-ply yarns, that is, each woolen strand is made by twisting two or three threads together. Many fine carpets are woven from worsted yarns. Others, equally good, in some respects, are made of woolen yarns. Now, what is the difference between wool and worsted? Both come from a sheep's back.

Wool or Worsted?

Wool, as it comes from the sheep, consists of fibres of varying length, some quite short, others quite long. This wool is carded, that is, the fibres are pulled and separated and, to a certain extent, straightened. But long and short fibres all are used, and have a packing quality not to be found in worsted.

This carpet in the Lafayette theater, Buffalo, has a pile $\frac{3}{8}$ " high, made of three ply twisted woolen yarn. 2,250,000 people pass it in a single year without beginning to exhaust its durability.—Photo, courtesy Bigelow-Hartford Carpet Co.

Views of the Madison theatre, Madison, Wis. which is an attractively designed house of fair capacity. The width is such that good sight lines are permitted from nearly all the seats in the house.—(Pollak)

Good Carpet for Theatre Use

On the other hand, worsted is wool that has gone through an additional series of processes called combing, which thoroughly straightens the fibres and culls out the short ones. In worsted yarn only the long fibres are used, and these are combed out so that the lie parallel with each other, and then are twisted to obtain the maximum of strength and the lustre that is characteristic of worsted.

Where the pile of the carpet is to be rather short and sheared smoothly, the lustre and resiliency of worsted is desirable. Wool does not shear so smoothly, but it is softer and is used frequently in longer-pile carpets, when the tufts tend to lay over and pack under constant treading.

Kinds of Carpet Weaves

Carpet weaves fall into very distinct classifications. Oriental rugs are out of this discussion. If there is occasion or desire to use them, take the advice of a reputable expert. Chenille carpets can be left out, also. For theatre use, durability is a prime requisite, as we have shown, and for such severe service Chenilles are not adaptable. Ingrain carpet has lost its popularity, and but little is made or used now. We may dismiss it with the brief statement that it is a fabric woven much on the same principle as any piece of cloth. There remain, then, five distinct types of modern carpet weaves, all of which are popular in varying degrees—Wilton, Body Brussels, Velvet, Tapestry Brussels, and Axminster.

Wilton and Body Brussels

Take these two first. They are woven practically in the same way. Usually five, sometimes six, in cheaper grades less than five, warps of woolen or worsted yarns run all through the carpet simultaneously. But in every case the yarns are dyed in the skein. Each warp, or frame, as it is called, generally is of a different color. Some strands from each of the frames may be used to form the pattern, but all of the strands that appear in the surface of the carpet amount to only as many as are in one frame. No matter which color appears in the pile surface, the four or more others are buried beneath it in the body of the fabric. Hence the name "Body Brussels."

The mechanism of the loom separates the strands that are to appear in the surface and lifts them; the others are lowered, and between the two a long wire is inserted. For a Wilton carpet this wire is flat and one end is fashioned into a sharp knife. The wire used in making Body Brussels carpet is round and has no knife. The upper strands are now lowered and bound tightly behind the wire, and later this is withdrawn, leaving a row of loops. This looped-pile is the characteristic surface appearance of Body Brussels.

If the flat wire, with the knife end, is used, the knife cuts these loops, as the wire is withdrawn, leaving a double row of tufts, that is the characteristic surface appearance of Wilton.

But, in both Wilton and Body Brussels carpets, it is the four or five strands, buried in the body of the fabric, for each one that appears in the surface, that is the real characteristic, and which, because it adds to the cost of manufacture, as well as to the life of the carpet, is the chief index of quality.

Velvet and Tapestry Brussels

Velvet bears the same relation to Tapestry Brussels that Wilton does to Body Brussels. Velvet is virtually Tapestry Brussels with the loops cut. Tapestry Brussels looks like Body Brussels on top, but all of the wool or worsted is on the surface. There are no extra strands buried in the body. Hence, the difference in the names "Body Brussels" and "Tapestry Brussels."

Velvet and Tapestry Brussels may be made of either woolen or worsted yarns. But the colors producing the pattern always are printed on the warp threads, not dyed in the skein as they are in Wilton and Body Brussels.

Naturally, Tapestry Brussels and Velvet cannot be expected to endure as much hard wear as Wilton or Body Brussels. They may be very good fabrics for some places, however, and quite worth the price asked for them. They usually are considered inexpensive carpets, and they are; though, as with all other types of weaves, they are made in a long range of qualities.

But remember that "the user gets out of a carpet only what the manufacturer puts into it," and that you cannot expect to get wear out of four or five frames of yarn that are not there.

These carpets usually have jute backs, to add to the weight and stiffness. Some manufacturers use a little jute on the back of Wiltons and Brussels, and, when priced accordingly, probably it is all right. Do not let anyone tell you, though, that the very best worsted Wiltons have jute in their backs. They do not. If they had, they would not be the very best Wiltons.

Axminster Carpet

This is a very much misunderstood weave. So many people seem to have an idea that an Axminster is something to be accepted, reluctantly, of course, when one's purse cannot be stretched to cover the price of a Wilton. The result is that a second, third, or even lower grade of Axminster is compared with the, naturally, more desirable first grade Wilton. It is scarcely fair to the Axminster, which deserves much better consideration.

Most good Wiltons are made of worsted yarn. Axminsters are made of woolen yarn. The pile is deeper and softer than in a Wilton.

Instead of several warps of yarn running along through the fabric, looping over wires, as in Wilton and Brussels, the Axminster tufts are inserted, a whole row across the carpet at a time, deftly tucked into place and bound tightly, and cut off to the proper length; then the next row, and the next, and so on.

One great advantage in an Axminster is that there is almost no limit to the number of colors or shades that can be employed. Wilton is limited to the five or six colors of the five or six frames, with an occasional few extra colors, when it is possible to split a frame, called planting, and place therein a few spools of another color for some small part of the pattern that does not show up elsewhere. Some Wiltons have been woven with as many as twelve colors, but twenty to thirty colors in an Axminster is quite common, and sometimes more colors are used.

In point of appearance, an Axminster carpet is more economical than a Wilton, because all of the wool is on the surface, whereas about eighty per cent of the worsted in a Wilton is buried, and of use only as so much filler. Also, the Axminster is more quickly woven, another factor in reducing its cost. It combines economy in the use of material, and in manufacture, with richness of texture and

A HISTORY OF THEATRE LIGHTING

Although the prime purpose of this book is to present the development, construction and use of Ward Leonard equipment for the control of theatre lighting, more than half of it is devoted to a comprehensive outline of the history of theatre lighting, beginning more than 2500 years ago. So far as we know, this is the only comprehensive assembly of these historical facts contained in one cover.

Besides being a history, it is also a valuable handbook of modern theatre lighting and the control thereof. It is generously illustrated with woodcuts of old scenes and apparatus, and halftones of modern equipment. Send for your copy—it is free. Use the coupon below.

Two views of the Lark theatre, McMinville, Oregon. This house serves as an illustration of a small yet thoroughly up to date and attractive theatre

Lark Theatre, McMinville, Ore., Example of Small High Class House

SEVERAL small-town, first-class houses have been built and opened in Oregon lately and one of the best of these is the new $50,000 Lark theatre, recently dedicated at McMinville by Tom O'Neil, owner and manager. McMinville is a town of several thousand population, a short distance from Portland.

The theatre seats about six hundred and fifty persons, including the main floor and mezzanine floor. The color scheme of the house is old rose and gray.

The outside of the theatre is finished in plain brick, with the walls near and in the lobby finished in a white glazed tile, with black border. The ticket booth is equipped with a three-unit automatic ticket machine. On each side of the lobby is a specially constructed display space, built to accommodate one one-sheet and several smaller display cards.

Entering the house, the foyer is decorated in old rose and gray, with heavy carpeting and drapes of old rose and black. There are two aisles, carpeted. The openings from the foyer to the main auditorium are closed in with glass, and have velour drapes on each side. Stairs at each extreme end of the foyer lead to the mezzanine floor.

On the mezzanine floor are the ladies' rest room and general rest room. The ladies' room is furnished in old rose and gray, with cream colored wicker furniture trimmed in cretonne. Entrance to the mezzanine auditorium is gained through a double door at the rear center.

The stage is large enough to accommodate average motion picture house acts. The main drape curtain is made of old rose colored velour with trimmings and braiding of gray. The walls of the house are finished in a tapestry effect, emphasizing the general color scheme. The organ grills, finished in cream color, are on each side of the walls, at the front. A Gardiner gold-fibre screen is used in the house. The auditorium on the main and mezzanine floor is fitted with Heywood-Wakefield opera chairs.

All house lights and the curtain are automatically controlled from a central board in the projection room. The house and stage lights are on dimmers. Aside from the projection machines, the booth, at the rear of the lower floor, is equipped with a Broukert dissolving stereopticon and spotlight, and a special film cabinet and rewind table.

The theatre is equipped with a Robert Morton orchestral organ, included in the total cost of practically $50,000. The Lark was lighted, furnished, decorated and equipped by the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle.—Prager.

S. M. P. E. and Directors' Asso. Plan Meeting

A combined meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Motion Picture Directors' Association, including cameramen, is to be held at 1:30 P. M., Thursday, June 28th, at 234 West 55th street, New York City.

An attractive design, corner staircase of the new Madison theatre, Madison, Wis.—(Pollak)

The meeting is a get-together meeting and a talk on the various phases of the motion picture industry. Mr. L. A. Jones of the Research Laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company and others will address the meeting at this time.

Rothacker Offers Prize For Best Idea

To stimulate inventive enterprise among laboratory workers, Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. of Chicago and the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories of Hollywood, has offered an annual prize which each year will go to the person who scores the best idea for improving laboratory practice.

The competition is open to workers in both the Coast and Middle Western plants.

Whether the idea takes ultimate form in a mechanical contrivance or an improvement in manual method or system, makes no difference. Mr. Rothacker's desire is to encourage invention in any direction that will eventually be reflected in print quality or laboratory service.

Supply Dealers Meeting July 12-13-14

In our issue dated June 16th, under the heading of "Plans for the Supply Dealers' Annual Convention," the dates for this convention were published as July 9th, 10th and 11th. These dates were in error as this office has since been officially advised that the meeting is to be held July 12, 13 and 14. From all indications, this coming convention of the A. M. P. E. D. of A. will prove very successful, as the majority of those interested in the equipment field in this industry are planning to attend. The opening session begins at 9:30 A. M., Thursday, June 12th, at the Congress Hotel, Chicago.

Community Theatre Changes Schedule

C. B. Eastman of Woodbury, Conn., has reopened the Community theatre at Plainville, Conn., and two Simplex Projectors have been installed. The house will run five nights a week and has been completely remodelled.—

CHICAGO THEATRE—Chicago—Bigelow-Lowell Wilton Carpet

TIVOLI THEATRE—Chicago—Bigelow Axminster Carpet

Remarkable records of durability of Bigelow-Hartford carpets and rugs in prominent theatres

Bigelow-Hartford carpets and rugs represent the highest development in floor coverings. They radiate an impression of substantial strength and endurance. They are made to endure, and do endure, a most remarkable amount of wear.

Nearly 9,750,000 people have walked in and out over the Bigelow-Lowell Wilton on the floors of the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, in one and a half years, and the carpets still are in excellent condition.

In the Tivoli Theatre, Chicago, 7,280,000 people have passed over the Bigelow Axminster carpet in a little over two years.

The Bigelow Axminster carpet in the Shubert-Tech Theatre, Buffalo, has endured eight years' wear, and still is good.

In a single year, 2,250,000 people have trodden over the "Hartford-Saxony" carpet in the Lafayette Theatre, Buffalo, without in any way impairing its luxurious surface.

These are typical examples of the service given by Bigelow-Hartford fabrics, that are being duplicated in innumerable instances all over the United States. For beauty of patterns and colorings, and for exceptional durability under the most severe conditions, Bigelow-Hartford floor coverings stand supreme.

Interviewing Reilly of Reilly & Hall

An architect much in evidence among theatre designers is Paul C. Reilly of the architectural firm of Reilly & Hall of New York City.

Mr. Reilly has received orders to prepare plans for a new million-dollar theatre to be erected in St. Louis and a 2,500-seat house in New Jersey. The same firm is to prepare plans for a new theatre for Utica, N. Y., and alter a theatre in Wisconsin. At present, according to Mr. Reilly, they are preparing plans for eight new theatres to be built in different parts of the country to cost from $100,000 to $1,750,000. Mr. Reilly believes that theatre plans like everything else are to be sold and he is proceeding to do so. He said, "Because we devote our attention exclusively to planning theatres and know not only how to spend an owner's money to get results, but also how to save money for the owners and get the results, is the reason that we built 11 theatres last year and expect to build 22 this year." "An owner can save money on an architect's commission and waste many times that amount paying for mistakes and may have a building with the irreparable flaw of bad acoustics or projection."

New Patchogue Theatre Opens

Patchogue, Long Island, though small in population, was recently treated to one of the largest and most pretentious theatre openings, when Michael Glynn of the theatrical firm of Ward & Glynn, opened their new Patchogue theatre. In addition to a score of motion picture and stage celebrities, who through their friendship for "Mike" Glynn, attended in person, five hundred Elks of the Queensborough Lodge and Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate, were present. The citizens of the small city paid tribute to Glynn by parading to the theatre, escorted by bands and mounted police. The theatre, with a seating capacity of 2,100, will be devoted to vaudeville, pictures and frequent Broadway legitimate attractions.

Automatic Splicer Great Aid in Efficient Handling of Film

MECHANICAL aids for the efficient handling of film have made great strides in the past ten or twelve years and have been adopted by practically every branch of the industry, with the exception of the film exchange inspection departments, which are said to have been slow in joining the march of progress. It is reported that exchanges throughout the country, however, are now installing the Bell & Howell automatic splicer, which has only lately been perfected for special use of the film exchange, although it has been on the market for several years and has been used almost one hundred per cent. in film laboratories throughout the country.

The machine perfected for use of the exchanges makes a splice of any desired width from 1/32-inch to a full sprocket hole; some of the exchanges want the latter size, others prefer one about 3/32-inch, but in any case the results that are being obtained in the exchanges that have installed these machines are beyond estimation. Almost double the quantity of patches are being made per operator; each splice is even, and in perfect alignment and registration; prints are rejuvenated and freshened with a new lease on life. Some of

Special Automatic Light Control Board for Printing Machines

DEPUE'S Automatic Light Control Board for motion picture printing machines, film reducing printers, film lantern slide printing, or printing requiring a large number of light changes, has been perfected and is now being put on the market by the Laboratory Equipment Company, Chicago. it is reported.

According to Oscar B. Depue, who designed and perfected this device, the control board was designed to enable the operator at all times to see the light intensity on which the negative is printing. Easy verification occurs when the title is printing and a sure check-up when the cutter goes into action at the end of a roll.

After a reel has been run through and found correctly prepared, the operator can settle down to the simple task of feeding the machine new positive stock.

In flash title work the control board is efficient and a film saver. All but a few frames of each title may be removed, and the great number of light changes, and the quick action of the control, make unnecessary any changes in the timing strip, or reduction of speed for the run. When the titles are re-inserted, the negative is ready for regular printing again.

The control board is universal because it can be quickly adapted for use with any printing machine by the simple shift of a lever.

Negatives may be printed on either a 22-light continuous or step printer, or on an 18- or 22-light densities, and the control board is ready to print with either a continuous or step printer. The joining of several rolls that make up a reel and the copying of the timing cards onto the long strip of paper, thus saving any previous timing, makes the negative ready for printing with the control board.

It is not generally known that a rheostatic control can be used on a continuous printer, nor that a negative prepared for a step printer can be printed on a fast continuous printer. By the use of the control board, such printing is not only practicable, but is in all points equally satisfactory, and in some an improvement.

The ease and speed in changing from one type of printer to another, without extra work of timing and notching, is a feature that appeals to the laboratory man.

When necessary to have the reel cut in rolls for developing on racks, or for colors, the automatic cutter marks or cuts the film exactly at the desired place, without the necessity of stopping the printer. The only work required on the negative is the elongation of a light change notch, and this in no way interferes with the regular light change function of the notch.

Frank Adam Co. Issues New Publications

The Frank Adam Electric Company of St. Louis, Mo., has recently published a bulletin entitled "The Control of Lighting in Theatres" detailing the Major System manufactured by that company. This publication consists of many valuable suggestions and data on the proper installation and selection of lighting control for the motion picture theatre.

They have also issued a bulletin on a new type of panelboard, type R. It is claimed that this new panelboard is entirely different from those which are ordinarily in use particularly in its sectional construction.

Howells Cine Installs Mor-Lite Lamps

The Howells Cine Equipment Company has installed in the Melrose theatre, New York City, a unique installation consisting of four Mor-Lite intensified lamps operating on one double 75-ampere motor generator.

Previous to this installation, the Melrose theatre were contemplating the purchase of a new motor generator so as they could operate on direct current on their roof garden. The four Mor-Lite lamps are now operating on one motor generator delivering 15 amperes at each are or total capacity of 60 amperes for the four lamps.

Fan Blows 145,000 Cu. Ft. Air Per Minute

Manager Day, of the Strand theatre, Wichita Falls, Texas, has placed his order for a twelve-foot Typhoon. This is the biggest one made and the largest one in the state of Texas. You can imagine the size of this monster Typhoon when you are told that it will blow 145,000 cu. ft. of air into the Strand every minute, or 8,700,000 cu. ft. every hour. This is air and very light you imagine, but it is 150 tons every hour. This big Typhoon will be driven by a 15 H. P. motor.

The entire equipment was planned by J. L. Elder, ventilating engineer for the Typhoon Fan Company.

Combination House for Kingston

Harry Lazarus, well known in theatrical circles, will erect a theatre whose construction will begin very shortly. The structure will have a fully equipped stage and will seat 1,800. The site of this theatre has been determined but has not as yet been published.

Direct Current Machinery

Lesson VI—Part V

Direct Current Motors

It might be well to state at the beginning of this article that any direct current generator can be used as a motor and any motor, for that matter, can be used as a generator. For this reason the operation of motors and generators are, with few exceptions, practically the same and what has been said regarding generators will, to a large extent, also apply in the case of motors.

There is practically no difference in construction between these two types of machines and the diagram of essential parts shown in Fig. 52, Lesson VI, Part I, can also be used in describing the typical motor. Instead of the two poles shown, though, the usual practice is to use four or more.

Motor Action

The fundamental difference between a generator and motor is this: a generator changes mechanical energy into electrical energy, whereas a motor does just the reverse it is made use of as follows: Fig. 71-a shows the magnetic field set up by the two poles marked N and S and B shows the magnetic fields set up by two current carrying conductors. In the left conductor the black dot in the center of the wire indicates that current is flowing out of the wire while on the right the cross indicates that the current is flowing in the wire. The direction of the current affects the respective fields as shown.

If the field from the poles be combined with those of the two wires shown, having one wire next to the N pole and the other next to the S pole, the result will be as in Fig. 72. The field is weak on top of left wire and strong below it, while in the case of the right wire, it is strong above and weak below it. Obviously, then, the left wire will move up and the right wire down in the direction of the weakest part of the field. If these two wires form the sides of a coil of wire, we have an armature loop or coil. If this coil is now pivoted so as to permit it to rotate, the result will be a motor.

in that it changes electrical energy into mechanical energy. The two machines are really dependent on each other. Thus it is much easier and cheaper to transmit electrical energy from one place to another but after this energy is once on the job, so to speak, it is practically useless unless changed into mechanical energy. Electricity as electricity is practically useless. It is only the ease with which it can be transported and changed into other forms of energy, such as mechanical and chemical, that renders it one of the human race's most valuable servants. To use the slogan of the National Electric Light Association, "Power at your elbow."

To return to the original subject, however, when a conductor, such as a wire, carrying current, is placed in a magnetic field, a force is exerted on the wire in such a direction as to tend to move it toward the weakest part of the field. This was quite clearly explained in one of the early articles and is the basis of what is known as motor action. This action, by the way, is present in a great number of electrical devices, sometimes intentionally and other times quite accidentally and unintentionally. Thus we sometimes have motor action in transformers due to the stresses set up in the primary and secondary coils. This effect is sometimes so powerful as to tear the machine apart and cause it to burst in a dangerous manner.

As actually applied to a motor, however,

Counter Voltage

When voltage is applied to the terminals of a motor and the armature revolves the conductors on the armature, obviously, cut the lines of force passing from the north pole to the south. Since this is so a voltage will be induced in the armature wires and this voltage will oppose that being applied at the terminals. It will buck it, in other words, thus causing a still greater voltage to be applied at the terminals in order to overcome this back voltage. Another name for it is counter E. M. F. The voltage which actually causes the armature to rotate is called the armature IR drop and is equal to the product of the armature current and armature resistance. In the case of a series motor, the armature current is exactly the same as the line current.

So we see that the voltage applied to any electric motor is really divided into two parts; the back E. M. F. (E_b) and the $I_a R_a$ drop. Hence,

Applied Voltage = Counter E.M.F. + Armature resistance drop

$$E_t = E_b + I_a R_a$$

or, the back

$$\text{E.M.F. } E_b = E_t - I_a R_a$$

The $I_a R_a$ drop is ordinarily quite small compared with the back voltage. Thus, in the case of a 10 kw. 110 volt series motor having an armature resistance of .05 (5/100) ohm, the back voltage and $I_a R_a$ drop will be as follows:

$$\begin{aligned} \text{Armature current, } I_a &= \frac{110}{10 \times 1000} \\ &= 90.9 \text{ amperes} \end{aligned}$$

$$\begin{aligned} I_a R_a &= 90.9 \times .05 \\ &= 4.545 \text{ volts} \end{aligned}$$

$$E_b = E_t - I_a R_a$$

$$E_b = 110 - 4.55$$

$$E_b = 105.45 \text{ volts}$$

We see from this that nearly all of the applied voltage is used to counteract the generated back voltage and very little is used to actually drive the motor and its load.

Torque

The turning power of a motor, called its torque (pronounced tork) depends directly upon the current in the armature and the strength of the magnetic field. If the field current is not changed, then the torque varies directly as the armature current. Thus, if the load on a motor is doubled the armature current will also be doubled, if the load is reduced to 1/3, the current will also be reduced in the same proportion.

Motor Operation

The generated back voltage can be used to explain the performance of a motor under different conditions. Thus, if the switch of a motor connected to a load is suddenly closed a large rush of current will take place in the motor since the only thing limiting the current is the low resistance of armature winding. As the motor begins to turn, however, the back E.M.F. causes a reduction of this current which continues until the motor is drawing just enough current to pull the load. If the load is now increased the motor will momentarily slow down and this will allow a greater current to flow which will produce the required torque.

Standard Slide Announces New Device

An interesting and novel device has been put on the market by the Standard Slide Corporation for the purpose of throwing colored slides on the sidewalk, in front of store windows, theatres and the like. Reno Rialto Being Remodelled

Improvements calling for expenditures roughly estimated at $60,000, the making of the Rialto theatre the principal motion picture house of the T. & D. Jr. circuit in Reno, and renovating the Majestic so that it will handle all road attractions, were definitely decided upon by M. Naify, general manager of the circuit. The entire lower floor is to be practically rebuilt, and the balcony will be reconstructed. An additional one hundred seats will be provided by the work. Mr. Naify explained, and a modern heating and ventilating system will be installed. The box office will be placed in the center of the entrance and two stores built at the sides of the building, one of which has already been leased by Wilcox's as a branch store.

Arrangements will be made for better illumination of the street and for parking space for automobiles. A new organ to cost $35,000 will be installed at the Rialto, and an orchestra will be there as well as the organ, and the latest electrical equipment will be installed for prologue work. George A. Schastey is the architect in charge of the improvement work and his preliminary plans have already been approved.—Floyd.

J. Figlar Building in Fairfield, Conn.

Designed as a community playhouse in a well-populated suburban section, now unsupplied and with jitneys as the only means of transportation, Joseph Figlar is having rushed to completion a motion picture theatre at Jennings road and Castle avenue, Fairfield, Conn. The house is expected to be ready for occupancy in about six weeks and will accommodate approximately 400. Mr. Figlar will serve as manager. Work on the theatre is under the direction of Mr. Figlar and George Henry Larson of Fairfield. The latter will have charge of the exterior and interior decorations, which are planned to be a feature. The latter has been making a specialty of theatre decorative work and is responsible for some of the attractive work along this line in Fairfield County movie houses. The Figlar house is located about midway between motion picture houses in Fairfield and Bridgeport.—Agard.

If the load is decreased, the motor will speed up and the back voltage will increase and this in turn will cause the current to drop to the proper value.

Indeed, the back voltage, is very useful for determining what to do in order to change the winding of motors. Thus, if conductors are taken off an armature, the speed will be increased because the armature must now rotate faster in order to generate the proper amount of back voltage. If armature conductors are added the speed will be decreased.

Brush Shifting

As with generators, commutation is also a serious problem with motors and brush shifting must be resorted to where interpoles are not supplied. If the rotation of the motor shown in Fig. 73 is assumed to be the same as that shown in the case of the generators described in Lesson VI, Part III, it will be noted that the current in the motor is opposite to that in the generator.

This, of course, will cause the field to be weakest under the opposite sides of pole tips and hence the brushes will have to be shifted back against the direction of rotation instead of forward in the same direction. This holds for all motors and generators.

Cornerstone for New Elrae Theatre

Work has so far progressed on the new Elrae theatre and office building in Philadelphia, which will cost $1,500,000 when completed, that the date for the cornerstone laying has been officially fixed for Thursday, June 28. The mayor of the city and numerous prominent personalities in motion picture affairs, as well as public officials, will participate in the celebration and exercises.

The new structure was begun last August at Eleventh and Market streets, the site of the old Bingham Hotel. The theatre will seat 3,000 persons, and will have many innovations in modern construction features. The theatre will be owned and operated jointly by the B. F. Keith Vaudeville interests and by the Stanley Company of America. Vaudeville will be presented in addition to the programs of feature films.—Martin.

almost unlimited potentialities of design and color effect. As for durability, the few examples cited at the beginning of this article show what reasonably may be expected of a good Axminster.

If it be thought, however, that I am unduly insistent on the good qualities of Axminster carpet, it also will be remembered that I said it was misjudged, and therefore needs an advocate, more than the deservedly popular Wilton fabric.

How to Select Carpets for Theatre Use

Now, with all of this, you have but the mere rough rudiments of carpet weaving. Only one who has seen carpets and rugs manufactured, from the reception of the bales of imported wools to the final inspection and packing of the finished products, can conceive the many ways in which carpet quality can be cheapened and cheap quality successfully disguised.

A greater familiarity with the various kinds of carpet weaves will assist in making a suitable selection. A discussion about the materials that enter into the different fabrics may cause you to give closer attention to a salesman's language. But time is the only sure test of a carpet's life. And, of course, the wise way is to use someone else's time—another's experience.

There are only a few manufacturers of really high grade carpets suitable for use in theatres. Be sure the name on the back of the carpet you are considering is that of a well-known and reputable concern. Then ascertain what other theatres have used this carpet, and learn from authoritative sources what the fabric had to stand and how well and how long it has stood it.

When you find a reputable manufacturer's carpet, that has withstood successfully several years of hard service under millions of tramping feet, and you are convinced that it was not, for any reason, an exceptional case, then, and not until then, are you ready to discuss colors, patterns, prices, etc.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

With an emphatically long scale of gradation it carries through to the screen the entire range of tones from highest light to deepest shadow that the cameraman has secured in the negative.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now obtainable in thousand foot lengths, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.
